All these books paint a picture of horror, of oppression, of great splendor on one hand and great misery on the other, of superb opportunities wasted and international crimes perpetrated—a picture of a race endowed with creative capacity finding itself on the verge of bankruptcy. Is there no way out? Are the masses of the world doomed to wander in darkness until the race dies out? By no means! A new world is waiting around the corner. It is partly etched in Martin Anderson Nexo's Pollo the Conqueror; partly in Mary Heard's The American Labor Movement; also in Sidney Webb's History of Trade Unionism and his Decay of Capitalist Civilization. Bertrand Russel has glimpses of the new world in his book Proposed Roads to Freedom—but since this is a summary of certain great ideas it might be well to read one of his original sources—The Communist Manifesto by Marx and Engels which in the history of the human race must rank with the Sermon on the Mount. And after this one ought to read about the first great practical attempt on the part of the masses to build a new creative free world on earth—Soviet Russia and what it has done and Thru the Russian Revolution by Albert Rhys Williams are perhaps the two most interesting books on the Russian Revolution. There are dozens of others almost as good and in their pages workers may find not only dynamic ideas but a hope and a courage which will eventually blast capitalist civilization to its rotten base.

"Harding perplexed by Daugherty boom", says newspaper headline. He is just about as perplexed as Julius Cæsar was when they presented him the Roman crown, once, twice, he refused, then thrice, and he grabbed at it. Only Harding won't refuse even once. He is too good an office boy of imperialism.

Hundred Per Cent American Justice
By Ellen Winsor

To keep out of jail:

1—Be a shipbuilder and during the war rob a government.

2—Profiteer in food while your country is at war. For this you may be fined. Remain calm. The government will pay your fine later.

3—Conspire to defraud the government on wartime contracts.

To get into jail:

1—Attempt to better your living conditions or to raise your standards of living in any way.

2—Tell your employer the food is rotten or that the bunkhouse is the lumber camp is lousy and sour.

3—Demand a living wage from your boss.

Four reasons for pres dential pardons:

1—Conspiring to set on foot a military enterprise directed against a foreign country. (Jacobsen, pardoned for this, Dec. 23, 1921.)

2—Providing doctored eye-glasses to draft registrants, so as to get them off under the draft. (Kennedy, pardoned for this, Dec. 23, 1921.)

3—Leaving the country unlawfully, luring a war, in order to sell plans for a new gun to the German consul in Switzerland. (Toebe, pardoned for this, Dec. 23, 1921.)

4—Attempting to blow up munition ships. (Capt. Robert Fay, pardoned for this, Dec. 23, 1921.)

Provide a Creep home
For the "Small Salaried Girls."
Murmuring among themselves—
"Working class
Is greedy, offensive
But these white collar slaves
We hold a little longer
Than the privileged Patient, meek and grateful.
When they get a raise
We can point with pride
To our home
Virtuous girls live!
Not only that
But we're saving
And after the days work
Has the privilege
Of washing her clothes

Burns Fears New Exposures

Minor Charges Detective Agency Organized Spy Service for German Imperial Government

(SPECIAL TO "THE WORKER")

WASHINGTON, D. C.—In panic fear the Burns-Daugherty forces here, this week, first stopped a mass meeting, that was to have been addressed by Robert Minor, one of the defendants in the Michigan Communist case, and then raided the headquarters of the Workers Party and the Labor Defense Council, and made sixteen arrests.

It is known definitely that this new outburst of activity on the part of the Burns Private Detective Agency—U. S. Department of Justice sleuths, is the result of terror in the ranks of the Burns-Daugherty forces in the face of new exposures that will make the confession of Albert Ballin a passing incident.

Robert Minor had already spoken at Labor Defense Council mass meetings at Philadelphia and Baltimore, and had promised to rip the hide off the Burns-Daugherty aggregation in his Washington address.

No doubt, "Sleuth" William J. Burns and Attorney General Harry M. Daugherty had already read the April issue of "The Liberator," of which Minor is the editor, and in which it is charged:

Built Kaiser Spy Service Here

"There is a partnership between the United States Government officials and the William J. Burns International Detective Agency.

"The Burns Detective Agency's business is selling secrecy by any method that will work. During the World War THE BURNS DETECTIVE AGENCY ORGANIZED A SPY SERVICE WITHIN THE UNITED STATES FOR THE GERMAN IMPERIAL GOVERNMENT. The frame-up was for the purpose of involving the United States government in a violation of its then neutrality against Germany. Gaston B. Means was the Burns agent who directed the frame-up from 'under-ground' headquarters in the Great Eastern Hotel in New York. The Hamburg-American steamship Co. was the agency thru which the German Imperial government paid Burns."

This blast hit the Burns-Daugherty outfit at about the same time that Judge White was dismissing the jury in the trial of William Z. Foster, at St. Joseph, Mich., after it had repudiated the private detective agency's attack on the Communist movement.

It is to be regretted that the officials of the Typographical Union, here, fell into the Burns' trap and aided his suppression of the Minor meeting, thru refusing the use of the hall rented in Typographical Temple for the Labor Defense Council rally.

Ten arrests were made of workers who did not know the meeting had been called off and came to the hall anyway.

Additional arrests were made at the Defense Council headquarters, among the victims being Edward J. Irvine, local secretary of the Workers Party. One of the most "dangerous" documents found was a letter from William W. Weinstone, assistant secretary of the Workers Party, urging organization work even among the unorganized, voteless, white-collar slaves in the various departments of the government.

This new attack was made under cover of hysteria raised as the result of the meeting addressed the previous week by James P. Cannon, chairman of the Workers Party. The kept press for days, in screamer headlines, claimed that Cannon in his speech and gloried in the execution of Butchkavich, in Soviet Russia, and that the audience had applauded. The fact is that Cannon did not mention the execution in his speech. It came up in a question after his talk, and his answer was that, from his experiences in Russia, he was sure that Butchkavich had received a fair trial, and that the penalty imposed was a just one.

Don't Throw This Paper Away Pass It on to Your Neighbor

See Anti-Communist Attack Collapse in Ruthenberg Trial

Every power of the Daugherty U. S. Department of Justice and the Burns Private Detective Agency will be brought to bear in an effort to secure a conviction in the case of C. E. Ruthenberg, Secretary of the Workers Party, who goes to trial in St. Joseph, Mich., Monday, April 16.

This is so because the attack on the Communist movement, that failed so miserably in the trial of William Z. Foster, stands or falls in the trial of Ruthenberg. In any case, even if Ruthenberg is convicted, which is not expected following the Foster jury disagreement, there will be no further trials until the Ruthenberg case has gone thru the United States Supreme Court, which may take years. If Ruthenberg is acquitted, or even if there is a disagreement, the Burns-Daugherty conspiracy against the Communist movement collapses, and the remaining cases will no doubt be dismissed, even as the attack on the Herrin, Ill., coal miners has been dropped.

Foster Verdict Triumph for Communism in United States

By C. E. RUTHENBERG

Compared with the outcome of similar prosecutions in the past the jury disagreement in the trial of William Z. Foster and the Communist Party is a great victory for Communism in the United States. The jury, by the force of the official dominance of the capitalist class, refused to convict the Communist leaders. It thereby registered the fact that the class struggle is too strong in the United States to be overcome by the forces of the capitalist class. The jury thereby registered the fact that the capitalist class is unable to overcome the working class by the use of the machinery of the capitalist state.

The Communist Party has from the beginning of its existence taken the position that the capitalist class would not surrender its power without a struggle, and that the ultimate phase of the struggle between workers and capitalists would involve a resort to force. This viewpoint was also stated openly from the witness stand.

The charge of Judge Charles E. White, admitted that this statement of Communist principles was not a violation of the Michigan Criminal Syndicalist Law. He said, that the prosecution must prove:

"Not alone that this party taught the theory that the social forces now in operation would of their own momentum bring about an encounter of forces between opposed social classes, but also that the party taught and advocated crime, sabotage, violence and terrorism as the method or one of the methods of accomplishing the changes in the organization of society desired by the Communists."

And he stated further:

"The word 'sabotage' as used in this statute means malicious injury to property; the word 'violence' means criminal acts of violence; the phrase 'other unlawful means of terrorism' means acts of a terroristic character constituting crime under the laws of this State."

Under these instructions it is surprising that there should have been any struggle in the jury room and that a disagreement was the final result. For these instructions fully unfold the Communist right to do everything which they have done in the State of Michigan or elsewhere in the United States.

The Communist Party has never advocated acts of violence or acts of terroristic character constituting crime under the laws of the State of Michigan or any other State. What the Communists have done, and what they insist is their right, is to express their view, based upon historical precedents, that no privileged class has ever given up its power without a resort to force and that the class struggle between workers and capitalists will follow this historic precedent. This is something entirely different from advocating acts of crime, sabotage or acts of terrorism which are crime under the criminal law.

This was also the view taken by those members of the jury who stood out for an acquittal of Foster.

"The prosecution didn't prove that the Communist Party advocated violence," Reussel Durm, one of the jurors who voted for acquital, said. "That was the only thing we split on. We all agreed that Foster attended the Bridgeman convention, knowing what was going on there and sympathizing with the movement."

The Michigan jury in part at least seems to have understood the distinction which Judge White made. The fact that a distinction was made in the Michigan case is a decided victory for Communism. The Communists, now organized in the Workers Party, will continue their struggle in Michigan and elsewhere to establish their right freely and publicly to state their viewpoint, even including their viewpoint in regard to the part that force has played and will play in the class struggle.

They will maintain in the trials to follow the Foster trial as they have during that trial, the principles of Communism and the right of Communists publicly to proclaim those principles in speech and press.

Bosses' Hopes Blasted

By WILLIAM Z. FOSTER

Unquestionably the fact that we were able to split the jury in my case represents a real victory for us. When we went into Michigan to begin the case we found a community that had been thorouly propagandized by the Department of Justice and other willing tools of the great capitalist interests. But after four weeks of the trial a wonderful change took place in public sentiment.

Just as the jury was split in two over the issue, so was the public at large. Great numbers of the local citizenship became fully convinced as the evidence developed that we were making a real battle for the rights of free speech and free assemblage.

Much credit for this remarkable shift in opinion is due to the able way in which our attorneys brought out our case, and likewise to the frank and fearless testimony of Comrade C. E. Ruthenberg. He gave the citizenry generally a liberal education in Communist history, principles, and tactics.

With the prevailing state of public opinion, which is highly favorable to us, I doubt very much if the prosecution can convict any of the defendants in Berrien County. What the exploiters of the country calculated would be a crushing defeat of the revolutionary forces will doubtless turn into one of the most notable victories for progress in recent times.

Daugherty Plots Open Shop War

The Bareface Dancers

The "New York Call" joins "The Times" and "The Herald" in the profession of "Red"-baiting for the benefit of capitalist reaction.

Gary Would Have Fascist Tyranny Here

(Special to "The Worker")

WASHINGTON, D. C.—The threat of an "open shop" war against all American labor grows. No denial comes from President Harding, back from his Florida golf tour, of the declaration by the banker, "Hell and Maria" Charles G. Dawes, that the Republican Party is planning to take an open stand for the smashing of all labor unions.

Attorney General Harry M. Daugherty stands by the press reports that he is in favor of the Republican Party taking a stand for the anti-union shop.

These facts glare out in bolder relief as the U. S. Supreme Court hands down another labor-crushing decision declaring the minimum wage law for women and minor girls "unconstitutional."

And the cables tell us that over in Rome, Italy, Judge Elbert H. Gary, head of the United States Steel Corporation, the "open shop" leader among the industrial kaisers of this country, banquets with Benito Mussolini, the Fascist Anti-Labor Dictator of Italy.

It was in Rome that the International Chamber of Commerce held its sessions with the biggest delegation from the United States, headed by Julius Barnes, president of the United States "open shop" bosses' Chamber of Commerce. The publicity for the gathering at Rome was handled by Ivy Lee, premier press agent and confidential adviser of John D. Rockefeller.

This crowd is coming back to the United States to back up the "open shop" plans of the Harding-Daugherty-Burns administration here, that speaks politically for the industrial and banking czars of America.

"Open Shop" Gary, in an interview at Rome, said: "We Americans can learn something by the movement which is taking place in Italy," which causes "Labor," official organ of the railroad workers, to ask, "Is Fascismo about to be introduced in this country by the great captains of industry led by Gary?"

Prof. Harry F. Ward, for the Civil Liberties Union:—"Our earnest hope is that the prosecution may see the wisdom of dropping these cases in Michigan. Such action would have the salutory effect all over the country of assuring the open conduct of the Communist movement.

N. Y. Call in Conspiracy Against Russia; Also in War on American Communists; N. Y. Socialists Hold Underground Meeting

The leaders of the right wing of the Socialist Party realize with increasing fear that not only is the Workers Party winning greater and greater prestige in the working class movement, but that the honest workers within the Socialist Party itself are ever more dissatisfied with its reactionary leadership.

This reactionary officialdom realizes that in its own Socialist Party there exists a strong left wing that is friendly towards Soviet Russia, and demands a united front with the Workers Party.

It was this fear and this realization that inspired the holding of a secret meeting on Thursday, March 29, to determine the future policies of the New York Call.

The managers of the Socialist Party and of the New York Call have decided in this conspirative, secret meeting to cure the 'too revolutionary" views of their own membership thru an open counter-revolutionary policy of "The Call."

We have absolutely trustworthy and authentic information on the proceedings of this conspirative meeting. The following representatives were present:

Members of the managing board of the New York Call.

Four representatives of the New York Joint Board of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers.

Two representatives of the Jewish Daily Forward.

One representative of the Rand School.

The managing editor of the New York Call.

The participants in this meeting made a bitter attack upon the managing editor of the New York Call, David Karsner, because he does not fight the Communists sufficiently in the paper, and because the paper is too friendly toward Soviet Russia.

At the end of the debate the following resolution was accepted:

1. The New York Call should in the future ignore Soviet Russia, wherever possible. The paper should reprint all news and cables from the capitalist press, if they are unfavorable to Soviet Russia, but the editors are to rewrite the cables, so that their source shall not be recognized.

2. The New York Call should begin a systematic attack upon the

WARREN, Ohio.—There are 135 delegates, representing a membership of 8,000 members of the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers of North America, in session here at Robin's Theater.

Following in the wake of the great steel strike and convening in the very heart of the steel industry, the committee on arrangements saw to it that the American plan advocates had plenty of representation at the opening session. Evan J. Thomas, secretary of the Warren Board of Trade, the open shop organization in the steel valley, spoke on "Warren and its Diversified Industries." Following the turning over of the keys of the city to the delegates by the mayor, the convention went into formal session in the Ohio National

Mrs. Olson Tells Why She Voted for the Acquittal of Foster in Michigan Communist Trial

By JAY LOVESTONE

In telling why she voted for Foster, the fact that Mrs. Minerva Olson did not get lost in a sea of words. Mrs. Olson, the only woman juror, is a 4-foot-ten-inch American lassie consisting of forefathers in the days of the Revolutionary War.

Her statement in the New York Times is very instructive to the workers. It is typical of that fast-disappearing rarity—genuine American liberalism, Jeffersonian democracy at its purest.

Against Railroading Foster

"The stage-setting of the prosecution seemed over-employed with such a display of detectives and undercover men that it appeared more like trying to railroad Foster than like prosecuting him . . . ," said Mrs. Olson. In her opinion that was the reason why half the jury voted for acquittal. This is an example of the old-time American fair-play. During the Civil War and the Revolutionary days when the mass of the workers were completely helpless under the iron heel of dictatorship of the big capitalists, this American fair-play did not exist. Its reappearance in Michigan merely reflects the letting-up in the capitalist-rule of blood and iron brought about by the recent political and industrial pressure of the American workers and working farmers. We had the same Americans trying Communists in 1920 and sending them to jail. The Communists are just as revolutionary to-day as they were then, but the conditions have greatly changed. In 1920 showing fair play to the Communists was a crime as detestable as the horrible crimes only Communists could commit.

Mrs. Olson's Clear Understanding.

Mrs. Olson showed her clear understanding of the significance of the Foster trial when she said: "I could look away from the courtroom when the trial was on, and see conflicting forces contending for the mastery of human rights. The trial was far bigger to me than merely determining whether Mr. Foster was guilty or not."

"Other members of the jury saw the same things. It was really a big battle for human rights . . ."

This statement is especially significant to the workers in man. The jury in the Foster case was a typical farmers' jury. And the above sentiments and subsequent actions truly reflected the role of the farmers in the class struggle we are living in. The center of gravity of class relations today is in the struggle between the capitalist class and working class. In this great struggle the farming masses are bound to get worked with when to pitch in their lots. This spirit of indecision characterizing the attitude of the farming masses is clearly reflected in the "hung" jury—in the farmers' jury that refused to hang Foster, the militant leader of the workers.

Right to Revolution Vindicated.

And Mrs. Olson, whom obviously no one could accuse of being an "ignorant foreigner," went further. "Agitation may not be altogether pleasant, but we must remember that it is the agitators who have brought progress into the world. Do not think that I took the side I did because I am an Anti-Red. I am not. My forefathers were here in the revolutionary days of 1776. My great-grandfather was an officer in the Revolutionary War. Perhaps for that reason I have some of the revolutionary spirit. I am for progress, not stagnation."

This view of the situation proves that Mrs. Olson is worthy of the place of a national figure achieved by her thru the trial. It is a courageous and honest statement. Nevertheless, sycophantic professional and editorial press agents of the employing class have been talking themselves blue in the face as to the inherent "peaceable" characteristics of the American masses. American history gives the lie to the prating of these lackeyettes. The great American masses have never refused to stand fight for the bitter end when their rights were at stake. America was born out of revolution—an armed revolt against the British ruling class. For a time during and after the Revolutionary War the working masses who were bled in the battles were a real political power. They were only later cheated of their political influence by such reactionary "Fathers" as Madison and Hamilton.

What is more, there has not been a single statement of importance involving a fundamental change in property relationships that was put over without recourse to force. The 14th, 15th and 16th Amendments are the only amendments involving a fundamental change in property relationships; and the Civil War was fought to compel the Southern ruling slave-holding class to obey the new law and order as laid down for them by the amendments.

Let Workers Greet Mrs. Olson.

The working men and working women of America owe a debt of gratitude to Mrs. Minerva Olson. Even to-day, with the capitalist reaction somewhat checked by working-class resistance, it requires great courage and honesty of purpose to express the truth with such fearlessness and lucidity as Mrs. Olson has expressed. Let every reader of "The Worker," let every friend of every reader of "The Worker" in every labor organization write to Mrs. Olson, at St. Joseph, Mich., in appreciation of her integrity and in honor of the well-deserved national fame she has now won.

Hibben and Holmes Hit Hughes' Ban

Paxton Hibben, Secretary of The American Society for Relief of Russian Children, joins with Rev. John Haynes Holmes in a protest against the action of Secretary of State Hughes in excluding Mme. Ekaterine Kalinin from entering the United States. They said:

By PAXTON HIBBEN

"The decision of the administration to exclude Ekaterine Kalinin and to arrest and deport her when she arrives in New York is truly political, and has nothing whatever to do with the execution of Mgr. Butchkavitch. The opposition to her coming to appeal for the Russian children has been deliberately manufactured at considerable expense by the National Civic Federation and the American Defense Society, two organizations opposed to the first amendment of the Constitution of the United States.

"There was never anything political in Kalinin's mission to the United States. Permission for her to come as a special representative of the Russian Red Cross was first requested on March 7, 1922. The State Department therefore had ample time to investigate before granting permission for her to come here and to satisfy itself as to the non-political nature of her mission. The reason given for excluding Kalinin that it is in protest against the execution of Father Butchkavitch, is under the circumstances mere subterfuge. Condemning thousands of Russian children to death from hunger as a protest against the execution of a follower of him who said, 'Love your enemies, bless them that curse you, do good to them that hate you and pray for them which despitefully use you and persecute you,' is a great idea. Our government is to be congratulated on having thought of it."

By REV. JOHN H. HOLMES

"The action of Secretary of State Hughes in withdrawing his permission to Mme. Kalinin to come to this country to plead the cause of the starving Russian children is an outrage as cruel as it is dishonest and hypocritical. I have nothing to say in defense of the execution of the Roman priest in Moscow and much to say against it, but has our pious government ever taken notice of such executions in other countries such as England, Ireland and India? And how does our government have the face to conduct itself thus towards Russia when the persecutions of our own political offenders is of its hands?

"Let the worst be said that can be said about the Moscow government in this case. It has nothing to do with Mme. Kalinin nor she with it. It has no remotest connection with the starving Russian children, and Mme. Kalinin's mission in their behalf. Mme. Kalinin is a noble and tender woman crossing land and sea on an errand of mercy. To deny her hospitality to her is to shut the spirit of Christ from out our borders."

Civil Liberties Union Announces Court War to the Limit on Burns

The arrest of the 16 alleged radicals in Washington, D. C., last Monday night, taken in two raids conducted by city police and Department of Justice agents, is "an effort to make a crime out of the expression of political opinion," according to the officers of the American Civil Liberties Union, who wired their attorneys and representatives in Washington to extend legal aid to those arrested.

A telegram to Gilson Gardner, the Union's Washington representative, read: "Press reports arrest sixteen alleged radicals in Washington by Department of Justice agents. Is this an attempt by Burns to continue persecution of Workers Party, following his defeat by Foster jury in Michigan? Otherwise we can see no significance in it."

A statement on the arrests given out by Roger N. Baldwin, director of the Civil Liberties Union, said: "Reports coming to us from several places in the country indicate that Department of Justice agents are making a concerted effort to take into custody on one charge or another members of the Workers Party. In Wheeling, W. Va., they have just forced a prosecution under a peace-time sedition act of a man who was distributing Workers Party programs on a street car. These action programs go freely and legally thru the United States mails. There is no reason for a man to be prosecuted for distributing them. The arrests in Washington look like the same kind of an effort to make a crime out of the expression of political opinion. Federal detectives have to hold their jobs and justify their charges about the 'Reds.' We see nothing in the matter except a plain case of free speech. William J. Burns and the federal agents have done their best to make a high crime out of holding Communist opinions. Anyone he attacks in this issue can count on us for legal aid and defense funds. We will go the limit in the courts to stop this untimely and unnecessary persecution."

Facts Expose Hypocrisy of Capitalist World Protest Against Soviet Russia

By JACK CARNEY

"What is going on there is not a religious persecution, but punishment of the Government for political treason," declared the Rev. Percy Stickney Grant, in last Sunday's sermon dealing with the execution of Monsignor Butchkavitch.

The speakers' bulletin of the American Association for the Recognition of the Irish Republic declares that the protest of the various governments has "the tinge of hypocrisy" when Magner and Father Griffin, were murdered that "the silence of the grave fell on nearly all our pulpits."

What are the facts in the case? Monsignor Butchkavitch, alleged to be connected with the Polish nobility, utilized his position as a high member of the Roman Catholic Church to bring about the overthrow of the Soviet Government. If he had succeeded he would have brought about the murder of thousands of Communists, and the return of Soviet Russia to Czarism. The capitalist governments "warned" Soviet Russia against the execution. If Soviet Russia had heeded the warnings then the world would have said she was cowardly. Soviet Russia, on the other hand, was neither cowardly nor blind to the consequences that might have followed the success of the attempts of Monsignor Butchkavitch and his fellow-conspirators to overthrow the Soviet Government.

Only those who are opposed to capital punishment as such have a right to object to the execution of Monsignor Butchkavitch. Imagine the representatives of the ruling class of America objecting to the execution of a priest. Nine years ago, this month, in the State of Colorado many tents were saturated with oil while women and children were sleeping within them, and set on fire. In those days bloody, riot-filled Lawrence was the consequence—and as they were the lives of members of the working class. The United States should object to the execution of Butchkavitch!

In South Africa, a few weeks ago several men were executed because they protested against the lowering of the living standards to those of the black workers. Thousands more were sent to prison, and while thousands were assembled in the Trades Hall of Johannesburg the government had airplanes drop bombs on the buildings, and many were killed. South Africa should object to the execution of Monsignor Butchkavitch!

In India there were 172 natives sentenced to hang. Their crime was that of agitating to secure a little more of the freedom they were supposed to enjoy. In addition thousands were sent to prison for life. The British government in India should object!

We have to recall the Paris Commune and the bloody actions of the French Government of that time and later day actions. The French Government should object!

It is not so much the execution of the reverend gentleman that the ruling class objects to as to what he was executed for, namely his loyalty to capitalism. If he had been executed for agitating to secure a little more of the freedom they were supposed to enjoy, in addition thousands were sent to prison for life. The British government in India should object!

It is a significant event when those who attempt to betray the working class into the hands of the ruling class can be brought into working-class courts and tried for their acts.

Interest in T. U. E. L. Conference

By JOSEPH MANLEY

In the large Textile and Shoe centers of New England great interest is being displayed in the coming Eastern District Conferences of the Trade Union Educational League.

At Providence, R. I., on Saturday, April 7th, I attended a meeting arranged by J. P. Reid, a militant of many years standing, in this great woolen center. The meeting was mostly of textile workers, who are awakening to the great need of solidarity and amalgamation in their industry.

In Providence are the large mills of the American Woolen Company are the basic industry. President "Billy" Wood has attempted to pacify the present discontent amongst his employes by "voluntarily" granting an increase of 12½ per cent. This is having the effect of still further encouraging the workers, and they are organizing "Textile Councils." These textile councils will, no doubt, blossom into real unions, but at the present time they are a movement of the rank and file who utterly distrust the officials of the many textile unions now in existence. Several of these unions have had their day in Providence, and with their petty quarrels and fights have lost the confidence of the rank and file.

The plan of amalgamation now being spread in the textile industry by the General Amalgamation Committee to creating a lot of interest in this city. The Providence meeting at which I spoke, decided to have textile militants present at the coming Textile Conference to be held in New York City, May 5th.

Communists on Isthmus Build Party

(Special to "The Worker")

MEXICO CITY.—The Communist party of Central America is functioning with headquarters in Guatemala. The principal element entering into its formation was the Unificacion Obrera Socialista or Socialist Labor union. This makes the seventh communist party to be formed in Latin America, the others being those of Argentina, Uruguay, Chile, Brazil, Bolivia, and Mexico.

Party Congress in Russia

(By Rosta News Agency)

MOSCOW.—The congress of the Russian Communist Party is fast approaching. The Pravda, official party organ, in view of the nation-wide importance of the resolutions to be adopted by the congress, has issued a leaflet calling attention to the question of education among the peasants, reforms of taxation and strengthening the relations between the worker and the peasant. Several articles deal with the question of necessary reforms in the Commissariat of National Inspection somehow similar to state control which was raised by Lenin in a recent article in the "Pravda." He suggested the idea of having closer relations between the Commissariat and the Communist Party organizations.

In connection with the national economic reconstruction of Russia, Zinoviev, chairman of the Communist International, the "Pravda" says that the Communist Party has succeeded in establishing a firm basis for the proletariat in industry. Now the pre-war days know how to adjust urban and rural economy, and how to unite the worker and the peasant.

With the Young Workers

Young Workers League Branch Organized in Newark, N. J.

After a determined effort by the National organization of the YWL to organize a Newark branch of the YWL out of the best radical elements in the Independent Young People's Socialist League, an offshoot of the Young People's Socialist League, the local comrades have succeeded building up a strong branch there. The comrades who are members of the YWL have succeeded in having the IYPSL donate $25 to the Labor Defense Council.

The branch is well on its way and has already organized a weekly forum. Thursday, April 19th, at 8.30 p. m., at the Newark Labor Lyceum 704 S. 14th St., Newark. William I. Kruse, once National Secretary of the Young People's Socialist League and a member of the Provisional National Committee of the YWL, will lecture on the "Problems of the Young Workers." Thursday, April 26th, at the same hall, J. Louis Engdahl, editor of "The Worker," will lecture on "The Workers Movement—Where Is It Leading To?"

The young workers of Newark are invited to attend the forum. The admission is free.

Australian Youth Organize

SIDNEY, New South Wales.—A young communist league is being formed at Sidney, and later on other branches will be formed in Australia. Membership in the league will be confined to people between the ages of 14 and 26. Members will attend study classes and join trade unions, where it is stated in a manifesto just issued, there is plenty of work for them to do on behalf of the communist movement.

Sure Thing! Yale Doesn't Like "Goose Step"

NEW HAVEN, Conn.—Upton Sinclair's name is "synonymous with profession, with cheap and insolent violation of fundamental proprieties," writes an enraged student in the News, the student paper of Yale University. The student, who signs the initials L. M. B., protests against the publication for sale of The Goose Step, Sinclair's "Brass Check of Education," to go on in the bookstores.

"It is a volume," he writes, "the main object of which is to prove that the colleges and other educational institutions of this country are owned and operated in a commercial way by reactionary capitalists with the one object in life of grinding down the worthy and honest laboring classes. It is a book full of such rant and cheap and insolent violation of fundamental proprieties, writes an enraged student in the News, the student paper of Yale University. World Trustification of Capital

By GEORG CHICHERIN

Commissar of Foreign Affairs for Soviet Russia

If I am to sum up the results of my recent observations of foreign affairs, I must first say, speaking generally, that the most important feature of our period is the concentration and trustification of capital on an international scale.

In some countries the process of concentration was already greatly advanced. Now we find, behind the scenes of events, a constant motive force consisting of a struggle towards the international alliance of the national trusts, towards the international extension of national trusts and their growth beyond national frontiers.

The fusion of these elements, support what is left of the National Bloc in Germany they join the Orgesh organizations or simply vote for the extreme right; in Italy they form one of the motive powers for the complicated phenomenon of Fascism. Their furious activity keeps war ever in the foreground and helps, even if leads to direct military action.

But their is no immediate danger of a new world war. The mutual forces of a world war can only be fundamental antagonism between leading economic groups, and these last have still to undergo a long process of development before the relations become so acute as to provide the possible conditions for a world war.

Before the war the situation was different, at that time, large industry supported militarism, while the petty bourgeoisie supported pacifism; but now, large industry is, as a rule, the upholder of pacifism, and the petty bourgeoisie, which is reduced to a state of misery by capitalism. The numerous delegations of the Eastern nations in Lausanne, saw in the Soviet republic their sole true friend, and this alliance became closer and closer in the course of the Lausanne conference.

Many of the native newspapers of the Eastern lands showed the diplomatic successes of Turkey in Lausanne to be due to the diplomatic support of the Soviet republic, the presence of whose delegates lent a firm security to Turkey up to the end of the conference.

The Soviet republic played its historical part as friend of all the oppressed peoples, all people whose existence is in danger, or who are threatened with attack.

A Visit from Earl Browder

Earl R. Browder, Associate Editor of The Labor Herald, has just paid us a call, still enthused over a visit among the coal miners of Ziegler, Illinois, where he was one of the speakers at the 25th Anniversary Celebration and Inauguration of the eight-hour day in the coal mines, in 1898.

Our readers will remember the story that appeared in "The Worker," Dec. 30, telling how T. R. Sullivan, of St. Louis, Mo., Organizer, District 10, Workers Party, was beaten up by mine owners' thugs and driven out of this same Ziegler at the point of a gun in the hands of "His Honor," Mayor Bill Hogan.

Well, Hogan is no longer Mayor, reports Browder. He has been ousted from the City Hall, and a worker, a barber, C. M. Carr, sits in his place. Carr declares that "The Workers Party has complete freedom of propaganda in this coal mining town."

It was Mayor Carr that acted as chairman and introduced Browder, as representative of the Trade Union Educational League, at the great throng that attended the mass meeting that succeeded the Eight-hour Day Parade. Browder spoke. So did Ella Reeve Bloor, just returned from the Second World Congress of the Red Trade International, at Moscow, and more recently from St. Joseph, Mich. where she was one of the 10 who surrendered to the Berrien county sheriff. Other speakers were State Senator Sneed, who has been putting up the coal miners' fight in the state legislature, and Duncan McDonald, former secretary-treasurer of the Illinois Miners' Union. The celebration was held by Ziegler Local No. 992, U. M. W.

Ziegler was the last stronghold of the open shoppers in the Illinois coal district. It was a citadel held against unionism by the Leiter interests. Leiter was famous for his wheat corner in Chicago that sent the price of bread sky-high. He now owns a great part of the state of Montana, and has a great mansion in Washington, D. C. But Ziegler was taken over by the miners' union, the mine barons' city-administration has been deposed, and the city is now a workers' fortress against the bosses.

MOSCOW.—"Invite us as witnesses in the case," Bukharin and Zinoviev, two of the outstanding Russian leaders, have written to M. Jinsselain, examining magistrate in the trial of communists and syndicalists arrested in Paris. The evidence against the arrested man includes a speech by Bukharin, and the French Communists urge that they be called to discuss the subject matter of the speech in the interest of justice.

Plan New Appeal in the Mooney Case

SAN QUENTIN, Cal.—A new appeal in the Mooney case is being planned by the chief victim of the San Francisco frameup. Mooney has asked Superior Judge Louderback for a copy of the testimony of Mr. and Mrs. Earl Thatcher, which showed that Oxman, the chief witness against Mooney and Billings, was in Woodland with the Hatchers at the very hour of the Preparedness day bomb explosion which he claimed to have seen Mooney throw. It was Oxman, who was discovered to have written his friend Rieger in the east, asking him to come out and testify against Mooney, altho he had not been in San Francisco at the time of the explosion. Oxman was afterwards tried for perjury, but acquitted by a picked jury. The Hatcher testimony will be the basis of Mooney's next appeal from his sentence to life imprisonment.

Davis Urges Immigrants Be Selected

By WALLACE T. METCALFE

(Special to "The Worker")

WARREN, Ohio.—Secretary of Labor James Davis continued his campaign against the foreign born here by urging selective immigration, or none at all. He charged that during the last generation 14,000,000 immigrants have come to this country, 8,000,000 of them undesirable.

Secretary of Labor Davis came here to address the 48th Annual Convention of the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers.

The Secretary of Labor believes as he put it, that too many "rag peddlers" are coming into the United States, and not enough workers for the industries.

Referring to the trials of the "reds" in Michigan he asserted that every American should unite to run out those who talk revolution. This statement coming from the "Honest guest" at a national convention of steel workers concerning in the heart of the Kingdom of Steel is intended to subdue the rising demand for organization amongst the steel workers. The workers in this industry consist mostly of "foreigners" and only the militant amongst them would be classified by Davis amongst the 8,000,000 undesirables.

"Forward" Is Still Fighting Relief Work

(By F. S. R. Press Service)

Close upon the announcement by the Friends of Soviet Russia that it has started a duty-free package service to Russia, the Jewish Daily Forward has come out with a "warning" regarding packages. It advises, instead, the sending of money thru private banks.

In view of the fact that the Forward ran the well-paid advertisements of private package transmission agencies, which charged enormous rates and failed to make delivery, this change of front is only too significant. It is very frankly a move to interfere with the F. S. R. work for the Russian people.

In a statement issued by the workers' relief group after the news of the Forward attack, it is pointed out that the Soviet Government made arrangements with the F. S. R. for the sending of packages precisely because these "private agencies were operating and exploiting the workers again and again and the victims came to the F. S. R. headquarters with their troubles. They always always brought with them the Forward advertisements upon which they had acted.

The very fact that the Government has made arrangements at this time for package transmission, the F. S. R. statement shows, is proof that it believes that service necessary. At the recent conference of the International Workers Relief, Mme. Kamenova, the sister of Trotsky, speaking in an official capacity, expressed herself in favor of food and clothing packages from abroad.

In sending money, the F. S. R. recommends the Amalgamated Bank of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America, rather than the private banks so beloved by the Forward.

Lectures on Communism

The Bronx English Branch of the Workers Party has arranged a series of three lectures on "What is Communism?" These will consist of "The Collapse of Capitalism" by Ludwig Lore, editor of the Volkszeitung, April 15; "Communism, and Organized Labor" by Alexander Bittelman, secretary of the Jewish Federation, April 22; and "Communism and Working-Class Political Action," by Max Bedacht, of the Central Executive Committee, at Workers Hall, 1347 Boston Road (near 169th St.), 8 p. m.

Yellow Scabs in Rochester Taxi Strike

ROCHESTER, N. Y.—This city is in the second week of a taxi cab drivers strike, provoked by the Yellow Taxi, Company and other concerns working in harmony with it against the union. The walk-out of the drivers was unanimous and for several days only the few union cabs were in evidence on the streets. Then a gang of recruits from the notorious Yellow Cab Concern of Chicago was imported and the fight began in earnest.

From the first day of the arrival of the Chicago gangsters, recruited from the Red Light District of that city, extreme violence has characterized the strike. One of the union drivers who had the union label on the windshield of his car was viciously assaulted by four imported scabs. One of the scabs was arrested, the other three escaped. At his hearing it was proved that he had a long criminal record, including burglary, picking pockets and bootlegging and had served a number of terms in various penitentiaries.

The local kept press that has been printing reams of matter to the effect that the imported thugs are really not scabs, but civic benefactors, are having a difficult time reconciling their moral indignation against the strikers with the criminal record of one of the representatives of the Chicago Yellow Cab Company.

Every day crowds of spectators gather near the depots and various taxi stations to watch the brawls in the street incited by the Chicago gangsters. A couple of days ago another gang of thugs was brought in from Philadelphia, so that the streets of Rochester are fairly overrun with professional outlaws who are resorting to the well-known tactics of the Yellow Cab Company in Chicago: traveling in hordes and endeavoring to terrorize all other traffic, insulting women and girls who walk on side streets, and trying to provoke fights with rival cab companies.

However, the authorities of Rochester, unlike the Thompson city administration in Chicago, do not yet look with favor on this invasion of thugs, and the public in general is deeply resentful of the depredations daily perpetrated by the scabs. The tension is reaching the breaking point and any day the scabs may face an aroused citizenry and be forced to beat a hasty exodus for already groups are discussing the advisability of running them all out of town in the traditional manner used in such localities—with a coating of tar and feathers and on rails.

Workers in Landslide Vote for Own Political Party

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL

It's a landslide. Sentiment among the nation's workers for a class Labor Party is overwhelming. The demand for a political united front against the two old parties is practically unanimous.

This is the showing from the early returns on the Labor Party Referendum, now being conducted by the Trade Union Educational League among the 35,000 local unions of the organized American labor movement.

More than 200 reports have been received from 34 different crafts in 25 unions. All the rest reported unanimous sentiment for working out political action.

"We feel that this proportion will hold good for the rest of the referendum, that will not be completed for another month," declares Earl R. Browder, associate editor of the Labor Herald, monthly magazine of the Trade Union Educational League, and is supervising the balloting.

One of the first returns came from a lodge of railroad conductors. It had written across the face of the ballot, "No Foster for us!" But the same mail brought back the unanimous vote of another lodge of railroad conductors of 300 members, also the unanimous "yes" of a lodge of locomotive engineers.

Browder claims that some of the four rejections already listed resulted from the fact that the local secretaries sent the ballots back without even bringing them before their memberships. He says this is true in at least one case where the ballot came back the next day, with no time for a union meeting intervening.

Local 39, Amalgamated Clothing Workers, Chicago, with 12,000 members, is the biggest local to favor the referendum. This local has always been one of the most militant in the Amalgamated Clothing Workers' Union. The Herrin, Ill., Miners' Union, under the oppression of the combined open shoppers of Illinois, cast a unanimous ballot.

One of the big victories is the favorable vote won at the convention of the California State Building Trades Council. The Labor Party referendum was brought up here by a group of delegates and carried to victory in spite of officials who continually trail with the old parties.

Among the crafts that have already reported are the sheet metal workers, electricians, teamsters, tailors, machinists, steam operating engineers, metal polishers, vessel makers, molders, miners, painters, carpenters, laborers, Amalgamated Clothing Workers, railway carmen, street railwaymen, leather workers, press men, brewery workers, millwrights, blacksmiths, cigarmakers, paving cutters, plumbers, laundry workers, pipe fitters, bricklayers, ladies' tailors, marine engineers, bookbinders, pile drivers and maintenance of waymen.

The 34 states so far represented in the balloting are New Jersey, Ohio, Missouri, California, Oregon, Kansas, New York, Illinois, Utah, Louisiana, Pennsylvania, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Massachusetts, Virginia, Oklahoma, Indiana, Kentucky, Iowa, Tennessee, Washington, Alabama, Georgia, Michigan, Montana, Wyoming, South Carolina, North Dakota, Maine, Texas, Nevada, Connecticut, West Virginia and New Hampshire.

In addition to the local unions, the referendum has been upheld enthusiastically by dozens of central labor unions, the district councils of various crafts, and many system federations on the railroads.

"The object of this referendum is purely educational," says Browder. "The League is not advocating support of any existing political organization. We are offering no leaders to the workers. It is being carried forward because we feel it has great educational value."

In connection with the referendum the League is issuing a leaflet entitled "A Political Party for Labor" of which several hundred thousand have already gone out. A dozen orders for these leaflets are in every day. One subscription union telegraphed in its order to get the leaflets on time. Copies of the referendum ballot, as well as bundles of the "Labor Party" leaflet may be secured from the offices of the Trade Union Educational League, 118 N. La Salle St., Chicago 12.

Rush Your Returns to "The Worker"

This week we publish the first canvass of returns in the Labor Party Referendum of the 35,000 local unions in the country, being conducted by the Trade Union Educational League. We are anxious to publish complete returns each week and would appreciate it if the union secretaries or union members would send in a copy of their report to "The Worker", Room 405, 799 Broadway, New York City, at the same time that the original is sent to the office of the TUEL. Any interesting facts with regard to the referendum would also be greatly appreciated.

Workers Hit Splitting of Local Union

One of the most glaring illustrations of how far reactionary bureaucrats are willing to go in order to maintain themselves in power has been furnished recently in the International Ladies Garment Workers Union by the split-up of the Ladies Tailors and Sample Makers Local 3.

The workers of this local do identical work. One part of the year they produce sample garments, and the other part of the year they produce garments to order for the rich. Very often the same firm produces both kinds of garments, employing for both kinds of work the same workers. It would appear that these workers should belong to one union.

But the reactionary bureaucrats do not decide problems of the trade in accordance with the interests of the workers. Having lost control over the three big clothing centers—Philadelphia, Chicago and New York—the last trump-card of the reactionary bureaucrats remained the cloakmakers Joint Board of New York. And even here the lefts are in control of two of the biggest locals that are part of the Joint Board. Thus, in order to maintain control over this body for another year, they decided to break up Local 3, so as to secure additional representation on the Joint Board.

To apply such tactics at a time when even old American conservative unions are lining up for amalgamation, is beyond comprehension. When the workers all over talk about amalgamation of craft unions into big industrial combinations, these "Socialist" leaders are busy breaking up craft-locals into sub-craft divisions without paying the least attention to the effect that this may produce upon the fighting ability of the union.

In view of the above, we, the active union members of the Cloakmakers' Local 3 and of the I. L. G. W. U. in mass meeting assembled, adopt the following resolution:

"Whereas, a sub-committee of the general executive board of the I. L. G. W. U. had split Local 3 of the sample makers and ladies tailors without even consulting the membership, and

"Whereas, such division of workers doing identical work undermines the strength of the union and the conditions of work in the shop,

"Therefore be it resolved

"That we condemn this action of the general executive board as being contrary to the fundamental principles of unionism, and appeal to all members of the I. L. G. W. U. to support our opposition to the continuation of such criminal policies which, if allowed to continue, will ruin the entire organization."

T. U. E. L. Lecture Course

The Trade Union Educational League, Eastern District, is organizing a series of six lectures dealing with the history and problems of Organized Labor in America. Jay Lovestone will conduct the course. It will begin April 13, Friday, 8 p. m. at 208 E. 12th St.

In the course of the lectures the following topics will be discussed:

1. Labor in the Colonial, Revolutionary and Pre-Civil War Periods.

2. The Rise of National Organizations.

3. Structure and Policies of Typical Labor Organizations.—Kinds of unions, organizational machinery, methods of struggle, industrial remuneration, closed shop, union label.

4. Problems of Organized Labor.—Scientific management. Methods of industrial peace, protective and restrictive legislation, immigration, women and child labor, unemployment, the industrial reserve army and the unorganized, trade education and employers' associations.

5. Decisive Battles in American Labor History.—Such as the railroad strikes of 1877 and 1894, the Anthracite strike of 1902, and the National strikes of 1922.

6. Recent Tendencies.—A city and rural workers' alliance. Consumers and Producers' Co-operatives. Amalgamation. The Labor Party.

Repeal Anti-Picket Law.

SAN BERNARDINO, Cal.—J. W. Catick, the labor candidate, is the new mayor of this railroad town. An ordinance prohibiting picketing, enacted by the city council last summer, was repealed by popular referendum.

Help "The Worker" Find the Worst Boss in the U. S. A.

This week we publish more stories in our hunt for "The Worst Boss in the U. S. A." THE WORKER wants to publish four more stories about bosses. Thru your stories, appearing each week, we will find out who is the worst boss. For the best stories published THE WORKER offers 14 prizes as follows: First Prize, $10 worth of books; Second Prize, $7.50 worth of books; Third Prize, $5 worth of books; Fourth Prize, $2.50 worth of books, and 10 additional prizes, each one $1 worth of books.

The contest will close on May 31st. The judges will be C. E. Ruthenberg, Elmer T. Allison and Caleb Harrison. Start sending in your stories immediately to The Editor, Worst Boss Stories, THE WORKER, Room 405, 799 Broadway, New York City. Here are this week's stories:

Editor, Worst Boss Stories:—Here are samples of a few bosses, but the last one is, in my opinion, the worst. I am a Carpenter and have had plenty of bosses.

Boss No. 1, an old Englishman, (I was green in America), shows me how to do things. At the same time he tells me how much of it is to be done in a day (to set 22 sets to one day). Saturday comes and the Boss says, that as long as I can use my right hand, I shall put on locks. Of course I do that (being hungry). Saturday comes and the Boss pays me $1.50 per day instead of $4.

Boss No. 2. Talked about a very good man to work for, doing the best kind of building. I get a job on one of his apartment houses. My work is very much liked, all kinds of fancy trimmings. Best of hardware is intrusted to me. Everything is all right. I like the job. The Boss-Super and foreman are tickled. One Friday at lunch the super brings me my pay envelope. The poor boob spied me smoking a cigarette, had no courage to tell me not to do it, so he exerted his power thru the Super.

Boss No. 3. Pennock Company, Builders, of Philadelphia. Building a fine church. I get a job on the fancy trim. I have to put on-picture moulding. The boss furnishes a 15-foot step ladder. This is to be done in the minister's future drawing room. At present it's a stock room. Nails, carpenters' tool boxes, all other kinds of junk. I got up the ladder to proper height and it broke in two under me. Of course I fell in the mess of all the junk in the room. The next thing I knew was in the Emergency Hospital all bruised and right arm dislocated. After a short stay they told me in the hospital that I could go. Next Saturday, when I came after my pay I found I was 73 cents short. After long inquiry the head super explained it in this manner: I fell off the ladder at 10.30 :12 o'clock was quitting time for it was Saturday and we here only pay for services rendered.

Boss No. 4. Was a contractor in Philadelphia. Was putting up a new building. The boss furnishes a 15-foot step ladder. This is to be done in the minister's future drawing room. At present it's a stock room. Nails, carpenters' tool boxes, all other kinds of junk. I got up the ladder to proper height and it broke in two under me. Red Toilers in Ruhr Fight Both German and French Bosses

Perhaps the biggest bit of inspiring news coming out of the Ruhr Valley is the account of the successful gathering of the Shop Councils' Congress, at Essen, in the heart of the invaded territory, held under Communist inspiration and direction.

This congress of 669 delegates, of whom 462 were German Communist Party members, adopted resolutions denouncing the German bourgeoisie just as bitterly as Premier Poincaré, of France, and the French capitalists. It appealed for the unity of the German and French working classes in a war upon capitalism in general and the German and French government in particular.

An indication of this rapidly growing Communist sentiment among the German workers was reported last week by Louis P. Lochner, our Berlin correspondent. He showed the revolt of the whole German labor movement against the program of collaboration with the capitalists in the raising of relief for the workers in the Ruhr. "Even with the exploiters was urged by the Socialists and their publications, but the workers refused to stomach this alliance. Among those who oppose this Socialist policy is Robert Dressman, president of the Metal Workers' Union, with 1,000,000 members.

In the heat of this internal discussion in the German labor movement, with the drift toward the Communist viewpoint, 8,000 tons of Russian wheat have been reported to have arrived at Hamburg, the gift of the Russian trade unionists to the militant workers in the Ruhr.

Within the Shop Councils' Congress at Essen, representing workers in the principal industries in Rhineland-Westphalia, was not a regular gathering of delegates called by the national leaders of the trade unions, it was considered representative of the sentiment of the Ruhr workers, as the delegates were chosen from among the regular members of the official Shop Councils by the votes of practically all of the persons employed in their bailiwick. The meeting was called by the National Committee of Twenty-three, picked several months ago by the Communists. The response to the call showed the strength of the Communists in the Rhineland, as 462 of 669 delegates were Communist Party members, and the meeting was opened with an address by a fraternal delegate from the Communist Party of France, whose plea for united action against Poincaré and Cuno moved the delegates to great enthusiasm and sounds of cheers for the French Communists and their anti-invasion activities. Some of the features of the resolutions, as given in the Berlin Rote Fahne, were:

"The workers of the Ruhr district are aware of the intentions of Poincaré and Lubcheur. They regard Poincare and his agents as their class enemies, just as are Stinnes, Krupp and Klockner, with whom there must be no compromise.

"In order to prevent the working class from being robbed of the fruits of its victories in future struggle, it is necessary to put an end to all cooperation with the working masses and the bourgeoisie and to draw a clear line between the organizations of the workers, clerks and petty officials and the bourgeoisie and its Government. All co-operation and coalition policies must be dropped.

"There must be energetic mass action for the wiping out of the Treaty of Versailles, against the enslavement of the working masses under the form of reparations and for the evacuation of the Ruhr and the rest of the occupied German territory. The bourgeoisie alone must be made to bear the burden of making good the damages and destructions of which it alone is guilty."

The delegates decided to extend the organization of workers' defense unit and control committees, and the Socialist delegates went so far as to warn Germans in other parts of the country from contributing to the "Ruhr relief fund" until its administration was put under control of the Shop Councils.

Railroaders Also Hold Conference

A conference of the Eastern District of the Railroad Industry will be held at the Labor Temple, 243 East 84th Street, New York City, beginning Saturday, May 5th, at 9:00 A.M. and Sunday, May 6th, under the direction of the National Committee to Amalgamate the 16 Standard Railroad Organizations. The purpose of this conference is to work out a plan of action so that we can build up and perfect a strong amalgamating movement in the East and to solidify the ranks of the workers.

Militant Building Trade Workers

A Provisional National Committee of the Building Trades Section, Trade Union Educational League has been formed. A revised program of amalgamation of all building trade unions is off the press. Now is the time for all of us to get busy for amalgamation.

Secretaries of local building trades groups, as well as militant workers where no such groups have been organized should send their addresses to J. W. Johnstone, 118 S. LaSalle St., Room 10, Chicago, Ill.

Manley Finds Many Militants Active in New England States

(Special to "The Worker")

BOSTON, Mass.—Joseph Manley, Eastern Organizer of the Trade Union Educational League, spoke at a very successful meeting held here last Sunday.

Judging from the many reports of the various industrial sections, real substantial progress is being made. The Needle Trades especially made a splendid report of the progress of their campaign for amalgamation. All arrangements are being completed for a successful Mass Meeting for Organizer Ida Rothstein, who is expected shortly in Boston. She will meet the many needle trades militants and take up plans to definitely commit their organizations to amalgamation.

Manley reported to this meeting on the plans for the coming conference of the Eastern District. It was decided to call a special meeting for the purpose of electing delegates to this Conference. A determination was apparent to have every industrial section, such as Building, Needle Trades, Printing Unit, Leather, Boot and Shoes, fully represented.

Meetings have been arranged for Manley in the various nearby cities and there is every prospect of New England and its giant industries being well represented at this coming gathering of militants to be held in New York City, May 6th.

Fascisti Ambassador to United States Is Very Warmly Greeted at Rochester

By H. M. WICKS

ROCHESTER, N. Y.—Prince Gaetini, Fascisti ambassador to the United States from Italy, met a warm reception from the Italian workers when he visited this city as the guest of the local feudal baron, George Eastman, head of the Eastman Kodak Company, and departed two days later with the firm conviction that the present is an inopportune time to endeavor to start a Fascist movement in Rochester.

When the announcement was made in the keep press that the emissary of the blood-streaked Mussolini and his black hordes was to visit Rochester the rebels in the ranks of the local Italian workers immediately issued a call for all Italian workingmen's societies, fraternal benefit societies and labor unions, to participate in a conference in order to formulate definite plans for the combatting of Fascism.

The response was unanimous from all workingmen's organizations and a vigorous letter was written to the local press denouncing the Fascisti government of Italy for its reign of terror against organized labor, and emphatically declaring that every source of the energy of the Italian workers in this city would be used against anyone attempting to inaugurate a similar movement here.

When the ambassador came to town he was secluded in the home of the establishment of George Eastman and issued a veiled statement to the press to the effect that he had no desire to create a Fascisti movement in the United States. That the man is an impostor and liar was evident from the feverish efforts of a number of the local Italian business men to organize a local Fascisti movement simultaneously with the appearance of Prince Gaetani. The movement of Italian workers was openly called an anti-Fascisti movement, and by anticipating the movements of the reactionaries inspired by the Chamber of Commerce, they were able not only to defeat the immediate organization of a Fascisti movement but their agitation has created a solid front of all Italian workingclass organizations. But altho the immediate danger of local Fascism is passed, the leaders of the movement have decided that it would be a grave mistake to disband the organization that has been created, so they are passing from a negative to a positive phase of their movement and have decided to create a local Italian Chamber of Labor to fight in the interests of the Italian workers, abolition of be anti-Fascisti, protection of foreign born workers of mutual aid to local strikes.

The whole movement has been organized and directed for the most part by local Communists members of the Workers Party, and the spirit and life of the workers participating is the imbued from of the Italian organizations both with favor upon the propaganda of Communism and evince a desire to know more about it.

...Cal's Conspiracy

...ship, party, nation, or class. There should be no mercy in dealing with this contemptible thing. Out with it!"

In the same number of the N. Y. Call there is an editorial which makes it cowardly, hypocritical, veiled attack upon Soviet Russia in connection with the death sentence passed upon the clericals in the Moscow trial. And following this another one discussing the imprisonment of six Bulgarian ministers. This editorial is given the title "Punishment. Why this contradiction? Simply because the Soviet government is a government of the workers, and is therefore hated by the yellow traitors, and the present Stambulisky government of Bulgaria is a labor-hating government, and for this reason it has the sympathy of the traitors of the N. Y. Call.

The issue of April 6 is almost completely taken up with counter-revolutionary propaganda. An article appears with the following heading:

"Soviets Apologize for Ban on Workmen's Circle Delegates."

There is a second article with this title: "Two Russian Government Heads, Bribed, Sent to Death." There is a third article with this heading: Central Trades Flays Russian Czar's Slaying."

The climax of the campaign of miserable slander against the Russian revolution was reached by the N. Y. Call in its issue of April 7.

The N. Y. Call prints the lying article of the Moscow correspondent, Mr. Francis McCullagh, who has recently been expelled from Moscow because of his slanders and lies against Soviet Russia. And to show how low the N. Y. Call has sunk in its own prostitution, we reprint the editorial introduction to the counter-revolutionary article taken from the New York Herald:

"Eyewitness Finds Prelates' Soviet Trial Religious Only.

"No Evidence of Revolutionary Plot Adduced Nor Political Reason for Persecution Found.—Defense of Priests Was Martyrs' Defense of Christian Church, Says Correspondent.

"By special permission of the New York Herald, The Call publishes today what purports to be a first hand account of the trials of the Roman Catholic prelates condemned to death by the Soviet Government of Russia. The New York Herald staff correspondent, Francis McCullough, is no longer in Moscow. The Herald states that he is across the border and free to tell things he has seen, which few are able to do in Moscow unless their viewpoint is in entire accord with the Moscow regime.

"McCullough's dispatch gives a vivid picture of the trials which preceded the execution of the Roman Catholic vicar general, Father Butchkavitch, which occurred a few days ago, an event that shocked the people of two continents and laid a heavy burden upon the friends of the Russian revolution to defend the Moscow government as being dedicated to the proposition of freedom for the individual and intellectual tolerance.

"The Call cautions the readers of the following dispatch to the Herald to bear in mind that its author may not be in any accord with the Soviet government. Certainly it cannot be said that the New York Herald or Frank A. Munsey's evening paper the Sun, have evinced either sympathy or understanding of the economic and political principles which are the fabric of Russia's revolutionary endeavor. Be that as it may, an understanding of and sympathy for the cause and effect of social revolution does not carry with it blind and unreasoning hatred of the persons identified with the church or any other group.

"Editor, New York Call."

The article reprinted from the N. Y. Herald speaks of the counter-revolutionary priests as of the most sympathetic martyrs, and of the Russian officials as of the most miserable blood-thirsty dogs.

McCullough, the professional liar and the editor of the N. Y. Call, the professional sentimentalist, are showing good team-work in their concealment of the counter-revolutionary sins of the Archbishop and his vicars.

The Holy Trinity

It is no mere coincidence but it is rather a open manifestation of the secret alliance which exists between the N. Y. Call and the capitalist press, that on the same day, on April 7, when the N. Y. Call reprinted the lengthy article from the N. Y. Herald, on that same day the New York Times quotes the N. Y. Call as follows on the Foster trial.

"The New York Call, organ of the orthodox Socialists, pays this tender tribute to him (Foster) and his friends:

"In the history of the organized labor struggle of this country there has never appeared a more assinine or inept group than this collection of furtive Communists. It cannot stand the withering blight of publicity thrown upon its activities during the past four years."

"This long trial has made the blight of publicity still more withering. All labor, all sane socialism, is the better for this new exposure of the little squad of disgraced Communists skating on the edge of the law."

The N. Y. Call stands today in the ranks of the most reactionary bourgeois newspapers. It goes arm in arm with the N. Y. Herald, the Daugherty newspaper, and the N. Y. Times, the newspaper of big business.

And during all this campaign of slander against the Communists and the Russian revolution, we find in the N. Y. Call nothing but friendly words towards the reactionary and traiterous labor-leaders. The N. Y. Call does not say a word about the fact that Eugene V. Debs, the veteran revolutionary, expressed his solidarity with the defendants in the Michigan trial. On the contrary it quotes the jeers and insults of Matthew Woll against Foster. There is not a word in the N. Y. Call mentioning that Eugene V. Debs, the honest militant, indorsed the policies of the Trade Union Educational League, but on the contrary, the Call indorsed the policies of Gompers and Matthew Woll. The N. Y. Call has not a word to say about the fact that Eugene V. Debs is an enthusiastic adherent of the Russian revolution, tho it glorifies at the same time Martov, the Menshevik leader, who hated the Russian revolution.

The N. Y. Call has songs of praise for Ebert, the chief betrayer of the German working class. It has not a word of condemnation for the British labor leaders who dine and sup with the English king in fancy costume.

The N. Y. Call has become altogether a prostitute. But we ask Eugene V. Debs and Scott Nearing, and every honest worker, who is still within the Party, how long they will allow their names and work to be used as a cloak for this prostitution?

We ask Upton Sinclair, author of the "Brass Check," which mercilessly exposes the prostitution of the capitalist press, when will he join us in exposing the prostitution of the New York Call?

Reactionaries Win Fight in Steel Convention

By WALLACE T. METCALFE

WARREN, Ohio.—The anti-Gompers minority in the convention here of the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers, which elects their first big victory then forcing the seating of Delegate Bygott, of Canonsburg, Pa. The delegation had been out for two days over Byland's membership in the Trade Union Educational League. He was seated by a vote of 76 to 48, with 11 delegates not voting. This vote indicates the militant spirit now permeating the convention.

Big Response for May Day United Front

The call of the Workers Party for United Front May Day celebration has brought the greatest response in the history of the movement. In all parts of the country great celebrations are being arranged with the Party slogans as the unifying force.

Our movement will make another big step forward on May Day. It will demonstrate its increasing strength and influence among the workers.

Amalgamation—A Labor Party—and a Workers Government!

These are the steps toward our goal, the emancipation of the workers from capitalism and the ushering in of a Communist society.

Workers of The Fascist Fire Is Spreading!

threatening, above all the rights and the interests of every working class and every working class organization in every country?

Has the world war taught you that no country, however self-sufficient, can stand alone? Have you learned from the events that followed and from the conditions it has produced, that we too, here in America, are vitally concerned in the political as well as in the industrial future of the rest of the world?

Today the eyes of the world are turned to the occupation of the Ruhr district, where coal fields and iron works supplied the industries of Germany with their raw-material for production, by the army of the French, Workingmen and women in every country of the world have protested, and will continue to protest against this flagrant violation of peaceful national relations. They protest, however, not because the national rights of the German people have been violated, not because the French have robbed Germany capitalism of its inalienable right to the mines and the railroads that lie in the borders of their German fatherland.

Their protest is directed not against the French Government alone. They realize that the occupation of the Ruhr is only an episode in the great drama of international imperialism that is being played on the world stage. They know that the Ruhr invasion, tho it commands the attention of every thinking person in the world because of the imminent danger of open warfare, is no more significant and dangerous than a score of other international complications that are being fought out with a bitterness of purpose and a show of threatening violence that clearly reveal how much the interests of the warring capitalist groups are involved.

While German workingmen are killed in the industrial centers of the Ruhr district, and the French working men are being thrown into prison for protesting against the military adventure of their own rulers, while French officers are precipitating riots by inhuman provocation of the self-controlled and disciplined German masses, France, England and America are waging a determined war for supremacy in the oil fields of the Near East.

American workers, the Ruhr situation is not a European question. Its problems are problems that will be adjusted between the two nations immediately concerned. Its future will not be settled by the people of France and Germany.

The Ruhr situation is one move in the game that international capitalism is playing. The Ruhr question is only one step of the great war that is being waged, under cover and peacefully today, with fire, with murder and horrible cruelty tomorrow, for power and profits.

The provocative attitude of the French ruling class in the Ruhr today, its unwarranted attacks upon workingmen who dare to protect their own interests, are no worse than the effronteries of the Fascisti in Italy, than the Hitlerites and monarchists in Germany, than the Ku Klux Klan in the United States.

There is in the world only one potent force against this powerful array of international imperialism, the international Communist movement—The Third International. At a conference held in Frankfurt two weeks ago, attended by delegates from the German, the French, the Italian, the Belgian and the Czecho-Slovakian Communist parties, the workingmen of all nations were called upon to assemble everywhere in tremendous protest meetings in the week of April 15—22 against the Ruhr invasion, against international imperialism as its cause, against international reaction and fascism as the most dangerous enemy of the revolutionary working-class.

No working class on earth has more reason to participate in this protest than we, the workers of America. American capitalism is rapidly becoming the dominant figure of world imperialism. We must strengthen our forces to prepare the American working class to resist capitalist reaction in its worst and most powerful form. We must join hands with our brother-workers in Europe because the battlefield between capital and labor has become endless in extent, international in scope.

Join your comrades in Germany and in France in a vigorous protest against the Ruhr invasion!

Join your comrades in Italy in their fight against international fascism!

Join your comrades in Russia in their fight against international imperialism!

Join, with all your might, in the protest of the Communist International's action against world-capitalism!

Militancy at Work Among Steel Slaves

Guard Armory which was donated to the committee on arrangements to be used for the convention sessions.

President M. F. Tighe, of the Amalgamated Association, assured the good folks had nothing of War. That the organization of which he is President is the most conservative yet "progressive" trade union in the United States. Speaking about the first Workers' Republic he stated that had trade unions been allowed to function in Russia under the Czar there would have been no Bolshevism. This "blessed assurance" was given ample space by the local press that termed Tighe's utterances as intensely patriotic.

The leader of this one-time great union made no mention of the thousands of unorganized steel workers. He had no word for those men who but a few years ago put up the greatest struggle ever waged by workers in the steel industry and who were betrayed in their struggle by the Amalgamated Association returning to work, thereby breaking the steel strike. Tighe made no mention of that prisoner of Pennsylvania, Jacob Dolla, a member of his union, now rotting his life away in the Eastern Penitentiary of Pennsylvania. Instead he approved of the very order of things that are slowly but surely sapping the very life of the union he professes to cherish so dearly.

Samuel Gompers, the "Grand Ole' Mon" of the American Federation of Labor, as one sturdy puddler puts it was unable to attend. In his place Patrick F. Duffy, general organizer of the A. F. of L., spoke. He told the workers to use their heads for something more than hat racks. Referring to the Lockwood Committee of New York City, that probed the building trade tie-up in New York, he charged the Department of Justice with side-tracking all evidence brought out against the Steel barons. Speaking further, Duffy charged the present administration with being responsible for the past long season of unemployment and that the present administration will come up for re-election on their Open Shop Record. Attorney General Daugherty can find plenty of time to issue injunctions against striking railroad workers but finds no time to prosecute the steel barons.

James H. Nutt, secretary of the Manufacturers' Bar Association, pleaded with the delegates not to get "hysterical" and to look on both sides of the question. President Tighe spoke very feelingly of the fine labor record of Mr. Nutt.

The Amalgamated Association faces a very difficult future and in spite of the militants who are endeavoring to build up the union into a real fighting machine capable of taking in the unorganized steel workers, the officialdom pledges itself to go hand in hand with the open shoppers, believing that the sops thrown their way will subdue the ever increasing demand for organization of the steel slaves.

The name of William Z. Foster was on many lips and the subject of many conversations, and before the convention ends the heroic battle being waged by this former leader of the steel workers against the force of capital will find its way to the convention floor, and in spite of the great mass struggle that is put upon the stage in the plays of the Capek brothers, "R. U. R." and "The World We Live In".

Dudley Digges as the unfortunate "Mr. Zero" gives a marvelous interpretation of the pathetic and helpless slave. Both figures, who is displaced by an aiding machine. He is especially magnificent in the trial scene where he unfolds the vacuum lives of those whosoil in offices.

Too much cannot be said of the excellent work of the entire cast and the attractive staging.

Third Bill of "Chauve-Souris"

Balieff's repertory season of the Chauve-Souris on the Century Roof, under Morris Gest's direction, has swung around to its third program in which are revived some of the most celebrated of the Balieff offerings.

It will be good news to many that Tchekhoff's uproarious farcical sketch, "The Dentist", may be seen yet once again before Balieff and his troupe vanish over the sea. This classic bit of horse-play has all the greatness that Tchekhoff has revealed in his more serious work.

Tighe and his heroic band of strike breakers who betrayed the steel workers under Foster, there will be action taken by the convention to stand with Foster and the other Michigan defendants.

Mass meetings have been arranged by the militants and delegates will address the steel workers in the valley explaining to them the need of a real militant union of steel workers. The officialdom of the Amalgamated Association sees the handwriting on the wall and a hard fight is in store for the militants. There will be no desertion of the union but rather a cleaning-up.

The loyalty displayed by the rank and file in this union makes them deserving of better things. Notwithstanding the fact that non-union mills pay on the average a wage scale 12½% higher than the union scale the rank and file have stuck to their union and are fighting a bitter fight against their reactionary leaders to wipe out their disgraceful action taken in the steel strike.

Cannon Hits Morality of Kept Press

(Special to "The Worker")

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Speaking here to an audience that filled Liberty Hall, James P. Cannon, National Chairman of the Workers Party, defended the action of the Russian Soviet Government in executing the counter-revolutionary priest, Butchkavitch, and bitterly denounced the "moral" campaign in the capitalist press as a hypocritical mask behind which is concealed a sinister offensive against Soviet Russia.

"American workers must be on their guard," he said," and remember the lessons of the World War. Whenever the capitalist press begins to talk about 'Morality' and 'Civilization' it is a pretty safe assumption that something crooked is on foot.

"We are not bloodthirsty," he said, "but we shed our tears for the thousands of humble Russian workers who went down to cruel death in the long struggle against the counter-revolution. If the Soviet Government had not taken a firm and ruthless stand against the counter-revolution, it would long since have gone down and with it would have fallen the hopes of the world proletariat for another generation.

"The enemies of the Russian Revolution best cloaked their designs under the mask of Socialism, but the Soviet Government tore off that cloak, and, in the trial of the Social Revolutionaries, revealed the 'Socialists' as partners of the white guard and agents of the French Government. Now the time-worn device of religion is resorted to; but the purpose is the same.

"The cause of Soviet Russia is the Cause of Labor the world over. The measures the Soviet Government finds it necessary to take to defend itself however stern they may be must and will be defended by all class-conscious workers who recognize the Russian Revolution as the greatest plunge forward the human race has taken in all the centuries."

Education Necessary To Build Effective Labor Organizations

(By Federated Press)

The preliminary program of the third annual convention of the Workers' Educational Bureau of America to be held in New York City, April 14 and 15, has been issued.

"Leaders of labor as well as working people generally," says the convention call signed by James H. Maurer, president, and Spencer Miller, jr., secretary, "have come to appreciate that, whereas organization and co-operative effort is necessary to express collective aims, education is necessary to make organization responsible and effective."

An invitation is extended to all affiliated trade union colleges, study classes, students' associations, trades unions and co-operative societies. The convention will be held in the auditorium of the New School for Social Research 460 West 23rd St. John L. Sullivan, president of the Central Trades and Labor Council of Greater New York, will preside and the address of welcome will be by Gov. Alfred E. Smith of New York.

The speakers include Prof. Harry Overstreet, College of the City of New York; Samuel Gompers, John Brophy, F. E. Schwarztrauber, chairman Portland Labor College, Tucson Bennett, Brookwood Workers College.

The Political Policy of the Workers Party

A STATEMENT TO THE MEMBERSHIP OF THE PARTY.

COMRADES:—In order that the members of our Party may effectively support the policies which the Central Executive Committee is endeavoring to put into effect it is necessary that they be informed upon the principles which there have underlined the present and the guiding principles which there have underlined the guiding principles.

During the past month the Central Executive Committee has confined on a campaign for the organization of the Labor Defense Council, for the organization of the Labor Party, for the organization of the Foreign-Born workers and for the United Front of Labor political and industrial organizations on the basis of the proposals laid down in the United Front Manifesto. Are these campaigns separate and distinct moves on the part of the Party, or have they a guiding principle which binds these various proposals together?

Some units of the Party and some Party members have felt that the Central Executive Committee was initiating too many campaigns—that it was making too many demands of the Party organization for new efforts to reach the workers outside of the Party with proposals for common action. Have there been too many campaigns or has there been only one campaign?

The purpose of this statement is to show that there has been only one campaign which has taken different forms as new issues arose, that there has been a guiding principle underlying all the actions determined upon by the Central Executive Committee during the period in question.

This guiding principle, the motive behind the various proposals urged by the Central Executive Committee, has been to bring the Communists closer to the working masses. The Party cannot wield an influence over the masses; it cannot be the leader of these masses in their everyday struggles so long as it was cut off from these workers. In order to live and grow, in order to fulfil its mission, the Party had to become something more than a sect which stewed in its own juice, resulting in periodic explosions which tore the Party asunder. The Party had to find ways and means to break down the wall which separated it from the workers generally. It had to develop ways and means thru which to surround itself with an ever widening circle of friendly or sympathetic workers.

All the campaigns initiated by the Central Executive Committee during the period above referred to have had this one end in view. The Labor Defense Council campaign, the Campaign for the Protection of Foreign-Born Workers, the United Front proposal, what are these but means thru which the Party associates itself in common struggle with broader masses of the workers and wins their friendship and support?

To say that this is the object of these campaigns is not to say that the objective of each of these campaigns itself has been reached. It is just because in each instance the Party proposed measures of vital interest to the whole working class and carried on a campaign in support of these measures together with other working-class groups, that its proposals have resulted in breaking the isolation of the Party and building around it a circle of friendly workers. It is by fighting side by side with the workers in support of measures in the interest of the workers that the Party establishes its influence and leadership.

THE NEXT STEPS

The above explanation has been made because the time has come to combine the various campaigns which are underway into one United Front Movement embracing all of these issues.

The Party organization has now before it three United Front proposals:

1. The organization of local and state Labor Party Conferences to be made up of representatives of trade unions, labor political parties and other organizations of workers.

2. Local Councils for Protection of Foreign-Born Workers to be organized on the same basis.

3. United Front May Day Conferences organized for the celebration of May Day, made up of the same groups.

The Central Executive Committee realizes that it would be an impossible task for the Party organization to build up three separate United Front organizations in each city. It was necessary to carry on these campaigns separately in their initial stages, but the time has now come when they can be combined, and a United Front Movement created on the basis of all these issues.

To achieve this end the Central Executive Committee urges the Party organization to take steps to maintain the United Front organization created around the celebration of May Day on the basis of the Issues listed in the United Front Manifesto of the Party of which a copy is enclosed.

This manifesto should be brought before such United Front May Day celebration conferences, the issues discussed, and a vote secured to maintain the conference for the purpose of carrying on a campaign in support of the measures proposed in the manifesto.

In the places where no work has been done to build up the United Front May Day Conference and no such organization has been created on the basis of the Labor Party or Protection of the Foreign-Born Campaigns, work should be begun at once to secure the support of trade unions, labor political organizations, sick and death benefit societies, and workers' organizations of any other character.

The way to organize United Front conferences is to have those members of the Party who are members of unions, and other labor organizations and societies, to bring the United Front Manifesto before such organizations and urge the endorsement and the sending of delegates. Wherever local speakers are available they should be organized systematically to canvass the unions. Letters of invitation, accompanied by a copy of the manifesto should also be sent out to all organizations.

When United Front conferences are organized they should immediately begin work in support of the measures proposed in the United Front Manifesto. Where local elections occur nominations should be made and a campaign carried on. Mass meetings in support of the idea of a Labor Party, and Protection of the Foreign Born, etc. should be arranged and literature distributed to familiarize the workers with these issues.

LOCAL ISSUES

It is not enough, however that the Central Executive Committee outline the facts and issues on a national scale. Every Party organization must find ways and means to give a local application to such issues as that of the Labor Party or the Protection of the Foreign Born workers.

The Party organization must study the life of the workers locally. It must use local examples to show how the United Front is used against the workers. It must find instances of discriminations against the foreign-born workers locally. It is only by getting close to the masses of the workers, by knowing the facts about the conditions under which they suffer that we can hope to interest them and secure their support for our proposals. Each Party unit should have a committee especially directed to study the facts about the life of the workers in their locality and to make use of these facts in carrying on their work.

IMPORTANT. The policy of the Central Executive Committee is the only policy then which the Party can be made a powerful factor in the life of the workers of this country. The Central Executive Committee relies upon every Party unit to carry on active work in support of this policy.

Fraternally yours,
C. E. RUTHENBERG,
Executive Secretary Workers Party.

Defense Council Conference on April 20th

The capitalist press has been giving widespread publicity to the story of the now famous Michigan trial. It has attempted by every means in its power to give a false impression of the men who are on trial, and what they stand for. The story of the trial was shaped in such a way as to mould public opinion against the defendants.

The labor movement of New York City, however, values these stories of the capitalist press at their true worth, and therefore an opportunity will be given for the representatives of organized labor to hear the case at the next local conference of the Labor Defense Council, Saturday afternoon, April 20th, at 2 p. m., at the Labor Temple, 243 E. 84th St. Organizations are urged to send their delegates. Further information can be obtained at the Labor Defense Council, Room 434, 80 E. 11th St.

Italian Labor Unites in War on Fascism

By GIUSEPPE CANNATO

The appearance of the first signs of fascist organization in America has spurred the Italian workers of New York City to take firm and united stand in defense of their rights. Up to this time the anti-fascist activity and propaganda had been carried on independently by the various radical groups and bore mainly on the infamous activity of the fascisti in Italy. The sentiment for concerted action, however, has been growing steadily and the attempt to organize fascist groups in America has led to the formation of a vast anti-fascist UNITED FRONT.

The Italian Chamber of Labor, an independent body representing all the Italian local unions of New York City, has taken the lead in this movement by calling a preliminary conference, held on Tuesday, April 3, at the Italian Labor Center, 231 East 14th St., New York City. Over one hundred enthusiastic delegates representing local and central bodies of the Workers Party, Socialist Party, Industrial Workers of the World, the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America, the International Ladies Garment Workers Union, the Mosaic and Terrace Workers, the Amalgamated Foodstuff Workers, the Journeymen Barbers, etc., participated in the meeting and approved unanimously the plan of action proposed for an anti-fascist campaign.

The activities discussed will include a vast propaganda campaign by means of the printed as well as the spoken word in all the Italian centers of this country. Speakers will be rushed across the country in order to present the fascist movement to the workers in its true light. Active and corrupt daily press has consistently held to the great masses of Italian workers as to the character and aims of the Fascisti. This lying propaganda will be counteracted by the publicity planned. The movement will not limit itself to enlightening the Italian worker as to the danger of the fascist plotters and activities to organized labor, but will present this problem to American labor also.

The fascist groups in America will face the middle class elements which in Italy has given it some semblance of political stability. In America the movement must degenerate into subsidized agencies of gunmen and scabs, manoeuvered by American capitalists to destroy American labor organizations. The Italian Chamber of Labor and the new Anti-fascist United Front will bring this aspect of the situation to the highest consideration of the American Federation of Labor in order to force official action in the matter.

Besides these purely defensive steps, the labor organizations represented have decided to launch an offensive against the fascist regime in Italy, because of its savage oppression and persecution of the Italian organized workers. The immigrants living here will be told to boycott Italian products, withdraw all remittances and deposits from all Italian state institutions, and to refuse to recognize the official representatives of the Fascist regime in America. The Harding administration, which has persistently refused to recognize Soviet Russia, will be made to realize that the Italian workers in America at least, do not consider the Mussolini regime a lawful and legitimate one, for it is maintained by systematic violence and armed forces against the will of the producing classes.

The Committee formed will also launch a campaign for funds to aid the victims of fascist banditry, the widows and orphans in Italy, the imprisoned and the refugees from the anger or terror of the Italian reactionaries.

It is expected that at the next meeting many more organizations will send delegates. The Committee will organize permanently and will authorize the formation of local Committees in other cities which will work together with the Central Committee in New York. The United Front of Italian Labor in America against Fascism will then be an accomplished fact and Signor Mussolini will have something more to worry about.

Harrison at Boston Defense Meeting

(Special to "The Worker")

BOSTON, Mass.—The disagreement of the Foster furor has fired the members of the Boston Labor Defense Council with enthusiasm and they are doing all possible to make a success of the meeting they arranged.

Caleb Harbison, one of Foster's co-defendants, is to speak Sunday Afternoon, April 15th, at 2.30 p. m. at Scenic Auditorium, Corner Berkley St. and Warren Ave., Boston.

The intensification of the activities of the Trade Union Educational League in Boston and vicinity has increased the support given by workers to Foster and the other militants.

The International Fascist Movement

By JOHN PEPPER

The Fascisti movement covers international scope. It is therefore clear that the only real international organization of the working class, the Communist International, had to declare war against it.

The Fascisti possess the government in Italy, with Mussolini at the head. In Hungary Horthy controls the government with Horthy at its head. In Bavaria does not as yet possess the power, but it possesses certain sections of the working class (as for instance the Italian Fascisti) among whom there are many Syndicalists, the Awakening Magyars with their Christian Socialist workers, and the German National Socialists who include many sections of the Bavarian workers.

The Social composition of the Fascist masses is therefore not directly bourgeois, and yet they are nothing but a tool in the hands of the capitalist class, for the violent suppression of the workers. The Fascisti are today, on an international scale the bloody oppressors, not only of the Communists, but also of the workers in general. And the leaders of the Fascist movement,—Mussolini in Italy, Horthy in Hungary, Hitler in Germany, are the paid agents, the kept prostitutes of the bourgeoisie.

Today, the Fascist movement is making big progress, yet nevertheless, it is doomed to die. It can temporarily rule in Italy and Hungary. It may even be able to come into power temporarily in Germany. But it cannot retain power, for it cannot change the present society. Chaos and disorder, unemployment and misery are on the increase everywhere. The old order which reigned before the war can be restored only thru complete disorganization of the working class. The Fascisti who are not directly interested in the economic process of capitalist society have the following program: disruption of the working class, destruction of the big cities, restoration of the purely simple clear relationships. But the capitalist class knows well that it wishes to exist as a class it must also reckon with the existence of the workers.

Only in two ways can order be established: either thru the complete victory of the capitalist class or the complete victory of the workers. The complete victory of the capitalist class is impossible because the elimination of the working class is impossible. The complete victory of the working class is possible because the elimination of the capitalists is possible.

Fascism is therefore a short and bloody episode in the history of the gigantic class struggle between the capitalist class and the working class. The only turn which is possible for Fascism is that the masses of Fascismo will again come over to the ideas of the militant proletariat. The Mussolinis, the Horthys and the Hitlers will be hanged by the victorious working class on the very same gallows which they had set up for the working class.

Failure in Chicago Election Shows Great Need for Labor Party

(By Federated Press)

CHICAGO.—Failure of the three labor parties in Chicago to agree on a common candidate showed its effect in the municipal election here when William A. Gunnea, Socialist candidate for mayor, polled less than 6% of the total vote of 713,015. Cunnea received 40,841, about one-third the votes credited to him when he made his surprising race for state's attorney some years ago. William E. Dever, Democrat, was elected mayor, receiving 387,961 votes to 284,213 for Arthur C. Lueder, Republican.

The Socialist nominating meeting took place the day that a conference was called by the Chicago Federation of Labor, to consider united political action in Cook county. With the Socialists already in the field neither the Farmer-Labor party nor the Workers party took further action for the mayoralty campaign just passed.

Aldermanic candidates of all three labor parties were, eliminated in the primaries.

The political situation was scrambled even more for labor by a huge turnout of trade union officials for Dever, the Democrat.

The Socialists polled a little under 6% of the total vote in the second district special congressional election, where Morton D. Hull, millionaire Republican, was elected. Seymour Stedman, Socialist, received 3955 votes out of a total of 104,780.

Alma Gluck Adopts Russian Orphans

(By F. S. R. Press Service)

NEW YORK.—Alma Gluck Zimbalist, the world-famous soprano, has adopted four Russian orphans thru the Friends of Soviet Russia. She will care for their upbringing and education, she told New York reporters, as if they were indeed her own children.

The four youngsters assigned to her will be put into a Children's Home established by the F. S. R. where, if Alma Gluck's plans for a European trip materialize, she will be able to meet them personally. The concert star has three children of her own, which accounts for her keen mother-love.

Howat Talks at Charleroi, Pa., April 22

Alexander Howat has definitely decided to meet the opposition of the "machine" and their subservient station by making a general tour thru the eastern part of the United States, starting April 10th, from Pittsburg, Kansas, thru Illinois, Indiana and Ohio, to Pittsburgh, Pa., where he will tour the notorious District No. 5 for some time, ending up at a great Protest Meeting in Charleroi, Pa. April 22nd.

Protest Meeting at Charleroi, Pa.

It will be remembered that on March 16th, the "machine" was successful in causing the police to break up a miners' meeting in Charleroi, and prevent Howat from speaking.

This so enraged the Progressive Miners that they determined to hold a great Mass Meeting to protest against the conduct of the "machine" and the suppression of free speech by the Burgess of Charleroi.

Every miner and worker who respects the principles that Howat stands for will plan to be present that day.

Howat Going East

From Pittsburgh, Pa., Howat plans a tour thru the Anthracite to Nova Scotia and return. All local unions interested should apply for dates to James A. Hamilton, Secy., Labor Lyceum, 35 Miller St., Pittsburgh, Pa.

New Strike in District No. 2

In spite of the open opposition of International organizers in Dist. No. 2 (C. M. W. of A.) Pres. John Brophy's District) the Executive Board has started a new drive for organization in Somerset County, Pa., and some 11,000 miners are involved in the strike.

The International organization is particularly hostile to this move by the Progressive element in Dist. No. 2, because the miners are close to the Fayette miners in Dist. No. 5, who were practically deserted by the stalling off the strike last fall. The contrast between the treatment of these two groups of miners is a glaring illustration of the two policies advocated at the present time in the U. M. W. of A.

Fayette Resolution from Illinois

The following resolution was adopted by Local Union No. 4701, U. M. W. of A., Marissa, Ill., shows how the treachery of the Lewis machine towards the Fayette miners is beginning widely advertised. Other local unions should immediately follow the example of the Progressive Miners.

WHEREAS, the miners of Fayette County and Coke Region have been out on strike for more than ten months, and,

WHEREAS, the National Officials have now ordered them back to work without a contract being signed, and,

WHEREAS, the National Officials have refused to grant Charters to 42 Local Unions of the Coke Region, and,

WHEREAS, from reliable reports we learn that Officials of the National organization have been active in splitting the Coke Region miners,

THEREFORE BE IT RESOLVED, that Local Union No. 4701 of the U. M. W. of A. in regular meeting do hereby condemn such action of said officials, who have taken an obligation to have all mine workers of the U. M. W. of A., be it further,

RESOLVED, that we demand that our National Officials immediately issue charters, free the striking miners of Fayette County and the whole of the Coke Region, and be further,

RESOLVED, that we ask local unions of District No. 12 to adopt similar resolutions and have same published in the Labor press.

Crucifying the Helpless

Minimum wages for women and minor girls in the District of Columbia (Washington) have been declared "unconstitutional" by the United States Supreme Court. Those 12,500 women and girl workers, in the shadow of the nation's capitol, are thrown more helpless than ever into the clutches of grinding exploiters.

This decision of these capitalist judicial lickspittles is logical. They nailed the children workers of the nation to the cross of greed when they declared the Anti-Child Labor Law "unconstitutional." Now they have crucified the women and girls of the District of Columbia, helpless victims in the industrial struggle. Their economic organizations are weak where they exist. For the most part they have none. They have no political rights. The decision at Washington will be made the basis for wiping out minimum wage legislation in 12 states that now have such laws.

Justice Sutherland, former United States senator, is a pillar of the Mormon Church, and tool in the hands of U. S. Senator Reed Smoot, reactionary senate leader. Sutherland and those with him were not afraid to speak for their class and against the nation's workers. Justide Sutherland wrote the decision against the women workers and is proud of the dirty job.

But there was Justice Brandeis, heralded as a "progressive" and friend of labor in his day. He did not act in the case at all because he had once been a counsel in a case of minimum wage legislation, especially in Oregon. Then his daughter, Miss Elizabeth Brandeis, is secretary of the District of Columbia minimum wage board. The big business connections of Mr. Sutherland and his associates didn't halt them in the crucifixion ceremonies.

Sam Gompers issues his usual lament, of course. It is his reaction from the job he expressed when Brandeis was placed on the Supreme Court bench. He says little about his amendments to the constitution, proposed a year ago.

There is only one attitude labor can take toward the Supreme Court. It must demand its immediate abolition. That fight can be effectively waged thru a class Labor Party enlisting the support of every working man and woman in the land. The Supreme Court tyranny must be met with organized action on the part of the workers. Either the Supreme Court or labor goes down. It is for the workers to say which it shall be.

They Want to Ignore Foster

Among those who sat up nights hoping that William Z. Foster might be sent to the Michigan Penitentiary, as the result of his trial at St. Joseph, were Gompers, Wolf and Co., of the American Federation of Labor.

Now that the jury has disagreed, and Foster is still at liberty, instead of being out away to rot in prison like Mooney in California, Matthew Woll, on behalf of the A. F. of L. officialdom, announces the anti-Trade Union Educational League politics of the future. Foster is to be ignored. Gompers and Woll, and the other "labor lieutenants" of capitalism say they are going to forget Foster.

Not in the subsidized issues of the kept press that carried this news to the world is it stated that it isn't going to be so easy for them to forget. The Labor Party Referendum of the T. U. E. L. is getting practically the unanimous support of all America's organized workers. The six needle trades' unions in Cleveland, in conference, unite in support of the Needle Trades Program of the T. U. E. L. The British labor movement thru its official organ, The Daily Herald, sends greetings to Foster on the victory verdict in Michigan. Foster with Alex Howat as invited to speak at the May Day Demonstration of the Nova Scotia, Canada, coal miners, pioneers in the United Mine Workers' Union for affiliation with the Red International of Labor Unions, of which the T. U. E. L. is the American representative. Foster's ideas for the reorganization of the steel workers are being pushed to the front in the convention now being held of the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers at Warren, Ohio. And so the story goes. Wherever there is progress in the American labor movement, there the Trade Union Educational League is active.

So one will object if Gompers, Woll and Co., bury their heads in the sands of reaction, in an effort to ignore the work of the militants. But we doubt that the open shoppers will allow them to sleep so peacefully. The enemies of labor will soon be urging these faithful tools of theirs to new attacks on the militant workers of the nation. But their attacks are not to be feared. Every new assault will drive new masses of workers into support of the militant industrial and political program of the Trade Union Educational League, that spells emancipation for all labor.

Opportunity for Steel Workers

Unrest in the Steel Industry has been met by Elbert H. Gary, head of the United States Steel Corporation, with an 11 per cent increase in wages. The steel bosses thus ape the New England textile barons, who have been boosting the wages of their workers to a like extent.

Gary's wage increase, which has been duplicated by other steel corporations, brings the wage of the steel slave up to 40 cents an hour, or $4 for the 10-hour day. The highest war wage crept up to $5.06 for the 10-hour day. The steel workers are, therefore, $1.06 short of what they won at one time from the bosses.

Unrest is aided by a scarcity of labor. The steel bosses, no doubt, in addition to quieting discontent also hope to win workers from other industries, from the railroads, for instance, with their 23 cents an hour wage.

This creates a favorable situation for the steel workers, an excellent opportunity to carry on a great campaign of organization. Militants and the representatives of the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers, at Warren, Ohio, are trying to impress this fact upon an inert, reactionary officialdom.

"An eight-hour day with 10-hours' pay!" is an organization slogan that should sweep the steel industry from Pennsylvania to Colorado, from Minnesota to Alabama. It would be another tragedy in the many years of cruel agony of the workers in the steel industry if they missed the present opportunity to organize their forces against the tyranny of the steel bosses.

The Next Step at Herrin

The second trial of union coal miners at Herrin, Ill., has resulted in an acquittal and all the untried indictments have been thrown out of court at the request of the prosecutor.

The Illinois Chamber of Commerce charges it can get no more justice in Williamson County, Ill., than the Daugherty-Burns open-shop sleuths were able to get for their masters in Berrien County, Mich. In the attack on the miners, as in the Foster trial, the bosses are registering their wrath against the farmers on the two juries.

We have already urged that there should be a next step at Herrin, Ill. This should be the bringing to trial of the mine owner, Lester, and his open-shop crew of scab herders and mine guard procurers.

In his failure to put over the attempted legal assassination of the Herrin union miners, C. W. Middlekauff, Special Assistant Attorney General of Illinois, who pushed the prosecution with $75,000 of open-shopper's gold, failed to mention the wanton slaughter of three unarmed union men on the day previous to the killing of guards. The abbr of the bosses' lawyer for failure to send the union miners to the gallows, in the words of the miners' attorneys, "ignores the invasion of Williamson County by armed guards equipped with high power pistols and rifles, riot shotguns and machine guns and the daring challenge to the citizenship and law enforcing officers of that county." In these things the "law and order" mobsters in high places show they have no interest. It would hit too near home.

Yet it is now the duty of the militant Illinois Mine Workers' Union, with its nearly 100,000 members, to push this fight to its logical conclusion, to secure the indictment and trial of Lester and those allied with him. If it fails in this it will have weakened its position against the day when the bosses will rally their forces to strike again.

Rough Waters in England

Financial doctors bolstering up the sick capitalist system have perceived a peculiar thing in England as the classic example of imperial sound. Some time back after the war, in 1922, of the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad. During most of the last year, and even now, the "New Haven" finds the railroad shopmen. For the year it showed a deficit of $4,865,768. The New York Times headlines the blame on "Motor/Truck Competition" but President E. J. Pearson, among other causes, also is forced to admit, that the deficit was due to "increased fuel costs growing out of the coal miners' strike, and increase in operating costs as a result of the shopmen's strike." The New Haven had better sent'e with its shopmen, or it will go broke completely.

In Rome [illegible] Dictator

Pope Pius XI, head of the Roman Catholic Church, announces he will make no protest against the execution of his agent, Buchkevitch, by the Soviet Government. Too much protest might cause the masses to remember the slaughter of Francisco Ferrer, in Spain, by the Roman Catholic Church, because, like many martyrs before him, he held liberal views on the question of education. The Catholic Church, Greek and Roman, ever loved the darkness, but it will no doubt be more careful in the future before burning its fingers in contact with the Soviet Regime of Russian Workers and Peasants.

An Open Letter to David Karsner

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL

Thru the whirligig of developments in the labor movement you have become managing editor of The New York Call. Your restless soul, that more than ten years ago, couldn't stomach the restrictions of Victor Berger's Social Democratic Party, but satisfies itself amidst surroundings even larger, would find nauseating.

Or perhaps you are not satisfied? You have just wandered into the wrong pew temporarily.

You never did enter much into the political struggle. The care-free individualism of the Industrial Workers of the World appealed to you much more than even the lax discipline of the old Socialist Party. You found greater interest in the "Wobbly" trial, in 1918, in Chicago, than in the trial of the Socialist officials the same year. You were attracted by the individual personality of William D. Haywood even as you are drawn to Eugene V. Debs. This in itself indicates an encouraging mental revolt and revolutionary integrity.

We will, therefore, leave politics out of this discussion. It is something foreign to you. It is something that does not find a response in your nature altho you are the managing editor of a purely political publication. You have read much. You have evidently tried to develop a philosophy of your own. I feel that at least a part of the basis of that philosophy is freedom of action; freedom, at least, for thinkers, and writers and artists. And that brings me to the point I wish to make.

Your paper is supported by the present officialdom of the Workmen's Circle. Tell me, what purpose does this officialdom serve by refusing the Workmen's Circle Mandolin Orchestra the right to play, as they desire, at a Communist gathering. Two instances recently. The Communist Celebration at the New Star Casino and the First Annual Jubilee of the Freiheit" at the Lexington Opera House.

Your paper is supposed to be the present management of the Jewish Daily Forward. Tell me, what purpose does this management serve by forbidding to Socialist Party members appearing at the Freiheit celebration. Is this any different than the Russian Black Hundreds fighting against the Moscow Art Theatre, or trying to suppress the plays of Gorki, Andreyev and others?

Your paper is supported by the Jewish Trades, New York City Central Body.

Tell me, what purpose does its manager, Robin Guskin, also member of the board of managers of The Forward, and president of the Workmen's Circle, serve by, successfully intimidating Satz, thru his membership in the Actor's Union, of which Guskin is manager, when the Forward blacklist threat failed?

These instances of the Workmen's Circle Mandolin Orchestra, and Ludwig Satz, the comedian, are but two among many others where the officialdom has exercised its management of their English-language organ, seek to straight jacket that intellectual freedom that must obtain if ever the worlds working class is to develop a culture of its own that will displace the degrading capitalist culture of today.

I was just wondering how you [illegible] in the atmosphere created by those who fear for the existence of the Call little dictatorship, and especially they must needs resort to such diabolical suppression as is outside the realm of even capitalist democracy, when I read in the Call of today's [illegible] of police.

Thus in closing, during its recent [illegible] campaign, the Call solicited funds for strikers, barring the sale of the "Debs Magazine" at meetings addressed by Eugene V. Debs himself, because it did not carry the [illegible] of the editor of the Call. Thus [illegible] in Irwin [illegible] Labor Lyceum, [illegible] Socialist party [illegible] the Call [illegible] the editor [illegible] Socialist party [illegible] day [illegible] even [illegible] Socialist party [illegible] Call [illegible] Socialist party [illegible] Call [illegible] Socialist party [illegible] Call

Ask Workers Party to Join Unity Effort

An official invitation has been received by the Workers Party, urging it to send delegates to the National Convention of the Farmer-Labor Party to be held in Chicago, beginning July 3, "to take such steps as may be necessary to bring about complete unity of the political forces of the entire working class."

The invitation states that "an earnest effort is being made by the Farmer-Labor Party to bring together the various groups and organizations—industrial, agricultural and political, with a view to trying to work out a method for uniting the workers of hand and brain, of farm and factory, on the political field—a method that will be acceptable and secure the allegiance of the great body of workers in the country."

It is declared that "in sending delegates your organization commits [illegible] nothing. If plans can be [illegible] your organization, time will be saved if authority is had to express such approval and join officially in such further steps as may appear proper and feasible."

The invitation was signed by Jay G. Brown, national secretary of the Farmer-Labor Party, of which John H. Walker is the national chairman. The national executive committee consists of William H. Johnston, M. Toscan Bennett, William Kohn, John Fitzpatrick, H. Rose Brock, Max S. Hayes and John C. Kennedy. Johnston was the chairman of the Cleveland Conference for Progressive Political Action that refused admission to the Workers Party delegates.

The invitation is now being considered by the Central Executive Committee of the Workers Party.

Militancy Is Growing in Strength at Convention of the Steel Workers

By WALLACE T. METCALFE
(Special to "The Worker")

WARREN, Ohio.—Resolutions on the Dolla case, the Labor Party, Amalgamation and Political Prisoners are still to come before the convention here of the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers.

A bitter fight has been raging within the convention between the rising hosts of militants and the reactionaries led by the Tighe machine.

The rank and file in the "A. A." are bitterly assailing the Czar-like censorship maintained by Editor Davis of the Amalgamated Journal. The editor of this alleged labor paper confines his columns to society notes and has but little space for discussions of direct interest to the members in his union. Knocking the lid off this censorship is now being done by the militants.

The "A. A." officials, in their daily news story to the capitalist press, announce that they are about played out. The plute press affirm this by announcing the care worn looks gracing the exalted and almost spiritual faces of the officialdom.

Prepare Big Plans for May Celebration

Elaborate preparations for an immense May Day Celebration in New York City by the United May Day Front Conference are now nearing completion. Plans will be announced in detail in a few days.

In spite of the interference of elements in the labor movement hostile to a real United May Day Front, the executive committee of the May Day Conference, in conjunction with affiliated unions, is making arrangements for a parade and numerous mass meetings.

If a permit is granted the day's celebration will begin with a parade starting at 10th St. and 2nd Ave., and another group at 103rd St. and Lexington Ave., to terminate at Lexington Theatre and the Central Opera House, where mass meetings and concerts will be held. In the evening there will be another large meeting and concert at the New Star Casino, 107th St. and Park Ave.

Still Slandering the "Lefts."

After a few weeks of very hard work, the leaders of the United Hebrew Trades have finally succeeded in getting together a number of "their" delegates and have used the Conference called by them to celebrate May 1st as a means of attacking the left elements in the American Labor Movement.

They went as far as ignoring the decision made by their previous conference, held March 24th, where a Committee of the May Day United Front Conference appeared and invited them to form a joint May Day Committee representing both conferences as a means of avoiding a split in the ranks of Labor on May Day.

The Workers Party and May Day

By C. E. RUTHENBERG,
Executive Secretary, Workers Party

May Day—the day which inspires fear in the hearts of the capitalists and hope in the workers—the workers the world over—will find the Communist movement this year stronger in the United States than at any time in its history.

Three years ago the Communists of the United States were driven underground, their organization destroyed. They had no relation to the broad working masses and there was no sympathy for their party. They were outcasts, despised and ignored.

May Day of 1923 will find all this changed. The Communist movement, which Palmer and the various state governments which participated in the 1920 persecution, thought they had destroyed, is again carrying on its work in the open. Thru the Workers Party it is publicly advocating the principles of communism and winning the support of the workers for these principles.

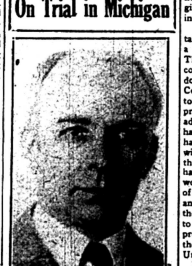
The Communists organized in the Workers Party are no longer the outcasts of the labor movement. Thru their work in the every day struggles of the workers, thru their programs of action and leadership they have won the confidence and support of an ever widening circle of sympathizers.

To-day the Communist movement is on the road to becoming that powerful influence in the labor movement of this country which will influence the millions of workers and give them leadership and direction in the struggle against capitalism.

The inner changes which have taken place in the Party have been a vital factor in achieving this result. The Communist movement in this country is no longer satisfied with dogmatic re-iteration of fundamental Communist principles. It holds fast to this principle—it will never compromise on the question of publicly advocating these principles. But it has also learned to apply them. It has learned to make its beginning with the present mental attitude of the workers of the United States. It has learned to realistically study the workers of this country and the facts of their life and to base its policy and tactics, its methods of reaching the American workers that their road to freedom from exploitation and oppression lies thru Communism, on the conditions as they exist in the United States.

Every worker who is a Communist can celebrate May Day this year secure in the confidence that the movement he supports has made great strides forward, that the road is clear for greater achievements, that in the United States as elsewhere in the world the future belongs to Communism.

On Trial in Michigan



C. E. RUTHENBERG

Tikhon, Aid of Denikin, to Trial, Apr. 23

We shall be told that the trial of Dr. Tikhon, the Russian Patriarch, April 23, is another attack upon religion. There will be no comment made upon the fact that these men have put on the garments of peace in order to more effectively conduct the campaign of war, rapine and destruction.

When Tikhon was elected Patriarch, in 1918, he denounced the Soviet Government. He openly assisted Denikin, Wrangel and others. When the Soviet Government sought to bring the Church under the control of the civil law Tikhon urged armed resistance. Many of his dupes died, as did the members of the Red Army, who found it necessary to combat the insurrections started by Tikhon.

Suppose Archbishop Hayes, New York diocese, leagues himself with an anti-Wall Street force, openly urges support for it and helps to keep it going. How long would he remain Archbishop of New York diocese? What would the United States Government do? Suppose that he urges his congregation to flout and disobey the law, even going so far as to advocate armed resistance to it and that many lives are lost in suppressing such resistance? What would happen? Need we tell you? Substitute Patriarch Tikhon for Archbishop Hayes.

It is easy for so-called American "liberals" to denounce Soviet Russia, where workers and peasants charged with the responsibility of safeguarding the lives of millions of people. They know that on the outside the imperialists of the world are waiting for an opportunity to overthrow their government. They also know that if their government is overthrown what the consequences will be.

The Russians will conduct their trials in their own way. And more power to them.

We are glad they have the courage to face the situation as they see it and refuse to allow outsiders to frighten them into doing something else

Cahan Dictator of "The Call" as Karsner, Editor, Resigns; More Light on Anti-Soviet Plot

The last issue of "The Worker" carried the story of the secret meeting of the yellow socialist officialdom of New York, on March 29, which decided upon an openly counter-revolutionary policy against Soviet Russia and the Communists.

The resolution adopted at this meeting called for reprints from capitalist papers of all news unfavorable to Soviet Russia, but rewritten so as to conceal its source.

The resolution furthermore declared for a systematic attack against the Communists, seizing every opportunity to carry it on. As a result of

Stokes' Tour Arouses Great Interest

The tour of Rose Pastor Stokes on "The Communist Defense in Michigan" has aroused great interest among the workers. Requests for meetings with Comrade Stokes have been received from more than 25 cities up to the present time. During the months of April and May she will cover the following cities: New Haven, Bridgeport, Worcester, Providence, Fitchburg, Gardner, Lynn, Clinton, Lancuse, West Concord, Springfield Boston, New Bedford, Waterbury, Elizabeth, Passaic, Paterson, Philadelphia and New York.

They Try It Again!

(Special Wire to "The Worker")
By THOMAS J. O'FLAHERTY
Editor of "The Voice of Labor"

COURT ROOM, ST. JOSEPH, MICH.—The trial of C. E. Ruthenberg opened here with a punch gone out of prosecution by the failure to convict William Z. Foster. In place of the tense situation of the Foster trial, the proceedings in the court room run along in a sleepy fashion, the prosecution's questioning of jurors shows the effect of the reverse in the Foster case, lacking any aggressiveness and almost apologetic at times.

The first juror helped to deepen the impressions of a lost cause, which seems to be in the mind of the attorneys for the state. Prosecutor Charles W. Gore got the name of this juror as Ray Toney, a farmer of Berrien Township, who owns his own farm of 108 acres, and then proceeded to inquire, "Do you believe the Criminal Syndicalist Law is a good law?"

"I do not," flashed back Mr. Toney.

"Do you believe the Criminal Syndicalist Law should be enforced?" continued Gore.

"I do not," was the answer.

"Have you a fixed opinion as to the guilt or innocence of the defendant?" was Gore's next question.

This incident at the very beginning of the trial of Ruthenberg seemed to knock the wind out of the prosecution's sails, and the questioning of the next juror showed even less aggressiveness.

Mr. Gore showed a peculiar conception of the right of free speech when, after asking a prospective juror whether he believed in free speech, which was answered in the affirmative, he went on to inquire, "By free speech you mean, I suppose, within limits?" He did not add who was to fix the limits.

A new question asked of the jurors by Prosecutor Gore was whether the juror believed that this prosecution was a violation of the right of freedom of speech, freedom of assemblage, or freedom of press guaranteed by the Constitution. Evidently some glimmering that has entered into the head of the prosecutor, and he wants to make sure that the jurors do not agree with him.

Out of the first six prospective jurors examined by the prosecution four were farmers, one a machinist and one an ex-policeman and prison guard.

Forgot About Convictions

The drowsy atmosphere of the court-house, where the State of Michigan, aided by diverse individuals, from the stool-pigeon Francis Morrow to the foxy visaged Max Berger, is making its second attempt to find a victim for the State Criminal Syndicalist Act, was suddenly disturbed when Assistant Attorney General Smith hazarded the information that there were no convictions in this country under the espionage act during the war for mere expression of opinion.

Attorney Gray, for the defense, was questioning a talesman when the eruption occurred. The defense tried to get an expression from the prospective jurors whether or not the fact that Ruthenberg was convicted under the espionage act for expressing opposition to war would create a prejudice in their minds against the defendant.

Frank P. Walsh was immediately on his feet and informed Mr. Smith that he could bring proof of numerous cases during the war where men and women where convicted for

Militants in Maryland Put Up Big Fight

(Special to "The Worker")

CUMBERLAND, Md.—The machine gang of the Maryland State Federation of Labor, assisted by the united capitalist press of Washington, D. C., Baltimore and the state, succeeded in defeating resolutions for amalgamation and the Labor Party.

The resolution calling for amalgamation was signed by eleven delegates. The sponsors of the resolution were allowed five minutes to state their side, the opposition one hour. Every foul tactic known to that experienced school—"the machine" was brought to bear. Visions of Lenin and Trotsky dictating to America, plots, scares, etc., etc.

Due to the lack of organization, on the part of the militants, the resolution was defeated. It was felt that the break had been made and that future conventions would find the machine compelled to fight for its existence, rather than sit back and merely laugh at those who question its record.

A resolution calling for the endorsement of a labor party suffered a worse fate than that of amalgamation. Those delegates who sponsored the resolution were intimidated, with the result that only five voted for the resolution.

During the five days that the federation was in session not one constructive proposal was initiated. Instead, the time of the convention was wasted by listening to speeches from the local mayor, clergymen and yes gods—the president of the chamber of commerce.

The report of the officials told of defeat after defeat, with the usual hopes. They told of how legislation, sponsored by them, had been left to die in committee. The president urged the convention delegates to continually look for "our friends and then success would be assured."

An international organizer of the railroad shopmen made an appeal to the convention. He asked, that the federation pledge its sympathy to the railroad strikers, and that the Western Maryland R. R. be boycotted. After a stiff fight the matter was referred to the Executive Council.

At the close of the convention a successful meeting of the Trade Union Educational League was held in Baltimore, attended by many delegates. It was felt all around that next year would find the militants better organized and prepared to battle with the machine.

Hatters in National Convention Hear Holland Urge Labor Party

By H. M. WICKS

The pressing demand from the rank and file of organized labor for the creation of an independent Labor Party has joined James P. Holland, president of the New York State Federation of Labor, out of his lengthy slumber and at the Eighth Convention of the United Hatters of America, which opened in New York Monday, he declared himself in favor of the creation of such a Party.

This declaration of Holland came as a mild surprise to those who are familiar with the position of the State Federation of Labor on the

the publicity at their very next meeting. WHEREAS, The Forward has been exposed by the resignation of the ex-editor of the N. Y. Call published a declaration of war against the communists, and

Whereas, Scores of this meetings and subsequent meetings of the socialist officialdom which confirmed its policy of denunciation of the communists has been brought to a climax by the resignation of David Karsner, Editor of "The Call."

Karsner has resigned as a direct result of the furore aroused by the publication by that paper of the libels against Soviet Russia written by the British secret service spy, Francis McCullagh. The resignation of the editor has brought to light the full facts concerning that Socialist daily's adoption of a new policy, by which it cooperated with the arch-reactionary New York Herald in spreading the British police agent's propaganda. From the best of sources in the New York Call office we have obtained the following facts: The New York Call Association held its Annual Stockholders Meeting on Thursday, March 28, occurred meeting of the Board of Management to consider the matter of Karsner.

At the meeting a resolution was introduced by Algernon Lee, which, in the light of the introductory remarks, would bind "The Call" editor to change the policy of that paper and to adhere as closely as possible to the policies of the Jewish Daily Forward as a model.

In the debate the sense of the Board was expressed to the effect that the New York Call could not keep alive without the financial assistance which was expected to be obtained from Abraham Cahan, as editor of the Jewish Daily Forward. It was pointed out that by following Cahan's lead and gaining his approval, not only could immediate financial assistance be obtained, but the policies themselves would lead to success and independence.

Among the arguments that was used in favor of this move was the effect that the Call must on every possible occasion undertake a militant and aggressive fight against the revolutionary elements in the trade unions and against the Communists on all fields.

A committee of three, of which James Oneal was one, was appointed to see that Karsner put into effect the Board's new policy. Almost immediately Oneal handed to Karsner for publication an editorial composed of scurrilous denunciation of the Communists on trial in Michigan. Karsner refused to accept that the William Z. Foster trial on trial at that moment and that the jury had not yet brought in its verdict. He requested Oneal to let the editorial wait for publication until after the return of the verdict. Oneal refused, and the editorial was published on March 21.

Karsner had trouble with the Board on one occasion because of his refusal to publish the report of Friends of Soviet Russia, which was a complete refutation of the lies of the British police agent. He had given instructions to publish the report in the form of a boxed article on the front page, the Board wanting to publish its pronouncement in a much smaller, less prominent manner, by putting it on an inside page.

On the morning of April 6, the City Editor of the Call laid on Karsner's desk a copy of the New York Herald carrying McCullagh's first article, purporting to be a recital of the events of the Butchkavitch trial, and ordered that this article be published in full on the front page, the Board wanting to exploit its pronouncement in as much publicity as possible, by putting it on the front page.

On the morning of April 6, the City Editor of the Call laid on Karsner's desk a copy of the New York Herald carrying McCullagh's first article, purporting to be a recital of the events of the Butchkavitch trial, and ordered that this article be published in full on the front page, the Board wanting to exploit its pronouncement in as much publicity as possible, by putting it on the front page.

Karsner scanned the article and said, "Yes, it would, exactly." He then ordered its publication.

On the day of publication several letters of violent protest from Socialist readers of the Call were delivered at the office. These increased with every mail delivery until "The Call" office was literally deluged with protests from Socialists all over New York City and vicinity. One Socialist wrote, "I have been a reader of the Call for years, but I will not continue to be a reader of a paper which prints such lies about Soviet Russia." With the appearance of the article, "The Call" board became alarmed.

A regular meeting of the Board was scheduled for that afternoon, Saturday, April 6. At the meeting Karsner was censured by unanimous vote of the Board for having published the article. His defense was this: That he had been against the policy from the beginning, but that he had undertaken to carry it out on orders, and the publication of the McCullaugh article was in direct and complete accord with the policy that had been laid down by the Board for him to follow.

In the quarrel which ensued, Karsner gave his resignation as editor, to become effective a few days later. "The Call" Board compiled an apologetic paragraph disavowing the policy of publishing such articles, and ordered Karsner to publish this statement in box on the first page of the next edition of the paper. Karsner refused to publish this statement, saying that it was because some of the daily readers do not buy Sunday papers.

For the last week he has not been in the office when he holds the financial life of "The Call" in his hand. Abraham Cahan, had not been heard from. On Sunday, Karsner received a telephone call from the Jewish Daily Forward office and was informed that a messenger from Abraham Cahan was coming down to see him. This man soon arrived and told Karsner that Cahan wanted to know why in the hell "The Call" repudiated the publication of the McCullaugh article. Karsner told his story to Cahan's messenger and then quickly telephoned to members of "The Call" Board who could be reached, telling them that Abraham Cahan protested against any repudiation of the McCullaugh articles. Each member of the Board whom he could reach quickly agreed that under this circumstance they did not want the Board's disavowal to appear in the Monday edition of "The Call".

The New York Herald has published an admission of the membership of McCullaugh in the British secret police in the following words: "His personal knowledge of all parts of Europe drew him into the British Secret Service and he acted as an intelligence officer first in Serbia and then in Siberia."

The reactionary "Abe" Cahan, and the yellow Socialist Forward dictates the policy of "The Call". It is a policy of war against Soviet Russia and the Communists. In this war the Socialists gladly ally themselves with the capitalist agents. It is the duty of all workers to boycott these prostituted sheets.

Court War on Communism Loses Its Pep

merely expressing their disapproval of it.

Mr. Smith's spurt of intellectual activity subsided and the court-room again resumed its calm.

Walsh and Gray took turns at questioning the talesmen, during this process Judge White tried to kill time by writing something which appeared to cause him considerable amusement. Perhaps he was drawing a sketch of Prosecutor Gore, who had a hard time trying to keep his eyes open and would not succeed but for an occasional prod in the ribs from the radical expert, Max Burger; stool pigeon Morrow sat alone. There were none too mean to do him the honor of associating with him.

Mr. Louis Rahn, Benton Harbor shoe merchant and treasurer of the Chamber of Commerce, member of the Rotary and Kiwanis Clubs, was decidedly of the opinion that he could give Ruthenberg a fair trial. He heard Allan B. Myers and several other anti-Communist lecturers speak; but in spite of that he could hold the scales of Justice even. He admitted under Walsh's examination that at the time of the Bridgman raid he had an opinion as to the guilt of those arrested, but appears to have developed a better judicial poise since March.

Had Discussed "Amalgamation"

Ora Scherer, of Niles, Mich., the only union member in the Jury panel was peremptorily challenged by the prosecution after he admitted that he was acquainted with the plan to amalgamate the sixteen standard railroad organizations. That proved his downfall.

"Have you read William Z. Foster's Amalgamation — The Railroads' Next Step?" inquired Prosecutor Gore.

"I have never read the book, but I have heard the proposition discussed by three or four fellows who probably did not know any more about amalgamation than you or I," replied Scherer.

Thereupon, Gore voluntarily confessed that his knowledge of amalgamation was extremely limited. Scherer, however, was too good a union man in the eyes of the prosecution, so in spite of his definite statements that he was unprejudiced, he was not acceptable to the State.

Attorney Gray gave the Jury a short course in economic history, tracing the development of wealth production in modern society from the individually owned tool to the gigantic productive machinery which today is owned by groups. Most of the Jury seemed to be very interested.

Fear Coming of Soviets

Prosecutor Gore lectured the jurors on larceny, murder and treason. He claimed that the Communists assembled at Bridgeman advocated larceny in that they urged the workers to take over the industries and run them for their benefit.

"Does any one of you gentlemen believe that this republic—should be supplanted by a Soviet system?" was a favorite question of the prosecution.

"Does any of you believe that any other class except the working class should have the right to vote?" was another, as a rule.

Another juror fell by the wayside when the defense exercised a peremptory on O. E. Servis, who has performed every servile task for the bosses that could be thought of and is now employed as a detective. He wore a poker face thru the proceedings.

No Women on Jury

The prosecution will not have a woman juror to worry about this time. There are no women in the Jury panel.

Defense Attorney Walsh educated J. H. Harmon in American history, particularly the Revolutionary War and the Civil War. Mr. Harmon is a retired business man.

Workers Party Gets Quick Action on Spy Working for Daugherty

J. Spoza has been expelled from membership in the Italian Federation of the Workers Party as a spy. It was he who furnished a concoction of lies to the Department of Justice to the effect that a meeting of members of the Workers Party, held in New York City on March 18, was in reality a meeting of a part of the Communist Party. It was this fabrication that was sprung as a "surprise" by the prosecution against the testimony of C. E. Ruthenberg to the effect that the Communist Party is no longer in existence.

Spora has been under suspicion for some time, and when his fake report was published along with a vacuous boast to the effect that Wm. J. Burns agents were still in close touch with the Communist movement a thoro investigation was officially carried out in the Party with the result that he was soon exposed to be of the same vicious and ignorant type of the common stool pigeon. His expulsion immediately followed.

Spoza never had any influence whatsoever in the Party and undoubtedly held his position as stool pigeon by falsifying reports that were believed by the various fink agencies he was connected with. That the Workers Party was not the first victim of Spoza was brought to light when an investigation of his previous activity in the radical movement revealed the fact that he was at one time a member of the I. W. W. and that he also worked for some time with a defense committee connected with the Matteotti, the Italian publication in New York.

Joint N. D. C. and L. D. C. Festival at Webster Hall

May 12, all elements of the Labor movement in New York will gather at Webster Hall, 119 E. 11th St., celebrating the victory of the various trials at Michigan, discussing in detail the trials and pledging support to the working class in all its struggles. The National Defense Committee and the Labor Defense Council will hold a joint SPRING DANCE AND FESTIVAL for the defense of the 30 men and women involved in the Bridgman cases and for the defense and relief of the New York cases. Funds are badly needed and we urge all those who are really interested in the fight for workers freedom to get back of this affair, sell tickets, distribute posters and advertize the Spring Dance from now on until May 12th. A surprise is in store for every one who attends—a feature so striking and attractive that we fear to announce it, lest we may not be believed. Remember a good time and a fine purpose on May 12th at Webster Hall. Tickets 50c. at door, 75c. Tickets and posters may be obtained at the office of the Labor Defense Council, 80 E. 11th St., Room 434.

Caleb Harrison Denies New York Call Statement

In editorial attacking the Communists, the "New York Call" stated that Caleb Harrison is reported to have left the Workers Party in disgust. The following letter of Harrison denies it and should be given publication since some workers read the "New York Call" may take their statement as the truth.

"The New York Call"
112 4th Ave.
New York, N. Y.

Dear Karsner:—In your editorial of April 11th, somebody rushed into print asserting that there is a rumor that Caleb Harrison left the Workers Party in disgust.

I hope you will be as eager to publish the fact that I did not leave the Workers Party and do not intend to do so.

Let the fact be known by publishing this letter.

(Signed) Caleb Harrisoe.

Education of Workers, Aim of Convention

By JAQUES LEMAIRE

The third annual convention of the Workers' Education Bureau of America, held in New York City, April 14 and 15, was the first convention since the agreement has been signed between the original officers of the Bureau and the Executive officers of the American Federation of Labor establishing organic connection. And all thru the proceedings the convention felt the strangling grip of the dead hand of the American Federation of Labor leadership.

Again and again on the floor of the convention and at the banquet the theme in the Symphony played by Matthew Woll, John P. Frey and the lesser leaders who came as delegates, was to give the poor workers who were unable to become educated when they were young, because they had to go to work, a chance to acquire education now.

In order to insure the permanency of such a perversion of the idea of workers' education the representatives of the A. F. of L., in the negotiations before the agreement had been signed secured the following interpretation of workers' study classes: "Definition of Labor Educational Enterprises as those initiated and controlled exclusively by Trade Union bodies" and "Definition of Dual and seceding unions ineligible".

It was on the latter point that the Amalgamated Clothing Workers' educational enterprises, which were represented last year, were not represented this year, and it was by virtue of the former that the application for affiliation of the Rand School was denied by the Executive Committee, and that of the Workers Educational Association of Detroit, which is indorsed by the Detroit Federation of Labor, deferred by the committee for further action.

The Committee on Membership reported on the application for affiliation of the Workers' Educational Association of Detroit, Mich., with the curious statement that the Committee had been informed that the application was referred by the old Executive Committee to the incoming one, when there was a convention intervening.

Cyril Lambkin, representing the Detroit organization, called attention to the irregularity of such a procedure, and asked that the Convention itself, being the supreme power, decide upon the application because of the principle involved.

After a recital of the fight, however, was averted by John P. Frey who immediately obtained the floor and declared this to be an administrative matter only which should be referred to the incoming Executive Committee, which was approved.

The fight of the trade and file delegates were with to see all workers educational bodies included in the Workers' Educational Bureau of America broke out with fury when the Committee on Officers' Reports, headed by Delegate E. Holman, of Minneapolis, Minn., brought in a report directly challenging the narrow definition of workers' educational enterprises. Immediately upon the conclusion of the report Matthew Woll jumped up giving warning that no longed that Woll, Frey and Hugh Frayne, one after the other, attempted to pacify the delegates but at the same time indicated, beyond doubt that the A. F. of L. would insist upon its own monopoly of control of the Bureau. Woll moved that the matter be referred to the incoming Executive Committee, and the motion was carried. The new Executive Committee is identically the same as the old one.

Hatter's Convention Hears Speakers Urge Labor Party Demand

Gompers policy of "reward your friends and punish your enemies." Just how much significance can be attached to the Holland statement is a matter of conjecture, but he spoke enthusiastically of the fact that the "Labor Party of England has tied up the government so they do not know which way to turn."

He declared that, "We must wake up to the importance of a Labor Party. If we do not those who come after us will have to act to secure more of the benefit of what they produce."

Altho Holland's idea of a Labor Party is that of the dominant party of New Zealand, nevertheless it is considerable of a departure for labor leaders of his type and is clearly indicative of the general trend in the whole labor movement.

Secretary William Gill, Central Trades and Labor Council, New York City, like Holland, also spoke in favor of a Labor Party. "After my winter's session in Albany I know we have no friends in the old parties," said Gill. "I have decided that we must go out and establish a Labor Party."

Gompers Ignores Question

The next speaker on the program was the troglodyte, Gompers, who never mentioned the question of a Labor Party in spite of the enthusiastic reception given the remarks of Holland and Gill. Sammy indulged in his customary platitudes, boasting of the glorious achievements of the Hatters and referring to his own experience in the famous Danbury case, but carefully avoided discussion of any of the vital questions concerning labor, such as amalgamation and the labor party.

Must Resist Open Shop

Many serious problems confront the Hatters at this convention. Their conventions are held only at intervals of four years, and many problems confront the delegates to this convention that were unknown to previous conventions.

The most pressing problem of the hatters is the open shop drive and the problem of creating machinery with which to build up the organization so that it can become an effective force in the American labor movement.

Demonstrate for Prisoners

Demonstrations in behalf of the 53 remaining war-opinion prisoners in American penitentiaries will be held in 400 cities on General Amnesty Day, which takes place on Sunday, April 29. These demonstrations will be participated in by churches, labor unions, women's clubs, and a host of other organizations.

Burns Outfit Is "Framing" New Evidence

(Special to "The Worker")

CHICAGO.—Having failed to obtain a conviction of William Z. Foster, in the first Communist case to come before the Circuit Court of Berrien County, Mich., the Daugherty department of justice, and its Burns Private Detective Sub-Agency, with the selection of the jury to try C. E. Ruthenberg going on, are busily engaged in "framing" new evidence with which to impose upon the pockets and the credulity of the Michigan taxpayers who have been paying the cost of this bosses' "anti-red" campaign.

It would be hardly fair to say, however, that the citizens of Berrien County, Mich., have not gained more than the experiment cost them thru the sociological enlightenment which their first so-called Communist prosecution has brought upon them. After the close of the Foster trial, with its futile eventuality, a member of the equally divided jury frankly stated that there was one good result attained, because the jury, which in the beginning had really no knowledge of the true issue to be decided, by several days' discussion of the phases of the social problem presented for their consideration. And this fact has been appreciated generally by the people of the community, who gained such enlightenment thru their attendance upon the trial.

One business man of St. Joseph, where the trial was held—a former member of the railroad workers' union—expressed himself in these words: "The whole thing seems to be an attempt to prevent repeal of the Criminal Syndicalism Law in this state."

That "The State did not have the right dope" seems to be also clearly proven by its failure to force a conviction for crime where no criminal act was even alleged to have been attempted.

Full information with regard to the various phases of this work may be had upon application to the Labor Defense Council, Room 307, 166 W. Washington St. (Chicago Federation Building), Chicago, Ill.

Financial support for the defense of the remaining trials is urgently needed. All liberty loving persons are urged to send donations to the Labor Defense Council at the above address. The New York office of the Labor Defense Council is at Room 434, 80 E. 11th St.

HORSE SENSE

I went to work one morning with a Workers Party program in my pocket. When I reached home after the day's work, I discovered that I had lost or mislaid it.

Now, I am a wagon-driver, and upon going to work this morning I found my horse quite unruly, insubordinate, he endeavored to kick me, and made fearful faces at me, making it clear that he intended to take no orders from any master.

His attitude surprised me, as heretofore, he had always been so docile and gentle.

But, suddenly I discovered the source of all my woe, in the manger directly in front of him, lay my long lost program, the sucker had been reading it. My white horse had become red.—Edward J. Irvine.

MOSCOW.—The local papers publish an article by Mr. Trotzky devoted to the fifth anniversary of the Red Army. He points out that the reduction of the army must be accompanied by an increase in its fighting qualities. The enthusiasm of the warriors, owing to which Soviet Russia has achieved victory in civil war, must be supported and fostered by military training and the development of military technics.

Prepare Big Plans for United Celebration of May Day in New York

At that time they refused to give an answer to the Committee, but instead referred the entire question to their Executive Committee. At their conference of April 9th, however, instead of receiving a report from the Executive Committee, they accepted instead made by Chanine that the previous meeting had decided to have nothing to do with the "splitters", and the chairman so ruled, refusing to admit the Committee from the May Day United Front Conference.

Upon this ruling by the chair, delegate Zirlin, of Local 9, I. L. G. W. U., declared that his local had sent him with instructions to create a United Front. Inasmuch as this action shows that this conference does not want a United Front, he is following out the instructions of his Local, and is withdrawing from the Conference. Delegates from Local 1, I. L. G. W. U., and Local 24, Millinery Workers Union, also stated that they have instructions from their organizations to form a United Front, but they did not leave the Conference.

These attacks of "splitters" were made on the May Day United Front Conference despite the fact that it represented 44 Unions, 11 Workmen's Circle Branches, 8 branches from the Workmen's Sick and Death Benefit Fund, 1 Branch of Poale Zion, also Socialist Consumers Leage, and that the Independent Unions represented only a small portion of the entire Conference. Moreover, the Italian Chamber of Labor has affiliated with the May Day United Front Conference and has issued a call to all Italian Unions to participate in this Conference.

The Executive Committee of the May Day United Front Conference is convinced, that the workers of New York City will not listen to the splitting Labor leaders, who were instrumental in splitting the ranks of the workers for this May Day celebration and will turn out in full force to participate in the parade and the mass meetings.

H. M. Wicks Speaks in Labor Forum This Sunday

H. M. Wicks, labor editor of "The Worker," will lecture on "Democracy in the Light of Marxism" at the Labor Forum, 208 E. 12th St., next Sunday, April 22, at 8 p.m. This is a subject that has caused much discussion in the ranks of the labor movement, and is the basis of the controversy between centrists of the Kautsky type and the Bolsheviks. There are workers in America more competent to discuss this question than Comrade Wicks.

Admission is free and the meeting will start on time. At the close of the lectures at the Forum there is a period for questions and discussions which always proves intensely interesting.

Remember Hungarian Soviet Rule

Celebrations were held all over the country by the Hungarian Workers in celebration of the anniversary of the Hungarian Soviet Revolution March 21, 1919. Not only Communists, but thousands and thousands of sympathisers, took part in these celebrations. There was a great celebration in the Central Opera House in New York, also celebrations in Chicago, Cleveland, Pittsburgh, Detroit, Bridgeport, Rankin, Philadelphia, Milwaukee, Perth Amboy, Trenton, Los Angeles, Martins Ferry, South Bend, Youngstown, So. Bethlehem, McKeesport and New Brunswick. In other cities there have been lectures and meetings in commemoration of the Hungarian Communes. It was shown by these demonstrations that the Hungarian workers of America did not forget the dictatorship of the Hungarian Proletariat, and they are getting ready for the Revolutionary class struggle, from which Soviet Republics of all countries will be born.

The Enuiy Players will probably make a spring revival of "She Stoops to Conquer".

Plan Secret 'War on Reds' in the West

(Special to "The Worker")

KANSAS CITY, Mo.—A secret organization, sponsored by the American Legion and supported by the Chamber of Commerce, Rotary Club and other organizations of business men, has been launched for the purpose of waging a "war on the Reds" according to an announcement in the Kansas City Star. Its propaganda is to be carried on thruout two states—Missouri and Arkansas. Evidently they decided to extend their tentacles into Arkansas because of the encouraging reports of mob violence on a wholesale scale that accompanied the recent lynching of the shop striker, Gregory.

One Captain Edwards, ex-chief-of-police of Kansas City, was appointed head of this new secret organization. The reputation of this creature is one that peculiarly fits him for just such an office. He is such a brute that he was removed from office as the result of his inhuman tactics. And when one gets so low that he cannot be chief of police of Kansas City he has certainly qualified for a position of trust in the American Legion and its auxiliary organizations. Edwards made the mistake of throwing a woman in jail on the charge of being an I. W. W. It turned out that she was never a member of that organization. A law suit followed wherein the woman collected damages from the city. Hence the desire of Edwards to create another job for himself, which accounts for this great crusade against the "Red menace."

In spite of the generally hostile atmosphere of this city, the Young Workers League and the Trade Union Educational League are making genuine progress and holding enthusiastic meetings frequently much to the chagrin of the present successor of Thue Edwards and the patriots of the Chamber of Commerce.

Promise Big Drive Ahead for the Party at Boston

By ROBERT ZELMS

There are many good signs of improvement in the work of Local Boston, Mass. The Cannon meeting was one of the best Boston ever had during the last year. Shortly before that, a very successful concert was held by the Local with splendid financial results. The meetings of the C. C. C. are better attended than before. A new Industrial Organizer was elected for the Local, and a Branches have elected their Industrial Organizer to take charge of industrial activity of the Party. Distribution of literature is showing satisfactory results and improvements. The foreign language Branches are especially active along those lines. Steps are being taken to have regular open air meetings in the city for the summer season. Council for Protection of Foreign-Born Workers, Room 610, [illegible] for information, including delegates from Boston and the nearest outside town.

May Day Conference was organized and is preparing a great May Day celebration. May Day leaflets and buttons were ordered already.

Coal Barons Again Attack Miners' Union

"Unless the commission can find some remedy whereby force can be outlawed and reason recognized as ruler, there is no salvation for the anthracite industry."

Cosen again! It was not the Federal Churches of Christ that made this statement. It was the coal barons. They must have had a change of heart, say you. They must have been to West Virginia and there gazed upon their bloody handiwork, or perhaps suddenly awakening to the fact that last Sunday was the ninth anniversary of the bloody massacre of men, women and children of Colorado, conscience-stricken they rushed to the press and the government urging that force be destroyed rather than see women and children suffer the tortures that followed the burning-up of those tents at Ludlow, Col., April 19, 1914.

You are all wrong. The force to be dethroned is not the army of gunmen. It is the United Mine Workers' Union. And we pay to see Charlie Chaplin!

"The anthracite operators," says the editor of the Miners' Journal, who, by the way, is opposed to amalgamation, "have organized a gigantic scientific monopoly."

They have had behind that monopoly all the power of the government, as evidenced in the last two coal strikes. Yet it is these hypocrites, these financial backers of the various detective agencies, Burns, Flynn, etc., who talk about the necessity of becoming force.

The coal commission will comish, they will issue a voluminous report, etc., and in the meantime, if the present officials of the United Mine Workers' Union are allowed to remain in office, the miners will find their forces weakened, while at the same time, during the time the commission has been sitting, the mine owners will have strengthened their forces, come to an understanding with other sections of the money-loving class, and will be in a position to wage war upon the miners. Commissions are only created when the workers are winning. They enable the employers to obtain a breathing spell. That is all they are created for. It is only reactionary labor leaders who believe that there is a public to be considered. Even Samuel Gompers, when fighting Gov. Plumb, had to admit that there were two classes in society and the public.

The miners must begin to realize that their leaders are playing a dangerous game when they allow victory to be snatched from the organization by agreeing to commissions, namely the Sankey Commission in England, with its rank betrayal of the British miners, ought to have opened up the eyes of the officials of the United Mine Workers' Union. There is no doubt as to that. It showed the officials on this side of the Atlantic that they could shirk the issue by accepting a commission, as Frank Hodge & Co. did in England. It is easier to sit back and wait for a commission's report than you know that report will mean nothing but a setback for your organization, than it is to stand up and fight. Labor leaders prefer to maintain peace, even tho it is a peace of death, so long as they can draw their salaries.

The rank and file of the United Mine Workers must prepare to battle again. The coal commission will probably tie the hands of the miners. The miners will be asked, and it is necessary forced to accept an enforced arbitration scheme. The miners have not recovered from the fight of last year. At a time when there were so many out of work, the operators were unable to frighten the miners into subjection. They have learnt, thru Herrin, that miners are ill human even tho they engage in inhuman tasks, and that there is a limit to the human endurance. They are, therefore, preparing to force the miners to the wall. They will use all the power of the government, and they are unable to smash the United Mine Workers' Union, they will endeavor to render it impotent by the passing of legislative enactments, such as industrial arbitration, or imprisonment for striking, etc.

The rank and file of the miners must immediately get busy. They must organize their forces in such a manner that they will present a united front against the attacks of the employers. They must also see that men charged with responsibility in directing the affairs of the organization both know how to fight and have the courage to fight. Armies led by "King Tuts", or men who are afraid to fight, are useless. Fighting armies need fighting leaders. One of what is equal to a thousand wishes. Organize your power, miners! Present a fighting union to the organization of the coal barons, for it is not in commissions that your salvation lies, but in your ability to enforce the demands that YOU make and that YOU feel are what you have a right to have if you are to enjoy life.

Bricklayers Help

(Special to "The Worker")

SOUTH BOSTON, Mass.—Bricklayers on one job here collected $100 for the striking Duluth miners and sent the money to the New York office of the Labor Defense Council. Here's hoping that bricklayers on other jobs in Boston and in other cities do as well.

Butte, Mont., in Stand for Labor Party

(Special to "The Worker")

BUTTE, Mont.—The Silver Bow Trades and Labor Council (Butte) at its last meeting endorsed the referendum of the Trade Union Educational League which calls on the workers of America to form an independent Labor Party.

The Silver Bow Trades and Labor Council has been known as one of the most militant bodies of its kind, and with the adoption of the T. U. E. L., referendum it maintains its place in the front ranks of that ever-growing part of the Labor movement which is repudiating the hoary political policy of Samuel Gompers in "rewarding your friends and punishing your enemies."

Los Angeles for Labor Party

(By P. C. REISS)

LOS ANGELES.—The extraordinary happened when the 227 delegates representing 80 labor organizations here went on record for and launched a Labor Party section in this city.

The importance of this victory on the part of the militants becomes more interesting when it is remembered that Los Angeles has the name of the "scab city."

The reactionists opposed the move with all their strength, but their efforts were futile before the enthusiasm of awakening labor.

California to the Front

"Its endorsement at Los Angeles and at the State Convention of the Building Trades were signal victories for the Labor Party movement in California," says "Labor Unity," San Francisco, Cal.

"It will require quite a little effort to destroy the evil influence of the Gompers mania of "reward your friends and defeat your enemies," but that policy is so erroneous and ineffective that it cannot withstand the logic of a Labor Party very much longer.

"The Trades Union Educational League has circularized 35,000 local unions thruout the country with the following resolution:

"Resolved that we endorse the formation of a labor party by the whole trade union movement to be based directly upon representation from the local unions, and to include as affiliated organizations all existing working class parties.

"See that this resolution comes before your union. It should be there by this time. Fight vigorously for its adoption. The results thruout the nation are favorable, the reactionists cannot stay the tide. A Labor Party must and will be formed in the near future."

Militants of Coal Mines to Meet, June 2-3

(Special to "The Worker")

PITTSBURGH.—The announcement of a great International Conference of all American coal miners here, June 2—3, has come like a bomb shell to the machine. On the heels of the release of the Progressive Miners' Program, one of the most important documents issued in the history of American labor, the invitation was sent to the Progressives in every Local union in the U. M. W. of A. to send a delegate to Pittsburgh to participate in a great movement to win a completely Progressive organization.

The Progressives frankly admit that this will make it necessary to engage in a bitter fight with the Lewis machine.

Charleroi Meeting April 22.

Alexander Howat is now back in District No. 5, on a speaking tour. At every one of the meetings he advertises the fact that a great Mass Protest Meeting will be held at Charleroi, Pa., Sunday, April 22.

Howat's Tour in Dist. No. 5

Howat is spending ten days in this district. April 14th he spoke at Wyona, Pa. The meeting was held in Union Hall. Wyona is located in the heart of the great Irwin coal fields and is the only union point in this large district. Six mines are located in this town and for years these miners have withstood the attacks of the operators and the efforts of corrupt officials to destroy their union. It can be imagined with what enthusiasm they heard the champion of the Progressive movement among the miners of America. Howat made a wonderful impression and the miners responded vigorously with rounds of applause. Everywhere there is a determination to see that Howat gets a square deal, and is reinstated in the organization. Sunday, April 15th, Howat spoke at Russelton to a packed house. The Union Hall will only hold about 700 men, and standing room was at a premium. The machine sent nine of its best professional sluggers but they were tamed down when they arrived and found the overwhelming majority against them. These "organizers" draw $10 a day and their expenses, which means that it cost Lewis $100 a day to send these fellows to attend the meeting.

He has addresses Howat is giving prominence to two things. After stressing the Kansas case, he calls attention of the miners to the great need of a Labor Party.

Howat Goes to Nova Scotia

Howat is going to Nova Scotia to address a great Mass Meeting, and then thru the district.

After finishing Nova Scotia, he will come back to the Anthracite region where a large number of Mass Meetings will be arranged.

From there he will return to Pittsburgh and attend the International Conference to be held June 2—3.

No Answer to Serious Charge

The Progressives are every day repeating the charge that there was an international report made favoring the continuation of the Fayette County strike, and that President Lewis caused the suppression of this report and a substitution of a different report which favored the calling off of the strike.

It is charged that this report was originally made Dec. 20, 1922, and that at the conference in Chicago, Jan. 3d, Lewis compelled the signers of that report to change their position, and that at the International Board meeting, Jan. 8th, the report, as it was finally made, was given out.

This charge is probably the most serious one that has ever been made against the Lewis machine, and remains absolutely unanswered. The condition of the locked-out Fayette County miners is intolerable. Hundreds of miners are still living in barracks and in many cases sickness has taken the bread winner from the family, and yet the International Executive Board of the U. M. W. of A. has done nothing of importance to relieve the situation. Progressive Miners are hammering away on the recalling of the strike in the Fayette fields. At this time it would be a splendid opportunity to renew the strike. The Coke fields are working overtime and shipping coke clear to France. Thousands of miners who have been compelled thru the stress of circumstances to return to their jobs at the calling off of the strike are ready to come out again if the call is issued.

American Worker Will Not Stop Until He Is an Entirely Free Man

NEW YORK — The American workingman will not stop until he has become an entirely free man, declared Percy Stickney Grant, pastor, Church of the Ascension here, in an address before the Advertising Club of New York. He added that William Z. Foster's plan for one union of all the workers sometime will be realized.

"That is exactly what is going to happen." Grant told his hearers.

"I'd like to know where all of you men started from. Aren't you going to give someone else a chance? Don't you want every poor man and woman to be just as much a man or woman as they can be, with decent places to live in and decent schools for their children to go to?

"If William Z. Foster could speak to you he would surprise you. He is not trying for the country's ruin, but for efficiency, real efficiency. That is what a big union of all labor will mean."

Women Fight Supreme Court Rule

By ROSA LADDEN

(Federated Press Staff Correspondent)

WASHINGTON.—A call is being sent over the land by the National Women's Trade Union League, summoning an emergency convention of women to deal with the crisis brought about by invalidation of the D. C. minimum wage law by the supreme court.

More than a million and a half women are confronted with probable wage reductions, in the view of Ethel Smith, legislative secretary of the Women's Trade Union league, and representative for labor on the local minimum wage board. "Something must be done," she declares, "to humanize either the courts or the constitution."

WORKERS! Forward to Amalgamation, a Labor Party and a Workers' Government

MAY DAY, 1923, MANIFESTO OF THE WORKERS PARTY OF AMERICA!

May Day is the day on which the workers of the world count their gains and measure their losses. In every country of the world the workers are on the march. They are going forward in the struggle for a better life, for the enjoyment of more of what they produce thru their labor power.

Everywhere in the world these workers respond to ideal of a new social order, a better world in which the hardships, the misery and suffering, the exploitation and oppression, which is the lot of the workers under the capitalist system, will be ended.

In England, in France, in Italy, in Germany, in all Europe, mighty movements of the workers are engaged in the struggle against the capitalists. In the far away countries of Asia, Africa and South America, there are groups of workers who are fighting the same battle.

In Russia, the workers will not demonstrate against capitalism. They will demonstrate their strength and courage in the rebuilding of their country which the imperialist war and counter-revolution destroyed. They will renew their enthusiasm in the struggle to establish the new Communist society.

THE AMERICAN WORKERS

During the year which has passed since last May Day the workers of the United States have learned to what lengths their enemies, the employers, are ready to go in order to make them accept low wages and to destroy their organization.

The employers, seeking greater profits for themselves, drove a half million miners, a hundred thousand textile workers and a half million railroad shopmen into strikes. They launched against these workers fighting for a decent standard of living all the might of government. They not only fought the workers thru endeavoring to starve them into submission but used injunctions, courts and soldiers. Thru the Daugherty injunction they swept away all the rights of the workers to use their organized power to win better wages and working conditions from the bosses.

WORKERS OF THE UNITED STATES! THE BITTER EXPERIENCES OF THE LAST YEAR SHOULD BE A LESSON TO THE WORKING PEOPLE OF THIS COUNTRY. IT SHOULD TEACH THEM THAT THE EXISTING GOVERNMENTS EXIST UNDER NO PROTECTION FROM THE ATTACKS OF THE CAPITALISTS. IT SHOULD TEACH THEM THAT THEY MUST EXPECT ALL THE FORCES OF CAPITALISM, COURTS, INJUNCTIONS, SOLDIERS, TO BE USED AGAINST THEM WHEN THEY DEMAND BETTER WAGES AND WORKING CONDITIONS.

The experiences since last May Day should teach them more than that. It should teach them that their only means of securing relief from the things they suffer from under the capitalist system is their own organized power. They must find the means of uniting the strength of the great working masses for a common struggle against the exploiters and oppressors of labor.

THE CAPITALISTS ORGANIZE

The capitalists are organizing for new struggles against the workers. They are uniting in order more effectively to fight the demands of the workers. They are increasing their strength so that they can cut down wages still lower, lengthen the hours of labor, and generally make worse the working conditions of labor.

The capitalists of the United States have been united in the greatest corporations existing anywhere in the world. But they are not satisfied with what they have achieved in the past thru the trusts. They are creating still greater organizations.

During recent months the packers have united. Several great steel companies have merged. The great textile companies have amalgamated. Banking institutions are combining into greater financial octopuses than existed before. All along the line the order of the day in the United States is great industrial organization, greater trusts, more powerful organizations of capital for the exploitation and oppression of the workers.

Workers of the United States! These new combinations of capital are aimed at you. They have as their purpose to wrench even greater profit from the sweat and toil of the working people. The capitalist class is seeking to create such powerful organizations of capital that they can ride rough-shod over all opposition. They intend to make the industrial slavery of the workers even worse. They intend to destroy the workers' organizations and leave them helpless before these giant organizations of capital.

ALREADY IT IS PROPOSED THAT THE REPUBLICAN PARTY MAKE THE BIG ISSUE OF THE NEXT PRESIDENTIAL CAMPAIGN, THE OPEN SHOP. THE OPEN SHOP MEANS THE DESTRUCTION OF THE UNIONS. IT MEANS THAT THE WORKERS WILL HAVE NO WEAPONS WITH WHICH TO DEFEND THEMSELVES FROM THE ATTACKS OF THE BOSSES.

Laws are being proposed to take the right to strike from the workers. Laws to punish foreign-born workers for participation in strike meetings, to finger print, photograph and register these workers are pending.

The capitalists are mobilizing their power. They are merging and combining industrially to strengthen themselves. They are mobilizing the power of government to weaken the workers.

THE WORKERS MUST ORGANIZE

Workers of the United States! You must answer these preparations for a new attack upon you. You must organize your strength as the capitalists are organizing their strength. You must knit your organizations closer together. You must fight the capitalists upon the political field. You must go forward until the governmental power is taken out of the hands of the capitalists.

In the struggles of the textile workers, the miners and the railway shopmen, the workers learned that they can hope to protect themselves against the attacks of the strongly organized employers and win better conditions only if their organizations are federally united.

The railway shopmen fighting alone, while nine other railway unions served the bosses, showed the railway men the need of amalgamating their unions into one industrial union of railway employes. The weakness and disorganization of many textile unions on strike showed the need of the textile workers forming one great industrial union of the textile industry. The miners in their fight needed the help of the railway men and the fact that coal was hauled by union railwaymen while the miners were on strike showed the need of an alliance between the miners and the railwaymen.

AMALGAMATION OF THE CRAFT UNIONS INTO POWERFUL INDUSTRIAL UNIONS WILL MIGHTILY STRENGTHEN LABOR IN ITS STRUGGLE AGAINST THE EMPLOYERS.

During the great strikes of last year Labor found that the strongest weapon in the hands of the employers and its greatest enemy was the government. It found that in every strike the powerful arm of the government reached out to break the power of labor in the fight against lower wages and the open shop. The government used the Railway Labor Board, it used the courts, it used police and it used soldiers, all for the purpose of breaking the power of Labor. The Daugherty injunction, which still stands, is the most flagrant example to prove that the Government is an instrument of the employers to break labor.

The answer to this use of political power against Labor is for Labor to enter the political struggle against the employers. Labor must fight its battles politically as well as upon the industrial field. While the bosses hold the Government, Labor cannot hope to make any great gains upon the industrial field.

A POLITICAL PARTY OF LABOR—A LABOR PARTY—UNITING BOTH INDUSTRIAL WORKERS AND WORKING FARMERS MUST BE THE ANSWER TO THE OPEN USE OF THE GOVERNMENT TO CRUSH LABOR.

With the power of Labor thus organized the way is open to establish in place of the present capitalist government, which openly uses its power to dictate to the workers in the interests of the bosses, a Workers' Government which will use the governmental power to dictate to the capitalists in the interest of the workers.

WORKERS OF THE UNITED STATES! THE WAY TO FIGHT THE CAPITALISTS EFFECTIVELY IS THRU AMALGAMATION AND A LABOR PARTY. THE GOAL OF THE STRUGGLE MUST BE A WORKERS GOVERNMENT.

FORWARD IN THE STRUGGLE. MAKE THIS MAY DAY COUNT IN THE STRENGTHENING OF THE WORKERS OF THE UNITED STATES.

FORWARD TO AMALGAMATION, A LABOR PARTY AND A WORKERS GOVERNMENT!

Central Executive Committee,
Workers Party of America,
C. E. RUTHENBERG, Executive Secretary.

Butchkevitch Shown Polish Terror Agent

"If Mgr. Butchkevitch had been an Hawaiian priest, or an Irish, or an American Catholic, he would be about today and preaching in Russia," Capt. Paxton Hibben informed a large and rather unruly audience at the forum of the New York Society of Ethical Culture.

"Father Butchkevitch was tried, not as a Catholic or a Christian, but as a Russian citizen of Polish extraction who, during hostilities between Russia and Poland, favored the land of his origin over his own country. The capitalistic press that is so hysterical over Father Butchkevitch's fate was, during the late war, just as hysterical in its application of American citizens of German origin as was the public prosecution in the Butchkevitch trial. There is no war on religion in Russia, and the very newspapers that print columns of propaganda claiming that there is, have in their offices Reuter news dispatches from Moscow reporting that when Archbishop Zepliak was asked on the witness stand why he did not obey the law of the land, he replied that he did not have to obey the laws in church matters except those of Rome. Asked why, since the Catholic church in other countries subordinated its canonical regulations to the laws of those countries, he did not do so in Russia, he replied that he had seen no necessity for obeying Russian laws. If ministers of any church were to make such a statement in America, I leave it to your imagination what public opinion would be."

Boris Brasol, head of the Russian National Society, who took the opposite side of the debate to Capt. Hibben, frankly declared in answer to a question from the floor, that his organization was working for the re-establishment of the imperial government in Russia. Russia, he said, is today in the hands of men with names like Bronstein and Finkelstein.

"What's the matter with Finkelstein as a name?" a man shouted from the audience.

Questioned as to whether Russia was in the hands of the Jews today, Capt. Hibben said:

"No more than the United States —not as much, in fact. But suppose it was? I had rather live under the rule of a Trotsky than that of the Imperial Wizard of the Ku Klux Klan, here or in Russia." Dr. David S. Muzzey in charge of the meeting had some difficulty in keeping order. "These forums were instituted to generate light and not heat," he said.

A returned American Relief Administration worker asserted that food conditions among the people of the Ukraine are terrible, so bad as they ever were in the worst period of the famine. "There is cannibalism going on right now," he declared. "The A. R. A. has reduced its work to 12 per cent, but conditions are still 100 per cent bad. Millions of Jews in that country will die before next year unless immediate steps are taken to supply them with food and clothing."

On his way home from the meeting Capt. Hibben was knocked down by a taxicab and severely injured. He was taken to St. Vincent's hospital.

Cannon Given Big Ovation at Jamestown

(Special to "The Worker")

JAMESTOWN, N. Y. — Another great gathering greeted James P. Cannon, chairman of the Workers Party, when he faced his audience here. His subject "Russia Today" found a ready response among his listeners. Among the comment in the local press we find the following from the Jamestown Morning Post:

"Soviet Russia was described last night in Jamestown as a country where labor controls industry, where strikes are unknown and where workers in boots and overalls attend trades union conferences in gilded halls that formerly were used as meeting places of noblemen.

"Then the traveler told of the big trade union conference he attended in Moscow. Two high officials of the government reported to the workers and one army official told of what his organization was doing.

"Mr. Cannon asked his hearers if they could imagine high officials of the United States Government making reports of governmental activity at an American labor union conference or if they ever expected to see the day when a leading figure of the United States Army should report to labor what the armed forces were doing.

"Workers and soldiers are the only persons who vote in Russia, said Mr. Cannon, adding that they are the big figures, politically, economically and socially."

Big Reception in Pittsburgh

By MAX LERNER

(Special to "The Worker")

PITTSBURGH, Pa. — Before an enthusiastic audience that greeted his remarks repeatedly with great spirit and applause, James P. Cannon delivered his talk on Russia in the Labor Lyceum here.

Pittsburgh, "the hell hole of capitalism," was treated to an analysis of "Russia Today" in a manner that it will long remember. When Comrade Cannon remarked that nothing would stop the crushing of counter-revolution in Russia, neither counter-revolution masquerading under the cloak of social revolutionaries or under the cloak of religion the audience showed its approval by prolonged applause. The audience listened spell bound with wrapt attention to the message delivered. It departed with greater faith and confidence in the first Soviet Republic of the world with a clean understanding of its new economic policy and the dictatorship of the workers.

May Day Sees "Prosperity" Boom Heralding New Crisis

By BEN GITLOW

This May Day, 1923, finds the business in the United States enjoying a period of unprecedented prosperity. But is it a "prosperity" that will last?

Production of industry is under reports of factories running full force and producing up to the maximum of their ability. The steel mills have orders, more than they can fill; the textile concerns are rushing to capacity; business and railroad freight traffic is exceedingly heavy.

Additional signs of this business prosperity is the fact that unemployment has slightly decreased, that wages in many industries have been increased and that prices have been rising steadily.

In the matter of wages the Bureau of Labor reports that in the month of February 56 wage scale increases were noted and that in the month of March the wage increases noted totalled 218. In the month of April a wage increase of 10 per cent was announced for the steel industry and a wage increase of 11½ per cent took place in the textile and packing industries.

These wage increases in most cases were either given voluntarily or to avert the threatened possibility of a strike for increased wages. The steel mills for example gave the increase voluntarily while the New England textile mills gave their increase in order to offset the possibility of a strike for a demanded wage increase of 29½ per cent. These increases were given because in times of feverish activity in industry, it is more profitable to keep the labor turn—over as small as possible and to avoid a complete stoppage by a strike.

The present wave of prosperity is due in part to the building boom that took place in the spring 1922 following nearly eight years of almost complete neglect for the legitimate building requirements of the country. For the first three months of 1923 the building operations in volume and cost surpassed those of the same period last year and for the whole of the year promises to greatly surpass the building boom of 1922. In order to get an idea of the enormous amount of money involved in the building projects now going on I will quote Bradstreet's report on the building permits issued for January, February and March of this year for an average of 155 cities. These amounted in value to $982,802,024. When one realizes that almost a billion dollars is to be spent in three months on building operations in only 155 cities one can begin to understand the significance and importance of the building boom to the present business prosperity.

This business prosperity has resulted in greatly augmenting the fortunes of the wealthy. The business men, the capitalists, the industrial overlords and the idle rich that live upon dividends are deriving all the benefit of this prosperity. The joys of this prosperity have been transmitted to the worker in an increase in the cost of living far above the increases he in some instances received in wages. Without quoting statistics let me prove this assertion by quoting the New York Times Annalist, a magazine of finance, commerce and economics, published for the capitalists of the country. Says the Annalist of April 16th:

"Wages for skilled and unskilled workers have not followed the advance in commodity prices, with the result that there has existed a wide and unsettling gap between the income of the worker and the prices of the necessities of life he is obliged to purchase."

This means that in spite of prosperity due to the ever increasing cost of living the worker finds it ever harder and harder to live.

But prospects would not be so bad for the worker if he would have assurances that the present wave of prosperity would last indefinitely or at least for a long period of time. Such, however, is not the case.

There are already signs that the present building boom will end this year. In New York City for example this week a number of building projects which were to be started were indefinitely postponed and the excuse given was that building costs were too high. Manufacturers of building materials have this week tightened up on their credit and as an excuse for not filling orders have stated that their plants were unable to accomodate all customers. With the end of the building boom will come a curtailment in a great many industries that have been very busy supplying materials to the builders. The result will be a big slow down in industry all over the country and with this slow down in industry will come a new attitude to money and to wages. The capitalists will become more penurious in the matter of wages and more insistent on the speed up. They are already beginning to feel that the time is ripe for a general reduction in the wages of many years. The capitalist press in dealing with this wave of prosperity has continually warned the capitalists to guard against the dangers of a period of deflation which will set in if a halt is not put to rapidly rising prices. The capitalist press appeals to the capitalist, and to the businessmen generally, to use their ingenuity in order to avoid the coming disaster in the industrial and business affairs of the country. Real practical suggestions to avoid the coming disastrous panic the capitalist cannot offer. All that the capitalist press can do is to appeal to the ingenuity of the capitalist of the country, but their ingenuity in the future will be as ineffective as their ingenuity in the past when dealing with an unemployed situation involving millions of men and women.

That the capitalists expect the coming crisis in the country to be a very bad one can be gleaned from the report of the president's unemployment committee which recently reported on ways and means for dealing with the coming unemployed situation in the country. This committee which during the last unemployed situation turned down the idea of a fund for the relief of the unemployed this year proposes such a fund.

This then is capitalist prosperity on May Day, 1923. Before its beneficent rays have even begun to bathe the millions of wage slaves, the black clouds of hard times with millions of unemployed, with starvation and misery faces the workers. And the unions of the country have been unable in this short period of business prosperity to take advantage of it for the worker and to increase their ranks. The workers will have to face these coming hard times disorganized, and their demands for bread will be met by injunctions, clubs and bullets.

WEAR A MAY DAY BUTTON!

Are you for:
A labor party?
Amalgamation?
A workers' government?

Will you take part in the May Day celebration?

These are the slogans for the international holiday of the workers. Show your colors by wearing a May Day button. Have your local order a quantity for the May Day celebration.

The button design is a gold globe in a field of white, having in the center the flaming red banner bearing the slogan "All Power to the Workers." This is surrounded by a blue border bearing the slogans of May Day.

Every class conscious worker will be proud to wear this button. Order yours today. Workers Party, 799 Broadway, N. Y. C. Have your branch and local order a quantity. The price is 25 cents each.

All Building Trades in May Pay Advance

By SELMAR SCHOPEEN

A general advance of $1 a day in the building industry is to go into effect for the first of May. This news was given out yesterday by the Governing Board of the Building Trades Employers' Association.

But it hardly appeared when Chairman Ryan, president of the Board and of the Association, "voluntarily" assured the officials of the Plasterers' Union, No. 60, that the wage demand of $12 per day would be granted.

Previous to the "amicable settlement," all the unions in the newly organized Building Trades Council had agreed upon joint action to force the employers into granting their demand. The Stone Masons who had already decided to strike for the $12 wage, agreed to put off the fight until May first so as to give the other trades, especially the Bricklayers, an opportunity to make common cause. As it has passed, all the other trades fell in line, the Marble Workers demanding $12, while the Plumbers and Painters will be satisfied with a minimum of $10 per day. The Carpenters are still holding on to the old "Board of Business Agents" which, under false pretense laid a charter as "Building Trades Council," organized by Robert P. Brindell, now occupying quarters in Sing Sing Prison. Their agreement with the employers gives them the benefit of all wage improvements gained by any of the other trades.

Painters Plan to Guard Health

With the painters, the strengthening of the Five-Day-Week and the insertion of certain health clauses are of chief interest in connection with their demands which will be submitted to the employers only after they have been approved by a referendum vote of the membership. The propaganda for the better protection of the workers' health has taken great impetus among the painters who especially are on guard against the prevalence of lead poisoning.

Untermeyer Fights Labor

The interest of the building trades' unions is at present focussed upon the trial of the Operative Plasterers' Union, No. 60, before a jury and Judge Charles H. Brown in the Criminal Branch of the Supreme Court. Thirty-six officials, members of the Executive Board and of the Construction Committee, are on trial in an effort on the part of Samuel Untermeyer, acting as chief prosecutor, to show that the union "conspired to stifle trade" and overstepped its rights, by forcing employers to adhere to the rules as laid down by the union.

The trial is one of the results of the investigations of the Lockwood Legislative Committee into the housing situation in and around New York City. Untermeyer maintained that the workers helped to a great extent to raise the cost of building by insisting that the rules to which the contractors have subscribed are lived up to. In his effort to prove this, he read from the constitution of the national as well as the local organization clauses, referring to the registration of apprentices, rules regulating their indenture and their employment. He also introduced as evidence clauses which forbid "rushing," the repetition and altering of models and other protective measures, necessary to guard against undue exploitation and to save such sections of the trade as for instance the modelers from utter ruin.

One of the chief witnesses for the prosecution was Christian G. Norman, president of the Building Trades Employers' Association.

The court was rather amused, when Jonah J. Goldstein, chief counsel for the defense, reminded Norman that Untermyer, now the chief prosecutor, had characterized him in the hearings of the Lockwood Committee as the leader of the organization of the Building Trades Bosses, "which has been the greatest enemy of the City of New York at all times, never helpful, always stubborn, mulish and self-impressed." And that the witness merely had replied: "We are looking out for our own interests," that he had in other words expressed himself as taking the attitude of "to hell with the public interests."

The court room was in such a state of hilarity that the court found it advisable to have a recess, when Goldstein, turned to Untermyer and told him, with these kind of witnesses he is trying to show the unions and their rules were detrimental to the public weal.

Norman said, he receives a salary of $25,000, but denied that his duties include the breaking up of the regular unions and forming of scab unions. His answer, however, was evasive when Goldstein asked him specifically, if he had anything to do with the forming of an organization of Plasterers and another of Bricklayers in 1922, when the building trades balked the plan for the open shop.

This Week: Labor Banks Repudiated By "Big Six"

A terrific blow was dealt the open shop drive in New York City this week when the Amalgamated Bank of New York, the labor bank, was forced to withdraw from the "Big Six" financial group, and the members voted to invest the $10,000 in the proposed Federated Trust Company. Then shortly six weeks ago it was announced that Walter F. McCaleb, so-called banking expert who is trying to hoodwink the organized workers into such doubtful ventures, and one Peter J. Brady, a notorious labor politician and henchman of Matt Woll of the Photo-Engravers, and others interested in starting the labor bank in New York City had abandoned the idea of a Trust Company and were going to launch a state savings bank instead. Many active members of "Big Six," so named because it is the largest typographical union on earth, began to get skeptical and the whole question was re-opened.

The writer was present and exposed the fantastic claims of the organizers and the fraudulent character of such banks, with the result that the meeting almost unanimously rejected the proposition to invest one cent in the thing.

That rebuke, however, did not deter the valiant Peter J. Brady, who is obviously expecting a position on the Board of Directors of the bank if it ever materialises, from proceeding with his propaganda before other unions. On Tuesday he appeared before the Eighth Convention of the United Hatters of America with a story of the glories of labor banks. He told them a long tale of the wonderful progress being made in organizing the bank and of how a number of unions contributed several thousand dollars, but he carefully refrained from citing the action of "Big Six."

AUKLAND, New Zealand.—Because he sold a book entitled "The A. B. C. of Communism," William Henry Sheffield was charged at the police court by the New Zealand government with "encouraging violence and lawlessness." The judge fined him $150 or three months hard labor.

Sex Equality Symposium Stirs Forum

Three different views of the woman question were presented last evening at the Forum, by three speakers representing respectively the National Woman's Party, the Socialist Party and the Workers Party.

In discussing the Woman's Party, Adelaide Steadman, insisted that sex equality could be brought about by opposing all laws designed to favor women as a sex and she advocated the repeal of all protective laws for women in industry on the ground that many of them prevented women competing as equals with men. To illustrate her contention she cited the prohibition of women engaging in night work as discriminatory in favor of men who could work any hours they chose.

For the Socialist Party, Mrs. Gertrude Weil Klein held that only equality of opportunity for both men and women, to be achieved thru evolution and the democratic parliamentary government, could solve the woman problem today. Mrs. Klein deemed more concerned about delivering a soap box speech against Communism and the Communist International than dealing with her subject.

Jeanette Pearl, for the Workers Party, devoted most of her time to replying to the position of the National Woman's Party. She gave a short historical sketch of the enslavement of woman as the result of the rise of private property and then proved that the Woman's Party takes a purely middle class position regarding equality of sexes, a position based on legislation in the interest of private property. As opposed to the stand of the Woman's Party, Comrade Pearl spoke in favor of protective legislation as an imperative immediate demand of the class struggle.

In analyzing the so-called blanket equality bill of rights of the Woman's Party, Comrade Pearl ridiculed as purely petty bourgeois the demand for rights of middle class women to lucrative political positions and the demands for entrance to the faculties of higher institutions of learning. She also scored the demand of the Woman's Party that men as well as women be held under the prostitution law, pointing to the fact that prostitution itself was based upon capitalism and that its elimination could not be achieved thru legislation, but thru emancipation from wage slavery, which is the basis of prostitution.

"Equality cannot spring out of a sex basis, but can come only with emancipation from class rule. This emancipation can be achieved only thru the mass power of the workers developing independent political action as formulated by the Communist International. For the special problems affecting women the Communist International has created a special apparatus, the Women's Section, for the purpose of studying the problems confronting women in industry and in the home and bringing them into the common struggle against capitalism as a class and not as a sex. Sex equality, based upon "equality of opportunity," is achieved thru the Soviet form of government and the Dictatorship of the Proletariat, and not thru parliamentary bourgeois democracy.

Program distribution of the Workers Party has now reached the 400,000 mark. The following amounts have been distributed by the principal cities: Chicago, 40,000; Detroit, 25,000; New York, 25,000; Boston, 25,000; Philadelphia, 15,000; Minneapolis, 10,000; St. Louis, 20,000; San Francisco, 10,000; Seattle, 3,000; Cleveland, 15,000; Pittsburgh, 20,000.

Problems of Our United Front

NOTE—It is proposed that the accompanying article be the first in a series of six articles on the "Problems of Our United Front," to appear in the following order: (1) Limits of the United Front; (2) Against Reformism; (3) Against Sectarianism; (4) Party Work in Shop, Trade and Union Branches in the United Front; (5) The Needs of Shop, Trade and Union Branches in the Party; (6) Be American! The first article is as follows:

By JOHN PEPPER

I. Limits of the United Front

The entire policy of the Workers Party is focused to-day upon the United Front.

Our opponents, for demagogical reasons, for protection of foreign agents, for the purpose of misleading or confusing the revolutionary workers, are trying to distort the United Front policy.

The greatest steps forward have been made by us in the united front when we were clearest, in our theses, in this connection, in the limits of the United Front.

The policy of the united front holds two dangers. We have sectarians who do not understand that it is permissible in any way to form a united front with the yellow leaders. And we have too broad-hearted comrades who want to embrace everybody in the united front, and in this way they forget their own Party.

The Italian Federation of the Workers Party has accomplished splendid work. It took up the initiative in time, and established the united front with all the Italian trade unions, with the Socialist Party, against the Fascisti. Our comrades secured all the important strategical positions in this struggle. The Alba Nuova took up with energy the struggle against the Fascisti.

But we must say openly, that in the continuation of the fight so brilliantly begun, dangers may arise.

Sharply and clearly stated, the main danger is that the Party will be pushed into the background in the minds of our comrades. We must therefore follow the following policy energetically:

1. Some of the Italian comrades are opposed to permitting the Anarchist group (Carlo Tresca) and the I. W. W. to enter the united front. But at the same time a comrade who otherwise is a very good Communist, declared naively, "We want to forget our hatred for the yellow Socialist leaders."

Naturally, both viewpoints are false. We cannot allow a so-called left group to stand outside of the united front. Not even if this group is not a real left group, but one that is confused, unorganized and at times even hostile. And it is impossible to forget the hatred against the yellow leaders at the moments when the Socialist Party makes a formal conspiracy in an underground meeting against Soviet Russia, and against the Communists in particular.

2. The fight against Italian Fascism must be broadened and extended into a fight against international Fascism. Not only in Italy, but also in Hungary, Fascism holds sway. In Germany it is increasing in might. In Poland and in Czecho-Slovakia it has armed organizations. In the United States the Ku Klux Klan and its policy against Jews, Catholics, and Negroes is becoming ever mightier. The United Front of the Italian workers in America has the duty to call upon the German, Polish, Hungarian, Jewish, Czecho-Slovakian workers of America, and the Negro worker and tenant farmer to establish a great and mighty united front against international Fascism. The German, Polish, Jewish, Hungarian Federations, and the Negro organizations of the Workers Party have the duty to follow the example of the Italian Federation of the Workers Party, and to group around themselves as many labor unions and benefit societies as possible, and lead all American workers to a great common united front against Fascism.

3. But that is not enough. We must extend the fighting front still further. The Communist International has begun an immense fight against Fascism on an international scale. Under the chairmanship of Clara Zetkin a provisional international committee which aims to include not only Communists, but all labor organizations has been formed. We are in duty bound to tie up the fighting front of the American workers with the whole fight against Fascism.

4. We must also broaden the program and the slogans of the struggle. And at the same time we must anchor it deeply in American political life. We must unify the anti-Fascisti campaign with our Sacco-Vanzetti campaign, with our campaign against deportations, with our defense campaign for class war prisoners, with our campaign against the persecution of the foreign-born workers as criminals and prostitutes.

5. It is incumbent upon our Italian comrades to double the membership of their Federation in this struggle. The present Italian Federation is too small a basis for influencing the masses.

It is our duty to make the Alba Nuova a daily. The Alba Nuova must become a real Communist paper, unofficially it must become the official organ of the fight against the Fascisti. We must take a decisive stand against this idea to create an Italian daily independent of our Party, even if the editors of the daily happen to be at the same time members of our Party. The Party has had enough unpleasant experience with periodicals which have not been political expressions of our Party, but organs of individual literateurs.

It is our duty to convert our Italian Party units, which until now have been built on an artificial basis, into shop, trade and union branches. The Workers Party can really become a party of the workers only if it knows how to take root in the industries and factories.

To sum up: We should form the united front with every workers' organization, and when it is necessary, also with yellow Socialist leaders and with confused Anarchists. But we should not forget for a moment our distrust and hatred for these misleaders. We must organize the masses, when we forget our own Party within the United Front. The Communist Party's interests can never and in no situation be put to the true interests of the working class. It is not Party egoism when we wish to protect the absolute organizational and ideological independence of our Party within the United Front. The trade unions represent only momentary interests and sectional interests of the workers. The Socialist and Anarchists have no clear program for the historical tasks of the working class. The Communistic Party is the only organization which represents not only the momentary interests of the workers, and not only the interests of all the sections of the working class, but the greatest interests of the whole future of the proletariat. The Communist Party is the head of the working class. Communists who forget their own Party within the masses unified for the struggle, are like soldiers who lose their heads in the midst of battle.

By CHARLES KRUMBEIN

Results of the referendum vote for a Labor Party, conducted by the Trade Union Educational League, which pour into the office daily, clearly demonstrate that the organized workers are getting ready to completely discard the old fatal political policy which has for so many years made of them only a football for unscrupulous capitalist politicians, and adopt new and more militant tactics.

Unquestionably the experiences of the past few years, the outstanding partiality shown by the government in labor struggles and the terrible loss suffered by the trade unions had done a great deal to re-awaken the militant traditions of the past and stimulate the sentiment for more realistic policies and tactics.

During the miners' and railroad shop crafts strikes of last year the unions involved found themselves opposed by the combined organized forces of a government which in the interest of the class represented by the railroad and mine owners involved did not hesitate to use the force of the injunction weapon to prevent picketing, and dispatched soldiers to all strike points for the protection of the scabs.

The infamous Daugherty injunction became only one more categorical proof as to what the government institution, owned and controlled by Wall Street is to be used for.

The "honorable" law makers, who had hitherto professed friendliness for labor failed to come to the rescue and vividly demonstrated that they can never be depended upon to champion the cause of labor, and made a miserable joke of Samuel Gompers' policy of "rewarding our friends and punishing our enemies."

It is dawning upon the American workers that only their organized efforts can protect their interests, and that such efforts must be extended to the political field as well.

They are now beginning to realize the necessity of combining their whole force and energy in up-to-date functioning industrial unions and a strong political party, based upon their interests as a class.

This developing sentiment is now being further crystallized by the Trade Union Educational League and cannot stop before labor success in establishing one United Front capable of defeating the capitalist politicians and carry on the fight for a Workers' Government.

Mass Meeting Hits Attack on Soviet Russia

One of the most spirited mass meetings ever held in New York City gathered at the Manhattan Lyceum to protest against the attack of Soviet Russia, initiated since the execution of Vicar Butekavitch, especially as this attack has found a voice thru The Call, The Forward, The Herald and The Times, as organs of the combined Socialist-Capitalist anti-Soviet press campaign.

Among the speakers were Ludwig Lore, Robert Minor and J. Louis Engdahl, in English, with additional speakers in Russian, Polish, Yiddish, Italian and Hungarian. The resolutions adopted were as follows:

1.—The meeting held on Friday, April 13, 1923, declares itself in solidarity with Soviet Russia in its difficult struggle with the counter-revolutionary international bourgeois. The meeting declares that on the basis of its own laws and in the interest of the working class, Soviet Russia has a right to its own judicial proceedings.

2.—The meeting denounces those governments which are wading knee-deep in blood, and yet are now protesting hypocritically in the name of humanity against the execution of Vicar Butthkavitch. With what right does the government of Great Britain protest—a government which is the assassin of hundreds of Irish, Egyptian, South African, and Hindoo revolutionaries? Or the militaristic Polish government, which has filled all its prisons with rebelling workers, which half openly and half secretly supports every pogrom against the Jews? It is the greatest irony that in the name of Christianity the Horthy government of Hungary dares to raise its protest, when in the name of the selfsame Christianity it has murdered thousands and thousands of workers.

It is in the name of humanity that Mussolini and his Fascist government speak—these marauders whose whole policy is the murder and imprisonment of labor leaders and laboring masses. We see in the same ranks, the Pope and the Catholic church which for centuries executed tens of thousands of heretics, which employed inquisitions and torture, and which is to-day the greatest support of Mussolini and Horthy. And then, at the head of the protesting governments is the government of the United States which, not content with executing almost as a legal institution, but even deliberately rejected the anti-lynching law—the same government of the United States which does not protest against the bloody terror of Mussolini and Horthy.

3.—The meeting protests indignantly and expresses its disgust and despisal of the Socialist Party and its press, the New York Call and the Forward. The Socialist Party is to-day in the same ranks with the most miserable calumniators, not only of the Communists, but also of the Russian revolution. The Socialist press, the Call and Forward reprint word by word the counter-revolutionary articles of the N. Y. Herald, tho they know of course that the N. Y. Herald is the leading journal of Daugherty, the chief of the Department of Justice. They know that the writer of the article, Francis McCullagh is a notorious hireling of the Czarists, that as a correspondent in the Russo-Japanese War he was imprisoned by the Japanese, that he escaped from prison and went to join Count Witte, that after the Russian revolution he aided Kolchak who murdered thousands of Russian women and children, that in spite of this the Soviet government permitted him to stay in Moscow as correspondent of the N. Y. Herald, but that he has been recently expelled from Moscow because of his malicious slanders. The Socialist Party has forgotten the most elementary duties of a working class party.

The Socialist Party no longer fights against the bourgeoisie and against the conservative trade union bureaucrat. Its only fight to-day is directed against the Communists and against Soviet Russia. In its blind anti-revolutionary hatred, the Socialist Party forgets that the fight against the clericals should be one of the historical duties of every working class party. It forgets that the churches have always been and are now everywhere, simply the tools for the oppression of the masses and for keeping them in ignorance. The Socialist Party has forgotten together with all its Marxism, also this Marxian maxim, that "Religion is the opium of the people". The Socialist Party in its treacherous policy does not only advocate religion as an opium, but with its anti-Bolshevism it produces a second opium as deadly as the first, to be used against the class-consciousness of the workers.

Long live Soviet Russia!

Down with capitalist and Socialist calumniators of the Russian revolution!

Washington Defends Civilization

By H. M. WICKS

"Soup Kitchen" Hoover Is Busy

THE second champion of humanity to occupy the front pages of the press this week was the eminent soup-kitchen statesman, Mr. Herbert Hoover; who officially opened the fight of the present administration for participation in the World Court.

Mr. Hoover journeyed from Washington, D. C., to Des Moines, Iowa, and opened the campaign before the national conventions of the Women Voters. By a series of hysterical contortions he explained that entering the World Court, created and dominated by the League of Nations, would in no way involve the United States in the League proper. He endeavored to conceal his poverty of logic beneath high sounding platitudes about the great achievements of the Harding administration in forwarding the ideal of World Peace. He pointed with pride to the Washington Conference for the Limitation of Armaments as proof of his claims. To be sure none of the ladies present ventured the assertion that the Washington conference was not intended to promote the peace of the world but was simply called in an effort to induce Europe to divert some of the money being spent on navies toward the payment of the debts they incurred to the United States during the late unpleasantness.

According to Mr. Hoover this court is something new under the sun. It will issue decrees, but no compulsion will ever be used to enforce these decrees. "Our proposal to enter the court and the act of adhesion to which President Harding has asked, is based upon the assumption that compulsion is not necessary for peoples of good-will and a sense of justice." This is perfectly clear. Surely no one can object to such a court! Everyone knows perfectly well what is meant by peoples of "good-will" and there is no doubt living that does not clearly understand what constitutes a sense of "justice." These terms are so definite and concise and comprehensive; everybody's good-will is precisely the same, as is also their sense of justice. Then the only difficulty remaining is to select judges who are "men of international reputation for many years experience in the law and conscious except to their own principles of law."

Would any other nation on earth tolerate such nonsense coming from a cabinet official? Statesmen of other nations indulge in pompous palaver, but at least they deal with practical realities, while American statesmen can with impunity indulge in political absurdities that would make a Hottentot laugh.

The sum and substance of all the talk about the World Court emanating from Washington is that the government is strenuously endeavoring to please the finance capitalists by sneaking in at the back door of the League of Nations. It is the fear that dignified exit forced by the industrial group after solemnly promising them that he would forever abjure the perfidious League of Nations. Mr. Hoover is the logical spokesman for the policy that up to the present is the reason that he has been the representative of the House of Morgan from the time he qualified as an American statesman by conducting soup houses of a dignified higher order than the Salvation Army doughnut factories during the War.

His knowledge of history and economics is only equalled by his profound knowledge of astronomy and geology. In the Des Moines speech Hoover denounced those who want the court to have powers similar to the United States Supreme Court as impractical visionaries. They are "the ones who would have complained on the Wednesday night of Genesis, and would have gone to bed with a grouch because the Creator had not yet made a finished job of the sun and the moon."

Thus our eminent secretary of commerce believes the Genesis fairy tale that there was a Creator and that the earth was made first and then the sun was created as an afterthought. His statesmanship belongs to the same primitive period of mental development. But no one is ever too ignorant to serve as a phonograph for the capitalist imperialists. In the case of Hoover going back to Genesis one is forcibly reminded of Thorstein Veblin's observation that the nearer a society approaches its collapse the further back do its spokesmen go for their inspiration.

Sam Gompers to the Front

UNITED with Hughes and Hoover in their hatred of Russia and the militant working class in general is the ancient and acrimonious Samuel Gompers, the abomination of the American Labor movement, who keeps his head in office by serving every master which will attack Soviet Russia and the revolutionary working class. While Gompers holds no cabinet office he supplements the putrescent vaporings of the cabinet officials with valorous mendacity that reminds one forcibly of the immortal twaddle of Wm. J. Burns, head of the investigation bureau of the Department of Justice. Burns, as a matter of encouraging business for his privately owned stool pigeon factory, lumped all the liberals, moderates, radicals, pacifists, humanitarians, Socialists and Communists together and brands them agents of the Communist International in his great advertising campaign. Gompers, in his role from Burns and one month later rushes into the fray with the announcement that the "American Federation of Labor thru its president, Samuel Gompers, made public charges that a campaign of organized propaganda, financed with $800,000 contributed by Charles Garland for the promotion of anarchistic groups in the United States. In true Burns style Gompers identifies the public that Norman M. Thomas, Lucy Robinson, Ralph Judah L. Magnes and Robert Morse Lovett are devoted apostles of Lenin.

The motive of Gompers is clear. His vicious attacks upon all radicals, liberals and revolutionists are but a repetition of the efforts of the militant workers and of the ranks of the American Federation of Labor and splitting the ranks of labor so that there will be no unity of action on the part of the working class against the sacred government of the capitalist class of the United States.

Reading between the lines of the latest Gompers assault upon the radicals in general we can perceive the hand of that malodorous freak, William English Walling, who once professed to be a Socialist and Marxist altho he never was anything but a (Semi) compiler of Socialist and Marxist literature. Walling is the chief of the world's press agenting for the Gompers' machine along with Chester M. Wright, formerly editor of the New York Call.

Gompers, in his dotage, is a real spectacle. There was a time when he would have scorned the aid of such shady individuals as Wright and Walling, but today in his desperation he furnishes a haven for every apostate in general and for moronic Bill Walling in particular.

But in spite of the valiant defenders of capitalism at Washington—Hughes, Hoover and Gompers—who regularly exercise the spectre of Bolshevism and the Soviet government of Russia, the world revolution is still on the order of the day and the old system is doomed to be swept aside along with this delectable government, "the pride and glory of the ages".

West Turns Out to See F. S. R. Film

The imposing records of crowded houses and enthusiastic audiences made by the Russian film The Shadow of a Slave in showings in the Eastern States have been matched by the Middle West and West.

Everywhere the biggest houses in town were packed to the limit, and the audience showed their satisfaction with the picture. Chicago turned out in numbers as great as did Boston, Philadelphia and New York. Both Ohio and Indiana had fine successes in many cities.

Every now and then some obdurate local officials or 120 percent superpatriots felt themselves called upon to interfere. Thru private showings, however, it has been possible in practically all instances to change the minds of the authorities. A case in point is this:

Following the announcement of the picture in Dayton, Ohio, the local American Legion decided to interfere on the general ground that the picture constituted "propaganda," and the local revenue officials refused the customary exemption extended to relief productions. But a showing of the picture was arranged with members of the Legion present. The Legion withdrew its objections—and as if by magic the tax officials did likewise. Cynical persons might think that the Federal authorities are but figureheads and the Legion the real boss.

From Cover to Cover

By MAX SHACHTMAN

Some years ago, when I was still imbibing from the mossy fountain of High School knowledge, it was suddenly announced that the United States had declared war on Germany, and joined the Allied forces. And from that day, I was plied with propaganda, in the form of official documents, teachers' admonitions and auditorium speeches, to the effect that the German Kaiser had wickedly and wantonly begun the war, had prepared for it for the last 40 years, and was seeking to spread the hegemony of Deutsche Kultur all over the world. This impression received its final confirmation at every picture show which invariably showed a mustached, withered-armed beast, directing a goose-stepping army into France and Belgium; always flaxen-haired, peasant beauties in charming laced, velvet corselets, spent their time in struggling against the repulsive hugs of monstrous Huns. Unfortunately their soldiers amused themselves by playing lawn tennis with their bayonets, using babies for serving. I was indignant, outraged.

But since that time I have learned a thing or two. I have been completely disillusioned about every aspect of the holocaust. In short, I have become a Red.

Mr. Francis Neilson's latest book, "Why to Civilization" (B. W. Huebsch), does not help in my disillusionment but it does add to my information. Like all liberals, he is sincere, indignant, indefatigable in his research, as far as he goes—but he does not go far enough. He helps to lay low the already well-pierced legend of German guilt, and he reveals with well-authenticated documents that there has not yet been such a record of chicanery, lying, document falsification, hypocrisy and general revolting deceit as that which characterized the World War. There are, for instance, few who have heard of the trial of the Russian War Minister, Sukhomlinov; of the Kautsky, Gooss, de Siebert revelations; of the Livre Noir (to be reviewed later); and of the other documents made public in the last few years. (Prof. Sidney B. Fay has made an excellent summary of them in his "New Light on the Origins of the War.") Mr. Neilson's statement that secret diplomacy is a most important cause of war is, however, superficial, just as much as it would be to say that the wearing of vague, loose clothing by a pregnant woman is the cause of childbirth. The causes of war, which is inherent, inevitable and periodically recurrent in the social system under which we live, are independent of any such phenomenon as "secret diplomacy."

The same may be said of Mr. Francis Delaisi's "Oil: Its Influence on Politics" (Lab. Pub. Co., England). The book, like Mr. Neilson's, is valuable for the information it gives on the part oil has played in the development of the diplomatic and political relationships of the United States, England, France, Germany and Russia. Altho many new divisions and alliances have been made since the book was written (1920) it contains a very good resume of the swift course of events which have brought oil to the forefront, and caused the international divisions of Standard Oil versus Royal Dutch Shell. But the struggle for oil as the sole cause of future (or past) wars, is an absurdity. Were oil to become as free and plentiful as water, wars would happen just the same. That the oily scramble is a harbinger of war, is, however, quite another thing.

Gompers and the Gullible

The victory of the American Communist movement, won thru the disagreement in the trial of William Z. Foster at St. Joseph, Mich., has let loose a new flood of attacks on labor militants and consistent radicals.

It isn't enough that the Socialists, with their "Call" and "Forward," should join with the vilest forms of reaction in maligning Soviet Russia, American Communists and the World Communist struggle.

It isn't enough that the agents of the Daugherty department of justice and the Burns Private Detective Agency should join in preventing Workers Party meetings, as in Washington, with subsequent raids on party headquarters, arrests of party members and seizure of party literature, with resulting hysteria in the kept press of the national capital city, declaring that, "Destruction of Government buildings and the inciting of a Communist uprising were frustrated here last night, according to police and the Department of Justice operatives, who arrested 15 men in two raids on alleged radical gatherings."

It isn't enough that the hired sleuths of the bosses should inaugurate pogroms against the workers joining in the national distribution of 1,000,000 copies of the Communist program of the Second National Convention of the Workers Party.

All this is to be expected from an enraged robber class cheated of its victims, not only at St. Joseph, Mich., but also at Herrin, Ill.

But at the same time Samuel Gompers, head of the American Federation of Labor, who is now receiving close Socialist cooperation, joins forces with the black conservatives in ridiculous charges against the American Fund for Public Service, popularly known as the "Garland Fund," that has charge of the distribution of $800,000 bequeathed by the young millionaire, Charles Garland, who refused to spend it on bootleg liquor in the midst of Broadway's bright lights, assisted by Dot Kings and Peggy Joyces and their retinues.

Gompers' attack on the "Garland Fund," a camouflage attack on all radical organizations, is a confession of the complete bankruptcy of American labor conservatism. Gompers may feel there are a few gullible ones whom he may rally to his drooping standards. But there are many indications that the ranks of the gullible is being depleted by wholesale desertions to radicalism.

Roger N. Baldwin, for the Garland Fund, if reply to Gompers, has made public a detailed statement of its financial transactions. Let Gompers now respond with an equally detailed statement of the millions of dollars that have been pouring in as dues to the A. F. of L., these past few years, and show how much has been spent on warring upon the militants, the only really constructive element in the working-class struggle against the profiteering exploiters, under whose standards the gullible of yesterday are enlisting as intelligent fighters today.

Let Us Work for the Revolution

"The Worker" was discussed by the American Commission of the Fourth World Congress of the Communist International. It was the feeling of the Russian comrades on this Commission that "The Worker" should stress Communism less than it does. In fact, it was charged with being "too Communist." It was one of the American delegates who had feared for its Communism.

Recently "The Worker" was discussed by some of our German comrades in Berlin. They felt that it was just as Communist as any official Communist publication in Europe, which led them to the conclusion that it was possible to carry on the struggle for Communism openly in the United States.

And now we have received a letter from "Brooklyn, N. Y." that starts off with, "All Hail the Proletarian Revolution of the World!" and charges in the first paragraph that, "The editorial headed 'Crucifying the Helpless' in THE WORKER, for Saturday, April 21, exhibits a spirit that is utterly out of place in a Communist organ."

Our Brooklyn correspondent says we did not annihilate the Supreme Court, because of its anti-minimum wage decision, in the correct Marxist fashion. He says that we reek with "bourgeois reformism" because we raised the demand for the abolition of the supreme court.

We confess that it would be very gratifying to us if we could head every editorial, every article, every news story, with "All Hail the Proletarian Revolution of the World!" But we do not think this would bring the revolution any nearer.

We feel that every anti-labor decision of the U. S. Supreme Court offers an excellent opportunity to direct the hatred of the workers against this tentacle of the many-armed capitalist dictatorship. Every advantage should be taken of this opportunity. We do not feel that it is absolutely necessary to state the full Communist program in every news story, article and editorial. Once interest the worker in our cause, then his education will

All of which we fear will not be brought about by hailing the Revolution. But we do know that it will be brought about by intelligently organizing the laboring masses politically and economically, and steadily WORKING FOR THE REVOLUTION in harmony with developing economic evolution.

Capitalism and the Children

The decision of Secretary of State Hughes to bar Ekaterine Kalinin, wife of the president of the Russian Soviet Republic, from this country was in harmony with American capitalism's attitude toward children. The nation that boasts a supreme court that has declared an anti-child labor law "unconstitutional" cannot be expected to care much for the children of other lands.

Secretary of State Hughes' tears for the departed Vicar Butchkavitch are mere camouflage. Mrs. Kalinin was coming to this country to aid in the relief campaign for Russian children. Her tour would have meant the saving of thousands of lives. Yet against the lives of all these innocent children, Hughes places the life of Butchkavitch, who plotted with the Polish White Terror for the overthrow of the Workers' and Peasants' Republic.

Hughes creeps under the cloak of religion, not only to make war on the Russian Soviet Republic, but to duplicate that murder of children in Russia that American capitalism is guilty of here.

It should not take a very keen understanding of international politics to realize the fact that Washington, like Paris, London and Rome, is more concerned that one of its capitalist plots should succeed than that millions of children should live and be happy. The barring of Mrs. Kalinin from these shores should bring this fact home to new millions of workers in this country.

The capitalists thru their kept politicians and judges at Washington say, "Let the children starve!" Let the children be sent into the interior to die; there are plenty more!"

But these capitalist cannibals will cause new masses of workers to respond declaring that, "Our children shall live, they shall enjoy their youth, they shall grow to the full stature of real manhood and womanhood!" and in that day the bosses' social system shall crumble everywhere, and Communism spread over the earth.

They Sing, "The Red Flag"

British exploiters are sleeping more restlessly since they heard the singing of "The Red Flag" for the first time, the other day in the British House of Commons. The strains of this revolutionary song burst spontaneously from the lips of the younger labor members. The yellow labor leaders, MacDonald, Clynes and Henderson confessed, "We have no influence over them, we cannot quiet them, we cannot impress upon them the necessary dignity befitting their surroundings."

Thus does the young element of the British Labor Party blow of 143 members in the king's house of commons had to sing above the protests of king's ministers, Lombard (Wall) Street politicians and the betrayers in their own ranks. When the workers of any country do that, it is surely an historic moment. When the slow going, easily-contented Britisher first indulges in this revolt in capitalism's most political forum, then he is making history for the working class.

The immediate spur that caused this revolutionary song to be heard in defiance of British parliamentary etiquette, was the refusal on the part of the government to consider the demands of the disabled victims of the world war. The concern of the masses of the king's soldiers is thus identified with the demands of England's militant working class. That looks bad for Britis' imperialism. That means that the king's army and the king's navy will soon be singing "The Red Flag," and on the day that happens British imperialism will tumble to its fall.

Our Second May Day

This year the Workers Party, and its official publication "THE WORKER", send their May Day, 1923, greetings to America's toiling millions. New historic events are almost daily transpiring in the world struggle of labor. These will be fittingly remembered in the many United May Day Celebrations planned for all sections of the country.

The American labor struggle is fittingly reviewed in the Workers Party May Day Proclamation that is published on Page Two. This declaration should be carefully read and studied. It is a resume of the battles already fought, as well as an outlook upon the greater struggles to come.

But this year's May Day will also be remembered as the time when the Workers Party appears in the world arena of the class struggle as the American Section of the Communist International. This defiance of the Daugherty-Burns czardom comes at a time when the party's secretary, Comrade C. E. Ruthenberg, is facing a court in Michigan on the charge of carrying on the work of Communist agitation, education and organization. There is no greater indication than this of the sturdy youth and promising growth of the young American Communist movement, the vanguard of American labor.

It is, therefore, with greater hopes than ever and with unbounded enthusiasm, that the Communists of America press forward with renewed vigor in the fight for world-wide human emancipation from degrading international capitalism.

The Bolcoms May First Manifesto

TO THE WORKERS OF AMERICA:

WE ARE FORCED TO CALL OFF THE REVOLT AGAINST THE BOLCOMS FOR THE FIRST OF MAY. IT IS UNFORTUNATE THAT THE TIME WHEN EVERY THING IS PREPARED FOR A SUCCESSFUL OUTCOME OF OUR REVOLT, SHOULD BE NECESSARY TO POSTPONE INDEFINITELY THE COUP THAT WILL NOT LOSE YOUR FAITH IN THE BOLCOMS. WE WERE PROMPTED TO TAKE THIS STEP ONLY BY OUR LOYALTY AND DEVOTION TO THE WORKING CLASS OF AMERICA. NO THIS WAS NOT CAUSED BY A BETRAYAL FROM ONE OF OUR RANKS. NO ONE KNEW OF THE REVOLUTION SAVE THE AUTHORS OF THIS MANIFESTO. THE REASON THAT COMPELLED US TO CALL OFF THE REVOLT IS FAR GREATER.

THE NEW YORK GIANTS ARE PLAYING CHICAGO ON THAT DAY!!!

FRATERNALLY,
THE CENTRAL EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE OF THE BOLCOMS.

IT WOULD MAKE A HIT EVEN WITH BARNUM AND BAILEY

"The New York Call will conduct a funny museum booth at the Bazaar."—Advt in the Call.

Unlike the other Workers Party publications the BOLCOMS are always ready to assist its yellow contemporaries. Having learned that the management of the Call is to conduct a funny museum at its bazaar, we beg to suggest to them the following articles for display:

1. Saint Louis program of the Socialist Party.
2. Call's stories on the trial of Butchkevitch.
3. Forward's attacks on the Friends of Soviet Russia.
4. The Hillquit-Keating debate.
5. Call's attack on the Communists.

In fact all the editorials that have appeared in the Socialist press will be interesting contributions to the museum. Yet if you desire to make it a complete success, we suggest that you have the editorial staffs of the Call and the Forward in it.

VERY, VERY PERSONAL

What's the matter, Bill? May first is but a short while off and you haven't exposed any reactionary plots yet. Where are all the bombs, red flags and manifestos that ought to be found by now? Where are the threats by the Knights of the Red Star? Are you afraid you're layin' down on your job. You certainly deserve to get the sack. Additional expenditures mean more money from the capitalists unless you scare them—you're even bound to lose your job if you don't invent a red menace! Don't depend on the Socialists to do all the dirty work. Now is your season, why don't you get busy? Bolcomsky. IRV.

P.S.—As announced previously the Bolcoms will be discontinued for a month.—I. D. W. T.

We have passed the 400,000 mark. Now make it 500,000 programs. The 400,000 mark has been reached in the campaign to distribute 1,000,000 copies of the Workers Party Program. Local Chicago has organized squads, each in charge of a captain for the efficient distribution of literature and are putting this system into effect for the spread of the Program. All Locals should organize similarly. We must make the Party Program a popular document. It voices the grievances of the Workers. It points the way out of the capitalist exploitation. Every worker should read our program. Let us strive to reach 500,000 by May 1—1,000,000 by June 1. All branches should be in this campaign. Get busy at once.

The National Office of the Workers Party has received the following communication from the

New York City, April 11, 1922.

Central Executive Committee, Workers Party of America,
43 East Twenty-first Street,
New York City.

Comrades:

The Communist Party of America, at its Convention held in New York City, during the month of August, 1921, which was attended by delegates from all parts of the United States, decided by unanimous vote to dissolve the Communist Party of America, because the Workers Party of America, which is already fraternally affiliated with the Communist International, as the only organization carrying on the struggle for Communist principles in the United States. The Workers Party of America is authorized, when it seems desirable, to adopt the name "Communist Party of America."

We call the attention of the workers of the United States to the fact that no other organization in the United States has any relation with the Communist International except the Workers Party of America. Any other organization using the name "Communist" and pretending to represent the Communist International is an imposter and an enemy of the Communist International, and should be exposed as such by every Communist and every class conscious worker.

We believe that the support which the Workers Party of America has already won among the working masses will enable it openly and publicly to carry on the struggle for Communism in the United States. We call upon all Communists to accept the discipline of the Workers Party of America as a sacred duty.

LONG LIVE THE WORKERS PARTY—THE PARTY OF COMMUNISM IN THE UNITED STATES!

LONG LIVE THE COMMUNIST INTERNATIONAL!

In the name of the Third National Convention and the Central Executive Committee of the Communist Party of America.

With Communist greetings.

J. Miller, Executive Secretary.

The Negro Problem Is Important

By OTTO E. HUISWOOD

The Negro Problem is one of the most important problems facing the Workers Party. Fundamentally an economic problem but intensified by racial antagonism it demands our special attention and careful study.

The Negro population constitutes one-tenth of the population of the country and is a most important factor for the success or failure of any working-class movement. It is overwhelmingly a proletarian mass. It is the most ruthlessly exploited of any working class group.

Eighty per cent of the Negroes live in the South. Here is where the class struggle rages in its most brutal form. Oppressed and exploited beyond description in order to pile up huge profits for the land owning class the Negro can barely eke out a miserable existence. Peonage is rampant. He is disfranchised and segregated. Lynching and burning at the stake has become a famous American pastime.

That gigantic butchery—the World War—shook the very foundation of Capitalist Society and destroyed its equilibrium. It has also shattered the apathy of the Negro workers; they are now sharply conscious of their wrongs as Negroes. One may reflect upon the part played by the Negro in the Washington and Chicago Race Riots. They did not let themselves be shot down as dogs, instead; they put up an effective and organized resistance. There is also developing a revolutionary element among the Negroes. This element recognizes clearly the source of their exploitation and the reasons for their oppression.

Disappointed and disillusioned by the constant failures of the political reformers to secure any redress of their wrongs, many Negroes are turning to radical movements and are acting as a leaven for the Masses. They are at present race conscious. It is the duty of the revolutionist to turn this race consciousness into class-consciousness. But it requires persistency and tact. It is the duty of the Workers Party to attract this section of the American Working class. And the Party must in all seriousness undertake to win the support of the Negro workers. Just as they are used by the ruling class today as strike breakers, so will they be used in the future to crush any revolutionary attempt on the part of the white workers. And the capitalist class is preparing for this event. They are building a new Armory in the Negro district.—what for? Well you may guess.

Comrades, it is your duty to aid these masses in their struggle against peonage, and against economic exploitation. It is your duty to rally the Negro workers under the revolutionary banner of the Working Class Movement. Comrades, go to the Negro Masses!

A Capitalist Dictatorship

By JAY LOVESTONE

AN UNDERGROUND CONVENTION

Today the American government seeks to drive the most advanced spokesmen of the working class, the Communists, underground. Then it persecutes and hounds these very workingmen for having been underground. Yet the Federal Convention, at which the American Government was founded was a completely underground convention—hidden from the masses. Utmost secrecy characterized the sessions which were held behind closed doors. The delegates were not allowed to communicate with anyone outside. No one could make any copy from the record without special permission from the body. These steps were taken in order to facilitate realization of the aims of the Convention—a strongly centralized government possessing great immunity from change.

A reading of the proceedings, which were not made public until fifty years after the Convention, will disillusion anyone as to the faith that body had in the masses. Such honest spokesmen for popular rule as Paine and Jefferson were not to be found in that gathering.

Delegate Elbridge Gerry, late Vice-President, saw in democracy the worst of all political evils. He realized, however, that it was unwise to make public such sentiments.

This "Father" of our country believed "that the people should at least appoint one branch of the government in order to inspire them with the necessary confidence."

HARTFORD, Conn.—The faculty of the Yale university law school, in a letter to a committee of the Connecticut legislature, has protested against the passage of a so-called anti-Communist bill.

Unity of All Workers in Red Saxony Forced by Masses Over Heads of Reactionary Officials

By LUDWIG LORE

In the world of proletarian politics there is nothing more significant and more hopeful than the events that have just transpired in Saxony. For many decades Saxony has been the stronghold of the German Social-Democracy. At one time, when the socialist movement of Germany was at its height this sturdy province elected 22 out of 23 social-democratic candidates to the Reichstag.

During the war the Leipziger Volkszeitung, the leading organ of the social-democratic papers, was one of the most fearless and determined newspapers in Germany. It supported the position of the internationalist Socialists and stood, in Germany with Haase, Ledebour and Kautsky. When the war was over and the question of war and peace was overshadowed by the struggle for or against the revolutionary action, the Leipziger Volkszeitung became the organ of the independent Social-Democracy with all its uncertainty and vastillations. Last year, when the unity between the Independents and the Social-Democracy of Germany took place, the Saxon movement became a part of the new United Social-Democratic Party of Germany.

The strong socialist movement of Saxony finally formed a government. But it held its power by virtue of so small a majority that it depended upon the support of the small communist delegation in the Diet. On the one hand every attempt at even a modest fulfillment of its duty to the class that had elected it, aroused the resentment of the capitalist representatives. On the other hand the lot of the Saxon worker went from bad to worse with such catastrophal rapidity that even the most conservative workingman began to see the futility of social-democratic reform in a capitalist Germany. Moreover, the extreme consideration shown by the Government toward its most dangerous nationalist and monarchist elements, and the vigor and ruthlessness with which it persecuted communist activities added to this resentment.

The result was the overthrow of the Saxon Government by a vote of lack of confidence moved by the Communists in the Diet. A campaign of vilification and calumny by the social-democratic press and party-leaders against the Communists followed. They claimed that this overthrow of the socialist government was a betrayal of the working-class interests.

The leadership of the United Social-Democracy immediately addressed itself to the new conditions and made overtures to the Democratic Party as well as to the more conservative and reactionary Deutsche Volkspartei, with the intention of forming a coalition ministry. The Communists however, carried their fight to the masses. All over Saxony hundreds of meetings were held in which representatives of the Communist Party of Germany presented their position and called upon organized Social-Democrats to force their leaders into a united front for the establishment of a Labor Government. At a convention of the U. S. D. P. of Saxony the formation of the new government was the only order of business. The National Executive Committee sent one of its strongest men, Dittmann, from Berlin to recommend a coalition with the Democrats. He spoke for more than two hours and used his oratory to prove the impossibility of working together with the Communists who could not be trusted. The Executive Committee of the Saxon USDP. submitted a strong resolution favoring the same course. All leaders of prominence in the Saxon social-democratic movement supported this convention. During the two weeks previous to the convention the Leipziger Volkszeitung had published a mass of calumnious and abusive material against the Communists in an attempt to create an atmosphere that would make a socialist-communist combination impossible.

In spite of all this vigorous propaganda, the officialdom met with a disastrous defeat at the convention. It is noteworthy that the plain and unknown workingman-delegates who carried through this opposition, acted consciously against their leaders, who had possessed for so many years their full confidence. The convention voted by an almost two-third majority, against any coalition with any capitalist party; to continue negotiations with the Communists and finally by a giant majority, to charge the Executive Committee by electing a special committee for the purpose of supervising negotiations.

The two parties have come to an agreement upon the following basis:

1) Full amnesty shall be granted for all acts committed under stress of need. All political prisoners with the exclusion of the counter-revolutionists will also be pardoned.

2) Proletarian organs and bodies shall be created which will place the fight against profiteering directly in the hands of the revolutionary working-class with the full co-operation of the Government, these bodies to be elected in united shop delegate or trade union meetings.

3) The Government shall be held to create a Chamber of Labor whose function shall be the supervision and recommendation of all kinds of labor legislation as well as the control of their enforcement.

4) An effective struggle against Fascism, i. e., the monarchistic, nationalistic propaganda and its militaristic organizations shall be inaugurated by the creation of militant working-class defense units.

These demands are in their very essence the negation of the social-democratic policies as practiced by its politicians in these years of ministerial activities. Hitherto they have organized, the masses have followed and the omnipotent gentlemen find themselves in the uncomfortable position of having to take their orders from and to adopt their policies to the instructions of the working masses. Over the heads of the social-democratic leaders the united front has become a fact. The united front movement, whose significance and purport is still so little understood, in Germany and elsewhere, has won a signal victory and has brought the almost hopeless German labor movement to the threshold of what may become a new era.

The Saxon situation has already left its mark upon the movement in other parts of Germany. At a recent convention of the Shop Committees of the Rhine district, representing nearly one-sixth of the working class and women of that district, who had directly elected these delegates in their shop meetings, resolutions commending the action of the Saxon workers and their program were unanimously adopted. This congress contained a two-third communist majority and of a strong social democratic minority which was in full accord with the above position. The social-democratic unit in the convention adopted a separate resolution in which they called upon the Social-Democrats of Saxony to bend every energy toward the successful carrying out of the above mentioned working-class program that has been adopted.

In Germany, the united front is becoming a living factor. May it long be the German working-class out of the slough of despond into the land of promise.

The Kaiser's Mr. Burns

Detective Agency Organized Spy Service in United States for German Imperial Government

By ROBERT MINOR, in the May "Liberator"

This story was to be told at a mass meeting in the City of Washington on the evening of April the 8th. It had been announced that the occasion would be used for a revelation of facts showing that the William J. Burns detective agency had organized an espionage service in the United States for the benefit of the German Imperial Government. Shortly after this announcement the owners of the hall, under some unexplained influence, withdrew the hall from use, and the meeting had to be cancelled. On the scheduled night a body of Department of Justice agents under Burns' official control, appeared at the hall and arrested seventeen men who came to attend the meeting unaware that it had been cancelled. The Washington office of the Labor Defense Council, under whose auspices the gathering was to be held, was simultaneously raided and its secretary arrested. In this article I give the facts which I intended to reveal at the meeting which Burns suppressed.

Practically every essential point in the following account is taken from testimony given under oath by detectives who at the time of the acts were employed in the acts by the Burns agency. A great deal of this testimony has been contradicted by other Burns detectives equally under oath, and, therefore the question may be raised, which set of Burns' men was lying. But the testimony which I quote here can be disbelieved only on the theory that Mr. Burns has the habit of accumulating on his staff a most extraordinary lot of perjurers. I tell the story with the stipulation that those portions which are supported only by the oaths of Burns detectives are to be taken only with such

The substance is that the William J. Burns International Detective Agency organized an espionage service in the United States for the German Imperial Government during the World War. This spy service was organized previously to the entry of the United States into the war; and it was used by the Burns' agency in co-operation with the German Government spies to supply the German Government with false evidence to be used by Count Bernstorff against the United States Government, to show that American neutrality was being violated in favor of Great Britain.

The Burns agency placed "guards" in American munition plants who delivered reports on the production of war materials, and Burns' agency in turn reported to the agents of the German government.

Burns' agents further provided means of fraudulently obtaining United States Army uniforms to be [illegible] for the purpose of securing information for the benefit of the German Government.

The Burns agency and William J Burns individually, attempted to get his London manager to smuggle a German agent under a false passport into England during the war, and the London manager, becoming frightened lest he be shot as a spy, resigned from the Burns agency.

In the beginning of 1915 had begun the period of submarine warfare which was soon to culminate in the sinking of the Lusitania. Von Bernstorff in Washington was using every possible means to arouse enmity between the Allies and the United States, and to arouse public belief that the American Government was unfairly favoring the Allied cause, for which American manufacturers were supplying large quantities of munitions.

To ferret out all possible secrets of munitions manufacture in the United States, and at the same time to keep the American people's faith in the German Government while the ships carrying the munitions were torpedoed, were the two imperative tasks that von Bernstorff had to accomplish. The William J. Burns International Detective Agency hired itself out for both these jobs, if we are to believe Burns' ex-employees.

The job of supplying von Bernstorff with material for diplomatic use against the United States Government was what is known as a "frame-up" job. The work required as its first step the tricking of tugboat captains into signing false affidavits to the effect that they had carried supplies to the British warships out of New York harbor. The trick was played in this way: the tug-boat captains were offered con-

Grill Morrow, Spy, in Trial at Michigan

By JAY LOVESTONE

(Special Wire to "The Worker")

COURT ROOM, ST. JOSEPH, Mich.—Francis Morrow, Govern[illegible] is having a hard time ex[illegible] discrepancies between his [illegible] in the Foster case and that [illegible] the witness stand against [illegible].

[illegible] Walsh asked [illegible] been an offi[illegible] and Re[illegible] [illegible] Morrow had signed as treas[illegible].

In giving his testimony against Ruthenberg, Morrow tried to avoid the pitfall of the Foster case and admitted having held some sort of official position. He was then asked by Walsh whether he had not denied this in the Foster case and found himself in a tight corner, in spite of his effort to correct his previous mistake.

Morrow denied on cross examination by Walsh that the question whether the Communist Party should become an open party by merging into the Workers Party was an issue in the Party before the Bridgman Convention. Later he was shown by his own notes that the caucus of which he was a member during the convention had adopted a certain position on that question.

Much time was taken up by the reading of the 1921 program of the Communist Party, on which the prosecution bases its chief hope for a conviction. It was noticed that the farmers on the jury were particularly interested when the section of the program calling upon the working farmers to join with the city workers in the struggle against capitalist exploitation and oppression was read.

The section of the program which declares that the class-struggle will inevitably develop into a struggle of armed force and pledges the Communist Party to the task of educating the workers to an understanding of this fact particularly stressed by the prosecution in reading the program. The language of the program, however, seems to easily come within the interpretation that it is a historical forecast and not an advocacy of acts of "crime, sabotage, violence or unlawful acts of terrorism," prohibited by the Michigan law.

In the Foster case Judge White ruled that the state must prove advocacy of acts of crime, sabotage, violence or unlawful methods of terrorism and that a merely historical forecast that violence ensue in the working out of social forces was not a violation of the law.

It was a curious fact of Morrow's testimony, covering the testimony of Morrow regarding the convention itself, that he could only testify that Ruthenberg attended the convention and was at the opening a member of the Central Executive Committee of the Communist Party and that he was re-elected at the close of the convention. So far as any part which Ruthenberg took in the Convention proceedings, Morrow was evidently unable to give any information.

Sinclair and Pepper Discuss Workers Party

Upton Sinclair, author of "The Goose-Step," "The Brass Check" and other books of militant nature, has written the editor of "The Worker", declaring he is in favor of admitting the Workers Party to the united political front of labor as it is developing thru the organization of the Labor Party. But at the same time, Sinclair, who is still a member of the Socialist Party, discusses the general political outlook for labor, including the tactics of the Workers Party.

This letter will be published in next week's issue of "The Worker," with a reply by John Pepper. This reply gives the Workers Party position on the questions raised by Sinclair. This issue of "The Worker" should therefore receive a wide circulation among radical workers whose views on labor's political struggle are still a little hazy. Order a bundle for distribution in your shop or neighborhood, at 3 cents per copy. Address: "The Worker," Room 405, 799 Broadway, New York.

I. W. W. Ask Increase of Wages and Release of Class War Prisoners

A strike for the release of their class war prisoners, combined with a wage demand of $20 per month, was called by the Marine Transport Workers' Union, of the I. W. W., Wednesday, April 25. It is expected that by May first the movement will have taken on a national character extending to all ports on both coasts of the United States. The movement began at the port of Seattle, April 23, and up to Wednesday the New York headquarters of the I. W. W. received telegrams from Boston, Philadelphia, Portland, Ore., Baltimore, New Orleans and San Francisco telling of the participation of all classes of seamen and harbor workers.

A Call for the Celebration of First of May

ISSUED BY THE MAY DAY UNITED FRONT CONFERENCE, NEW YORK CITY

WORKERS! COMRADES!

The First of May is the annual holiday of the working class the world over. On that day the working class demonstrates its solidarity, power and readiness to bring the struggle against capitalism to a final conclusion. Together with the workers of the world, the workers of New York City will celebrate the International Proletarian Holiday under the banner of proletarian solidarity and proletarian struggle. They will leave the shops and factories, throw off their every-day cares and worries, and with devotion and enthusiasm demonstrate their uncompromising antagonism to the Capitalistic order of society. This May Day celebration is to be a demonstration of united proletarian power. The May Day United Front Conference, under whose banner and leadership the working men and working women of New York City will demonstrate their power, has done all it could to have all labor organizations of the city participate in the May Day celebrations of this year. Our conference has invited every labor organization of the city, regardless of their political affiliations and sympathies. We have also invited the May Day conference, called by the United Hebrew Trades, a body known to the workers of this city for its hostility and opposition to every true proletarian action. We have done this in order to make this celebration the affair of the entire working class of the city. For the sake of those workers who are still following the lead of the United Hebrew Trades, we have put aside the dignity of our own organization and have twice extended our invitation to the United Hebrew Trades. They have refused, their excuse being that the May Day United Front Conference is made up of scab-unions and splitters of the labor movement. And under the cloak of this flimsy and hypocritical excuse, they have attempted to frustrate our desire for a United Proletarian Front on the First of May. Instead of joining their forces with ours, they have seen fit to break the proletarian ranks; instead of participating in a Proletarian May Day Celebration against Capitalism and Capitalistic rule, they are preparing a demonstration against the Soviet Government of Russia and against all the militant and struggling elements in the Labor Movement of the world. They are transforming the Red Proletarian Holiday into a demonstration of black reaction.

And yet the celebration of the First of May will be participated in by the entire working-class of the City, despite the dark conspiracies of the reactionary Labor leaders. Even those workers, who have not yet understood the true nature of their present leaders, will on the First of May realize their kinship with the Great Proletarian family, and together with us leave their shops, don their best clothes, and with enthusiasm and devotion demonstrate the power of the working class and its readiness to destroy the rule of Capitalism.

Down tools! Join in the May Day celebrations arranged by the May Day United Front Conference!

Demonstrate your will to strength-on your economic organizations thru the amalgamation of your craft unions into powerful industrial unions!

Demand and fight in your organizations for the formation of an independent political party of the working class—a Labor Party!

Demand the release of the political and class war prisoners, and demonstrate your readiness to fight the armed Capitalist counter-revolution—the Fascisti!

Mobilize your forces for the final struggle to establish a working-class Government.

Hail the Proletarian Solidarity!

Hail the May-Day United Front Conference!

Rose Pastor Stokes Has Big Meeting for the Michigan Defense

NEW HAVEN, CONN. — Rose Pastor Stokes opened her tour of the Eastern states here on the Michigan Defense meetings on Saturday, April 21st, and drew a crowd that filled the Trades Council Hall. A collection of $60 was taken up for the defense.

Mrs. Stokes will speak on "Communist Defense in Michigan" at the following places: Pittsburg, Mass., May 6th; Gardner, Mass., 7th; Lynn, Mass., 9th; Lawrence, Mass., 10th; W. Concord, N. H., 11th; Springfield, Mass., 12th; New Bedford, 14th.

tracts at $140 a month, but were obliged, in order to get the money, to sign a long contract form in which was a peculiar "previous experience" clause which specified that the applicant had previously carried supplies to the British warships outside New York harbor.

Thru a man calling himself "Captain Wilkes," Burns' staff succeeded in hiring "for the British Government" five tug-boat captains, five engineers, five cooks and five tugboat crews.

One set of Burns' men was to induce these men to load their boats, in the belief they had been hired by British officers, and to set out to sea toward the British fleet. Then another set of Burns' men would "catch" them in the act, and would be able to show sworn statements signed by these men to prove that they had previously done the same thing. It is the most classic example of the "frame-up" a name known to be the practice of the Burns agency. But it was not publicly known at the time that the job was done by Burns.

But to go back to the story as it developed. One day in March, 1915, a tug-boat captain strayed into the Neutrality Bureau and carelessly exhibited what purported to be a contract. Secret Service agents got it out of his possession, made a copy of it and returned it before the captain missed it. In studying this strange "contract," the officials were puzzled to see that it did not require the employer to do anything. Most remarkable of all was the fact that a part of the document was sworn in affidavit form. This part of the contract read:

"..... being duly sworn, deposes and says: I am a licensed pilot and captain, and while on the boat Peerless, in the month of February, 1915, I delivered supplies to the British cruiser Essex and a converted merchant ship carrying guns and flying the British flag several miles off Sandy Hook. I am willing to make similar deliveries for $140 a month in advance."

At first the U. S. authorities thought they had uncovered a real British plot to break neutrality laws. Shortly after this a proprietor of steam lighters reported to the neutrality bureau that someone had offered to hire some of his boats to carry provisions to the British navy. But, As a result of this report a United States secret service agent (I think his name was Burke or Rourke) trailed a suspect into the Great Eastern Hotel near the Battery in New York, and there discovered the Burns nest of spies.

There it was discovered that Burns' agents had rented a whole floor of the hotel from which the spy system was operating. The place was conducted by Paul Koenig, secret service agent for the German Government, together with "Pop" Gager, a Burns detective (who impersonated a British colonel while carrying the German government and Gaston M. Means, the superintendent of the William J. Burns "International Detective Agency. Means was impersonating a wealthy American, supposed to come from a Western state. Another Burns "under-cover man" named Hurst was impersonating a prominent attorney of the West.

Gaston B. Means, superintendent of the Burns agency, becoming suspicious that the "underground" nest in the Great Eastern Hotel had been discovered by Government agents, went to some of the United States authorities and attempted to sell them out with cautious questions. Getting no information out of the officials, Means tried to win their confidence with a fantastic and entirely fictitious story about "a rich Canadian" who wanted to blow up the German ship "Vaterland" in New York harbor. Means said that the only way he could persuade the Canadian not to commit the deed of violence was to prove to the Canadian that his own nation, the British, was violating the United States neutrality laws. So he asked the United States authorities to give him information of British violations of neutrality so that he could persuade the rich Canadian to "lay off" of his plan to blow up the "Vaterland" in New York harbor.

Means refused to tell the authorities the name of the "rich Canadian." Of course the tale was so idiotic that the United States officials rejected it with contempt.

Very soon the United States authorities discovered that their operations were being shadowed by Burns' operatives. They immediately threw another line of "shadow" men to watch Burns' operatives who were shadowing the first corps of Government men engaged in watching the Burns "underground." So there were four lines of detectives, "each watching the other."

Another instalment of these revelations will appear in next week's issue of "The Worker."

Only Property Holders Picked as Jurors in Ruthenberg Trial

By THOMAS J. O'FLAHERTY
(Special to "The Worker")

ST. JOSEPH, Mich.—The big surprise of the selection of the jury to hear the testimony and return a verdict in the trial of C. E. Ruthenberg, charged with the murder of Rose Langer, lawyer of this city, was the announcement that citizens can qualify to sit as a juror unless that citizen is a property owner. This resulted in the removal of Roy Albert, boot factory worker, from the jury, the only proletarian factor in the panel called to give a fair and impartial trial to C. E. Ruthenberg, also a proletarian worker. Mr. Albert owns a house which happens to be in his wife's name, but because his name is not on the assessment roll, he was considered unqualified.

Taken in connection with the peremptory challenge by the state of the only union man on the jury list, our readers can draw their own conclusions, regardless of the fairness of the judge, as to the handicap under which C. E. Ruthenberg suffers in facing twelve men who must necessarily possess property and are presumably in favor of a system of which the private ownership of socially essential property is the cornerstone.

All the claims made by the prosecution, that all are equal under the laws of this country and the state, sound hollow and meaningless in the face of this evidence that a working-man without property is not qualified to sit in judgment of his fellowman regardless of personal character, provided he is not endowed with wealth in the form of property and pays taxes.

Henry E. Gillette, of Benton Harbor, was excused because of defective hearing, and a Mr. Bricken for prejudice. During his examination by Attorney Gore, Mr. Gillette admitted that a certain person who had a conversation with him caused Gillette to ask some questions as to whether Ruthenberg was a citizen or was arrested for opposing the war. In spite of his efforts to be fair it was clear that he was prejudiced. While this incident was being thrashed out the stool pigeons, male and female, appeared very interested.

It might be remarked here, that Mrs. Morrow wears a dress in the court room which rendered service during the Foster trial. She sits in a strategic position in full view of the jury. Without going into descriptive details it may be said to be more fitting for a ballroom floor than a court room. Several gold teeth, glittering wrist-watch and several rings testify to the wizardry with which a dollar-a-day fink injected luxury into his household economy.

Nine Farmers, no Women on the Ruthenberg Jury

(Special to "The Worker")

ST. JOSEPH, Mich.—The jury that is hearing the evidence in the trial of C. E. Ruthenberg contains nine farmers. It is as follows:

Albert M. Stevens, Chikaming; farmer.
Roy Peters, Chikaming; farmer.
Frank Wm. Wells, Benton Harbor; oil company.
Frank Stauker, Lincoln farmer.
Henry Gelster, St. Joseph; Standard Oil employe.
John Bader, Royalton; farmer.
Fred Schooley, Three Oaks; farmer.
Thomas R. Smith, St. Joseph township; farmer.
Albert Bricken, Chikaming; farmer.

May Day, 1886-1923

By EARL R. BROWDER,
Associate Editor, The Labor Herald

Three decades ago the First of May became the holiday of Labor. It was born at the launching of the great campaign for the 8-hour day, in 1886, which began in America with the first general strike in the history of Labor.

Under the influence of the growing and expanding capitalist system, which in Europe was in its prime and in America was preparing for the great strides forward which placed American capitalism in the lead of the world finally cut off by wadding clothes at that time and entered the field of struggle as a definitely independent social factor on a world wide scale.

What had before been but the aspiration of idealists, or the prediction of social scientists, became the actual fact. May Day ushered in the consciously international movement of Labor towards taking possession of the world.

The great 8-hour movement was Labor's first large-scale offensive against capitalism. It began in America with the heroic struggle carried on by the Knights of Labor and the American Federation, under the leadership of the early militants. The bitterest struggle which this fight was waged is shown in the Haymarket tragedy, which was made the pretext for the hanging of five labor leaders in Chicago. From America the fight for the 8-hour day quickly spread to Europe. There the First of May was adopted, and made the occasion of great demonstrations. May Day became the holiday for Labor all over the world.

The world has witnessed tremendous changes since those early days. The American labor movement has dropped from its place in the very forefront of the international movement, symbolized by the American origin of the May Day as Labor's holiday, and is now the most backward. The degradation of its leadership, Gompers' bureaucracy, is glaringly shown by Gompers taking on the role of capitalist protector, issuing warnings of the "red menace" on May Day, instead of calling the labor movement to battle with capitalism. And the foremost place in the labor movement is now taken by a working class which a few years ago was looked upon as the most backward of any capitalist country, the working class of Russia.

When May Day first became the day of Labor, the capitalist system was fairly confident of itself, and was reaching out to gobble up the world. Today capitalism is dying. Thruout the capitalist world production is declining, national conflicts are raging with more intense bitterness, and the workers of Europe are already starving to death. Capitalism is bankrupt in Europe. It is bankrupt. And Labor is faced with the necessity of destroying the wrecked remains of the old system, and setting up the new World of Labor.

The day of Labor is dawning: the day of Capitalism is done. But the shattered forces of the old system of capitalism are struggling to save ravishing the world, feeding upon the wreckage of their own system and the life blood of the workers.

Labor must assert its power, must take charge of the machinery of production, must establish a Labor Government, must remake the world Labor must deal, once and for all with the remains of the wrecked capitalist system. To fulfil this task, Labor must call upon all the strength, all the courage all the heroism which has been developed in the long years of struggle.

On this May Day let us therefore renew the great struggles of the past, let us honor the great fighters for Labor, let us review the forces of our movement, and call forth new leaders, new heroes, and a new militant spirit in Labor. Let us greet the leaders of the world's working class, the First Workers' Republic the Soviet Government of Russia. Let this be a day of preparation for a forward movement of all of Labor, toward the not-distant time when Labor, strong with the vision of the new society, shall take power.

The Soviet Government and Religion

Statement of the Official Soviet Representative in Great Britain

In view of the absurd stories at present being circulated concerning the attitude of the Russian Government towards religion, it is as well briefly to state what are its basic principles.

The church is entirely separated from and independent of the State. The churches are open and religious instruction is permitted in the schools, and, like all other forms of private schools, church schools or classes are not allowed. Religious processions are permitted.

Freedom of anti-religious as well as religious propaganda exists, and this took the form at Christmas of demonstrations and pageants by the Young Communists' League, to show the essential identity of all religions, in their opinion, and particularly what they considered to be the connection of most of the essential features of the Christian religion with those of preceding religions. No obscene or offensive language or scenes were permitted, despite the assertions of the press here.

The Official Soviet Representative desires to emphasize that these were demonstrations undertaken by private organizations, not Government, in virtue of the full freedom of opinion existing in such matters.

American Legion Seeks "Big Biz" Support

CHICAGO—The American Legion is appealing for support of business men of the country on the ground that it is the only effective fighting organization against the radicals, according to Commander Owsley of the legion, speaking to a large meeting of the combined business men's organizations of Chicago. After declaring that radicals of all kind should be deported, the national chief of the legion modestly continued:

"The only organized move made so far against them, as far as I can find, is the American Legion, and it is up to the business men to get behind our ex-service men and keep them welded into an army fighting to protect our ideals in peace as they fought for them in time of war."

16,000 Quit, Organize at McKeesport

McKEESPORT, PA.—An unexpected upheaval in the tin-plate mills has produced a startling situation in the labor movement here. Sixteen thousand employees of the McKeesport tin-plate mill walked out on a strike demanding 20 per cent increase in wages. They really did not know what they wanted to do.

Some of them formed a committee and started for Warren, Ohio, where the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers was in Convention. As a result the organization dispatched Organizer McGinley to McKeesport to organize the men. Meetings were held for several days in the Workers Party, Finnish Hall at Glassport until the police of that town notified the owners of the building that they would not be permitted to hold any more union meetings. Upon the advice of those conducting the organization campaign the strikers have all returned to their jobs to carry on organization work openly within the mill. The company seems to be frustrated by these tactics.

Temporarily meetings have been stopped because of the action of the police. But undoubtedly ways will be found to hold further meetings and continue the organization. The police of McKeesport are extremely hostile to the organization campaign, because the Mayor of McKeesport, Lyle, is directly connected with the tin plate company. He is an intolerant opponent of union labor and was at the time of the steel strike. The Amalgamated is committed to an organization campaign around McKeesport and will receive the support of all those interested in organizing the industry.

Union Head Nails Lie of Plute Press

BELLAIRE, OHIO.—The capitalist daily press of Wheeling, W. Va., and Bellaire, Ohio, has been reporting the organization of an effort to disrupt the defense arranged for John Buksa, a miner who was arrested in Wheeling on March 9, for distributing the program of the Workers Party and charged with treason and also the "distribution of seditious literature."

A defense committee was organized for Buksa and funds collected for legal defense. Soon after the drive for defense started the daily papers of this vicinity began their attacks and among other things published the report that Robert Farmer, vice president of Sub-District No. 5, United Mine Workers, had repudiated the defense committee. Since Buksa is a member of Yorkville, Ohio, local of the U. M. W. of A., this report was deeply resented in the sub-district and resolutions condemning Farmer for his statements as reported in the press were adopted and sent to him. In a letter to one of the locals adopting resolutions of condemnation of his alleged statements, Farmer categorically denied ever having made such charges, and asserted that he would assist the defense.

The whole affair is merely a contemptible trick of the plute press to help the employers railroad a valiant worker for the cause of the working class to jail without a chance for competent legal defense, but the trick has been exposed and the miners are solidly behind the defense in this case.

Workers of Brooklyn to be Told Treason of Call and Forward

The facts in the slander of Soviet Russia by the New York Call and the Forward, in alliance with the capitalist press, will be laid before the workers of Brooklyn, at a meeting to be held this Friday night, April 27, 8 p. m., at the New Plaza Hall, 127 Havemeyer St., corner Grand. Among the speakers will be J. Louis Engdahl, in English; Alexander Chramoff, in Russian; Alexander Bittelman, in Jewish, and A. Bimbo, in Lithuanian. Margaret Undjus will act as chairman.

Priests Shrieking Demand for an Allied Inquisition Against Russian Soviet Republic

By H. M. WICKS

CARDINAL MERCIER, who has written a book on "Ethics," official publication of the Knights of Columbus, declares that the League of Nations should start an international crusade against the Russian Soviets "to wage war against them with fire, Mercier implores the League of Nations to throttle the Bolshevik government. To support his demand, he asserts that unless the World War moved down 10,000,000 of human lives, the Bolshevik-baiting League has sacrificed from 20,000,000 to 30,000,000. Not even the Bolshevik-baiting London Times has had the effrontery to publish any such absurd figures as this.

Being a man of God, Cardinal Mercier would not presume to recommend the exact method of defeating Bolshevism: "It is not for me to suggest the means whereby the Red bands shall be disarmed and the legion of honor recruited which shall undertake the magnificent task of pacifying Russia."

Since Mercier is a subject of His Majesty, Albert, king of the Belgians, and a loyal patriot, he might request the advice of that bloody monarch. Belgium for a long time has been engaged in the business of establishing our "age-old civilization" among the slaves of the Congo. There the natives admire the civilization of the Belgians so much that they sometimes die of fear when a detachment of soldiers under the Belgian flag approaches.

Mercier also defended his brand of civilization so well he became a prominent figure in the World War because of his crusade in the interest of the Allied cause. The civilization so gloriously defended by the Belgian king and his cardinal at that time was the imperialism of Britain and France. And it was Mercier of the Roman Catholic church, along with the Social-Patriot, Vandervelde, who assisted in making possible the slaughter of the people of Belgium at the behest of King Albert, the hireling of Britain. When the real history of the World War has been written, Albert, King of the Belgians, and the whole crew of those who supported him will be pilloried among the most loathsome criminals in all the history of the world. Albert, assisted by such creatures as Mercier and Vandervelde, deliberately sent thousands upon thousands of Belgian workers into the slaughter house, not in defense of Belgium but in defense of the imperialistic aims of Britain and France. This is the glorious civilization of Cardinal Mercier. The 12,000,000 dead in the imperialist slaughter is so colossal that the apologists of imperialism responsible for these mountains of dead agree with Mercier that unless those revolutionists in Russia who have decreed war to the bitter end against the so-called civilization that has produced unprecedented butchery of human beings.

Why This Outburst?

The reason for this latest outburst of fury from the lips of Mercier was the partial execution of another hireling of Allied Imperialism, Monsignor Constantine Butchkavitch, who was contributing his bit to civilization by helping the reactionary Polish government in its frantic efforts to destroy the Workers' Government of Russia and establish the capitalist system in White Terror, wherein millions of workers would fall before the firing squads of the Allied nations.

The execution of this degenerate priest is used as a pretext for the launching of an international drive against Soviet Russia. The tom-toms of religious fanaticism are worked overtime in an effort to mobilize all the forces of bigotry and ignorance into an international crusade against Russia. The fact that Butchkavitch was a priest was only incidental. He was not executed because he was a priest, but because he was caught red handed in a conspiracy engineered from Poland for the purpose of drowning the revolution of the workers of Russia in their own blood. That, and that alone, was the reason he was executed for.

Mercier and those he serves do not care anything about the life of this one priest; as they would gladly sacrifice millions of lives if only they could extirpate from the earth the triumphant working class of Russia. The government of Russia is educating the masses of men, women and children, so that they no longer believe in the organized superstition known as religion. Superstition in Russia must stand on its own feet and must face the blazing light of criticism. Science, untrammeled with any concessions to ignorance, is taught in all schools in Russia. Enlightenment is the one crime that the Roman Catholic Church can not tolerate. Therefore its priests shriek for the Allies to invoke the Inquisition against Russia.

Mercier, hireling of the King of the Belgians and emissary of the Pope of Rome, speaks of the defense of civilization. The papacy and civilization! The Roman oligarchy and liberty! How incongruous the juxtaposition! The whole history of the Church of Rome is a history of crimes against enlightenment and progress. When that institution can remove from the pages of history its record of a thousand years Dark Ages, when people forget that these apostles of darkness burned at the stake hundreds of thousands of people who tried to think for themselves during the ten centuries of the dark night of history when Catholicism was supreme, when the Cardinals can efface from the record of history their butchery of Giordano Bruno in the Flower Market before the Vatican at Rome in 1600, and the murder of Francisco Ferrer in Spain in this century (1909) they may then deserve consideration when they speak of defending the glories of civilization.

But so far the history of this infamous institution has been a history of opposition to every step in advance taken by humanity since the Council of Nice in the year 325, A. D. The dungeon, the stake and the rack have been the instruments of Roman Catholic civilization. When this sanguinous institution ruled the civilized world multitudes languished in its foul dungeons, the shrieks of victims of its rule reechoed day and night thruout all Christendom and public auto-da-fes were events of daily occurrence.

When that church rose to power its first act was to destroy the enlightenment that was the glory of Ancient Greece. Every library was pillaged or burned, intelligence was stamped out as a virtue. The torch of human knowledge never burned so low as during the rule of this institution whose greatest achievement was the Inquisition—that frightful monument of murderous superstition.

Today the palsied hand of this institution still reaches forth to clutch the throat of the working class of Russia and perpetuate imperialism in the world, just as it has always endeavored to stem the tide of human progress. But, thanks to a general intellectual development that has enabled humanity to grow beyond the superstition of Romanism, this hand has very little power today and it must content itself with merely reviling that which it once would have crushed to death in its dungeons, or burned to death in a public market place.

A Funny Story—But a Sad One

Luck is very much against the Jewish Daily Forward. If the spectacle of a tremendously rich and conscienceless sheet peddling sensational counter-revolutionary lies in the name of "Socialism" were not so sad, what has happened would be funny.

Now, the correspondent of the New York Herald, McCullagh, had to leave Russia because the Soviet Government refused to renew his permit. So he went to Warsaw to write Russian news. In his correspondence, of course, he said nothing about having HAD to leave Russia, claiming instead that he left of his own free will to write uncensored stories. However that may be, suffice it that the HERALD soon began to run a series of articles as viciously anti-Russian as if this were 1918 and the public still amenable to concoctions of the nationalistic women variety.

There was jubilation in certain "Socialist" editorial sanctums. For instance, in the New York Call which printed the first instalment on its front page by special arrangement with the Herald. Overnight, however, this worthy sheet saw that it had gone "too far". The articles were discontinued and an apology for using the first part was printed. But the Forward hates Russia so intensely that it could not swallow the Call's example. It continued to print the McCullagh correspondence from day to day.

Then the tragic comedy arose. McCullagh, quite unaware that a Jewish "Socialist" paper was spreading his "news" on its front pages, swerved from an attack on Russia to an attack specifically against Russian Jews. In a long correspondence brimming with colossal absurdities he told melodramatically of a Jewish plot to capture the Government in a manner by no means complimentary to the Jews.

Now what is the Jewish Forward to do? Shall it suddenly discontinue the articles? Shall it reconcile its readers by branding this fairy tale as a lie when it has played up the others as unadulterated Mosaic truth?

Such a dilemma! Kind-hearted persons may suggest directly to the FORWARD what to do in this sad plight. . . .

FINDS RUSSIA MUCH BETTER OFF

"Russia is better off economically than any other nation in Europe."

This view was expressed recently by Dr. A. Bogen, of the Joint Distribution Relief Committee, returning from an extented visit into Soviet Russia. He arrived on the Majestic.

"Russia is rapidly emerging from its terrible famine," he continued. "The Soviet Government is taking care of 1,000,000 orphans now. The universities at Moscow have no less than 40,000 students. Russia of today cannot be compared with the Russia of ten months ago. Disease, which was once rampant, is now practically erased."

Foster Tells of Lost Job in Florida

On one occasion, when he was twenty years old, William Z. Foster was working as assistant superintendent of a fertilization plant in Jacksonville, Fla. He had gone South riding the brake beams. Having worked in fertilizer plants in the North, and picked up some technical knowledge of the business, he made good with his employers, and was offered the job as superintendent. But it went against his grain, he says, to see the negro workers driven as they were, and he resigned. His employers urged him to remain, and he did so, hesitating for several weeks. Finally, however, he told them he couldn't stay because he didn't like the way they treated their men. "Then," he added, with a grin, "I didn't have any more trouble about quitting."

A rousing welcome has been arranged for William Z. Foster, to be held on Friday evening, May 4th at Webster Hall, 119 E. 11th St. Those who want to hear the full details of the Foster trial by Foster himself, and who want to have an opportunity to hear Foster at his first appearance in New York since the trial will have an opportunity to do so.

Foster To Speak in Boston

Knowing the influence of William Z. Foster among working men, the Boston Labor Defense Council has arranged a meeting for him on May 13, Sunday night at 8 P. M. in Scenic Auditorium, Warren and Berkley Streets, Boston, Mass.

This will follow up the meeting last Sunday at which Caleb Harrison co-defendant in the Michigan case discussed the relationship between the case and the general condition of the working class in this country and abroad. It was an audience of American workers that listened to an account of governmental and detective persecution of the working class last summer.

The reason why Foster was singled out is apparent, for on that same day, he will speak in Boston at the first national convention held under the auspices of the International Amalgamation Committee of the Shoe and Leather Industry.

The Labor Defense Council is confident that the Foster meeting will rally to the Michigan defendants a large part of the workers of Boston.

A Blood Relationship

U. S. Ambassador Child held a place of honor at the Fascist celebration of the 2,676th anniversary of the founding of Rome. The United States government never misses an opportunity to link itself up with the Mussolini dictatorship. They must recognize something akin to a blood relationship. Incidentally Mussolini has established April 21st as Italy's Labor Day, copying the United States' attack on International May Day that resulted in legalizing the first Monday in September as Labor Day in this country.

Tour of Eastern States Enthuses Organizer of the Trade Union Educational League

By JOSEPH MANLEY

Eastern Organizer of the Trade Union Educational League.

The rapid growth of the Trade Union Educational League and the hold which its ideas, tactics and program have taken upon the Trade Union Movement in particular, and the Labor Movement in general is nothing short of phenomenal. This idea has been impressed upon me in a thousand and one different ways, during the course of an organizing trip I am making all thru the Eastern District, the first since I have been appointed General Organizer by the Executive Board of the League.

In my former capacity of General Organizer for the International Association of Bridge, Structural and Ornamental Iron Workers, I participated in organization drives, several of which were of national significance. Such as, the Packinghouse Workers, the Steel Workers, the non-union Bridge and Structural Iron Workers, the latter campaign furnished the Lockwood Committee of New York, with the sensational data which showed the U. S. Steel and the Bethlehem Steel Corporations to be a controlling factor, in the modern building industry. These campaigns developed in me a wealth of optimism as to the organizibility of the unorganized. I had always felt, however, that the organizing of the militants would be a much slower and tedious job. This notion and feeling has gone by the boards as a result of my present experience.

The wonderful growth of the Trade Union Educational League in the Eastern District I can attest to, from first hand experience in the large cities and towns of New England. It is nothing short of startling, even to one who is more or less "hard boiled" as to his faith in correct organization principles. The rapidity with which trade union militants of varying shades of political faith, are all grasping the Trade Union Educational League program and flocking to its standard is simply beyond belief.

At the meetings of trade union militants I have so far attended in Providence, Lynn, Boston, Lawrence, Rochester, Buffalo, Scranton and Wilkesbarre the spirit of opposition to reformism, to Gompers, who knows the pain of the militant movement, its assobless and pronounced pessimism, this is a revelation. On every hand I found that the almost universal confidence in his leadership at the head of this program.

In Rochester and Buffalo I spoke to packed houses of trade union men, among whom there were many not actual members of the League, but accepting our program and were prepared to follow it. Comrade Foster's powerful analysis of the present day situation, as applied to their local problems. The ardent spirits are general readers of The Labor Herald and follow the League's latest developments closely. In short the program of the League so completely fills the bill, that it will save the trade unions from complete extermination, that every intelligent militant trade unionist is coming to accept its leadership. The speed with which this result has been accomplished, is nothing short of marvelous.

The immediate tasks the Eastern District has set out to accomplish, are the establishment of organizers for the League in all these militants in every city and town thruout this great industrial section. The purpose of the League will be, to coordinate the local activities in the various industrial sections and to link up these local activities on a District and National basis.

For this immediate task large delegations from the cities and towns included in the Eastern District from Pittsburg to New York and from Boston to Washington, have notified the Eastern District Office that they will answer the call for the District Conference, at New York City, May 6th. Delegations from the League in all these sections will be present. Such trades as Building, Railroad, Food, Textile, Needle, Printing, Leather and Shoe, Etc., will all be present. As a result, a coordinated amonthly running District organization will be created, the prime object of which will be to save the unions of this section from utter extermination; it will infuse them, thru its militants, with a spirit of solidarity, and thru amalgamation bring the separate squashbiggy unions together, laying the foundation for the eventual complete organization of the entire working class.

Plans Ready for New York FUEL Meeting

Preparations have been completed for the National Conference of the Needle Trades Section of the Trade Union Educational League to be held in the Labor Temple, 143 E. 84th St., New York City, May 5-6.

Representatives from every union of the needle trades industry will be present and definite plans will be formulated to carry forward the program of amalgamation. The International Ladies' Garment Workers, the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, the Journeymen Tailors, Custom Tailors, and the foreign language needle trades leagues will be present and participate in the deliberations.

In addition to the pressing questions of amalgamation, the report of the delegate to the last conference of the Red Trade Union International will be taken up. Also the shop delegates system will occupy a prominent place on the agenda.

William Z. Foster, secretary-treasurer of the Trade Union Educational League, will review the activities of the League in the various industries. Joseph Manley, general organizer of the League for the Eastern District, will cover the situation in the East and a special feature will be the report, of Ida Rothstein on her tour in the interest of amalgamation thruout the entire industry in the United States and Canada.

This conference will mark an epoch in the development of militant unionism in this industry, as it will be a rank and file conference for the purpose of formulating definite plans of action in order to accomplish three things: membership that which the officials of the various organizations seem unable to accomplish. It is particularly noteworthy that there will be a strong representation from the International Ladies Garment Workers, as that organization is one of the sore spots in the industry because of the reactionary officialdom that preys upon the membership and strives to keep the workers in the needle trades divided in the interest of the capitalist class.

New York Needle Workers Adopt 50 Russian Children

The United Workers Co-operative Association, formerly the Workers Unity Association, has become foster parent to fifty Russian orphans, to be cared for at a children's home in the Urals. The adoption of these young waifs was made thru the Friends of Soviet Russia, which is conducting a nationwide campaign for the relief of destitute children in the Workers Republic.

The Association whose name will be given to the new Home is composed of about forty working class girls, most of them in the needle trades and members of the International Ladies' Garment Workers Union. This is only the latest in a series of actions by the group in favor of Soviet Russia.

Recently the same organization ran a benefit performance at the Jewish Art Theatre, and the total proceeds, a net sum of $1,572.66 went towards the Orphans' Homes. Practically every one of the members of the Girls' Association is an active worker, so that in their undertakings there is no overhead whatsoever, everything being done by volunteer labor.

Among those who have been most effective in the efforts to help Russia are Lena Goldfarb, Anna Dora Brown, Sarah Shainin, Mary Owutsky and Sarah Goldberg.

INTERVIEW WITH DEBS

"What about the Foster case?" he was asked.

"I think the Foster case is settled, in my judgment it will not be tried again. To be more explicit, I think the whole proceeding was a farce. The law under which he was tried is a negation of the constitution. It is not only criminal but idiotic—enacted by a set of morons with the intention of suppressing free speech.

"The crime in connection with this case is the law itself," said Mr. Debs, referring to the Michigan criminal syndicalism law under which William Z. Foster was tried. "The law is a criminal assault upon the United States constitution," he charged.—The Wisconsin State Journal, Madison, Wisc.

Deportation for "Jim" Larkin

By JACK CARNEY

Charged with being an alien anarchist, "Jim" Larkin was recently arrested and detained on Ellis Island to await deportation. Those who know "Jim" and understand the basis of his beliefs and aspirations know full well that he is not an anarchist. Of course it is asking too much of a government official, to demand of him as to what is an anarchist.

Sam Vauclain, head of the Baldwin Locomotive Co., speaking before a gathering of business men, declared that whenever he had trouble he just threw the agitators into jail. No damn nonsense for Sam. Just clap them into jail, because Sam says so. No orderly procedure on the part of Sam.

On the other hand "Jim" Larkin organized the largest union, in comparison to the population, in the world—the Irish Transport and General Workers Union. He is the founder of the Irish Labor Party. He also organized the Irish Citizens' Army, in order to compel the employers of Ireland to respect "loran-order."

No, not Sam! It is "Jim", who is on Ellis Island, charged with being an alien anarchist.

The strange part about the whole affair is that Larkin has been continually demanding a passport and recently appeared before Secretary of Labor J. J. Davis, asking him what the government intended doing regarding the deportation orders that were being held against him. Secretary Davis, in the presence of the writer, on March 16 stated that he was unaware of any such orders, yet he signed a deportation order against Larkin on March 13, according to the capitalist press.

The whole affair has been well staged with a view to creating the impression that Larkin did not want to return. Behind it is the intriguing and the treacherous conduct of reactionary Irish-American politicians, leagued with the British government. Compelling Larkin to remain here and not wanting to bear the consequences of their act they are seeking to transfer the blame up to the shoulders of Big "Jim". They hope to discredit him, so that he will be handicapped on his return home to the scenes of former triumphs.

But keep your eye on Ireland and "Jim" Larkin!

Larkin was deported on the Majestic last Saturday.

Cutters for Amalgamation
(Special to "The Worker")

CHICAGO.—After an address by Ida Rothstein, organizer for the Needle Trades Section of the Trade Union Educational League, the Cutters' Union of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, at a well-attended meeting unanimously resolved in favor of the complete "Amalgamation" program of the T. U. E. L. The local union also adopted a resolution of thanks to Comrade Rothstein for her excellent exposition of the program.

It is significant that while the national officialdom of the I. L. G. W. U. is fighting every aspect of the T. U. E. L. program, the rank and file membership is enthusiastically supporting it everywhere.

Workers Here Protest Near East Tyranny

Because of new developments in the Near East, including the Chester Concession in Angora, Turkey, and the Second Lausanne Peace Conference, considerable interest attaches to the declaration adopted by the Near East United Front Mass Meeting held in New York City under the auspices of the Workers Party.

In addition to the two speakers in English, Captain Paxton Hibben and J. Louis Engdahl, there were addresses as follows: Tatian, in Armenian; Kordoroum, in Jugo-Slav; Manos, in Greek, and Popoff, in Bulgarian. The declaration adopted follows:

Whereas, the internal and external political policy of the governments of the Balkans has been, for the last century, under the influence of the English, French, German, Russian and Italian imperialism.

Whereas, the aggressive reciprocal attitude of Greece, Turkey, Bulgaria, Roumania and Jugo Slavia, has its background an economic reason territorial expansion for the exploitation of natural resources.

Whereas, the antagonism created by the colonial ambitions of the Big Powers, in conjunction with the traitorous policy of the internal ruling class of the Balkans, brought the masses into war in 1912, which plunged the population into an indescribable misery;

Whereas, this antagonism, coming to a climax in 1914, the Big Powers of Europe forced the Balkan States into a new war which ended with an unspeakable slaughter, misery and hunger for the masses of the Near East;

Whereas, the shameful aggressiveness exercised by the French and British imperialists in the Orient burst into a catastrophic struggle between the Turkish and Greek armies, which left hundreds of thousands of working men homeless, exposed to the most unheard of starvation in the history of the Balkan Peninsula;

Whereas, the conference of Lausanne did not remedy the situation in spite of the peaceful attitude of the Soviet Delegation, new wars being fomented in the secret rooms of the ruling class of the Balkan States;

Be it Resolved, that we workers of the Near East, assembled at this meeting, protest against the new wars planned by the Balkan governments.

We protest against the chauvinist propaganda exercised by the respective governments, which roots hatred in the hearts of the masses; We protest against the White terror of Roumania Bulgaria, Jugo Slavia, Turkey and all other Near East countries. We demand that steps be taken at once for friendly relations between the Balkan States.

The establishment of economic and diplomatic relations with the Russian Soviet Republic of workers and peasants, the only power in the world today fighting for peace.

Start Irish Magazine

CHICAGO.—A group of Irish radicals in this city are about to produce a monthly magazine with the object of bringing Irish workers whose activities are devoted to the national struggle in Ireland in touch with the progressive wing of the labor movement in America.

Among the contributors to the magazine, which will be called The Irish People, are T. J. O'Flaherty, editor, The Voice of Labor; William F. Dunne, editor, Butte Bulletin; Michael T. Berry, organizer, Allied Shoe Workers, Donagh Dwyer of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers and formerly associated with James Connolly; Michael J. Scanlan of the Street Carmen.

Keep Away from Lynn, Mass.

Trade Union Educational League Shoe Workers' Section, calls upon all Shoe Workers to ignore the "ads" in the capitalist papers and to keep away from Lynn, where a strike is conducted by the Amalgamated Shoe Workers' Union of America.

May Day—Preparedness Day

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL

Let American labor determine to make this year's May Day a "Preparedness Day" for future struggles with the bosses. There are advantages to the workers in the present industrial situation that will not exist when the coming May Day, 1924.

This May Day the bosses are hunting for workers. Increases in wages have been granted in the textile, steel, meat, building and other industries. The railroad workers, like labor elsewhere, are making new demands for more pay.

Wages are increasing slightly because industry is approaching top speed and the ships from Europe do not bring in enough surplus labor. Yet these small increases will hardly stand against the increasing cost of living under the new tariff. Living costs now stand 59.2 per cent higher than 1914, the first war year. They are going higher, not lower.

Labor must utilize this favorable industrial drift to the utmost. When workers are employed they turn to the unions, which increase in membership. Now is the time for every labor union to carry on an intensive drive for new members.

The encouraging move toward a Labor Party during these past few months is an echo of the difficult times the industrial workers and the working farmers have recently passed thru. They turned in their wrath from the industrial storm. During the few months of better times ahead, let no worker or farmer desert this struggle for the Labor Party that will be needed more than ever before another year has passed.

Most of the steel plants are approaching top speed under the direction of Charles M. Schwab, of the Bethlehem Steel Co., which should spur every steel worker to new organization efforts.

J. Ogden Armour, head of Armour & Co., which recently swallowed Morris & Co., looks to the farmers for new buyers, says, "If good crops result from the summer efforts —and good crops are the rule in this country—a continuation of good business seems a certainty", which means "good business" for the bankers, grain speculators and beef barons, if the militant farmers are not there in defense of their own interests.

James J. Davis, the banker-secretary of labor in Harding's cabinet, says that "The copper industry in April a year ago was practically closed down because of unsold stocks and poor market. Today mines, mills and smelters are busy. Production is fast approaching the best records of the war year."

Copper miners of Northern Michigan, of Montana, of Arizona, and other sections of the country! Here is a new opportunity to organize!

Secretary Davis says the same bright outlook faces the bosses seeking profits in the textile industry. We repeat that the same opportunities for organization hold true for the workers in the textile mills.

But there are signs of the coming storm. Armour says that, "stocks of manufactured products are pretty well sold down", and Davis echoes that, "there are empty shelves in the textile industry". The American industrial machine, however, is to big and efficient that it will not take long to load up again in stocks and fill the empty shelves, especially since the United States is facing a diminishing market abroad, and the purchasing power of the masses at home is limited by starvation wages. The present building boom is due to end with the passing of the summer. The fall will see the completion of reconstruction work on the railroads.

France at the throat of Germany causing industrial stagnation in the Ruhr, not only destroys the European market for the United States, but makes it progressively impossible for Europe to buy from South America, China, Japan and other countries, thus wrecking the purchasing power of these countries in the United States. It is a vicious circle that reaches around this whole bankrupt capitalist world.

Thus the present "good times" constitute only a breathing spell for labor. It is a time for preparedness for future struggles. The bulky pay envelope of today is the herald of the empty pay envelope of tomorrow.

Workers! This May Day (1923) should be a "Preparedness Day", ushering in a preparedness campaign that should be carried on during the entire coming year. During these comparatively sunny days prepare for the darker days ahead.

May Day—Or September Day

By CHARLES KRUMBEIN

Why another Labor Day in May when we have one in September? This question is asked by some trade unionists when they hear of the May Day celebrations. The answer to this goes back to early American labor history, into the question of why a Labor Day, and why such a day should be international.

May First was inaugurated by the American Federation of Labor in the '80s, as part of the campaign to establish the eight-hour day. A few years later it was adopted as the International Labor Day at the World Congress of the labor movement, and rapidly spread all over Europe. It is now celebrated by most of the labor organizations of the world.

Here in the United States we have today a Labor Day in September, which was handed to us on a silver platter by the bosses and their Government. There is no doubt that they did this because they saw how May Day was being accepted by Labor the world over. The purpose of this move was, of course, to split the solidarity of Labor, both at home and internationally.

Labor Day should be a day when the solidarity of Labor is celebrated, encouraged, and perfected. It should be a day when we all come together to inspirit the movement, and urge it on to new achievements. On this Day of Labor we should take stock of our past struggles, and in the light of experience make plans for further forward movements. Such a Labor Day as this must be international. Just as the strikes of coal miners of one country are defeated when the miners of another produce coal to be imported into the striking country; just as the entire struggle of Labor demands international solidarity, in the same manner the Day of Labor must be international, must be the same for the workers of the entire world.

The September Labor Day in this country is rapidly dying. In nearly every industrial center the great celebrations that used to mark this occasion are now practically things of the past. Even in Chicago last year the Federation could not get the support of enough unions to stage a successful demonstration. The main reason for this is, that the September Day was chosen by the bosses for us. We naturally want our own Labor Day, and that is May Day. Anything given to us by our enemies is worthless. Anything worth while we must get by fighting.

More and more the American labor movement is getting back to the original holiday, May First. Many unions and central bodies are observing May Day. We should all of us do what we can to make it universally celebrated. We must take our own Labor Day, and use it for its rightful purpose, to increase the solidarity and militant spirit of the labor movement.

For Labor to make any gain calls for continuous struggle. May Day mass demonstrations will re-enthuse the workers so that they will go into battle with the solidarity and the determination to win. That will carry the labor movement onward to its goal, the establishment of the Workers' Republic.

Shoe Workers, TUEL, will meet Saturday, April 28, two p. m., at 208 E. 12th St.

Journeymen Tailors, TUEL, meet Monday, April 30, 8 p. m., Room 208 E. 12th St.

(Special to "The Worker")

MEXICO CITY.—"You and your esteemed family are invited to attend a celebration on the occasion of the opening of the Second Annual Convention of the Communist Party of Mexico."

With this quaintly worded invitation full of Spanish formality the Communist Party of Mexico publicly announced its forthcoming convention.

The convention is being held in the "Casa del Pueblo" or "People's House", a huge low, one-story building, ancient and impressive, here and there the yellow "tezontle", or baked clay, cracked and red brick showing thru, till 1922 one of the ancient convents of Mexico.—the land of 8,568 churches—and now "The House of the People." But one cannot mistake it for a convent for over its entrance flies a huge, weather-scarred red flag.

I enter the unguarded gate, walk thru long corridors where children play and chickens stroll, for the spacious building harbors many families of evicted rent-strikers, and I make my way into a huge, dim hall, the main one of the convent. The score of delegates are quite lost in front of it.

So these are the delegates! Peasants in peasant costumes, except that they have on a pair of shoes. Workers in ragged overalls. One or two with collar and tie and others betraying trade marks of "the intellectual". Their faces are almost entirely Indian, poor and thoughtful, high-cheek-boned, dark-skinned. The one who presides is a full-blooded negro.

On the high ceiling of the one-time convent are painted a sacred heart, crosses, a bishop's mitre. The whole front of the stage is a biblical scene depicting Christ in Jerusalem, but the figure of Christ has been covered by an enormous picture of Karl Marx and his disciples peep out between rents in huge Red flags. And above, in gold letters, is emblazoned the legend. "This house was taken by the people, June 11, 1922, for the Communist Party of Mexico and the Union of Striking Tenants."

An official begins to read the report of the outgoing National Executive.—"To use all efforts to obtain a United Front of the working class in Mexico, eliminating and showing up as traitors to their class all those who opposed themselves to the benefits that the united front will procure for the workers."

"This resolution," declares the committee reporter, "was the principal instruction of the last Congress to the Central Executive." He proceeds to report on the mistakes and successes of the last year. He tells how the committee made mistakes in connection with the movement for a rival Federation of Labor, how as their united front activities grew the Communists met opposition both from the "yellow" leaders of the Mexican Federation, and the "red" anarchist leaders of the General Confederation. He declared that the opposition of the leadership of both factions, combined with tactical mistakes of the Communists in the early history of the General Confederation had been effective in aiding the leaders of both factions of the labor movement to set up a sanitary cordon around their organizations to quarantine them from Communist infection. "Our response," he declared, "was to go directly to the masses of the workers everywhere, and to form the already powerful longing for unity of the workers forces in the face of Fascism and the Capitalist offensives, until it became a burning and unquenchable passion. With this work the party must go on, and a United Front will inevitably result."

Join the Communists

MOSCOW.—The final conference of the Social-Revolutionary Party in Moscow has concluded with a resolution to liquidate the party and to join, if possible, the Communist Party. Bukharin and Radek, who were present at the conference on behalf of the Communist Party, declared that the Party would be ready to accept those who recognized their crimes in the past and were willing to redeem them by devoting themselves to the work of Soviet Russia.

Plasterers to Investigate Investigators

By SELMAR SCHOCKEN

The trial of officials of the Plasterers' Union, No. 60, before a jury in the New York Supreme Court, the strike of the Stone Cutters for a $2 wage increase, the granting of general increases to other trades in the Building Industry, the vote of the Painters' and Decorators' Unions on their demands to be submitted to the contractors within a few days, the convention of the United Hatters and the ending of the controversy between them and the United Cloth Hat and Capmakers, together with the Anti-Fascist Movement of the Italian Needle Trades Unions have attracted the attention of the Metropolitan Labor Movement within the past week.

Trial of Plasterers Ends

The prosecution closed its case in the trial against the 36 officials and members of the Plasterers' Executive and Constitution Committees, and Jonah J. Goldstein, counsel for the defense, delivered the opening address to the jury on Monday afternoon.

"We will show", he said, "that not only was there no conspiracy to ruin employers on the part of the 36 defendants, but we intend to prove a conspiracy between Assistant Prosecutor Abraham Freedman and Christian G. Norman, president of the Building Trades Employers' Association, to wilfully destroy the union of plasterers, so that they may remove every obstacle for the introduction of the open shop.

The attorney assured the union, he will prove that Samuel Untermyer as chief prosecutor in the case and formerly Advisory Counsel to the Lockwood Housing Committee, was willing to first fail to indict and later to have the indictment withdrawn, if the Executive Committee of the Plasterers' Union had been willing to consent to a decree which would forever enjoin the organization from enforcing the closed shop.

Investigate the Investigators

"We will not stop by clearing these defendants", he declared, "but intend to investigate our investigators."

There can be no doubt about the fact that the union is on trial rather than the indicted officials. The prosecution does not accuse them of any wrongdoing, other than executing the policy of the organization as laid down in the Constitution and By-Laws. This applies to fining contractors for using wrong material as well as many other rules which are part and parcel not only of the plasterers' union, but of many other unions in the building industry. There can be no doubt that the outcome of the proceedings will be of greatest importance to every member of the building trades.

Meantime the employers in the building trades say to fit to grant the wage demands of the Bricklayers, Plumbers, Stone Masons, as well as the Plasterers, rather than precipitate a strike on May first. This is their more democratic way of voting on similar demands, the Painters have not yet submitted their draft for a new agreement to the employers. However, there is no doubt, but that they too will gain a $10 daily minimum, besides strengthening the Five-Day-Week and inserting their health demands.

Hat Makers Plan Unity

At the convention of the United Hatters the reception accorded to President Zaritsky and Secretary Zuckerman of the United Cloth Hat and Capmakers' Union, as fraternal delegates, for the first time in the long controversy between these Unions, is of general interest not only to the workers in the needle trades but to the labor movement in general.

The modus vivendi agreed to by both unions is practically sealed by this reception. To be sure, the agreement reached is far from what should be expected at this stage. Both unions recognize each others autonomy as an International Union, the United Hatters to control the men's hat trade and the Capmakers all caps and millinery. The latter organization will probably soon join the American Federation of Labor.

Bring Pressure at Albany

The weeks' events in the labor movement also include a conference of A. F. of L. officials at the City Hall in Albany "to put pressure on the legislators" who forgot most of the promises they made to their loyal henchmen when these gentlemen were campaigning for them and organizing "Nonpartisan Committees" and manufacturing "Nonpartisan endorsements". The most important bills, such as a state monopoly for the Workmen's Compensation Insurance Fund, are either buried by one house or the other, or they are evading their commitment to the legislative cemetery.

Samuel Gompers also spoke at this gathering of about 500 officials. His chief topic was the repeal of the Mullan-Gage Law and opposition to any letting down of the immigration bars.

The Anti-Fascisti movement of the Italian workers in America attracted the attention of the Central Trades and Labor Council at its last meeting in Beethoven Hall.

Not that the Council seemed especially anxious to exert itself about the mere danger of Fascisti activities in the United States. In marked contrast to an unauthorized action of the Amnesty Committee, which to all intents and purposes had been pronounced dissolved more than a year ago, the Executive Committee reported it would first have to ask Mr. Samuel Gompers, the grand mogul, about the proper way to treat the spread of Fascism. This announcement aroused the ire of Salvatore Ninfo, vice president of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, and several delegates, among them Delegate Mandell, of the Teachers' Union, who sketched the activities of the Black-shirts in Italy, with the result that the original resolution, introduced by Local 89, I. L. G. W. U., was adopted.

At the meeting before this the "Amnesty Committee", under friendly guidance of "Cousin" Lucy Robbins, showed what an energetic committee can do, even so, it has officially ceased to exist for many months. Without asking authority anywhere this "committee" sent a cable to Moscow, protesting against the execution of the priest Butchkavitch, found guilty for high treason.

Kept Press Writers Confess Selves Paid Government Spies

[illegible] Francis McCullough, and a correspondent for the New York Herald Tribune, is openly referred to in the columns of the Soviet press as a spy.

More evidence of the ignoble practices of correspondents comes to light with the statement of Mrs. Margaret E. Harrison, well known American correspondent, who was released from a Russian prison a year or more ago, April 17, wherein she frankly admits that she was a spy for the American military intelligence service during her period of employment as correspondent for American newspapers. Another woman, with whom Mrs. Harrison had some understanding, a Mrs. Stan Harding, is a spy for the British government.

All three of these stool pigeons, McCullaugh and Mesdames Harrison and Harding, write columns after columns of what passes among the yokels who read the capitalist press as unbiased "news." It is this type that furnishes the lies about the work of priests in Soviet Russia. The stool, McCullaugh, writes articles to suit the demands of the London and New York publishers who print his stuff. The most absurd and preposterous statements are printed as proven facts.

The yellow Socialist publications, the Jewish Daily Forward and the New York Call, published some of the McCullaugh screeds when this British spy was viciously attacking the Soviet government at the Conference to Communism and for defending the workers of Russia against spies of Allied imperialism. But soon McCullaugh's lies led into a vicious anti-Semitic attack, which seriously reflected upon the majority of the readers of these so-called Socialist publications. Now these papers are confronted with the problem of convincing their readers that McCullaugh's statements concerning the Communists are facts, but that he lies when he attacks the Jews. The notorious Abe Cahan, and his English speaking echo, Jim Oneal, may be able to hypnotize their readers with some new sophistry, but we are unable to visualize the tactics they will be forced to apply to explain that the stool pigeon always tells the truth about things they dislike, and invariably resorts to lies when speaking of Jews and yellow Socialists.

20 Tractors to Russia Is Plan of FSR

(By F. S. R. Press Service)

Twenty tractors will be sent to the workers of Russia by the workers in America, thru the Friends of Soviet Russia, if the collective of a nationwide drive started here as part of the international movement for the reconstruction of Russia's agriculture. This announcement of the drive gains added force from the fact that it follows close upon pronouncements by men and organizations, most of all upon urgent necessity in rebuilding Russian economy, the groups include the American Relief Administration, the Quakers, Nansen, the Russian authorities.

To pay for the tractors and their transportation requires $40,000, which has therefore been set as the goal for this drive. Every effort will be made, according to F. S. R. officials, to reach the American workers with the message of Russia's need and the importance of meeting it, not alone to the workers of that country but of all countries.

In connection with the drive the organization has announced a Voting Contest as a result of which one American worker will be given a choice of trips to Russia for every $10,000 collected in this drive. Four Americans will therefore go to Russia as a "living "message of good will."

The contest is described as merely one of the means "to make vivid the living truth of a proletarian country and its giant effort to construct a new system, so that America's workers may see the absolute necessity for extending immediate assistance."

The prospects of the trip to Russia, as outlined in the F. S. R. literature, are certainly alluring. There will be fine farewell gatherings in New York and grand receptions in Russia; the matter of vises will be attended to by the organization; an interpreter will be provided; the American messengers will be greeted personally by the Soviet leaders; etc., etc. The competition will doubtless be keen.

The system of voting is so arranged that for every dollar contributed, or collected from someone else, votes will be given, according to the following schedule:

1. Individuals get five votes for every dollar they contribute. They can cast these votes for themselves or for whomever they please.

2. Individuals get ten votes for every dollar collected from someone else.

3. Organizations get fifty votes for every dollar sent in. These votes may cast for anyone, whether a member of the organization or not.

"Cannons or Tractors?" is the slogan being featured in the drive. The question is not merely literary. It is a real alternative presented to the world. Peace in Europe, and therefore of the world, cannot be attained until Russia's economy has been rebuilt. And to do that, Russian agriculture must be put on a modern basis. With a new attack against Russia by the financiers of the world, under the cloak of some "indignation" or other, on the horizon, tractors represent an effective answer to the forces of reaction.

WAYSIDE THOUGHTS
(By F. S. R. Press Service)

A cable dispatch tells of three Soviet officials condemned to death for bribery. There, at last, is one kind of atrocity that is absolutely unthinkable in capitalist countries.

Super-patriots demand the prosecution of Walsh as a pro-Russian, basing their charges on malicious statements in the Jewish Daily Forward. The New York Times quotes the New York Call editorially in support of his attacks on Foster and radical labor. Are capital and labor getting together after all?

A cable to the New York World, April 13, on the impending trial of Tikhon, says: "It is all but admitted by the Crimes that Tikhon's case against the Government and favored anti-Soviet armies and in his relation with their representatives hoped for foreign intervention." What would happen to a priest in America or anywhere else with such an admission against him during war time? Yet it is doubtless a prospective "atrocity" of barbaric Soviet Russia.

They Have Had Enough

Evidently the Burns-Daugherty outfit realizes they have been beaten in their personally conducted war on the Communist movement. The Washington correspondence of Hearst's Universal Service declares that, "So long as William Z. Foster and other officers of the Workers Party of America do not actually advocate the overthrow of the federal government by force, the department of justice does not intend to proceed against them for alleged violation of the criminal statute of 1918. It was learned officially today". Mr. Daugherty and Daugherty are getting ready for the worst in the Rothenberg trial.

Workers and Farmers Must Fight Together

By RAU WARE

WHAT'S WRONG WITH THE FARMER? (Copyright 1923)

Farmers, you're broke! Why? Because you're a farmer. Why are you a farmer? Because your father was a farmer before you. Why did your father farm? Because his father was a farmer before him. Why? Search me. It is also the reason why the MIDDLEMAN connects you with the city folks both you and the Farmer. The milk is sold by the farmer at a loss and sold to you by the middleman at a still profit. Same is true of butter and eggs.

If you think about the farmer at all you probably agree with the average "Web" who dismisses the farmer with the smugly ignorant—"He is a petty bourgeois blankity blank!" When we get a Workers' Government Mr. Farmer will have to come along." The little error in that sentence is the word—"when." The point is you won't get anything from your exploiters without the hearty support of this "petty bourgeois blankity blank" farmer. And you won't keep it if you get it; a Workers' Government, or any minor toe hold on the Capitalist system, without the continued support from the same b . . . b . . . farmer. And, furthermore, you won't get his support until you know him and his problems and line up with him on the common ground that does exist.

Well then—John Farmer, U. S. A., is a composit of the world's peasants, mostly American. He has that typical self psychology which means individualism, universal passion for LAND. In highly industrialized America he appears to most city people exactly as the giraff appeared to a farmer at first glimpse in the zoo. "Hell", the farmer remarked. "There ain't no such animal!" But there he is—An isolated individual working; a small family-farm unit of land; maintaining individual production in the face of the most concentrated industrial society in the world.

That explains much: first, his psychology; second, his reactions. His individual system has run its course. It is bankrupt; that is, financially bankrupt according to the rules of the dear old capitalist system. Even on the land individualism can no longer compete with highly organized industries. Capitalism has at last killed the goose that not only laid golden eggs but which stood as a safe bulwark between proletarian and capitalist ideals.

Must Repair War's Victims

By ELMER T. ALLISON

Raymond Peters, a shell shocked victim of Capitalism's Greatest War, dreamed he was fighting enemy Huns in the Argonne Forest and awoke to find he had slashed his throat with a razor.. Physicians report recovery doubtful.

This causes us to put forth a claim, we have long held. The science of war will ever remain imperfect until a way is found to eliminate from the memories of its victims the horrors they have undergone.

In view of two circumstances we suggest to the masters of the world that if they are to keep their grasp on it they should bend all efforts towards the discovery of a sure and scientific method of accomplishing this end.

One such circumstance is that returned soldiers got their bellies full of the hell of war and want no more "for them". The other is the ever developing possibilities of another war in which Capitalism will want again those who were spared in the last war. Memories sometimes prove compromising remnants to leave in one's victim's head.

Certainly in the interest of capitalism's continuance science should develop a new race of Robot mentalities, or at least a sort of "stamping mill" process like a delousing station, thru which to pass the brains of war's victims.

Spreading It On Thick

By ALFRED WAGENKNECHT

And so I let us present Samuel M. Vauclain, president of the Baldwin Locomotive Works of Philadelphia. He's a likely chap. He has put it over on Johnston, president of the International Association of Machinists, yes, and on other crafts that work in his shops. Vauclain's open shop of 25,000 workers is an open shop. It's an open shop because amalgamation has been a closed book to the metal trades.

When President Gompers therefore speaks and says that dire things will happen if we have open shops, why could not President Vauclain come back with a "My God! Have any of you gentlemen ever seen Gompers? Why you tell me what there is to be afraid of?"

Still, why should President Vauclain insult President Gompers? Why should not these several Presidents be bosom friends? Why refer slightingly to Gompers' size, beauty and capacity? Is Gompers not close to the heart of the Civic Federation and does not Vauclain chip in to help buy grease for this machine, plus Gompers and all his kind? Why not, and a closed shop upon the basis of an all year 'round open season for all red baiters?

President Vauclain refreshes one. Get this, friends. I'd like to see any union labor leader start something among my 25,000 men. Why, when the railway strike was starting, a bunch of labor delegates came around to the plant. In twenty minutes I had every damned one of them in jail. I was told I had no right to put them in jail. I said, 'But they're in jail, aren't they? Now go and get them out.' You've got to act quick when you're facing a crisis."

That's the candy, sure enough! And remember, that is about the way the Bolsheviki do in Russia. When they face a crisis they act quickly and throw the discordant elements into jail. And when the bourgeois world says they have no right to do that, Russia answers—well, they are in, aren't they? Now you try to get them out!

President Vauclain refreshes one more so than Gompers. He speaks right out and tells the workers how it is done, tells them what's necessary to do to dictate. And altho Gompers may be too old to learn new tricks, the workers will some day work the same game on Vauclain that he's hitting off at such a grand pace today.

There, as a bit of good advice, President Vauclain in his address to business men, adds: "Golf? You spend a day chasing a golf ball and at night all you've got is your golf ball. You had it when you started. But if you get a wheelbarrow and a hoe and spread manure all day you've got the exercise, and you've done something." To all of which we beg to remark that President Vauclain must not forget that shit is not spread with a hoe.

As a last thought—if what he is referring to is the kind of stuff he spread by his address to the business men, then we say, go to it, all of you. Fertilize the fields from coast to coast. And we'll have a surprising harvest!

Bloor Speaks Spite of Raid at Kansas City

KANSAS CITY.—The second attempt of Ella Reeves Bloor to speak at a Labor Defense Council meeting was successful April 15, despite the presence of many police. The meeting was in protest against the raid on the previous meeting, April 8, at which four members of the audience were arrested. An injunction suit is pending to restrain police from interfering with such meetings.

The men arrested on April 11, who were fined $200 each in police court, have filed an appeal which is to be heard by Judge Henry Julian. Meanwhile suit is being instituted against the police for false arrest.

A secret organization, as announced in "The Worker" last week, has been formed of members of the local American Legion, Chamber of Commerce, Rotary and Kiwanis clubs to combat radical and pacifist activities, according to the Kansas City press. Capt. Chas. Edward, ex-chief of police, is said to be the commander of this secret society, which consists mainly of former department of justice and ex-service men. The names of members are known only to Edward.

The organization claims to be working in conjunction with the federal department of justice.

New Borah Warning!

Senator Borah is anxious that the government's attempts to halt profiteering in sugar should succeed. "Otherwise", he says, "it would be exceedingly bad for the republican party". Borah should know that the republican party is in business to cover up profiteering, and it is fulfilling its mission nobly. Alleged progressives, like Borah, also serve a camouflage for the profiteers by retaining "republicans". But the workers are getting wise and turning to class Labor Party. For confirmation of this fact turn to the reports of the Labor Party referendum of the Trade Union Educational League.

"How Come?" Is Step Toward the Serious in Building Negro Drama

By JOHN DALE

It is inevitable that the Negro masses of the United States will develop a culture of their own, that will in part find an expression in the drama.

Perhaps "How Come?", now at the Apollo Theatre, referred to as a "musical darkomedy" is a step in that direction, altho it substitutes dancing and singing for those more quaint touches of Negro life that found their way into last year's Shuffle Along", the first attempt on a metropolitan scale, of an All-Negro cast.

Where "Shuffle Along" was put on nearer Harlem, we find "How Come?" right down in the middle of the white light district, a few steps from Times Square, and folks of all colors clamor for admission at the box office.

If Negro musical comedy is to be the stepping stone to the serious Negro drama, typifying the life and aspirations of the Negro workers of this country, then it is welcome. If it will help break down prejudices between the white and black races then it is three times welcome. In event "How Come?" is well worth seeing if for no other reason than that it is different.

Music Wanted by F. S. R.

A large part of the success of our film, "RUSSIA THRU THE SHADOWS", is traceable to the inspiring musical accompaniment specially arranged for this picture. The next picture, entitled the "FIFTH YEAR", will be much bigger and better in every way and it is the desire of those in charge to have the music improved upon also. Special orchestrations of several new Russian numbers have already been arranged and it is desired to make use of the favorite tunes of the labor movement of all countries as well as of Russian music.

Any comrade who has music sheets of such tunes is asked to loan them, AT ONCE, to the PICTORIAL DEPARTMENT, Friends of Soviet Russia, 201 West 13th St., New York, N. Y. Arrangements for small orchestra is preferred, but piano solo or violin solo notes can also be used. Where the copy loaned is the only one available and cannot be readily replaced, the F.S.R. will copy the notes and return the original without delay.

Orchestra leaders among our German, Finnish, Lithuanian and Russian comrades are urged to cooperate and help in every way where are instructed to bring this appeal to the attention of those who can help the work.

Wicks, Labor Editor of "The Worker", will take the negative side. The debate is held under the auspices of the Fancy Leather Goods Workers' Union.

Don't Throw This Paper Away Pass It on to Your Neighbor

Women of Near East Organize

By MARGARET UNDJUS

The working women's movement in the Near East is rapidly developing. There are 22,000 women organized in the Central Women's Section of Soviet Azerbaidjan. Of this number 10,000 are Moslem working women.

The forces with which the work among women was to be carried on in Azerbaidjan last year were very weak, so the Central Section resolved to make an effort to stir up the Azerbaidjan working masses and to thus facilitate the work of the district sections.

With this object in view, the first non-party Azerbaidjan Women's Congress was convened Feb. 3, attended by 1,200 women delegates, including 500 from remote settlements and villages of Azerbaidjan.

The Congress had a beneficial influence on the masses of the working women. It also changed to a certain extent the hitherto existing conception of women and formed the starting point of the Women's Sections' work. The Central Section is an independent section of the Central Committee of the Communist Party of Azerbaidjan.

In the largest city of Azerbaidjan, Baku, the women's club was organized under the leadership of the Council section. The club has various departments, such as spinning, weaving and sewing. The finished product is sold and the proceeds are turned over into the treasury of the club. Classes to educate the women are also organized. This club is wrecking the old traditions under which working women labor, and is making of backward women the standard bearers of Communism.

I will be waiting to see your answer in the Worker.—Abe Morris.

We pass this question on to our readers. Who will answer it? Send all replies to Abe Morris, 2504 Holmes St., Kansas City, Mo.

Anna Gluzman, Soviet Judge

By ROSE PASTOR STOKES

While in Moscow, as I have already told my readers, I saw, in the newspaper, New York Times, top of front page, what appeared to be startling news items:

BOBBED-HAIR GIRL JUDGE IN MOSCOW CALMLY SENTENCES SEVEN ROBBERS TO DEATH

MOSCOW, April 22.—(Associated Press.)—A bobbed-hair young woman in her early twenties sat as presiding judge at a trial in the Moscow District Court yesterday and in a calm voice sentenced seven men to death for robbery with violence.

She was the Citizeness Anna Gluzman, formerly of Kharkov, who several months ago so attracted the attention of the Commissariat of Justice by her shrewd decisions in the Ukrainian courts that she was invited to Moscow, and became a member of the Presidium of the Moscow District Court.

The defendants were a gang of eight highway robbers led by one

Anna Gluzman is a woman of the people, and has been a part of the revolutionary movement ever since she was "old enough to know anything." In Kharkov she was made Judge in her community because she was regarded as a true daughter of the proletariat who had uncommonly good judgment.

In the village where she lived, three men were discovered dead by strangulation in a deserted house. Bloodhounds were set upon the trail that led to a man who had been terrorizing the entire countryside, robbing and murdering many people. His accomplice was also taken.

This was Anna Gluzman's first case. She sentenced one to 20 and the other to 15 years imprisonment in the Kharkov penetentiary. About a year later she received from them a photograph of themselves, on the back of which they had written: To Anna Moisaivna, from the bandits Blondovsky and Finko, the grateful redeemed ones.

I asked, what she thought of the message. She smiled a smile which softened the Spartan look on her strong face. Whether they really felt "Redeemed," or merely had a fine, ironic sense of humor, she had not discovered.

Sergius Mironoff, all young, who, with the aid of several chauffeurs employed by the Moscow Soviet, carried out armed robberies in clothing factories last March.

Mironoff's younger brother, under eighteen years of age, was let off with ten years' imprisonment.

The bold, careless admission of guilt by the men was equalled only by the unperturbed demeanor of the presiding judge. She was brown-eyed, plainly dressed, not pretty, but keen, and the lawyers who practiced in her court asserted that her judgment was the equal of or better than that of most men.

On July 18, 1922, she presided at what she called a "Hunger trial" in Kharkov. The people's Commissariat had made a decision that every ten families shall feed one hungry person. People dropped dead on the streets from starvation, but the bourgeoisie were well fed, she said. Many who were very comfortable and having a good time, refused to feed the hungry, and do their share. Fifty-three men were arrested as a result. Chief among them was Dvorkin, a well-to-do manufacturer. The girl judge fined him fifty million rubles, basing the fine upon his income. Dvorkin replied, he would refuse to pay as a matter of principle. Where upon she increased the fine one hundred fold which brought the sum up to ten milliards. His property was to be confiscated and he immediately deported to the famine region unless the fine was then and there paid. He paid the fine.

Several of the other defendants were fined 300 poods of bread instead of the 3 poods they refused to pay, and they paid. The trial lasted a week and attracted much notice. The Pravda spoke of her as the "talented Judge of the First District." Seated on each side of her were the People's representatives—six workers from the Kharkov Locomotive Factory.

She told of the trial of a merchant who had amassed stolen gold and jewels that was church property. Since all Church riches were being taken to save the starving in the famine stricken districts his property was confiscated and the man sentenced to six years imprisonment. She admitted it was a harsh sentence. But added that it saved another life.

"When the people are starving for lack of food that church riches will buy, and the state had decided to make this use of the treasure, the man who received it as stolen goods is committing a high crime against the people."

Portsmouth Prison During the War

By EDWARD J. IRVINE, Ex-Prisoner 4502

While millions of "respectable patriots" were eating ham and eggs for breakfast and chicken for dinner, thousands of "grey-backs" (military prisoners) were undergoing the anguish of hell, eating unseasoned mush, fish-soup and burned bread for breakfast, dinner and supper. Lice on them (perhaps they were soft-shell alligators), this is a fact which caused a mutiny on the prison ship Southery.

Men were going crazy by the minute, we had a tier known as "Nut-House Row." I have known one young man do that row to mutilate his hand, trying to "bring on blood poison to see what it's like."

And all this while pictures came to us thru the Christian Science Monitor of German prisoners in bun galows down in Florida.

I have been in mutinies at Portsmouth Prison, where we boys were compelled to mutiny for bread, or for gloves in freezing weather, thanks to the magnanimity of that "great" millionaire warden Thomas Mott Osborn, that immoralist, for one could be nothing less who gets up before a crowd of young men and says, "There have been no reports of immoral practices, I will take some of your privileges away unless I hear some reports of immorality," was this not inciting those prisoners to evildeeds?

The Mutual Welfare League at Portsmouth was made up of the lowest types of prisoners that drifted into the "Castle". Men aboard the Southery were compelled to get up at 1 o'clock one morning, "go down below" and listen to vulgar jokes, songs and stories by delegates of the League.

When visitors came, word was always passed to Osborn in advance then, we were treated lovely, but, a soon as they disappeared, we were "chased" to the rock-pile to the tune of "You long-eared bastards!" by "gobs" and "leather-necks".

They would shoot a man for picking up a rotten apple out of horse manure, altho men were compelled to work beneath luscious apple-trees and were not permitted to touch one apple.

I served 25 months in that madhouse and became "Red."

Many a newspaper has refused these facts in the last four years, so, I am sending them to "The Worker" as a last resort.

Coal Miner Militants in "Come-Back"

(Special to "The Worker")

PITTSBURGH, Pa.—District Five, United Mine Workers' Union, has redeemed itself at last. It will be remembered that on March 10th the Alex Howat meeting was broken up in Charleroi by the police of that town at the instigation of the Lewis administration machine. The Progressives got to work, planning this "come back." Howat returned to his home and arranged his business for an extended tour. In the meantime the Progressives travelled through the district arranging meetings. April 14th, Howat addressed his first meeting on the new tour in District Five, at Wyano, Pa. Sunday, the 15th, he was at Russellton, where the crowd was overwhelmingly with him. Tuesday night he spoke at Hays, close to historic Homestead. Wednesday night he went over close to the border of the West Virginia Panhandle, to Avella. Here he received a great ovation. Thursday night he spoke at Burgettstown and Friday in McDonald. At all these meetings the miners were urged to come to Charleroi, Sunday, April 22d, for a great demonstration against the break-up of former meetings, and to prove that the workers in the Pittsburgh district did not approve of the tactics used by the corrupt machine.

Organize Defense Committee

Realizing the character of the people with whom they were dealing, the Progressives sent delegates to all militant locals in the district to furnish volunteers to do guard duty at the meeting. On the morning of the meeting they rented a hall and 250 volunteers gathered and went thru drills to prepare themselves for the efficient handling of the crowd. The contingent was under the direction of Marshall Michael Brajdich, a husky young ex-soldier miner, from Yukon, who ran for Vice-President on the Progressive Slate last December. The contingent formed in line, four abreast, and, led by a miners' band, paraded thru the streets of Charleroi, unmolested to the ball ground where over 5,000 miners had gathered.

It was a picturesque crowd. Trucks, automobiles and busses, loaded with miners, old and young, full of pep and enthusiasm, on every hand. Some of them had come as much as 75 miles and stood for five hours listening to the speeches and cheering all the sentiments of which they approved.

The day was one of vindication for Howat. Breathing a spirit of defiance in every sentence to the traitors in the Labor Movement and the autocrats of political and industrial America, his speech could be summed up in one sentence: "If the government wants us to respect their laws, they must make laws that respect us." Every progressive phase of the labor movement to-day was endorsed by Howat in his vigorous style.

Other Miners Address Meeting

An old war horse of the progressive movement, William Gelly, of Charleroi, was chairman. It was a happy day for Gulley. For years he has been attacked by the machine with slander and abuse. He has lived, however, to see the principles he has advocated vindicated. John Snyder and Joe Chicolini of the Coke Region General Relief Committee, well known to all miners in the Coke Region and in District Five, repeated the story of the betrayal of the Fayette County miners by the machine. Julius Bucho of Chicago gave a very stirring address in Slavish which was greatly appreciated by the Slavish miners.

Dist. 2 Organizers Speak

Powers Hapgood and Joe Foster, two well-known organizers of Dist. Two, where the International Organization has been carrying on a campaign of persecution because of the advocacy of nationalization by District President John Brophy, were present and gave a surprise to the miners of Dist. Five by addressing the meeting. Hapgood gave a little picture of what it means to try to carry on a strike in the face of opposition by the International. He told how the notorious Fontecchio who confessed in Illinois to be a progressive, would resort to all sorts of methods to fight the district organization. Foster made a splendid impression as an upstanding progressive in the Labor Movement.

Tommy Robertson Ejected

When Fred Merrick, of the Coke Region General Relief Committee, was ejected from a miners' relief meeting in Smithton and assaulted, Tommy Robertson, an organizer of District Five, was the directing genius of that disgraceful affair. This last meeting in Charleroi demonstrated the fact that the machine with all of their thugs cannot override the will of the majority of the miners in this District when they make up their mind. The machine was well represented with Van Bittner, Fagan, Feeney and others and a whole crew of boozer-hounds. Howat had not been speaking long when Robertson in a loud tone addressed an insulting remark to him. The organized and disciplined group that ejected him found no trouble at all pushing him up a hill and entirely out of the bounds of the meeting. There he was informed that if he returned there would be serious trouble. In Illinois and other parts of the United States the miners look for the test of free speech to be made in Charleroi on April 22d. The word can now be released thruout the United States that the miners have at last removed the stigma that rested upon it for the breaking up of the Howat meeting.

Howat goes from here to the Anthracite Region and then by way of New York to Nova Scotia for a great May Day Celebration and a ten-day tour of that district. Dates for Howat can be secured by addressing James A. Hamilton, Secretary, Pittsburgh Miners' Relief Conference, Labor Lyceum, 35 Miller St., Pittsburgh, Pa.

Illustrated Lectures for Children

An illustrated lecture, on the "Russian Revolution", for children of all ages, will be given by the Young Workers League of New York, on Saturday, May 5th, at 3 P. M., at 1846 Pitkin Ave., Brooklyn, N. Y.

All members of the Workers Party living in the vicinity are urged to have their children present. It is hoped that thru the medium of these lectures we will be able to organize a Junior Young Workers League Movement in Brownsville and there by start yet ball rolling towards counteracting the mighty offensive of the pro-capitalist, Public School System in this city. Admission to the lecture will be free.

Little Denmark has reached a trade agreement, including de facto recognition, with Soviet Russia. But the United States is still among the wallflowers. It will bring up the rear of the grand march, as there must always be a rear.

IT'S THEIR MOVE . . . By H. M. Wicks

Facing the Inevitable

MR. FRANK MORRISON, secretary of the American Federation of Labor, speaking before the Hatters convention the other day, asserted that the American Federation of Labor was in favor of amalgamation, but that since it was a "democratic organization" it had no power to impose its will upon any of its affiliated organizations and would never for a moment insist that "kindred chords in an industry "must amalgamate."

So emphatic has become the demand for amalgamation that the Gompers machine is setting its wits to catch the breeze of popular favor. The policy of the machine in this case is to remain inactive as long as possible. In spite of its pretenses it is well known that the last thing on earth desired by the Gompers machine is the amalgamation movement. In fact, that machine is now trying to kill amalgamation by professing to be in favor of it in order to stop the terrific agitation that has swept the country the past two years and is gaining militant adherents every day. The A. F of L. machine has never been bothered with any principles; it takes no definite stand on anything unless it is compelled to act. In the case of amalgamation its attitude has been obstinate, underhanded resistance to the will of the rank and file. But today the movement has reached such proportions that the Compers machine must now face the inevitability of its triumph.

While Morrison does not fight amalgamation as such, he never misses an opportunity to take a contemptible rap at William Z. Foster and the Trade Union Educational League, the real vanguard of the entire amalgamation movement on the North American continent.

When he appeared before the Hatters, Morrison took advantage of the occasion to denounce the League for its advocacy of independent political action on the part of labor. He "pointed with pride" to the "great success" achieved by labor in the last congressional campaign when, by following the Gompers policy of "rewarding your friends and punishing your enemies," labor succeeded in winning nearly all of the 126 representatives and 16 senators, in spite of the fact that they were elected on old party tickets.

This brazen collaboration with the enemy, this deliberate betrayal of the working class of America, is perverted into alleged "victory" for labor. While such tactics gain personal prestige for Gompers, Morrison and Co. among the parliamentary flunkeys of the capitalist class, its paralyzing effect upon the working class is seen in the fact that there is not one genuine representative of labor in either of the houses of congress. Nowhere is the voice of labor heard in legislative halls to point to the necessity of all parliamentary action and to urge the workers to more militant forms of struggle. But, during the past two years there has grown up a strong demand on the part of vast numbers of organized workers for independent political action. The Trade Union Educational League is endeavoring to determine the extent of this demand for a Labor Party and the Gompers machine fears it will result in repudiation of its policy of thrusting labor into the political field.

In the case of a Labor Party the Gompers machine can not repeat its performance in relation to amalgamation and proclaim that it has always really favored independent political action. It has been forced in order to serve capitalism to commit itself on this point and it is upon this point also that the machine must be broken.

Socialist Party Economics

AN editorial in the "Chicago Socialist" says: "The chain of labor banks, growing and extending over the country, means that labor is preparing to take over the whole economic system."

According to the editor of the "Chicago Socialist," labor banks comprise at once the lever and the fulcrum with which to upset the present system. Therefore, all that is required of labor is to engage in banking, abandon the strike, abjure mass action, forget political organizations and with its enormous surplus left from its wages, proceed to establish financial institutions and then buy up the railroads, the mines, the steel industry, etc. Thru this unique innovation the capitalist class is painlessly defeated thru labor finance.

Did ever a more puerile brainstorm emanate from the disordered mind of a delirious maniac? This fling at economics is surely indicative of the total mental poverty of the whole yellow crew that stands at the head of the remnants of the old Socialist Party. It is the latest contribution of the Socialist Party to the gayety of the revolutionary movement!

Young Workers Offer to Debate Junior Republic Advocate

Declaring that at one time he was "the worst Bolshevist there ever was," Max Weinstein, 19 years of age, of Midland, Pa., vice-president of the George Junior Republic, a capitalist organization, says in a letter recently published in the official organ of the Junior Republic that, "If any young fellow in the U. S. could get the responsibility that we have, . . . I am sure that America would not worry about the Anarchist and Bolshevist."

Weinstein was instrumental in having two young boys write to the National Office of the Young Workers League asking that organization's opinion of the Boy Scouts of America.

In order to give Weinstein an opportunity of fully expressing his views on the blessings of our present Republican form of government and the principles of his organization to the members of the Y. W. L., the national office has challenged him to debate one of its members in New York City, and has further offered to pay his railroad fare and expenses. The subject proposed is as follows: Resolved: That the youth of the working people in the United States should work to the end of replacing the present form of Government by a Soviet Republic controlled by the workers and working farmers." Weinstein has the alternative of choosing some similar subject if he so desires.

Steel Toilers in Stand for Labor Party

By WALLACE T. METCALF

(Special to "The Worker")

WARREN, OHIO.—For the first time in the history of the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers, the reactionary Tighe machine was confronted by a formidable progressive block. The progressives succeeded in forcing thru a resolution favoring the creation of an independent political party of labor against the frantic opposition of the machine.

On the question of amalgamation the reaction won by a vote of 71 to 58, but only after a parliamentary conflict that shattered their own ranks and left the machine tottering.

Again the militants lashed the machine to fury when they pressed to the fore the question of the imprisonment of Jacob Dolla, member of the Amalgamated, now imprisoned in the Eastern Pennsylvania penitentiary on a frame-up concocted by steel trust agents. With much bombast the machine explained that it had donated the sum of $500 to the defense fund. This seemed to be the extent of their willingness to press the case, but the convention forced them instructions to the executive committee to proceed at once to use every means at their disposal to work for the immediate release of Dolla.

Miles City, Mont., for Labor Party

MILES CITY, Mont.—The Trades and Labor Council has re-affirmed its demand for recognition of Soviet Russia, and sent telegrams to President Harding and Secretary of State Hughes notifying them of the action.

The Council also endorsed the idea of a Labor Party in the referendum of the Trade Union Educational League.

Unite for Labor Party

CHICAGO.—Invitations to 30,000 local unions in the country to send delegates to the national convention called by the Farmer-Labor party will be sent out following many favorable responses from the international unions and other national organizations.

The convention is scheduled for July 3 in Carmen's hall. Its object is to unite in one organization all the labor elements who favor political action outside the two old parties.

Chester Says He Will Fight

Rear Admiral Colby M. Chester, United States Navy, retired, informs the world, thru a speech before members of the Federated American Chambers of Commerce of the Near East, that he and his associates will "fight all comers" for the Chester Oil Concession granted by the Turkish Angora government in the Near East.

Chester has had the smell of Near East oil in his nostrils ever since he sailed into the Harbor of Smyrna, as captain of the U. S. S. Kentucky, in 1900. He knows, as a good militarist, that generals and admirals, especially those who have retired, never do the fighting. He knew that when President Roosevelt and Elihu Root backed him in his oil venture years ago.

Chester knows, when he says he will fight, that he means that he expects the workers of the United States to fight for him and his oil profiteering friends of the Ottoman-American Developing Co., U. S. financed. Chester has already picked the workers of the nation whom he wishes America's toilers to make war upon when he asks for United States recognition of the Turkish government because "it has done such magnificent work in the last year, driving out three foreign foes, including Great Britain."

Chester, the oil capitalist, would have America's workers fight Great Britain, in addition to the lesser aspirants for property rights over the Near East oil fields. He objects even to the League of Nations butting in to settle the British mandate over the Mosul Oil fields under Arab rule.

Over every Chester oil well in the Near East there will float the stars and stripes. Under the camouflage of missionaries killed and Christianity threatened, the war drums will begin to beat on this side of the Atlantic when the occasion requires. England joined in the war on Germany to prevent German capitalists ruling the railroad from Berlin to Bagdad, and on to the Persian gulf, tapping the rich resources of Western Asia. That war is over but American capitalists, taking the place of German profiteers, are grabbing off everything that can be coined into a dollar, all the while in the face of rising British hostility. Thus are the seeds of new wars sown, wars that no Chester and his kind will fight, but wars they will force America's working class youth to fight, unless the workers of the United States, join with the workers of Russia, Turkey and other countries for the smashing of all capitalism's bloody rivalries.

Cossack Rule Still Lives

There will be at least two years more of Cossack Rule in West Virginia. The fight for the abolition of this "Military Regime" has been blocked by the state legislature postponing action for that length of time.

Thus for two more years these booted and spurred terrorists in uniform will ride thru the state knouting workers into submission to the open shop.

The reason for the temporary defeat of this fight on "The State Police" is seen in the fact that at the head of West Virginia's state administration is Governor E. F. Morgan, a political tool of the non-union mine owners. With a scab governor and state legislature, the political war on the "Cossacks" was doomed from the start.

Governor Morgan is, of course, proud of his victory, won for the coal barons. He takes the occasion to denounce the Civil Liberties Union. He charges this organization, that has sought to establish some semblance of civil liberty in this state, with "promoting industrial strife."

To which Prof. Harry F. Ward, chairman of the Union, has replied: "It is just as much our business to go into West Virginia in behalf of free speech as it is for the United State Steel Corporation and the Pennsylvania Railroad, who dominate industry in West Virginia, to invade it with their program, against free speech."

The coal, steel and railroad barons run West Virginia today to suit themselves. They have their State Cossacks. They own the old parties. They carry the governor and the state legislature around in their vest pockets. As a result they are on top.

There is at least one thing that the workers of West Virginia can do now. That is to get behind the Labor Party referendum of the Trade Union Educational League. Workers of West Virginia! Take up the question of class political action. Form local Labor Parties in all your cities, steel towns and mining camps. Call a state Labor Party Conference, just as the workers elsewhere are doing. Get into the fight to win the state government of West Virginia, from the top down, and then there will be a chance of wiping out Cossack Rule at the next session of the state legislature.

May Day Message from Russia

Just as if some capitalist parliament were in session discussing important problems, so the American capitalist press has been following the All-Russian Communist Party Congress at Moscow during the past week.

Where the bitter press lies spread the false report that party divisions had forced the postponement of the congress until the summer, now it must confess it lied and publish facts showing the unity of the Russian Communist Party, not only the directing force of the Soviet Republic, but the inspiration of the World Social Revolution.

The decisions of the congress are testimony to the stability and strength of Soviet Rule. There is to be no wavering in adherence to the dictatorship of the proletariat, that may continue ten years more until all bourgeois influence has been liquidated. The monopoly on foreign trade is to continue. The workers and peasants are to have complete control over the disposition of the products of their factories and fields in foreign lands. Wherever principle is involved, the Communist Party is to have direction of the economic reconstruction of the country. The export of grain to establish credits abroad has been approved. These are the decisions of a triumphant revolution.

With the passing of the famine and its after-effects, Soviet Russia will proceed to regain the European bread market, now in the hands of the United States. It is not expected that this will be difficult. America demands gold in payment, something Europe has very little of. Russia seeks machinery and other manufactures in return for her grain, thus providing the market that Western Europe is seeking. This assures the victory of Russia's reconstruction program.

These Russian Communist decisions constitute an enthusing International May Day Message for May 1, 1923. This is a message of inspiration and a call to action to oppressed workers thruout the entire world. Let all who labor learn its full significance.

Electing the Right Kind

Resting for a few moments in his Don Quixote attacks on the Standard Oil Octopus, Robert Marion La Follette, U. S. Senator from Wisconsin, assails the robbery of the Sugar Barons. La Follette promised us $1 gasoline. Now he predicts 20 cents sugar. And he asks us, "How do you like the Invisible Government?" of big business.

We say we do not like this rule of the plunderers. We urge the workers to organize against it and fight it industrially, thru their trade unions. We call upon labor to unite everywhere in a class Labor Party to war upon it politically.

La Follette says, "If you don't like it, elect a different kind of President and Senators who will give us a real Representative Government," and he expects to get this thru his capitalist party, the Republican party, at a time when the "invisible government" is planning to run Harding for re-election on an "open-shop" program for this same party.

So-called liberalism in American politics never showed itself more blind than in the utterances of La Follette, coupled with similar declarations by Borah and other alleged "progressives." It is a hopelessly bankrupt "liberalism" that is caught between the brutal tyranny of an arrogant capitalist class, ruling thru both the Republican and Democratic parties, but facing for the first time the crystallizing aspirations of the workers taking up the powerful weapon to be found in a class Labor Party.

William Jennings Bryan has suspended his magazine "The Commoner," which no doubt ends his efforts to capture the Democratic Party. We can see the same fate awaiting "La Follette's Magazine," as the Wisconsin senator blindly runs around in the wake of Wall Street's political bosses.

We agree with La Follette that the voters should elect the right kind of a president and senators. But the "right kind," from the standpoint of human progress, are not to be found in the Republican and Democratic parties. They will come from the class conscious masses of industrial toilers and working farmers.

Amalgamation for Banks Only

Financial ventures on the part of labor in New York City are creating new problems. Craft minded officials, rejoicings in divisions among the workers, continue organizing separate banks.

The locomotive engineers, with their biggest bank in Cleveland, have established connections in New York City with the Schwab-Dupont Empire Trust Co. The Amalgamated Clothing Workers Union is really first in the field with the Amalgamated Bank. The International Ladies' Garment Workers Union is coming along with the International Labor Bank, while the Federation Bank is in process of organization by the Central Trades and Labor Council.

Morris Sigman, president of the I. L. G. W. U., successor of Benjamin Schlesinger, foe of amalgamation in the needle trades, now comes along with an amalgamation scheme for these various labor banks. Evidently it is felt that amalgamation is a good thing for the banks. It is discovered that there are really no craft divisions between the various kinds of U. S. currency, that money is the same whether handled by a men's clothing worker, a ladies' garment worker, a locomotive engineer, or any other kind of toiler.

No doubt the workers in the needle trades, as they watch amalgamation of their banks, will be asking why they cannot amalgamate their unions, in order to present a solid front to the needle bosses in the industrial struggle.

Members of the I. L. G. W. U. should make it difficult for the Sigman administration to champion a policy of "Amalgamation for Banks Only," while fighting amalgamation for the unions.

Do you agree with us? Then join the Workers Party!

Coal, Iron and Oil

France has now established with 80 cavalry divisions, 1,000 tanks, supported by a military army of occupation of 70,000. Thus the French hope to get iron and coal out of this rich Ruhr valley. But according to a report made to the British Labor Party, France is getting "next to nothing." But the British have in addition, forces of 34,000 men, 360 guns and 100 airplanes in the Near East, in an effort to grab off the oil resources in this part of the world. This force is supported by a naval squadron in the Mediterranean of five super-dreadnoughts and two battle cruisers. The fight for coal, iron and oil is getting hotter and hotter. It will get so hot that it will burn up capitalism itself, as these profit rivalries burst forth into the flames of new wars.

Goff Wants To Go To Jail

We are indebted to a West Virginia comrade for sending in a copy of the Sisterville, W. Va., Daily Review in which press space is given to a speech by "Colonel" Guy D. Goff, assistant attorney general of the United States, in which Daugherty's aid declared that, "Any man who owes a higher allegiance to any organization than he does to the government of the United States should be sent to a federal prison or deported to a country which gives him his peculiar liberty". We wonder that Goff doesn't fear talking himself into prison under a workers' government in these United States.

They Get the Laundry List

Every "Red Raid" has its comical features. Thus in the recent attack on the Communists in Washington, D. C., the Burns-Daugherty sleuths descended on the home of Edward J. Ervine, Workers Party secretary, at midnight, and went away triumphantly with what they announced in the kept press was "a complete list of all Communists in Washington". It turned out to be a list of customers of the laundry for which Ervine worked. We surmise there has been a cleaning of dunnbbells in the department of justice as a result of this fiasco.

The "Middle Class" Organizes

The helpless, fast disappearing "middle class" is going to get organized. An "International Middle Class Conference" will be called for September 18-20, at Berne, Switzerland, and like a true lackey of capitalism, it is going to consider ways and means of fighting Communism. It will be interesting to see what kind of representatives will go to this conference from the United States. Sam Gompers might send William English Walling and John Spargo.

Respect For Royalty Fades

British cities under the rule of working class city councils are not very hospitable to the royalty. Instead of providing the usual reception for the king's family, this time the Duke of York and his bride, Edinburgh laborites urged that the royal pair be asked to sit in at a feed to the proletariat. The Prince of Wales is scheduled for a visit to Leeds, the city council of which has voted no celebration at all. The British labor boycott of the monarchy grows.

Let Us Know in Advance

Scientists are planning to stage a miniature earthquake by setting off tons of explosives in some deserted Pennsylvania coal mine. They hope thus to study earth tremors. They had better announce the explosion in advance or they will be compelled to study the tremors of Daugherty, Burns and other "anti-red" patriots who are known to jump every time a dog barks. Safety first!

Wages of seamen are also being increased as an antidote to radicalism. Its a wise worker who accepts the increase but remains loyal to his radicalism just the same.

Labor Straddles the World

Clergymen Declare Tears for Butchkevitch Gross Hypocricy

The National Labor Alliance for Trade Relations with and Recognition of Soviet Russia has gathered together the statements of several clergyman on the execution of Vicar General Butchkavitch by the Russian Soviet Government. We do not have the space to publish these declarations in full. Extracts are as follows:

By REV. JOHN HOWARD MELISH.
Pastor, Church of the Holy Trinity, Brooklyn, N. Y.

It is no crime against religion and humanity to punish priests who seek to betray Russia to Poland or to Rome. Now it is certainly not the right or the duty of the government of the United States to protest against the punishment of such political priests, or to make their punishment a reason for the non-recognition of the present government. What would these objectors say if Russia were to refuse to recognize the government of the United States because of the Mooney case in California?

By REV. NORMAN THOMAS.
Contributing Editor, The Nation.

I see no reason to doubt that the Russian Government tells the truth when it says that Vicar General Butchkavitch was executed for his treasonable relations with Poland, rather than for his loyalty to his own church. Certainly the fact that he was a priest should have conferred no special immunity on him.

By REV. JOHN HAYNES HOLMES.
Pastor, The Community Church, New York City.

When our government has freed its political prisoners, has stopped its persecution of Communists, has disbanded its secret service and repealed its constitutional provision against treason, it will be time enough to protest against such events as the prosecution of the Roman Priest, Butchkavitch. Under present conditions such protests constitute a brand of hypocricy which is as disgusting as it is cruel.

By REV. DR. PERCY STICKNEY GRANT.
Pastor, Curch of the Ascension, New York City.

The execution of the Vicar General Butchkavitch by the Soviet Government was not an instance of religious persecution but was the wrath of the government against political treason which happened to fall on the head of a high churchman.

The Venerable "Fathers"

By JAY LOVESTONE

Our schools deify the "FATHERS" of the American Government. They set them up as idols to be worshipped. But the noted historian McMaster fearlessly characterizes these "Fathers" in the following:

"A very little study of long-forgotten politics will suffice to show that the filibustering and gerrymandering, in stealing Governorships and polls, in colonizing and distributing changing. They seldom judge or determine right."

Governor Morris went as far as even to propose the appointment of men of aristocratic blood for life to the upper House, the Senate, in order to check the lower House. And Madison, often called the Father of the Constitution, believed that the Government ought "to protect the minority of the opulent against the majority." This is the essence of American "democracy" today, a rule of the employing class, by the employing class, and for the employing class—a capitalist dictatorship over the working class.

Bucharin Makes Impressive Speech at 25th Anniversary Celebration of Russian Communist Party

By ISRAEL AMTER
(Our European Staff Correspondent)

The Russian Communist Party has just celebrated its twenty-fifth anniversary.

Altho the Party is only a few years old, the Bolsheviki who organized it, trace back their lineage to the Social-Democratic Party, which was founded in 1898. That was the date of the organization of the modern revolutionary movement in Russia. Within the party there soon arose factions—the Bolsheviki and the Mensheviki, who based their differences on matters of principles and tactics.

The principles underlying the Bolshevik movement and the factors that imparted impregnable strength to their faction were outlined in masterly, vigorous form by Comrade Bucharin in a brilliant address at the celebration arranged by the Moscow Trade Unions at the Moscow Trade Union Hall.

"There is one thing that distinguished our Party above all others," he said, "and that was Discipline.

"First of all, we observed Discipline of Thought. Some regarded our party as rigid, believing that we were narrow and dogmatic. We had adopted a Marxian standpoint and would not tolerate any deviation from that point of view.

"We had constantly to meet with criticism. There was criticism from the Social-Democratic Party of Germany. It also was a good party. But it had in it such men as Bernstein, who demanded that there be "freedom" of thought within the party. He got it in the German Party, owing to the growth of a certain influence—and see what we have today in Germany!

"The Bolsheviki considered it a most serious offense if a person diverged from real Marxism. Yes, they called us dogmatists—but that saved Marxism.

"All the other parties followed the war madness in 1914; our Party adhering to the orthodox point of view and judging all phenomena from that point of view, refused to be carried along by the madness—and thus was saved. Hence the Russian Social-Democratic Party could continue its Marxist way, while all the other parties were shattered.

"As a Marxian Party, the Bolshevik groups always properly evaluated capitalist epochs. Thus, twenty years ago, it discussed the nature and course of capitalist development. It opened a discussion with peasants and with nationalist socialists and in this manner obtained a correct point of view.

"There are some Marxists, who are not masters of Marxism, but of whom Marxism is the master. They are mountebanks. But others, like the Bolsheviki, are capable of adjusting themselves to changing conditions. They are masters of Marxism.

"Lenin, altho personifying the inner composition of Marxian thought, yet is capable of using Marxian philosophy as a criterion of action. Judging by the experience of the Bolsheviki suggested the idea of soviets. The Mensheviki looked at them in astonishment. "What do you want a new form for?" they asked. "Social-Democracy is all we need, and that is what we stand for."

"Lenin has never hesitated to criticize Communists. He has told them openly that simply because they assume a Communist position is no proof whatever of their ability in practice. Only recently he told them that there are plenty of people in the street who know far more than they do. Communists must learn to build up from the very bottom. If they prove to be incapable, bourgeois specialists will have to be put in. If Communists, therefore, do not wish this to happen, they must learn how to become Communists in practice.

"Many comrades hesitate when giving an answer to questions, feeling they may be judged as belonging either to the right or left. That is not the criterion for an answer—it must be a correct answer. Thus, in confronting the problems before us, some of the Comrades felt disappointed since the Party seemed to be getting more and more interested in the peasants. Yes, Comrades, the workers and peasants must be better correlated. Some of the workers thought that, as a result of this new tactic, the party was getting out of touch with the proletariat. The question is simply whether the Party shall be guided by the weight it bears, or shall determine the weight it will bear?

"When the Revolution broke out, it came as a tremendous surprise to us: we could not believe that the workers were capable of such magnificent achievement. Now they are a big mass which, as yet inert and not understanding, must be dragged along.

"Then there was another factor that made us strong: discipline of organization. There were many things that separated us from the Mensheviki, but the important thing was that we demanded that only those who really work in the Party should be members of the Party. The Mensheviki, on the other hand, wanted also those who sympathize with the movement to be in the Party, such as doctors, lawyers, etc.

"A party such as ours must have not only discipline of thought, but also discipline of will. And we may say of our Party that that was not to be found in any other party in the world. Of course, we were laughed at. We were called soldiers, men not capable of free discussion. Well, history has shown who were right: look at the other parties today.

"A revolutionary party must be able to adapt itself to all conditions. Today it must be in the trenches, tomorrow in the fields, then in airplanes. Only when it is a master of everything can it hope to conquer. First we sent the workers to the front, then we put them to work building railways. Then we sent them into the fields to harvest the crops. The workers, not comprehending our intentions, used to say that the Central Executive Committee were carrying on some indoor sport or were playing chess with them.

"And above it all stood the authority of Lenin. He was the teacher, not with a rod in his hand, but the master in whom the workers and the members of the Party saw a compendium of world experience.

"And now he is ill—very ill. Tomorrow the doctors will announce that he is a little better. We have the greatest specialists here, but we will bring them from any part of the world in order to save him. Still we dare not conceal the fact that his condition is very critical.

"At such a time, when conditions are improving economically and politically, we must face the worst calamity—with Lenin on his sickbed. In the face of this possible catastrophe, it is our highest duty to be firmly united, to have a unity of purpose. Any group that tries to break our unity must be fought ruthlessly.

"And we must have close contact with the masses, for without that contact the Party will cease to exist as a proletarian party. In the Trade Unions are the masses which the Party leads, and they, in turn, lead the broad masses.

"Long live our unity with the Trade Unions! Long live the unity of the Party! Long live the solidarity of the Russian Party with the parties of the other countries! Unity! Unity! Unity! That is our call."

With crip-lammed precision, with glistening eyes, standing before the 1,500 workers gathered in the Trade Union Hall, in his blue blouse, Bucharin told them the lessons of the experiences of the Bolsheviki and the Russian Communist Party—lessons that American Communists and the Communists of other countries have yet to learn.

Ruthenberg Case to Jury

Gompers' Gag Rule Hit by Seattle Labor

By HARVEY O'CONNOR
(Federated Press Correspondent)

SEATTLE.—Revocation of the charter of the Seattle Central Labor Council is threatened within 60 days by the executive council of the A. F. of L. unless Seattle labor renounces its advocacy of trade relations with Russia.

Furthermore it must withdraw its demand for the recognition of the Russian republic; devote less time to discussion of Russian and Hindu affairs; withdraw its indorsement of the Farmer-Labor party and accept the A. F. of L. nonpartisan political policy; co-operate whole-heartedly with the State Federation of Labor, and expel three unions not recognized by the A. F. of L.

This order, received at the last meeting of the Seattle council was issued after investigation by the executive council of the A. F. of L. upon the complaint of various international unions. The complaints were sent to organizer C. O. Young, A. F. of L. representative in Washington. Organizer Young attended the last meeting of the Central Labor Council in the past year. The local council was not asked to explain its attitude during the probe.

The council immediately dispatched a reply to A. F. of L. headquarters denying that it had in any manner violated the constitution of that body, with the exception of seating delegates of the lady barbers, blacksmiths and engineers locals. A bill of particulars was also asked, as the executive council's letter contained only vague charges.

The leading count in the indictment was that the local council "spends more time talking about Russia and India than in dealing with local union business." The reply of the council states that the Seattle body's constitution places local union business first on its weekly calendar. Russia has not been officially discussed for months, and India but once in the past year.

The answer to the indictment and threat was drawn up by Secretary James A. Duncan and received the unanimous indorsement of the Central Labor Council.

Delegates held that the A. F. of L. acted outside of its rights in attempting to dictate the attitude of Seattle labor toward independent political action, Russia and other issues. Indorsement of independent political action by the United Mine Workers, and the statement that the A. F. of L. indorsed the plea of the Irish for independence prior to the creation of the Irish Free State, are cited as examples of the constitutionality of the local acts. The local council has promised to unseat delegates of the three unions, if so ordered.

Some delegates regard the A. F. of L.'s action as timed to coincide with an election in the Washington State Federation of Labor, a few weeks off. The Seattle labor movement has disagreed with William Short, president of the state body, on political issues. Others saw the action as an attempt to secure control of the Daily Seattle Union Record, owned by the Central Labor Council which might revert to the national body with the revocation of the charter.

Detroit Opposes Fascisti

DETROIT, Mich.—A mass meeting of workers in the House of the Masses here unanimously adopted resolutions calling upon the workers to organize one solid front against the bourgeoisie and the Fascisti movement which is rapidly spreading thruout the world.

Foster Sees Big Task Ahead for Militants of the East

By WILLIAM Z. FOSTER
Secretary, Trade Union Educational League

The Conference of the Eastern District of the Trade Union Educational League, to be held in New York on May 5th and 6th, will be one of the most important gatherings held by militants in recent years. It will mark the beginning of an intensified drive to achieve the policies of the League in the labor movement thruout the many States making up the Eastern District. Under Comrade Manley's direction, substantial groups of militants have been built in most of the big centers thruout his territory. The thing now needed is to bring the representatives of these groups together, so that the whole movement may be co-ordinated and given impetus towards a common goal. This the coming Conference will do.

Amalgamation and a Labor Party! These are the two great issues now being stressed by the Trade Union Educational League everywhere. They represent the most vital needs of the labor movement on both the industrial and political fields. The Eastern District Conference will intensify, systematize, and organize the movement to support these measures thruout the populous industrial district of the Atlantic seaboard. If the League members in these places are awake to the situation, if they fully grasp the opportunities presented them, they will rally to the Conference and make it a powerful instrument for the revolutionizing of the whole American labor movement.

Raids and Arrests in Pittsburgh Tribute to Success of Militants in Rousing Coal and Steel Slaves

By MAX LERNER
(Special to "The Worker")

PITTSBURGH, Pa.—Glowing tribute to the success of the left wing movement among the coal miners, and the developments in the steel industry, was paid by the raid upon the District Headquarters, of the Workers Party, in the Labor Lyceum in this city, capitol of Gary's steel and coal empire.

It was with the usual grandiloquent, opera bouffe, comic methods, made famous in past Department of Justice Raids, that a horde of detectives of all sorts swooped down upon the Labor Lyceum, the headquarters of Dist. 5, Workers Party, last Friday, seized everyone in the office, confiscated all records of any kind they could lay their hands on, and fearing lest the office furniture might contain some seditious acts if left to stay in the offices of both the Workers Party and in the office of the building, they carted the furniture away with them, as well as all the literature in sight.

Everyone in the building was given the closest scrutiny and put thru a hurried third degree. Everyone coming into the building was taken to some dark corner and a gun shoved up against him while he was questioned.

Thus did the brave detectives, department of justice men, and divers others, who helped in the grand coup d'etat start their work to nip in the bud "the great red plot.

But the dark night's work was not ended. That was one night when the divers persons on government, city and county payrolls felt they must make up for the rest of the year and for that night earn their salaries. House after house was raided. It mattered not who the persons were so long as there was the least suspicion that they had a queer sounding name or were attached in some vague fashion with the progressive movement of the workers—the country was not safe until they were in the toils of the heroes.

Thus the total netted that night was somewhere in the vicinity of 27 people, among them Comrade Fred Merrick, District Organizer Katsiolis, Jenkins, manager of the Labor Lyceum, Pasternack and others.

Up to date the authorities are still looking for a number of the active workers both in the Workers Party and in the progressive movement who happened to be fortunate enough to have been elsewhere than the detectives expected them that night.

The raid is the climax to a series of unsuccessful attempts made recently to put the Workers Party and the progressive movement out of the running. The Workers Party and the progressive movement, which it heartily supports, have thus far come off victorious. This raid, hatched in the fevered brains of various individuals and Department of Justice agents who feel they must pull off something spectacular once in a while to earn their salaries, is not going to stop the work here a bit if indications

Break This Conspiracy of Silence

To those who have followed with interest the story of the Foster trial in the capitalist press, it may seem rather strange that the case has now almost entirely disappeared from both the capitalist press and the New York Call and Forward. To students of the subject it takes on the nature of a frame-up. It is dangerous it seems for the public to know the inside story of this now famous case. Not content with this means of excluding the public eye, the authorities have ordered the public to be barred from attendance at the trial. The proceedings therefore are being held without the usual visitors.

On Friday, May 4, at 8 P. M., William Z. Foster, the first defendant in the Michigan case, will give the inside story of the proceedings. He will tell in full the things that happened which the newspapers did not dare to print. He will tear aside the blanket of silence which the employing class is trying to put upon these matters that are so vital to the workers.

An overflow meeting is expected at Webster Hall, 119 E. 11th St., on the evening mentioned. Admission of 25c. will be charged. The entire proceeds will go for the defense.

Young Daugherty in Sanitarium

Major Draper M. Daugherty, son of Attorney General Harry M. Daugherty, has been sent to a sanitarium to recuperate from his drinking bouts. Young Daugherty broke into the limelight thru his connection with Det King, the slain model-companion of J. Kearsley Mitchell, alias Marshall, the Philadelphia millionaire. The attorney general will no doubt be ready to go to the same place after a few more anti-Communist trials in Michigan.

When this issue of "The Worker" went to press, Wednesday afternoon, May 2, the indications were that the case of C. E. Ruthenberg would be put in the hands of the jury at St. Joseph, Mich., before the day was over.

It is difficult even to hazard a guess as to what the verdict will be. In any case the Ruthenberg trial will not be followed immediately by the trial of any of the other Michigan defendants.

If Ruthenberg is acquitted the other indictments will no doubt be dropped. If he is convicted the case will be carried to the highest court in the land, the other cases being held in abeyance pending the final decision.

Attorney Frank P. Walsh, in closing the case for the defense, asked, "Who will dare challenge that history does not show the facts as stated by the Communists. We may hope that the final working out of the problem will come otherwise than thru civil war, but the facts of the past struggles, of the present struggle, cannot be denied.

"What do the Communists say?" asked Walsh. "They say that today a new oligarchy rules. They say that the few own the industries. That the great trusts with their control centering in the banking houses of Wall Street control the wages which the workers in the factories receive and also the prices they pay for the things they buy. Is there anything on trial in this court room that has anything in common with this aristocracy".

Harrison Makes Jurors Smile

Frank P. Walsh, Attorney for C. E. Ruthenberg, rested the case of defense Tuesday afternoon. The prosecution also rested. Evidently the prosecutors, after examining their rebuttal witness, J. Sposa, who has recently been expelled from the Workers Party as a spy, decided that this brutal looking government agent, who speaks a broken English, would not help their case, and kept him off the stand. Sposa had been in the Courthouse all day.

Caleb Harrison was the last witness for Ruthenberg. He testified to the struggle within the Communist Party about the question of coming out in the open and the part that Ruthenberg had taken in that struggle. His winning personality made the jurymen smile for the first time during this trial.

Prosecutor Smith in his closing argument used his time in reading

Militant Conferences During May and June

During May and June several conferences of great importance to the militants in the trade unions will take place. Those already arranged are as follows:

Eastern District, T. U. E. L., Labor Temple, 66th St., near Third Ave., New York City, May 5-6.

Eastern District Railroaders, New York City, May 5-6.

Needle Trades Section, T. U. E. L., New York City, May 5-6.

Shoe and Leather Trades, Boston, May 12.

Progressive Miners, Pittsburgh, Pa., June 2-3.

The Eastern District Conference will be made up of representatives from Leagues from all thru the Eastern States. The other four conferences are national in scope, being organized by the respective National Committees. All League members should do everything possible to make these vital conferences successful.

"The Worker" was informed at press time that the meeting place of Trade Union Educational League meetings, May 5-6, would be held at the Bohemian Hall, 321 East 73d St., instead of at the Labor Temple, on 84th St.

Canada Bars Howat, Admits Bitner

(Special Wire to "The Worker")

McAdam Junction, New Brunswick, Canada.—Alex Howat, of Kansas, and Thomas Myerscough, Secretary of the Progressive Miners' International Committee, were stopped at the Canadian border here by immigration officials who refused to allow them to proceed.

Howat and Myerscough had been invited to come to Canada by the Nova Scotia coal miners and address a number of meetings, opening with the May Day Demonstration.

When taken into custody, Saturday, the two coal miner militants were refused the right to go either way, back to the United States, or on to their destination.

Van Bitner, field marshal for President John L. Lewis, of the United Mine Workers' Union, is warring on militant coal miners was on the same train with Howat and Myerscough. But he got thru without trouble.

Canadian immigration officials said they were holding Howat and Myerscough on information that they intended to agitate against the government, and to create general disturbances in Nova Scotia. These officials, however, refused to reveal the source of their information.

Alex Howat will make his first appearance in New York City, at a mass meeting to be held Sunday afternoon, May 20, at the New Star Casino, 107th St. and Park Ave.

May Day, 1923, Shook Him Up a Little More

The Revolt of the American Marine Workers

By GEORGE HARDY

The inevitable has happened in the Marine Industry. A national strike in the industry has been declared by the Marine Transport Workers Industrial Union of the Industrial Workers of the World. This strike has been long overdue. The competent seamen have, for a long time past, been refusing to sign on, taking their chances at more remunerative work ashore.

The seamen's wages have been constantly reduced since the loss of the 1921 strike, conditions at sea have been gradually getting worse, overtime pay has ceased to exist, the Dog-Watch (12 hour day) prevails in most of the ships. The International Seamen's Union of the American Federation of Labor has been reduced to a skeleton, and as a result of the utter lack of efficient organization American ships have been sailing under the open shop system (American plan).

While the wages of shore-workers, of late, have had a tendency to increase those of the seamen have been miserably inadequate and far below the substantial level, especially for those who have the added responsibilities of dependents ashore.

Carpenters wages are $70 per month; for $55 able-bodied seamen must bear the rigors of exposure during hurricane weather, while "Mr. Fat" lies snug and warm in the Cabin and Saloon. Before the sweltering fires the stokers, almost blind with perspiration, must toil for $57.50 per month. Wages are equally low in all other departments, with Ordinary Seamen receiving as low as $40 per month.

A general increase of $20 per month over all existing rates is being asked

Problems of Our Party

II. A Discussion with Upton Sinclair on the United Front

By JOHN PEPPER

The Socialist Party is becoming more and more of a shilly-shally Party. The honest workers within the Socialist Party are thoroly aroused against the policy of Morris Hillquit and Victor Berger. But the honest leaders in the Socialist Party are also beginning to rebel against the official policy of this Party.

Scott Nearing declared that the Social'st Party belongs to the past, and the future belongs to the Workers Party. Eugene Debs indorsed the amalgamation policies of the Trade Union Educational League, while the Socialist Party supports the policies of Gompers.

Nearing and Debs write articles for the Communist "Liberator," and declare their solidarity with the persecuted Communists, while the N. Y. Call and the Forward hurl the most shameless slanders at Foster, Ruthenberg and all other Communists. The managing board of the N. Y. Call reprints the vindictive articles of the N. Y. Herald against Soviet Russia, and David Karsner resigns his editorship on the ground that he is for the united front of all working class parties.

Norman Thomas openly condemns in the Rand School, the policy of the Socialist Party toward the trial of the clericals in Russia.

The official Socialist Party, in the Cleveland Conference for Progressive Political Action, fights against admittance of the Workers Party to

Why the Workers Party?

This question is answered in the accompanying discussion between Upton Sinclair and John Pepper. We urge all our readers to thoroly study both declarations. Pepper is writing a series of articles on Workers Party problems. The article on "My Party—Right or Wrong," will appear in next week's issue.

Prosecution in Fear of Ruthenberg

from the 1921 program of the Communist Party, and the "A. B. C. of Communism" to show that the Communist Party advocated the use of violence in the class struggle, but all the references to violence had in them the words "the final struggle" or "the idea of armed insurrection", plainly indicating that they referred to something that would happen sometime in the future history of the struggle.

Attorney Walsh was obliged twice to interrupt Smith's argument and take an exception because of his making statements which were not in evidence.

Prosecution Fears Ruthenberg

The prosecution was very much afraid to permit C. E. Ruthenberg to explain the Communist principles to the jury that is trying him. In the Foster case, Ruthenberg was cross-examined for three days, both Assistant Attorney General Smith and Prosecutor Gore taking turns at this job. Tuesday Smith dropped Ruthenberg after about an hours questioning, evidently giving up as a bad job the proposition to make Ruthenberg admit Communism was something it was not.

Even in this brief cross-examination Smith opened the door for Ruthenberg to state to the jury the Communist view in regard to the part that force plays in the class struggle. He asked Ruthenberg, "Have you ever advocated the use of violence and armed force?" "No," was Ruthenberg's positive answer.

Smith then read from an article on "Parliaments and Soviets", which Ruthenberg admitted writing, that the Communist philosophy includes "acceptance of the principle that the use of armed force" is an inevitable phase of the class struggle.

Ruthenberg tried to explain the difference between, "acceptance of the principle that the use of armed force" is a phase of the class struggle and "advocating" the use of armed force, but was not permitted to do so.

On re-direct examination Attorney Walsh asked Ruthenberg what he intended to say about this difference and Ruthenberg replied:

"I stated that I had never advocated the use of armed force. The my mind there is a great difference between advocating the use of armed force and the "acceptance of the principles" that in the historical process there will come a time when the class struggle will develope into such a rise of force thru the clashing economics and political interests of the contending classes".

This statement got before the jury the very distinction which Judge White made in his instruction to the Foster jury.

Attorney Walsh read to the jury the proposal of Ruthenberg for the open party known as the Lusk-Marshal theses, which appeared in an official organ of the Communist Party.

Smith questioned Ruthenberg about the nine times the latter had been arrested. He brought out that Ruthenberg had been convicted of opposing the conscription law at the beginning of the war and had served 10 months in prison. Also that he had served 18 months in New York state prison for publishing the Left Wing Manifesto of the Socialist Party. Answering a question about the latter conviction Ruthenberg said: "After eighteen months the Court of Appeals reversed the conviction and turned me loose, but without apology for its mistake."

On last Monday it seemed that the prosecution had forgotten that Ruthenberg was on trial for "assembling with the Communist Party." For Prosecutor Smith, cross-examining Jay Lovestone devoted his energies to questions having no relation to the point at issue in the trial. Smith was particularly insistent upon finding out the relations of the Communist Party with the Federated Press, trying to create the impression that the Communists controlled this labor press service.

In spite of Smith's badgering of Lovestone and continual insinuations the latter consistently maintained the position that the only money that had ever come to the Federated Press from Communist sources was payment for news services rendered to the Communist papers, payments made in the same manner in which other labor papers paid for this service.

Asked about Communist control, Lovestone answered that the Communists had never had control of the Federated Press. Simply sending the representatives of its press as other papers did.

The next effort of Prosecutor Smith was to show that the Workers Party had been formed on the basis of the resolutions from the Communist International. Lovestone answered, in spite of all efforts to make him say something different, that they had call for the convention for the organization of the Workers Party had been issued long before any instructions had been received and that the advice received from the Communist International had merely confirmed action already taken by the Central Executive committee of the Party.

Not a single reporter sits in the courtroom. The Sunday papers now carry no photographs. What is the cause for this contrast?

The Ruthenberg trial is more "sensational" than the Foster trial. In the trial of Foster, the COMMUNIST IDEA was the defendant. But in the trial of Ruthenberg, the defendant is the COMMUNIST PARTY itself with all its "secrets", "mysteries" and "underground".

The Ruthenberg trial is actually a Sunday pie for Sunday papers. The capitalist press had the opportunity in this trial to tell longer stories about "the red danger".

In spite of all this—the great silence. No word appears in the capitalist newspapers about the Ruthenberg trial.

What is the reason? Nothing else than the Government, the Capitalists, and the capitalist wholesaler of public opinion—the kept press—are panic stricken by the tremendous power of the COMMUNIST IDEA as it appeared in the Foster trial.

The masses were too greatly interested in the Foster trial. The New York World carried a letter from a reader (in this case the editor was a had censor). The writer explains that he is no Communist but that he is proud that Foster is a citizen of the United States. With many such Fosters in America, then America would indeed be the "home of the brave and the free". The letter shows that even the average indifferent newspaper readers were influenced by the COMMUNIST IDEA. Therefore, the great silence. Therefore, the Ruthenberg trial is being kept in quarantine.

Not only the capitalists are panic stricken but also all the labor fakirs. The publicity of the trial made the Communists too popular. They must be killed with silence. Matthew Woll, the Vice-President of the American Federation of Labor, says it openly.

"To retry Foster is to make something out of nothing. Had the jury acquitted him, he and his few associates would have set up the cry of 'persecution', had the jury convicted, he would have been heralded the world over as 'martyr' to the cause of conscience and freedom of speech. In having disagreed the jury leaves him nowhere.

"To ignore Foster now is to destroy the great monster that has been made out of a mere figment of capitalist propaganda. To disregard him is to inflict the greatest punishment that can be given him. He and his kind feed on notoriety. He and his kind die for want of it."

With hot iron Foster branded on the forehead of the Gompers Clique $75,000 a year labor leaders. The Foster trial magnified these branded letters so that every worker could see —therefore the great silence—about the Ruthenberg trial.

But not only the "kept press" kept silent. Not only the big labor papers thru obscurity would kill Ruthenberg and his case but the petty labor fakirs join the ranks of the dumb.

The New York Call, the official organ of the petty Tammany Hall of the Morris Hillquits and Victor Bergers "ignores" Ruthenberg and his trial.

In St. Joseph Ruthenberg is fighting for the most elementary rights of the working class and the New York Call is silent.

Because he is a pioneer in the proletarian struggle an army of spies is being marshalled against Ruthenberg and the New York Call is silent.

In St. Joseph, Ruthenberg, a leader of the working class is being prosecuted, and the New York Call is silent.

The trial of Ruthenberg is the trial of the entire working class. We are not alone in saying this. Eugene V. Debs wrote in his article in the last issue of the "Liberator":

"The duty of the American working class and indeed of all American people with love for liberty, and in despotism is as clear as the issue itself in the Michigan situation.

"If we have intelligence enough to understand the vital issue at stake, and courage enough to do our duty, we will back up our Comrades on trial in Michigan to the very last. We can no less than sympathize with and in defending them against this atrocious attack we are simply defending ourselves and our families and firesides.

"Let us all go to the rescue with loyal hearts, willing hands, and open purses, standing solidly behind our persecuted Comrades in the true spirit of solidarity."

The whole working class is on trial in St. Joseph with Ruthenberg and the New York Call is silent.

The Socialist Party and the New York Call have thru this criminal silence reached the climax of their treachery to the working class and to the cause of the revolution.

We challenge the Socialist Party before the whole working class Ruthenberg, the Communist, the leader of the Workers Party, is fighting in St. Joseph for freedom of speech, for the revolutionary idea, and at the same time is fighting for "the families and firesides of all the workers". The New York Call wants to kill with silence the revolutionary idea but at the same time it is killing the most elementary interest of the laboring masses and neglecting to defend "the families and firesides" of the oppressed and exploited workers.

The New York Call has with its silence about the Ruthenberg case finally arrived in the ranks of the "kept press", in the class of the New York Times and Herald. Thru its reports about the Butchkavitch case, the New York Call proved that it prints everything against the proletarian revolution that the New York Times and Herald print. Thru ignoring the Ruthenberg trial, the New York Call shows that it silences everything about the proletarian revolution which the New York Times and Herald silence.

We believe that honest Socialists cannot longer remain silent about the great silence of the New York Call. It is the duty of Eugene V. Debs openly to protest. It is the duty of Upton Sinclair to write a new chapter to his book the "Brass Check", on the prostitution of the New York Call. It is the duty of Morris Hillquits etc to flood with letters of protest the offices of the New York Call and the Socialist Party.

We Communists, however, have no fear for Ruthenberg. In St. Joseph he is fighting for the workers as bravely as he has lived his entire life for the cause of the workers. The Republican, Democratic, and Socialist "kept press" can boycott him but he has won his place in the minds and hearts of the workers.

The Great Silence will kill only the dumb.

Gary's Raid Forces United Labor Front

By DON BROWN

(Special Wire to "The Worker")

PITTSBURGH, Pa.—While 23 Comrades of the Workers Party lie in jail here as a result of the Party's giving aid to the 600 McKeesport mill laborers who went on a spontaneous strike last week, plans for a "United Front" defense of their cases are moving swiftly.

Defense meetings are being held in which socialists, liberals, union labor men, Workers Party men are taking part. Persons of every class in Pittsburgh, interested in saving for the American workers their constitutional rights of freedom of speech and freedom of assemblage, are being swept together by a common determination to defend these workers who are being punished because they alone were leading the bitter fight of Pennsylvania labor for economic freedom.

Pushed into a corner by a question, the District Attorney declared that the prisoners are being held on the charge that they have been "trying to steer the United Mine Workers into the Communist Party," also that they are implicated in the usual May Day "plot."

Of course, the charges are flimsy to an astonishing degree and most obviously trumped up. But the conditions only make the cases more serious. They prove how desperate and unscrupulous are the reactionary authorities in their efforts to stamp out these recognized leaders of the workers. This is further shown by the enormous bonds asked for the prisoners running from $50.000 for Merrick down to $1,000 for Costello. Costello is not even a member of the labor movement and his only offense consists in that he is Merrick's landlord.

The raiders even took all the furniture out of the Workers Party office in the Labor Lyceum. Not forgetting the chairs, and even taking the knob off the front door. But not from these articles, nor in the truck load of pamphlets and literature seized, it is believed, have they been able to secure anything upon which to base their case under the State Sedition Law.

Probably the most "damning of the evidence" is a large red piece of cloth which the policemen seized and displayed dramatically in front of the building, eight of them clutching it while the photographer for a local paper snapped them. It is the rabbi whose sermon at the labor banquets here, but it gloriously appeared in the form of a red banner seized by the police. "Little red tags, used in a tag day campaign to raise funds by a Jewish Sunday School class, also met here, were also seized and preserved by the detectives as valuable evidence."

These details of the affair perhaps seem humorous, but it must be repeated that the predicament of at least half of the Comrades seized is most serious. The reactionary officials of this Gary owned town are out to "get" Merrick and the other vital forces in the local labor movement. They don't make any bones about it, and they don't care how they do it. It is also openly hinted that the reactionary Lewis machine had something to do with the raid. This seems more likely when it is remembered that the thugs of this reactionary betrayer were only narrowly foiled in an attempt to kill Merrick during the great strike, but tonight (May 1) I attended a meeting at which the intensity of feeling against the directness of the attack was laid, made me believe that every class conscious man and woman in Pittsburgh will by the end of this week be swept into a great movement for the defense of these first line defenders of the working people who sleep in Gary's cells as I write, and Merrick is still a "marked man."

Hershon, Gates & Co. Are Importers of All Brands of "Robots" from "Free Italy" to "This Land of Liberty"

By C. E. WARE

A new international trust is in process of formation. It is Gary, Mussolini & Co., Importers of All Brands of "Robots" from "Free Italy" to "This Land of Liberty." Judge E. H. Gary needs more slaves. Harry Daugherty, Attorney General (murder), transportation and distribution agent, Secretary of Labor Davis, and Secretary of Commerce Hoover, to furnish the bulls—the smoke screen which is even confusing some of the congressional puppets in the show.

As Gary has said, the steel industry wants foreign-born labor. As, once Mr. Harding and Davis echoed the glad refrain, "Something must be done."

"I'm the guy that can do it for you," cables Mr. Mussolini. Just tell me what variety of ROBOTS you need and I'll guarantee to fill the order."

"We are consulting our counsel. Mr. Daugherty will tell us how to fix up the question of a little contract labor law that stands in the way, and we'll let you know," answers Mr. Davis.

And Mr. Harding will sell the idea under the label of "Prosperity, Americanism and Freedom".

After "selection", slave gangs are to be brought in past the Statue of Liberty, given a lecture, the first of the Americanization series, on the opportunities in this great land of the free, plenty of room at the top, etc.; then finger-printed, photographed and registered by the obliging Mr. Davis and distributed according to the dictates of capitalist needs, owned body and soul, catalogued and distributed, herded in mill barracks, construction camps and mine towns.

And they will make up the slave army, the Robots, who will grind out the profits to exhalt our high civilization still higher.

Coal and Steel Barons Crazy in Pittsburgh

of how the organized workers all over the district feel about it is any sign.

Everywhere the organized workers are indignant over this attempt to stop workers' organizations and to suppress free speech and they denounce it in no uncertain language. The authorities counted upon a meek and submissive spirit on the part of the progressives, for Pittsburgh is known as the "Hell Hole of Capitalism," where Capitalism holds almost undisputed sway by suppressive means. But they counted wrongly this time.

The new reign of terror is only succeeding in mobilizing the progressives and the organized workers and putting into the many of those who for the moment lagged behind. The workers of Western Pennsylvania are going to reply to this suppression with the biggest free speech fight ever put up in this part of the country.

They are sick and tired of having union meetings closed down by the hirelings of the bosses. They are sick and tired of having their organizations broken up and pestered at every step. They in short think that the time has come when the employers as well as divers persons who are willing to serve as their tools with those detectives and other riff-raff on the pay roll to create trouble for the workers, must be shown that in Pittsburgh and vicinity organized labor can and will exist, that unions will be organized, that all workers' organizations have the right to organize and express themselves.

They do not want to see their strikes broken, as in McKeesport, by the direct action of the mayor who calls strikers under arrest and nails up the doors of halls to prevent them from meeting. They do not want such stupid and idiotic raids as the one pulled off last April 22.

Bail has been placed at $50,000 for Merrick and $25,000 for the others according to last reports. When the district attorney was asked for charges he said something to the effect that the people arrested were charged with addition for trying to capture the United Mine Workers for the communists party. When broached on the subject of release of Merrick his attitude and speech was to the effect that he was going to keep Merrick in jail as long as he could and to make it as hard as possible to get Merrick out he placed the bail at the above mentioned figure. Attorneys on the case are trying to get this unheard of and ridiculous bail reduced for all defendants but will what success is to be seen.

No doubt the idea of the stupid raid was to throw the Workers Party and the progressive movement, as it indicated by what the district attorney said, into confusion and demoralize them both. But that attempt is doomed to failure. The Workers Party machinery is intact and functioning, the progressive movement is continuing with its work with even greater speed. For the getting of funds for this special fight defense committees are being formed by the unions and other working class bodies. Protest meetings will be held all over the district. The workers rank vow that nothing is going to stop the onward work towards a living labor movement in Western Pennsylvania, as well as Pennsylvania as a whole.

Defence contributions for this fight can be sent thru National Defence Committee, Local Secretary, J. Rasnik, 1627 Center Ave., Pittsburgh.

Cannon Runs into U. S. at Martins Ferry

(Special to "The Worker")

MARTINS FERRY, OHIO.—The city authorities refused to permit the meeting planned here at which James P. Cannon was scheduled to speak on "Russia Today." When the coal miners from nearby camps began to assemble for the meeting they found the Hall locked against them with a policeman on guard.

"The mayor says no bolshevik interlopers allowed," was all the information they could get from the officer of the law.

Comrade Cannon went with a committee of miners to see the mayor and chief of police.

"Russia is not a fit subject and we don't want to hear about it," said the Chief. When Cannon pleaded to know what law was violated by the meeting which hadn't been held and raised a half dozen other questions of constitutional rights, etc., the Mayor began to get uneasy and showed signs of retreating from this order to stop the meeting.

"Where is the chief of police said, "Now, look here, we don't need no law to stop bolsheviki meetings and there ain't going to be none held here."

Cannon told them it was a violation of the Constitution of the United States.

"All right," said the officer of the law, complacently. "If that's the case, it is sure going to be violated."

One of the policemen at the hall supplied the finishing touch to this performance of 100 per cent Americanism. As the crowd of miners in front of the hall grew larger and angrier, an extra squad of police was sent to disperse it.

"Get the hell out of here now or we will put you all in jail," said one of them. "By God, this is the United States and you can't have no meetings here."

Abraham Lefkowitz---Whom Do You Represent?

At the recent hearing on the bill for the repeal of the Lusk laws there appeared the representatives of the various local unions, central bodies and the State Federation of Labor, speaking for hundreds of thousands of workers thruout the state. They unanimously indorsed the repeal of the vicious Lusk law. With them appeared representatives of various civic bodies interested in the repeal of this reactionary measure. At the same time, there appeared before the committee conducting the hearing, Mr. Henry A. Wise Wood, and Captain Bronson, secretary to Senator Lusk, these gentlemen being the only ones opposed to the repeal. Facing on the one hand, the solid phalanx of workers' delegates, Senator Antin, Chairman of the Committee on Education, turned to Mr. Wood and asked, "Whom DO YOU REPRESENT?" It was very quickly brought out that Mr. Wood represented nobody but himself.

At the recent conference of the American Labor Party held in New York City, the chief instrument of attack on the Workers Party delegation, the man who was largely responsible for the exclusion of the Workers Party and thus did very effectively help to bury one of the Socialist Party, was Brother Abraham Lefkowitz. His attack was rendered all the more effective and respectable owing to the fact that Brother Lefkowitz is Vice-President of the Teacher's Union and is the acknowledged representative of that body at every labor gathering of any consequence, locally. It was' therefore, quite a surprise to the editor to discover the other day in the April issue of the Bulletin of the Teachers' Union, this significant statement:

"The Teachers' Union is not and never has been affiliated with any political party. Members of the Union who have taken part in the proceedings of political parties have done so as individuals, or as representatives of other organizations."

This proves beyond a doubt that Brother Lefkowitz was not responsible to his fellow workers for the statements he made at the conference. We feel certain that the Teachers' Union, with its courageous and forward-looking membership, would not have tolerated for a moment, the unwarranted and vicious attack upon the Workers Party, by an authorized representative.

Lefkowitz was a representative of the local Farmer-Labor Party at the conference. Even as a representative of this group, the attack was unauthorized and unwarranted, for Jay G. Brown, National Secretary of the Farmer-Labor Party, has time and repeatedly that he is ready to cooperate with the Workers Party on matters of political interest to the workers. In his invitation to labor groups to the national labor coalition convention on July 3rd, he has invited the Workers Party to send its delegates. Lefkowitz does not therefore represent the official attitude of the National Organization. of the Farmer Labor Party. Therefore we must properly ask, "ABRAHAM LEFKOWITZ! WHOM DO YOU REPRESENT?"

Southern Illinois Coal Miners Are Eager for Facts of Revolution

(Special to "The Worker")

ST. LOUIS, Mo.—The tour of Comrade Ella Reeve Bloor thru the Southern Illinois coal fields is an event that will long be remembered by the coal diggers of that district. While most of her meetings have been for the Labor Defense, to which the response has been magnificent considering the industrial struggle in this region, it is not an uncommon thing for the wives of the miners to eagerly seek interviews with Comrade Bloor in order to learn of the facts of life in Soviet Russia.

The St. Louis papers feed them up on the stock lies about the workers' government of Russia and the miners flock both publicly and privately to learn the facts from "Mother" Bloor, gained from her two visits to Russia since the Bolshevik revolution.

"It is an inspiration," declares Comrade Bloor, "to live and work with these miners—the real states men of the future."

Denies Counter-Revolution Reports

WASHINGTON.—The anti-Russian propaganda factories are again busy sending out rumors of counter-revolutionary movements in Russia. A cable from the commissariat of foreign affairs at Moscow received here by Boris Skvirsky, head of the former trade delegation of the Far Eastern Republic, brands as fierce reports of disturbances in the Russian Far East, and makes known there is no counter-revolutionary movement in any part of Russia. The cable from Vladivostok was seized by white guard forces in one of the creations shown up by the cable.

Don't Throw This Paper Away Pass It on to Your Neighbor

Big Meetings Everywhere on May Day

Reports of May Day Demonstrations in all sections of the country were pouring into the office of "The Worker" as we went to press Wednesday, May 2.

This news, showing the nationwide May Day United Front of American Labor, together with the triumphs of the great gatherings in halls and out-of-doors in New York City and vicinity.

New York's most imposing celebrations were arranged by the May Day United Front Conference. Some of these gatherings were held at the Webster Hall, Central Opera House, Webster Hall, Harlem Social Center, Food Workers Hall, New Star Casino, Bohemian National Hall, Harlem Casino, and New Plaza Hall, Brooklyn. The biggest open air gathering was at 110th St., near Fifth Ave.

Scores of inspiring gatherings were held in all the smaller industrial centers in New York State, Connecticut and New Jersey.

SEATTLE, WASH.—The May Day celebrations consisted of overflow meetings and a large picnic with 5,000 present. Speakers: Elmer Smith, Robert Whitacker, Jack Mackay and Kate Greenhalgh.

DETROIT, MICH.—Large overflow meetings held in Detroit, Flint, Grand Rapids and Clinton. Thousand- crowded House of Masses. Thomas addressed large miner's meeting at Clinton, Ind.

GARDNER, MASS.—May Day meeting here great success.

BOSTON, MASS.—Overflow attendance at May Day celebration held at Norwood Lithuanian Hall, addressed by William Simons. Meeting addressed by Robert Minor big success.

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.—Workers Party picnic at Oakland Park and celebration. On May 1st large May Day meeting held James H. Fisher, Editor, Labor Unity.

The May issue of the SOVIET RUSSIA PICTORIAL is a good example of the ability of a working class organization to issue a magazine which for artistic make up can hold its own with the richest of the bourgeois illustrated journals. The articles are, as always, keenly analytic, informative and original; the editorials, short and to the point.

These studies of Russia today cannot be obtained in any other form in the United States and everything that is printed therein is absolutely authoritative. Lunarcharsky writes on Popular Education; "Anise" tells the story of the F. S. R. tractor unit in the Urals; A. C. Freeman, in a brilliant review, exposes the falsifications of the N. Y. World's correspondent, and L. Louis Engdahl describes the means by which Russian workers get their knowledge of American conditions. Filled with photographs, cartoons, editorials and bookreviews, the magazine is easily worth the 20 cents which it costs. It may be obtained on all news stands or from the Friends of Soviet Russia, 201 West 13th St., New York City.

East Pittsburgh Workers Enthusiastically Receive Cannon Message On Russia

TURTLE CREEK, Pa.—There is no doubt where a considerable number of workers in this district now stand on the question of Soviet Russia since the James P. Cannon meeting held at Workers Hall in East Pittsburgh, Pa.

It was undoubtedly the most enthusiastic meeting ever held in the section by a labor organization. The audience shouted its approval of the policy of Soviet Russia toward the Social Revolutionaries and other counter-revolutionary elements in Russia, it cheered the description of the organization of the Red Army and its victories. Everyone was particularly impressed with the description of the educational work, training and discipline of the Red Army and the declaration that it was standing ready to answer the call of the World Revolution.

Intense interest was also displayed in Cannon's description of the New Economic Policy of Soviet Russia and the manner of keeping intact the power of the workers.

Without doubt the address had splendid effect upon the membership and renewed activity has been the result here.

George Hardy Explains the Causes for Growing Revolt Among the American Marine Workers

by the men, with 60 cents an hour overtime, three watches (eight hour day) on deck while at sea, and eight hours a day during the time the ship is in port, together with $20 per month increase for all harbor-work-ers receiving less than one hundred dollars per month. Comparatively speaking these demands are not exorbitant and workers in European countries should understand that these wages are almost entirely consumed with the paying of house rent of an ordinary family.

An impression has prevailed in Administration circles at Washington that the release of the men who are serving outrageous and vicious sentence in the Federal Penitentiary at Leavenworth, under war-time legislation would add to the prevailing unrest; to prove the contrary the very first item in the demands of the striking seamen is the release of all war-time political prisoners.

In the past years the seamen have been the least unionized than the workers in other industries in matters of organization. The petty struggles and bickerings between the twenty-five existing marine unions have been long and bitter. The International Seamen's Union, affiliated with the American Federation of Labor, has fifteen craft units, many independent unions exist, with the I. W. W. struggling in an isolated position against all the existing with the Shipping Board and ex-president of the International Longshoremen's Association affiliated with the American Federation of Labor, has adopted an attitude that can be best judged by the quotation of his own remarks on the strike, he says: "We will have nothing to do with them" and "We are glad now we know who are the I. W. W. members". President Ryan of the International Longshoremen's Association has taken the position that the strike does not, and should not, affect the I. L. A. The rank and file members of the I. L. A. and the United Cargo Workers Union have signified their willingness to co-operate in the port of New York and many of the Longshoremen throughout the country have joined the strike. In spite of the ultra-conservative attitude of the officials and their reactionary advice to the rank and file many members of the I. S. U. have left, and are leaving the ships.

Atraigned against the strikers are the various powerful associations of steamship owners led by the American Steamship Owners Association, and the United States Shipping Board. The United States Shipping Board is a Government Institution and while making professions of neutrality can always be depended upon to be lined up in opposition to the workers.

Information has already reached the strike committee that workers who are awaiting deportation on Ellis Island have been placed on board ships as strike-breakers. The following letter has been received direct from Ellis Island, the detention station of the Department of Labor and Immigration:

Dear Comrades:

I have read in your paper about the seamen's strike. And no doubt these fellow workers do not know where the companies get their strike-breakers from Ellis Island and under these circumstances the seamen will not be able to win their strike until someone takes steps to stop these shipments.

During yesterday they have taken forty men for a ship sailing for South America. Two of these were class conssious workers and they refused to go. Eight of these were sent in here because they were on strike with the seamen. Now they have taken them away to break their own strike.

I would like to inform the officials of the union but I do not know their address. I wish you would find ways and means to inform them.

Fraternally yours,

Ellis Island.

April 27th, 1923.

The above letter is self-explanatory, but in view of the fact that strike-breaking agencies are being operated by the Marine Relief Association and at Ellis Island, who is absolutely in variance with the laws of the country, over fifty ships are tied up in the port of New York for the want of crews and telegrams are coming in from the Atlantic, Gulf and Pacific ports that the strike is rapidly spreading.

In spite of the division among the workers this strike must be won. It can only be won by the creation of a united front against the employers. All differences of opinion between the existing unions and officials should at once be relegated to the background. If the officials persist in their policy of inaction and division, then the affairs of the seamen of the United States should be taken in hand by the members of the rank and file. They must refuse to be divided, they must create committees of action and co-ordinate all strike activities. Amalgamation is the program for all marine unions. But amalgamation has not been accomplished, so they must do the next best thing during this crisis, consolidate their forces and act industrially. Not a ship must sail with a scab crew; the Longshoremen must refuse to be cajoled into loading ships affected by the strike. It is impossible to separate the cause of the seamen from that of the harbor and shore workers of the marine industry.

The mariners of the world hold a strategic position but it is pathetic to know that the British and other foreign ships are clearing their berths from the ports of America loaded with cargoes which would otherwise be carried in American vessels. If the seamen are ever to succeed in their hopes and struggles their action must be international in scope. The Transport Section of the Red International of Labor Unions has continually propagated the necessity of international action among the seamen of the world. This international action must certainly come sooner or later, and if eventually, then why not now?

All Transport Units of the Red International must, and will, do their utmost to help the American Seamen; not a sailor should be signed on vessels signing on in the United States, in any foreign port where ships arrive undermanned.

Let the Marine Workers make this strike a lesson in International Solidarity. Here is the opportunity, during this strike, to lay a solid foundation for International Unionism. Local and National action should only be the means to the end. Hands across the sea should be the watch-word of the marine workers of the world. Success lies in Solidarity! Defeat in division! Form an international section of the seamen within the united International of Transport Workers and thus commence the journey towards actual workers control.

Strike the black flag of Imperialism from the mainmast of every vessel and run up the ensign of the workers commonwealth.

TEN WORKERS SHOULD READ THIS COPY OF THE WORKER; KEEP IT IN CIRCULATION

Burns' Head Mum on Expose

By NANCY MARKOFF

Seeking safety in silence, Sherman Burns, brother of William J. Burns, and acting head of the Burns' International Detective Agency, in New York City, refuses to reply to the direct charges made in last week's issue of "The Worker," that the Burns' Agency organized the spy service in this country of the German Imperial Government.

"Bill" Burns was "not in" when the representative of "The Worker" called at the palatial offices of this detective agency at 233 Broadway. He was out on the Pacific Coast somewhere, chasing new clews in the Wall Street explosion, since "Windy" Linde failed him and was deported to Poland. Anyway, while in New York City, Burns hangs his hat in the offices of the United States Department of Justice at 13 Park Row.

But Sherman Burns, brother of "Bill", was at the Broadway office. He professed never to have heard of "The Worker", certainly he had not seen the issue of Saturday, May 5th, exposing "The Kaiser's Mr. Burns". But he did not refuse the copy handed him. In fact, he read the charges quite eagerly.

He finally rendered his verdict, in a manner quite appropriate to one of the titular heads of the Burns' world-wide sleuthing organization.

"It is quite beneath my dignity to reply to anything appearing in 'The Worker'?", he declared.

"A reply to this article is just what 'The Worker' wants", he continued. "That is just why this article was written, I suppose. And that is just why I shall not give a reply".

"I suppose you will issue a statement thru The Times or The Herald?" he was asked.

"No, I will not", was the blunt reply.

And that was the end of the interview. No doubt the detective agency, that has its head in the U. S. Department of Justice, feels safe in ignoring charges made against it in a working class publication. But these facts will become known to an increased number of the American working class until the whole Burns' crew will be compelled to take serious notice of its many crimes.

Gaston B. Means at Head of Burns Alliance with Kaiser

This is the second installment of the exposures showing that the William J. Burns International Detective Agency organized the spy service in this country of the German Imperial Government. "The Kaiser's Mr. Burns", who now serves the "Strike Breaker" Attorney General Daugherty, of the United States, is unmasked as the agent of European reaction before April, 1917, just as he serves industrial reaction in this country today. One of the heroes of this second installment, as in the first, is Gaston B. Means, superintendent of the Burns' Agency, who ruled the Burns' nest of spies in the Great Eastern Hotel, near The Battery, in New York City. It was to this nest that the Kaiser's Mr. Burns and the Kaiser's spies were trailed by department of justice operatives, who were not then, as now, working side by side with the Burns' sleuths. Then the story goes on as follows:

By ROBERT MINOR, in the May "Liberator".

Finding themselves completely enmeshed in the line of U. S. Department of Justice Operatives, the Burns' Detective Agency men suddenly closed their rooms in the Great Eastern Hotel and disappeared.

The conspiracy was traced by the newspapers as far as Gaston B. Means. But Means succeeded in passing himself off as "representative of a peace society" (unnamed) and in obscuring the fact that he was General Superintendent of the William J. Burns International Detective Agency. In the press, only the vaguest mention of the name of Burns was made, and the connection was not established.

On April 12, the New York Times quoted the Providence Journal as saying that the German Embassy in Washington was spending millions of dollars for the purpose, among others, of accomplishing:

"The direct creation of conditions and the manufacture of evidence tending to show that the Allies are breaking neutrality laws, and the subsequent 'discovery' of this evidence by the very men who have manufactured it."

Referring to the affair which we know to have been cooked up by the Burns Agency, the Providence Journal says:

"But the whole plot was conceived in the German Embassy at Washington and was carried out, as far as it went, by directors of a steamship company in New York, who, in behalf of the German Government, paid every dollar of the expense incurred in preparing all the elaborate background for the falsehood."

The Providence Journal says further, "... the German Embassy plot in connection with the creation of evidence of violations was designed, first, to get Captains of tug boats, in their greed for easy money, to swear that they had already made many deliveries of goods to British vessels and were familiar with the work, and second, to get them to load up with provisions, start them off down the bay, in the belief that they were dealing with British agents, and then catch them in the act.

"When all arrangements were completed, and plans even made by which the steamship people should execute bonds to reimburse the Captains in case their tugs were caught and condemned and their licenses forfeited, the whole deal was called off by the German Embassy."

Burns' superintendent, with a lordly gall, tried to get out of the trap by saying, "We were interested only in insuring that the United States laws were enforced." But, before being caught, he had not informed the United States authorities as to what he was doing. On the contrary, he had put detectives whose reports were going to the German Government, on the trail of the United States Secret Service operatives.

When finally faced with the threat of exposure, both Gaston B. Means and Raymond Burns, son of William J., admitted that the fantastic tale of the "rich Canadian" was a pure lie and that they had been hired for the job by the Hamburg-American Steamship Company whose ships were a part of the German war fleet, and who operated, as is well known, for the German Government. Paul Koenig was interned at Atlanta. Ga. Koenig told the United States authorities that the affidavits were to be supplied to Count von Bernstorff, the German ambassador, for use against the United States Government in a charge of violating international law against Germany.

The question before the United States authorities was, what to do about it. The United States was certain, sooner or later, to enter the war, and it was known that the German government had an elaborate spy system in the United States. Would it be better to allow the Burns' agents openly, thus giving them the rights of defendants including the right to refuse to "talk," or would it be better to compel Burns' men to reveal what they knew about the German spy system? The United States Government pursued the latter course. The discoveries in connection with Burns' spy nest in the Great Eastern Hotel were used as a club over Burns' head to compel the Burns men to help "turn up" Burns' clients.

Because it was considered better for the United States Government's interests quietly to keep track of the known organization built up by Burns than to break this up and have a new and unknown organization built up to replace it in the service of the German Government, Burns' services to the German Kaiser remained buried as a secret in Government archives from 1915 until June, 1917, when the facts were partially brought out in an official investigation in New York.

The investigation grew out of an application by Edward W. Edwards of the Allied Printing Trades Council to have Burns' state license revoked after Burns had been convicted in General Sessions of unlawfully breaking into the offices of Seymour & Seymour, lawyers, and taking out or more letters and private papers belonging to the firm. As far as my searches reveal, the investigation revived the contemptuous disregard that is usually received by an investigation based on complaints originating in labor sources. The investigation was dragged out interminably, postponed and interrupted repeatedly, and as far as I can learn, almost entirely ignored by the Press. It was conducted before Deputy State Controller William Boardman, at 233 Broadway, New York.

In this investigation, Gaston B. Means had to admit that he had conducted the operations in the Great Eastern Hotel as an employee of the Burns agency, but strove hard to conceal that he was Burns' General Superintendent. He was induced to give a sample of his handwriting in the words, "G. P. Means, General Supt. William J. Burns Detective Agency," and then confronted with a photograph of exactly the same signature with the same title. Means at first swore that he "didn't remember" whether he had ever been Burns' superintendent, but finally admitted that that was his signature.

T.U.E.L. Makes Big Headway in Pittsburgh

By JOSEPH MANLEY
Eastern Organizer, Trade Union Educational League

Continuing my organising trip for the Trade Union Educational League I arrived in Pittsburgh. Whenever I step off the train in this, the steel heart of America, I always smell with appreciation, not the smoke of the mills, but the smoke of the industrial struggle which rages here year in and year out.

I am somewhat familiar with this city and its environs, getting honorable mention in a publication issued by the Pittsburgh Chamber of Commerce as one of the Reds who made up "Foster's flying squadron," that attempted to introduce Bolshevism among the contented steel workers.

The influence of the T.U.E.L. is making great headway in Pittsburgh and especially its surroundings. In the various cities and towns of McKeesport, Homestead, Duquesne, Monessen and elsewhere. I met many especially in McKeesport, who assured me they were closely watching the work of the League. One worker said, "If you get run in don't forget to call on me." This illustrates the fear that continually haunts the minds of the militants in this section of the country. Practically every day brings new persecutions, new arrests, new jail threatens those who dare to speak in the name of industrial solidarity.

The splendid work being carried on by a small group of fearless militants with Fred Merrick as their head is a thorn in the side of this steel corporation-ridden section of the country.

The work of Merrick and his militants is getting great results amongst the miners of District No. 5. In this district, that has long been the strong hold of the Lewis machine, the miners are seething with revolt against the domination of the "pay-roll gang." The mention of Lewis Howat's name gets a rise out of the most stolid rank and filer.

In Pittsburgh itself signs are apparent that the grip of the Steel Corporation upon the Labor Movement is shaking. The work of the League is becoming more apparent, and in the future we may expect the Pittsburgh Central Labor Union will have an opportunity to rake out of the ashes of a dead past these gems taken from its preamble and platform:

"We, the organized working men and women of Pittsburgh and vicinity have long been convinced of the importance and necessity of harmonious and cooperative action to secure the full social value of our labor."

"The Pittsburgh Federation of Labor aims to secure the emancipation of the laborer from the bonds of wage slavery."

It is many years since the above was put in the constitution of the A. F. L. The combined steel oppression, corporation spies of all kinds, ruthless methods of the Cossacks rushed the militant spirit of the Pittsburgh Labor movement, but today a renaissance is taking place due to the League activities.

Baltimore, another big industrial city of the East, has just organized a T. U. E. L. I had a good meeting there in spite of the heckling questions of some "expert" industrial unionists who apparently did not know very much about the metal industry, on which they tried to question me.

The Baltimore Federation of Labor, to one who saw it in the days of the Steel Strike when its former President Ferguson, with a "patriotic" speech, prevented the Federation from arranging a meeting for the "Bolshevik Foster," was scarcely recognizable. This same Federation has endorsed the Labor Defense Council, which is defending Foster, and Ferguson's name is anathema to the average delegate, because his many crimes against the Baltimore labor movement have at last been exposed.

In a short time a crop of T. U. E. L. militants have developed in Baltimore. Many native Baltimoreans, in the trade union movement, who will not be outdone by that other famous Baltimorean H. L. Mencken, who pokes fun in the columns of the Baltimore Sun, at the crass stupidity and slipshod English of Gompers et al.

At Philadelphia, where the open shop drive has made greater headway in the ranks of the Building Trades Unions than in any other city, I had a successful meeting of Building Trades men.

The "insidious influence of the T. U. E. L." is becoming apparent in this city. It is making inroads into many organizations that a certain well known labor politician formerly boasted of "carrying in his vest pocket."

Delegates from all of these cities and members of all the important organizations will be present at the Eastern District Conference of the T. U. E. L. at New York City, May 5th and 6th.

Civil Liberties' Union Takes Up Fight for the Kuzbas Colonists

In a statement just sent out to the 5,000 members, lawyers and correspondents affiliated with the American Civil Liberties Union thruout the country, the Executive Committee of that organization, among whom are Prof. Harry F. Ward, Rev. John Haynes Holmes, Albert De Silver, Norman Thomas and Rev. John Nevin Sayre, characterize the persecution of the Kuzbas Colony Committee for false representations in their prospectus as political, and endorse the participation in the project of the Union's director, Roger N. Baldwin, who is one of the defendants. The grand larceny indictment is described as "preposterous."

TEN WORKERS SHOULD READ THIS COPY OF THE WORKER; KEEP IT IN CIRCULATION

Eastern Militants! Greetings!

By BEN GITLOW

The Eastern District Conference of the Trade Union Educational League will mark one of the most important events in the history of the League. The East is the home of American capitalism. The East leads the country in industry, commerce and finance.

From Wall Street, New York, the capitalist class dominates the industrial and political life of America. The dictatorship of Wall Street champions the open shop, the Daugherty injunctions, West Virginia massacres, the ruthless exploitation of foreign-born workers and their treatment as convicts, the persecution of militant and revolutionary labor leaders and is responsible for all the bloody and brutal acts of barbarism perpetrated upon the workers.

The organized labor movement of the country and particularly of the East must counteract this capitalist dictatorship. It cannot do so as constituted at present. Organizationally the forces of labor, and this is more true of the East, are divided in small weak craft unions. United action on the part of the organized workers as now constituted is practically impossible.

The old reactionary labor leaders are content with their fat salaries and stand in the way of every progressive action on the part of the rank and file. Politically organized labor in the United States is sold out body and soul to the political parties of the enemies of the workers.

The Trade Union Educational League with the program of amalgamation and independent political action on the part of the workers thru a genuine Labor Party is the only force in the American labor movement that can weld the forces of labor together industrially and politically.

Furthermore the Trade Union Educational League thru its adherence to the Red Trade Union International seeks to link up the present internationally isolated American labor movement to the International revolutionary workers movement of the whole world.

The success of the Trade Union Educational League means the establishment nationally and internationally of a real united front against the capitalist combine of cruelty, greed and exploitation.

Delegates to this conference, you have a very important task to perform. Your labors will help to weld together the very important labor forces in the East and the success of your endeavors will strike terror into the hearts of the capitalists and the reactionary labor union bureaucracy.

The fights that you will face at home in carrying out your decisions here will be a difficult one, but I am sure that you will get the support of all the militant and revolutionary workers and that together you will face the task before you fearlessly and with a determination that will overcome all obstacles.

Celebrate in Queens

Queens County Labor Lyceum Association will hold its 10th Anniversary Celebration Sunday, May 13th, at 4 P. M., at headquarters, 785 Forest Ave., corner Putnam Ave., Brooklyn, N. Y. The Manhattan Quartette, several comedians and vocal artists will appear. Dancing all evening. Music by our favorite. All workers regardless of political affiliations have the labor movement at heart, are cordially invited to attend.

Postpone Y. W. L. Convention

The National Convention of the Young Workers League has been postponed for one week. It will be held on May 20-21, at the Workers' Lyceum, 2733 Hirsch Blvd., Chicago.

Philadelphia Workers Denounce Fascisti in Monster Mass Meeting

PHILADELPHIA, Pa. — More than 2,500 workers assembled in the Auditorium Hall here and voiced their unanimous protest against the Fascisti movement. The meeting was arranged by the local Joint Board of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers. In a number of scab clothing shops in the city the employers have been taking a dollar per week out of each of the envelopes of the Italian workers for the support of the local Fascisti movement.

This condition and the intense activity of the employers in endeavoring to align foreign workers against unionism and in support of the scab shop campaign that has been raging here for years has aroused the militant unionists and the response to the anti-Fascisti propaganda has been magnificent.

The speakers were L. Markovitz, who was chairman; Philip DeLuce and G. Artoni, organizers of the Amalgamated, and H. M. Wicks, of New York City, labor editor of "The Worker."

Meeting, Food Workers' Section, T. U. E. L., Friday night, May 4th, at 8 p. m., at 208 East 12th Street, New York City.

NOTICE

The Labor Herald for "MAY" is out. Get your bundles at office of Trade Union Educational League, 208 East 12th Street.

The Communist Propose the United Front for All Labor Organizations Against Capitalists

the Labor Party, and prevented the Workers Party delegates from being seated in the New York Labor Party Convention.

But Sinclair writes an article for "The Worker" in which he quite categorically declares, "I think that representatives of the Workers Party should be admitted to the Labor Party, and that representatives of the Socialist Party should work for this."

The Socialist Party is today a party of confusion and vacillation.

We print in the present issue of "The Worker" an article by Upton Sinclair. We believe it will be very interesting for all our readers. Sinclair is not only a great writer, but undoubtedly the best propagandist in the country. His article is remarkably clear in style, but unfortunately, just as unclear in its ideas.

What does Sinclair say? First, he is for the admittance of the Workers Party to the Labor Party, and believes that representatives of the Socialist Party should vote for this. Second, he believes in the United Front. Third, it seems to him that the amalgamation program of the Trade Union Educational League is a correct policy. Fourth, the amalgamation should also be carried out on the political field. Fifth, the Communists are bad boys, because they have split the Socialist Party, instead of making this Party more radical, by "boring from within". Sixth, the Workers Party wants the United Front merely to "show up" the Socialist Party.

First of all, we must point out, that Upton Sinclair is against the Socialist Party on three vital questions—on the Labor Party, on Amalgamation, and on the United Front.

We must state, however, that on the other questions, Sinclair not only stands in opposition to every Marxist analysis, but also contradicts the facts.

Distinctions Between Political Parties and Trade Unions

Sinclair says that we must have amalgamation, not only on the industrial, but also on the political field, and he does not see the great distinction between trade unions and political parties. The unions are organizations of the masses, built up to defend the elementary interests of the workers. They seek higher salaries, shorter hours of labor, and better conditions of work. Every worker, whether reformist or revolutionary, Socialist or Communist, religious or atheist, can find a place in the same trade union, because all these political or ideological differences will not prevent them from fighting in common against the bosses, for a 20 per cent increase in wages, or against the open shop.

But a political party has entirely different aims. If it is really a revolutionary working class party, it has a program for all phases of social life. A program, not only against the individual bosses, and trusts, but against the state power. A program for the transformation of the whole economic system. A program on the question of family, marriage, religion, education. A political party is sound only when it has members who accept its entire political, economical and social program. Furthermore, not only members who are unified on the program, but also in the methods of carrying it out, in tactics.

Communists and Socialists

How could the Socialists and Communists form a common party today?

The Communists believe that we live in the age of the decadence of Capitalism. The adherents of the Second and Second and a Half Internationals believe that Capitalism can reconstruct itself.

The Communists believe that imperialism is a necessary phase in the development of capitalism. The Socialists believe that imperialism is only an accident and a misunderstanding, and that the capitalists could, with a little insight, prevent the dangers of imperialism.

The Communists believe that the present world-crisis of capitalism must be taken advantage of, and that the proletarian mass had to be driven thru the affliction of the capitalists, and the establishment of the dictatorship of the proletariat. The Socialists believe that the working class is not ripe for rule, and that a coalition government must be formed with the bourgeoisie.

The Communists believe that the ruling class has never in all history abdicated voluntarily, and that it is necessary to explain to the workers the role of force in history. The Socialists believe in pacifism, and in the allmightiness of the ballot.

The Communists believe that when the workers are once in power, they must destroy the force of the capitalist state government, and must construct a new proletarian form of government—the Soviets.

The Communists believe that the trade unions should be militant organs, and should help the workers to live as human beings. The Socialist and reform union leaders allied with them, avoid every fight and helplessly tolerate the open shop and Fascism.

The Communists believe that the labor movement can be healthy only when the impotent, senile and corrupt leaders are cast aside. The Socialists ally themselves with Gompers and with all traitorous "$25,000 a year labor leaders".

The Communists propose the United Front for all labor organizations against capitalists. The Socialist Victor Berger allies himself in Wisconsin with middle-class politicians, and Scheidemann was minister of the Kaiser, just as Branting was minister of the King of Sweden, Vandervelde, minister of the King of Belgium, and the British labor leaders ministers to his British majesty.

Communists and Socialists—fire and water, revolution and reform, dictatorship and democracy—can never be united. Only those two elements can live in the same organization?

Communists and Socialists work in the same trade unions, because the task of the trade union is only a struggle for wages and hours of work. But Communists and Socialists can just as little be together in the same party organization, as workers who are convinced that they should have higher wages and shorter hours of work, can be together in the same trade unions with workers who think that it is useless for them to have higher wages and shorter hours of work.

United Front but Separate Organizations

If that is all true, how can Communists and Socialists find a place in the same Labor Party? We believe it is possible to give a clear answer to this question. The Labor Party, as the classical example in England shows, is an organization which includes the trade unions and various political parties, in such a way, that every one of these parties retain their independence in ideology, propaganda, and organization. The Labor Party has a certain program of action. All members of this Labor Party are bound to fight for this program of action, but they have the right to agitate for their separate programs. They have the right to work on for the enlargement of their separate party organization. And that while, is true for the Labor Party is true for the whole United Front idea. We want the United Front with the Socialist Party, and with all labor organizations for quite concrete tasks. We have offered the United Front, not for the whole revolutionary program of the Workers Party, but on the following concrete slogans: 1. Amalgamation of the craft unions into industrial unions. 2. Protection of foreign-born workers. 3. The struggle for an international labor union. 4. The struggle against the growing danger of imperialistic wars. 5. The struggle against the growing influence of reactionary elements. 6. A Labor Party.

If the Socialist Party is not in practice to the principles of the Socialist Party, if the Socialist Party really wishes to fight in the interests of the workers, if it does not adopt specifically revolutionary points of the Communist and proletarian revolution. They are merely demands which can be accepted by all who wish to fight at least for the immediate interests of the workers.

The organization of the Workers Party and the Socialist Party that Upton Sinclair proposes, is impossible because the differences in program and tactics are too great. The formation of the Labor Party or the formation of the United Front is possible because there are such immediate practical concrete demands as are the basis of a united front in actions. The amalgamation of the Workers Party with the Socialist Party will not increase the might of the militant forces, but on the contrary, will weaken them. In a united party, the hands of the left wing elements are tied. Hillquist and Berger's Tammany Hall will prevent us Communists from agitating and carrying on propaganda, and thus it will be impossible for us to educate the workers in the right way of carrying on the class struggle. Such a united chop-suey Party will simply be incapable of action. The right wing will be in continuous fight with the left wing, and even if certain betrayals of the right wing could be prevented, the extension of the left wing would thereby be entirely impossible.

Who Is Responsible for the Split?

The amalgamation of Communists and Socialists in the same party will just as inevitably lead to a split as it led to a split in 1919. The Left Wing attempted in 1919 the method of "boring from within" the Socialist Party, but without success. The Right Wing had simply excluded the Left Wing. We are very far from the ally reject the accusation of Sinclair that the Left Wing—the Communists made the split in the Socialist Party. Education is constantly going on. It is remarkable that Upton Sinclair has so quickly forgotten the facts. The split in the Socialist Party began when the Socialist Executive Committee of the Socialist Party, that is, the petty Tammany Hall of Berger and Hillquit, excluded the Michigan State Federation of the Socialist Party. The second step which broadened the split to a national scale, was made once more by the present leadership of the Socialist Party. They feared that the Left Wing would win the elections of the National Executive Committee, and that thereby the Socialist Party would become more radical. They therefore simply excluded almost all the Foreign-language Federations of the Socialist Party, comprising not less than 40,000 members. The excluded Michigan State organization and these Foreign-language Federations, together formed the Communist Party. But part of the Left Wing persistently remained in the Socialist Party, and attempted heroically thru "boring from within" to make the party more radical. But Hillquit's and Berger's petty Tammany Hall took a third step to split the Socialist Party. As the rest of the Left Wing, composed mostly of American elements, went to the September Convention, they found Germer, Secretary of the Socialist Party, at the entrance to the hall, and with him a policeman as arch-angel with the flaming sword. Tho they were elected as delegates, they were nevertheless driven out from the convention hall.

That is the true history of the split of the Left Wing. The Socialist Party leaders bear the guilt for this split.

The split in the United States was made by the same Hillquits and Victor Bergers who today sabotage amalgamation and the Labor Party, and the motives in 1919 were the same. The Left Wing—the Right Wing leaders do not want to take part in the struggle, and they hate all those who wish to force them into the struggle. The Workers Party wants to fight for the workers, and therefore it proposes the United Front, while Sinclair is mistaken when he thinks that we desire the United Front only in order to "show up" the Socialist Party leaders.

We want the United Front for the defense of the working class. The capitalists and the capitalist government are beginning a new offensive against the working class. A new open shop drive! Increase of the cost of living! Strengthening of militarism! Fascisti organizations! New munitions! Exception laws against foreign-born workers! Against all these dangers, we want to organize the entire working class.

We are convinced that the daily betrayal of the Socialist Party is more effective for "showing up" these leaders, than any articles in "The Worker". We do not need to strip the fake maidens naked. They themselves are throwing off their clothing of principles, and the working class can see how ugly they are in reality, and how shattered by internal disease. Upton Sinclair has written three remarkable books against bourgeois hypocrisy, "The Brass Check" against the capitalist press, "The Profits of Religion" against the churches, "The Goose-Step" against capitalist education. If we had time and space here, we could have proven that the campaign of lies of the kept press, of the ilk of the N. Y. Times and the N. Y. Herald, finds its replica in the N. Y. Call and the Forward. For Hillquit's and Berger's Tammany Hall Socialism is today just as much a pretension, as religion is for the churches and the clergy, and the education which they dole out to the workers is just as untrue and hypocritical as the miseducation of Harvard and Yale.

Worship God, Crush Labor in Big Hotels

The Amalgamated Food Workers, in New York City, with its 800,000 food handlers, are conducting a widespread organization campaign that should inspire unorganized labor in the food industry thruout the entire country.

One of the many successful organization meetings of this drive was held recently at Bryant Hall, addressed by Michael Obermeyer and Harry Lee, of the Food Workers; Frank Bellanca, of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, and J. Louis Engdahl, editor of "The Worker".

The propaganda organ of the drive is "The Hotel Worker," an attractive publication with a wide circulation. The nature of its contents can be judged from the following exposure of conditions in the Bowman Hotel string that includes the Commodore, the Ansonia, the Biltmore, the Belmont, Murray Hill and others.

New Department Added to the Bowman Hotels

A new department is to be added to each hotel controlled by the John McE. Bowman interests. Plans are being made to provide the Bowman hotels with a place "for communion with and worship of the Lord."

The Bowman hotels are said to be "Christian in character" tho the employees of those places have failed to find any traces of the teachings of the Carpenter of Nazareth.

In the future we may expect to see advertisements for Bowman hotels reading as follows:

"Modern hotels with sumptuous apartments, spacious lobbies, luxurious ballrooms, cuisine unexcelled, service superb, rooms with a private altar, and prayer meeting in the Chapel every Thur-day evening."

"What an insult to the lowly Nazarene.

The Bowman group of hotels may be "Christian in character" from the Bowman point of view but to the workers employed in them they are Annexes to Hell!

One of the things taught by Christ was to "love thy neighbor as thyself." Does Mr. Bowman, whose riches are partly made up of the tips of his thousands of servants, love them as he does himself?

Is it Christian love that inspires the ten and twelve-hour day?

Does Mr. Bowman love dishwashers who slave down in the steaming guts of his palatial hotels?

"The meek shall inherit the earth." Maybe!

Mr. Bowman has his share of the earth and a few extra portions but he is not meek when dealing with his workers.

One should not live by the sweat of another's brow, the Bible tells us. We thorply agree with that.

We are going to insist on this bit of practical Christianity when we deal with Mr. Bowman in the future.

TEN WORKERS SHOULD READ THIS COPY OF THE WORKER; KEEP IT IN CIRCULATION

The United Front

By UPTON SINCLAIR

Author of "The Jungle", "The Brass Check", "The Goose-Step", etc.

The editor of "The Worker" asks me to state my view on the question of representatives of the Workers Party being admitted to the Labor Party. I am at the present moment the candidate of the Labor Party for Congress as a special election of the Tenth California District, to be held May 1st. This Labor Party has just been organized at a convention including representatives of both the Workers Party and the Socialist Party, and the executive committee of the Labor Party includes one representative of each of these two organizations.

I think representatives of the Workers Party should be admitted to the Labor Party, and that representatives of the Socialist Party should vote for this. But I should not care to make this flat statement without qualifying it by a criticism of the activities of many leaders of the Workers Party, and likewise of the Socialist Party. I believe in the "United Front"; I have always practised it, to the best of my humble ability, making it the motto of my life to keep my guns trained on the enemies of the working class, and to exclude personalities from my criticisms of working class tactics and activities. I regard it as the great tragedy of our time that so many leaders and would-be leaders of the working class can find nothing better to do with their time and energies than to fight one another.

I quite understand that it is necessary to disagree about tactics, and where the life and future of the working class are at stake it is inevitable that men should differ vehemently. But they can do it without becoming personal enemies, and without splitting up their organizations and playing into the hands of the enemies of the working class. If they cannot learn to do it, they should be deposed as leaders, and other men should be put in positions of authority who can and will do it. Certainly there are a great many in authority at the present time who make no attempt to do it. There are writers in "The Worker" who find their greatest delight in ridiculing the New York "Call," and there are writers on the "Call" who respond in kind, and both are enemies of the working class movement, and the movement should put them to shame. It is not necessary for me to use any space in this article in pointing out that the working class is fighting for its life and for the whole future of humanity. We have enemies enough on the New York "Times" and the New York "Tribune," and the rest of the capitalist organs of New York, without wasting our few resources in making enemies of one another.

Since I am writing for "The Worker," I will deal with the matter particularly from the point of view of that paper. "The Worker" supports in the industrial field the program of the Trade Union Educational League, which repudiates dual unionism, and insists that the workers shall stay in the big labor unions and devote their efforts to carrying these unions for the program of the abolition of capitalism. It seems to me that this is the correct policy; in fact, I like it so well that I wish to apply it, not merely to the industrial field, but to the political field. We had a working-class organization, the Socialist Party, and it was not satisfactory to some of its members. If so, why was it not wise tactics to bore from within in that party—to stay in it and fight to make it more radical? Instead of that, the party was split in half, and the faction which split off now declares for a "United Front," and invites the Socialist Party to co-operate with it —but at the same time explains in its own organs of opinion that the purpose of this offer is merely to "show up" the Socialist Party and take away its members!

You won't like the above, and maybe you won't wish to publish it; so I will turn around and present the opposite side of the argument to the Socialist Party members, and send it to the New York "Call". I say that just as the I. W. W. split off from the American Federation of Labor, and spent some twenty years trying in vain to organize the working class in rival unions, so a large number of the workers, rendered desperate by oppression, and by the torments and bewilderments of the war, followed the example of the European Socialists and set up a dual political party for the warfare upon capitalism. They blundered, and their blunder is manifest to everyone in the present political helplessness of the American working class, in the smashing of the steel strike and the railroad strike, and the persecution and jailing of thousands of radicals. Now there is starting a new movement for the political organization of the working class, and there is only one policy of wisdom and common sense, one policy which the workers should and must insist upon—that all factional disputes be abandoned and factional hatreds be buried, and all groups of the workers must join in one organization and obey the rules of the game. Let us provide for democratic control by the majority of the workers; let us agitate for our program and point of view in the organization, and then when the workers have given their decision on any issue, let us abide by that decision and strive for the victory of our cause. The working class is in the midst of a war, and it is only by organization and discipline that it can win the victory and save itself and civilization. The most important lesson now to be learned by the working class of America is that of loyalty, and of order and discipline among the working class army of revolt against capitalism. With all the energy I possess I beg the workers to stop fighting one another.

Mutual Leaguers Celebrate

With Art Young, Roger Baldwin and Heywood Broun on the job telling the old stories in a new way and Agnes Armington Laidler to sing Russian Folk Songs, the spring festival and dance to be held by the League for Mutual Aid on Friday May 11th, should be one of the jolliest of the season. The affair is to be at Beethoven Hall, 210 E. 5th St. 8 p. m. The Clef Negro Club is to supply the music which will appeal to the young people.

Ivanova of Petrograd

By ROSE PASTOR STOKES

Ivanova is perhaps the homeliest and certainly the best loved woman in Petrograd.

It is said of the proletarian women of Petrograd that they were, and are, the "backbone of the Revolution." If this is so, IVANOVA is the strongest vertebra in that backbone.

I heard her make a speech in a great mass meeting during the October celebrations. She talked for about an hour. Her elemental oratorical power was not to be ever forgotten. It was like the Sea pouring thru a funnel. She is small and slight and stands very still as she speaks. Her voice is tempered, cold, pathetic, but one feels it is backed by a flaming passion, an unbendable will.

Her homeliness, accentuated by an over-emphasis of the Slavic features is made adorable thru a strangely glowing spiritual loveliness. A factory worker in the rubber industry she has led the proletarian women in and thru the revolution, never leaving her work in the factory.

Ivanova is a widow. Her one child—a boy of eight, but she appears very young and childlike. They say of her there: There is nobody like her . . . no one in the whole of Russia . . . Their faces light up with a tender glow and pride and worship mingle in their hearts as they say it.

Comrade Ivanova! the proletarian women of America greet you.

Dead Speak Thru "The Times"

A special cable to The New York Times from Paris conveys the extraordinary news that the Einstein theory has been "solemnly excommunicated by the Russian Communists." This action, the special cable continues, was taken after "Professor Timiraeff presented a long report" to the Russians on the Einstein theory.

Now the cable was given a conspicuous a welcome as the Times possibly could; page one, center, in a box. With such a hearty reception it is not unlikely that the fabrication may get to be as popular as nationalization of women and other "news."

The Times' choice of a person to make the long report, however, was unfortunate and may interfere with the popularity of the yarn. Professor Timiraeff, it happens, died about two years ago!

Amalgamation Plan Gets Strong Support from the Needle Trades

The Amalgamation Plan which has been proposed to the various Needle Trades International Unions by the International Committee of the Trade Union Educational League, is now being discussed in the various locals thruout the country.

The first few days' returns indicate a success beyond expectation. Almost all of the Needle Trades centers are represented. The following are the Locals, in nine different cities, who have endorsed the Plan:

I. L. G. W.: Local 25, Chicago, Ill., and Local 4, Baltimore, Md.

A. C. W. of A.: Local 86, Pittsburgh, Pa., and Joint Board A. C. W. of A., Boston, Mass.

Journeymen Tailors, Local 162, Cleveland, Ohio, and Local 12, Boston, Mass.

U. C. H. and C. of H. A.: Local 16, St. Paul, Minn.; Local 5, Chicago, Ill.; Local 13, Minneapolis, Minn.; Local 25, New York City; Local 22, Scranton, Pa.

This simultaneous response from Locals of nine different cities, representing four of the Needle Trade Internationals, shows that the workers are wide awake to the need of greater solidarity in the Industry. The International officials of the United Cloth Hat and Capmakers' Union especially should take note that their membership demands Amalgamation, not Alliance. All the workers in the above-mentioned locals, with exception of one, voted unanimously for Amalgamation, which is of greater significance than anything else. Amalgamation has become the national issue in the Needle Industry, and indicates the progressive disposition of the Needle Trades workers in general, the Needle Trades will be the first group of unions to unite under the T. U. E. L. Amalgamation Plan.

Reports from T. U. E. L. branches show that 25 more locals, in 16 different cities, have endorsed the Needle Trades Amalgamation Plan. The militants are urged to see to it that the officials of their locals send in the endorsement blanks. To such an extent was the Amalgamation Slogan impressed the Needle Trades workers, that even at the convention of the ultra-conservative United Hatters of North America Amalgamation was urged by a strong group of delegates. A resolution to that effect has been endorsed for adoption by the convention.

"Not Interested"

TORONTO, Ont.—Labor day is not the celebration of an event of national interest, according to the judgment of the Ontario supreme court. This was the reason given by the court for refusing to give the city of Ottawa permission to vote $400 for a Labor Day celebration. The court made permanent an injunction against such a vote by the city council.

Mexican Rent Strike Led by Communists

NOTE: Here is the Second Article by our Mexican Correspondent, Bertram D. Wolfe, on the Second Congress of the Mexican Communist Party:

By BERTRAM D. WOLFE

(Special to "The Worker")

MEXICO CITY.—Contact with the masses of the workers was secured by the Mexican Communist Party largely as the result of the formation of the Unions of Tenants and the initiating of a nation-wide rent strike under Communist direction.

Everywhere, the members of both the red and yellow unions, and their wives, and the unorganized workers lined up with these Tenants' Unions. The governments, the officials of the Yellow Unions and of the Red Unions, united against these activities because they feared the effect upon the masses of the Communist leadership.

The government attacked the public meetings of the Tenants' Unions with military force, and the union leaders formed rival tenants' unions. In Vera Cruz 90 men and women were arrested and are still in jail. But the movement there is powerful enough to support a Communist daily.

The National Committee of the Mexican Communist Party attacks the Parliamentary leftism of the party and proposes parliamentary activity in the forthcoming elections.

It reports its activities among the Peasants that have resulted in its assuming leadership in two states and developing a strong influence in three others. It proposes that the party initiate a movement for the Federation of all Peasants' Communes (there are over a thousand in the nation) into a national organization.

It reports that early this year the Union of Painters and Sculptors under the leadership of Mexico's greatest painter, Diego Rivera, adopted a Communist program and affiliated with the Red Trade Unions. As a result many intellectuals are joining the party and nuclei are being formed among the student bodies. (Hitherto the party has had almost no intellectual elements). The Revolutionary Communist Party of Guanajuato has applied, for admission and the committee recommends its acceptance. It also recommends a study of growing unemployment, of the possibilities of organizing unemployed against Fascism, of protecting the peasants of certain localities against governmental disarming movements.

Fraternal Delegate Carrillo rises to report for the Young Communist League, which during the preceding year under the leadership of one Valadas, has demanded independence from the party and compelled the party to yield.

"Our convention was held on April 8 and 9," he begins. "We come here to acknowledge our errors of the past year, to retract our decision on independence from the party, to apply for reaffiliation with the Communist Party of Mexico as the Mexican Section of the Comintern, in fact, and to report that as a pledge of Communist good faith, we have expelled the elements that led us to our unCommunist actions of the past year."

He outlines the activities of the league. Most interesting is his report on the anti-militarist Campaign of the Communist Youth. "Our principal anti-militarist activities are directed against the present recruiting system. Young peasants, not yet firmly rooted in the agricultural life of their communities, are recruited in sections where they know many fellow peasants sympathize with the movements for confiscation of the land, know and urge opponents of the big land owners, and realize the necessity of acquiring land if they are to find a future for themselves.

"They are then moved into other sections where they do not know the peasants nor the owners nor the local conditions, and used there against their brother peasants. Against this form of recruiting and moving to other localities the Communist Youth is beginning to direct its chief efforts."

The delegate from Victoria rose to report that he had been sent to the convention not only as a representative of a Communist Local but also from an organization of his whole community into a "League for the Protection of the People," which had been formed to fight an irrigation tax of two pesos per head each month, which irrigation scheme would aid only the rich.* The league has been so successful that the tax had been withdrawn and the League is now turning its attention to the problem of the redistribution of the land. His fellow peasants in the League have asked him to go to the Communist Party Convention and find out whether the party thought they had been right in their activities.

The delegate from Jalapa told how the "Yellow" leaders there had forbidden their rank and file to join the Tenants' League. "But we proceeded to organize their wives," he reported, "and now the men of Jalapa are in a yellow Union and the women are all in a red union."

Among the Magazines

May issues of working class magazines are always the best, and all the effort of their publishers usually goes into them. But the May issue of the "YOUNG WORKER," official organ of the Young Workers League, surpasses by far the best that they have yet done. The high calibre of the paper is more than maintained. We find there articles by J. Louis Engdahl on "The Young Workers in Politics"; a splendid exposition of the aims of young Communists all over the world written by Premier Nikolai Lenin especially for the "Young Worker." Martin Abern, delegate to the congress of the Young Communist International, describes the sort of leagues he visited in his tour of the country, and Oliver Carlson continues to write his excellent articles on Literature and the workers. The chief article is the splendid one by Sydney Bloomfield on May Day. The ten cents you spend on the magazine will certainly be worth it and you can obtain it from any member of the league or from the national office, 2517 Fullerton Ave., Chicago, Ill.

Liberator Exposes Burns

One of the most amazing exposes of American political life is to be found in the May issue of Liberator. It is contained in an article by Robert Minor entitled "The Kaiser's Mr. Burns" and it proves rather conclusively that Colonel William J. Burns, head of the Department of Justice's Bureau of Investigation organized a spy service in the United States for the German Kaiser before the U. S. declared war against "the Huns."

Besides this most remarkable article, the Liberator contains articles by Eugene V. Debs, Scott Nearing and Ralph Goll on the Michigan trial, a brilliant analysis of the failure of the Socialist Party by John Pepper, Joseph Freeman contributes a splendid review of Genevieve Taggard's book of poems and also a wonderfully satirical article on the late murder of Dan Kemp Stories, poems, articles, cartoons de Luxe all that one could wish in a radical artistic magazine. It may be obtained on all news stands at 20c. a copy.

Foster Writes About His Trial

The Labor Herald is usually awaited with eagerness by all militants in the trade unions and all those who are interested in the progressive development of the American Working class movement. The May issue, just out, will quadruply repay its reading and filing away for reference. William Z. Foster heads the list of contributors with a lengthy article on his "late" trial, in which he gives a keen analysis, not only of the trial but of the issues involved. There are articles from the field of action, Wallace Metcalfe, from the Steel Workers convention; Tom Mann from the Rand, South Africa; Joseph Manley on the progressives among the miners and the New York Food Workers, John Dorsey and Thomas Myerscough tell about the program of the progressive miners and their connection with the R. I. L. U. Criticism Ware shows plainly the necessity of Labor amalgamating its forces by pointing to the recent amalgamations of forces by the capitalists. Anist writes from Moscow. Rose Wortis tells of the Needle Workers' International. Jay Brodder points out the comic antics of the Gompers' family, and J. Louis Engdahl tells of the sweep which the Labor Party idea is making in the American Labor circles. How anyone can miss this (or any other) issue of this invaluable paper we fail to understand. The price is 15c. and can be obtained from any militant or from the Trade Union Educational League, 166 N. LaSalle St., Chicago, Ill.

Moscow Raps Lewis Charge of Dualism in Labor

Some time ago Dist. No. 25 (Nova Scotia) of the United Mine Workers, sent a resolution to President John L. Lewis of that organization urging affiliation with the Red International of Labor Unions. In a scurrilous and impudent reply Lewis denounced the Red International and emphasized the fact that any unit of the United Mine Workers affiliating with it would automatically eliminate itself from the organization. In a letter according to the Lewis mandate, which was published in "The Worker", the officials of Dist. 26, from their office in Novia Scotia, Canada, pointed to some of the misstatements in the communication. In due time the correspondence came to the attention of the International Propaganda Committee of the Revolutionary Miners, a sub-division of the Red International at Moscow and a hot reply to Lewis' silly assertions was sent thru the officials of Dist. 26.

It will be remembered that Lewis charged the Red International is an organization similar in character and make-up to the One Big Union. In reply the Red International committee says: "After having the accusation hurled against us from all quarters that we are a conspiratorial organization founded in, and maintained in, Northern Canada. The committee has at least selected a spot where the climate is not unsimilar to that of Moscow, and where therefore, Comrade Lewis would suffer no undue results from weather differences, in the execution of his official duties, as matter of fact, the R. I. L. U. is totally different from the One Big Union" in its structure, scope and principles. Whereas the One Big Union is a dual union which has consistently endeavored to wean over to itself sections of the regular labor movement, in order to form new unions alongside of the old ones, —the Red International of Labor Unions has consistently and constantly opposed the tactics of the dual unionists, and has, not merely advised, but definitely instructed its adherents to stay within their Unions and to try to influence them to affiliate with the R. I. L. U."

The Red International then proceeds to consider in its technical point raised by Lewis to the effect that membership in the R. I. L. U would come under the provision in the Law of the Mine Union dealing with membership in dual unions. The fact is emphasized that the Red International, which seeks affiliation of national and international bodies can no more be charged with dualism than any other federation. Nothing would please the Red International more, says the communication, than to secure the affiliation of the American Federation of Labor. "It is true, considering the present leadership, such an affiliation does not seem to be an immediate possibility."

The Red International calls upon the district to remain steadfastly loyal to the principles it has endorsed and denounces the "ultra-conservative" executive board of the United Mine Workers. It takes a rap at Lewis by praising the activity of Alexander Howat and pledges support to him in his heroic fight against the vicious U. M. W. of A. machine. It also salutes the courageous miners who were on trial in Herrin, Ill. at the time the communication was sent from Moscow.

How puny is Lewis and his cohorts when confronted with the true representatives of the working class who are crystallizing the labor movement into an international force capable of meeting and resisting capitalism wherever it may be on earth, instead of playing the lickspittle to capitalism as does John L. Lewis and his contemptible associates a dead limb of the United Mine Workers of America.

Lewis would like nothing better that to see the opposition to his policies split away and leave him in undisputed control of the machinery of that organization. He is doomed to disappointment for the militant leaders under the guidance of the Red International will not only refuse to split away from the organization, but will vigorously oppose any attempt of the Lewis machine to split the union by driving out the militants.

Kill Gag Law, Labor Effort in Michigan

(By Federated Press)

LANSING, Mich.—Repeal of the Michigan criminal syndicalism law is being pushed by the most imposing labor delegation that has ever appeared before the legislature.

Eight federated labor bodies in the state and many individual unions were represented in the hearings before the judiciary committee of the house that characterized the law as an anti-labor measure designed to break up trade unions. This is the law under which Wm. Z. Foster and C. E. Ruthenberg and other union men and women were indicted in Berrien county.

The Michigan State Federation of Labor, the Detroit Federation of Labor, the Michigan and Detroit building trades councils and bricklayers' councils, the state council of painters and the Detroit Typographical council headed the list of labor organizations.

The opposition has attempted to block the hearing and may prevent a vote on the repeal measure.

"The man behind the criminal syndicalism bill when it was passed in 1919 was Henry Leland, of the Detroit Employers' Assn.," says Albert Saethen, president, Michigan State Federation of Labor. "He disguised it as a measure to protect American institutions but it was aimed at the labor unions. The legislator who introduced it at that time now believes it is unconstitutional and that it should be repealed.

"The original draft was so obviously anti-labor that it had to be toned down to insure passage. Before amended it empowered the authorities to raid any union meeting simply on the pretext that some individual member of the union advocated sabotage or had declared that sabotage, violence or other terrorism was proper."

Labor sentiment as revealed at the hearings tends to the opinion that the political red raid of August, 1922, was intended to pave the way for raids on unions as economic organizations. Convictions in the St. Joseph trials are desired, labor men assert, as precedents to put into prison union officials who obtain wage increases and lead successful strikes for better conditions.

Shaw Hits the British and Religious Hypocricies in "The Devil's Disciple"

By JOHN DALE

Every time that Bernard Shaw wants to hit something, or somebody we get worth while utterances from his tongue or pen. Shaw must have been in a fighting mood when he wrote "The Devil's Disciple," banging away at the hypocrisies of religious bigots as well as directing a storm of attack against British Imperialism, especially its military code.

Thus there is enough of things anti-British in Shaw's play, being given by the Theatre Guild at the Garrick Theatre, to make one forget the sordid pro-British propaganda to be found in Pola Negri's screen effort, "Bella Donna" that is being featured on Broadway.

The screen actress degrades her art by appearing to justify British oppression of subject nations, in this case Egypt, while the fresh fact is in Shaw glorifies the American Revolutionary War against King George, entering his action around General Burgoyne's troubles at Saratoga, in 1777.

One almost passes by the meagre plot in the fascination of the battles over religion between Dick Dudgeon, a part admirably portrayed by Basil Sydney, and the Rev. Anthony Anderson, of Moffatt Johnston, and later the clever verbal fencing between Dudgeon and the unsurpassable Burgoyne of Roland Young, in which all the frailties of British militarism are unsparingly dissected.

This production fittingly celebrates the fact that the Theatre Guild has gone over the top in its drive for $500,000 for a theatre of its own.

Mme. Chekhov Gives Reading

It was a great personal tribute that an audience at the Belasco Theatre last Sunday afternoon gave Mme. Olga Knipper Chekhov, of the Moscow Art Players, when she read from the works of her husband, Anton Chekhov.

She began with a talk on the life and personality of the great Russian playwright and author. She told of his keen perception of human sufferings. He strove to understand life about him and to truly interpret it.

Like all true artists he struggled much before his art was appreciated.

Chekhov was an invalid and had to live continuously along the Black Sea in Southern Russia.

The proceeds of the reading will go for the Chekhov Memorial Fund in Moscow. Among the audience were Constantin Stanislavsky, Max Reinhardt and David Belasco.

Marriage in Moscow

By H. M. WICKS

MOSCOW [illegible] Jerome T. DeHunt. The convention decided to call a State Convention not later than June 24. In spite of the fact that every delegate knew and had heard the charges that would be the sabotage of the Labor Party by the Cleveland Conference, Harry Kritzer and other "lights" of the Socialist Party tried to forestall independent action with all available energy. They failed and the Executive Committee was instructed to call the state convention. The Council which is to meet bi-monthly, decided to allow individual membership with annual dues of $4. Organizations, such as unions, fraternal organizations and co-operators are admitted with a fee of $3 per month.

Bread Trust in Open Shop War on Union

By SELMAR SCHOCKEN

May Day brought not only demonstrations for the solidarity of the working class, not only an increase in wages for most of the building trades, but it also brought signs that the fight for the Open Shop is not dead—not by any means.

These signs included the continuation of the plasterers' trial in the Supreme Court, after a week's delay, the announcement of the Ward Baking Company (Bread Trust), abrogating Workers' contract with the International Bakery and Confectionery Workers' Union, as well as the increased activity of the "Open Shop" associates in other industries.

The trial directed against Plasterers' Union, No. 60, that came to an unexpected stop when Assistant Prosecutor Abraham Freedman announced that Samuel Untermeyer, chief attorney for the state, was ill, but he wished to cross-examine Michael J. Colleran, president of the union, who had occupied the witness stand the entire previous day.

Jonah J. Goldstein, attorney for the defendants, protested immediately to close the defense and let the case go to the jury. This was opposed by Freedman, and the adjournment was granted by Judge Brown. At the reopening of the trial, Colleran was cross-examined, the jury enjoying a thorely good time. Listening to the testimony of the trade union enlightening Untermeyer, the "good friend of labor," upon the rights of labor unions.

Bakers Go on Strike

The announcement of the open shop policy of the Ward Baking Company was answered by a strike of the members of the Bakery Workers' Union which has the backing of practically all organized labor. The Cap Makers' Union at their headquarters, the Headgear Lyceum (Beethoven Hall), 210 E. 5th St.

Greetings were received from the Cap Makers' Union of Petrograd; from the Amalgamated Clothing Workers; International Ladies' Garment Workers; Fancy Leather Goods' Workers and the Joint Board of the Furriers' Union.

N. Y. Labor Party Meet, June 24th

The American Labor Party of New York held its first Council Session at the home of the Italian Chamber of Labor, 231 E. 14th St., presided over

Call for Second National Convention of the Young Workers League

Comrades: Nine months have passed since the Young Workers' League of America held its first national convention and entered the struggle for the organization of the masses of young workers against American capitalism and imperialism.

Events since have more than justified the coming into being of a revolutionary youth organization. The Open Shop Campaign has hit the young workers strongly, resulting in a more miserable exploitation of the youth. The so-called Child Labor Law has been declared unconstitutional and there are now more than a million and a half of child workers, between the ages of six and fifteen, in the shops, factories, mills and fields. The vast majority of the young workers are still unorganized in order to meet the attacks of the employers. But these attacks have opened the eyes of the workers as never before. (Witness the amalgamation movement and the Labor Party agitation.)

The Young Workers' League has now more vital problems before it than ever—tactical ones chiefly. Our Second National Convention, which will be held in Chicago, May 13-14, 1923, will face the task of analyzing the recent changes and developments in the American Labor movement and then to devise the best possible means of reaching the masses of young workers and students with our Communist message and for attaining a militant organization of Communist youth.

New Pamphlets!

ISSUED BY THE WORKERS PARTY

The following pamphlets have just been issued by the Workers Party. They deal with live issues confronting the workers of the United States and should be read widely and distributed in every shop, mine, mill and work-shop in the country. Party Branches are urged to place their orders at once at the prices quoted below and begin their sale at all meetings.

"FOR A LABOR PARTY," by John Pepper.

(Re-issued and enlarged.) The second printing of this pamphlet on the most pressing problem confronting American workers consists of 64 pages and is brought up to date. Ten thousand of this pamphlet have been sold. It strikes at the heart of the problem of the formation of a labor party by the workers, backed by the organized unions. It clearly analyzes the problem and shows the vital necessity of the workers taking this step.

15 cents per copy
In lots of ten or more 11 cents.

"THE AMERICAN FOREIGN-BORN WORKERS," by C. S. Ware.

Who are the Americans? From what countries have they come? What percentage take an active part in American politics? What relation do they hold to the native American workers? What part have they played in the development of American industries and the enrichment of their owners? These questions and many others are answered in this pamphlet. Facts are interestingly supplemented with statistics and colored charts.

10 cents per copy
In lots of ten or more 6 cents.

"UNDERGROUND RADICALISM." An Open Letter to Eugene V. Debs. By John Pepper.

Debs has been an opponent of the Workers Party upon some tactical problems. Yet he is nearer to an agreement with its revolutionary principles than he is with the policies and tactics of the Socialist Party in which he holds membership and for which he is now speaking and writing. The whole question of underground parties, tactics, and the putting into effect of revolutionary principles is discussed in this little pamphlet which is addressed in a friendly spirit to Debs, the great warrior.

In lots of ten or more 6 cents.

"RUSSIA TO-DAY, 1923!" By James P. Cannon.

Russia To-day, 1923! is just the sort of a little propaganda pamphlet to give to the hard-boiled opponent of Soviet Russia. It is more than this; it is a convincing propaganda pamphlet for Communism. Comrade Cannon, Chairman of the Workers Party and for seven months a fraternal delegate of the Workers Party to the Executive Committee of the Communist International, gives authentic information as an eye witness of conditions in Russia and the strength of the Soviet Government. Subjects dealt with are "Labor Unions in Soviet Russia," "Reconstruction," "The Red Army," etc.

The Labor-Royalists

London has just witnessed another royal pageant—the wedding of Prince Albert, Duke of York, second son of the King and Queen, to the youngest daughter of the powerful Earl Strathmore.

Two facts only make this display of monarchist magnificence of interest to the world's working class. Those labor-royalists, Ramsay McDonald and J. R. Clynes, already well schooled in the wearing of silk knee breeches in Westminster Abbey, invited guests. At the same time an unlucky worker, in the throngs that filled the streets, was nearly lynched because he tried to display a crimson banner and sing "The Red Flag".

Thus McDonald and Clynes, and others of their kind, appeared at this royalist celebration in the double role of wedding guests and lynch leaders, for had not MacDonald tried to stop the singing of "The Red Flag" in the House of Commons, and thus given incentive to the ignorant mobsters in the streets.

British labor is faced with the task of ridding itself of these labor-liberals and labor-royalists who always desert the working class in a crisis. Royal weddings and knightly tea parties serve the only useful purpose of exposing to labor the enemies in its midst.

It is hoped also that American labor, studying this situation abroad, will turn its suspicion upon the labor-republicans and the labor-democrats, the agents of the Wall Street political parties, in their own ranks. These upholders of the profit system must be barred from the real Labor Party that is coming to life in all parts of the nation.

All British labor must hang its head in shame at the sight of MacDonald and Clynes worshipping at the shrine of royalty. American labor can save itself this humiliation by deciding now to ostracise those who are anxious at every opportunity to continue their homage at the foot of the Almighty Dollar's world throne.

The rule of kings, whether in British palaces or American banks, must go down with all its retinue, before the victorious assaults of aspiring labor.

Cannons or Tractors

Western Europe groans under the wheels of rushing cannon. Russia under the Soviets is being reborn as sturdy, plow-pulling tractors turn the soil to new life. Cannons bring death. The tractors bring life.

Militarism in Western Europe is calling for more and larger cannon. It is planning new wars. It is getting ready for new slaughters.

Soviet Russia works for world-peace. Soviet Russia calls for more tractors to help rebuild her industry and agriculture to enable her to clothe and feed the naked and starving among capitalism's victims everywhere.

It is logical, therefore, at this time, that the Friends of Soviet Russia should launch a campaign for the sending of 20 more tractors to the peasants of the First Workers' Republic.

It should not be difficult to raise the $40,000 necessary to make possible this new expression of solidarity between the workers and farmers of the United States and the workers and peasants of Soviet Russia. Forty thousand contributions of $1 each will do it.

The F. S. R. has provided an added spur for this campaign, if any were really needed, by providing that one American worker will be sent to Soviet Russia for every $10,000 raised. This means four human messages to Russia to accompany the 20 iron horses on their reconstruction mission.

This latest F. S. R. drive can be made to interest the tens of millions of American workers and farmers. They will help bring it to a successful conclusion, if it is brought forcefully to their attention. That is the task of the militants in the labor movement. It is a new effort that we are sure the militants will shoulder and carry to triumph.

A Promising Spot

"Italy is the most promising spot on the Mediterranean", announces Julius H. Barnes, president of the Chamber of Commerce of the U. S. A. just back from Rome. His statement was applauded by a bunch of bankers who heard him at a Country Club. That shows why it is promising because the bankers like the brutal Military Dictatorship of Mussolini's Fascisti Rule. Barnes thinks there is "universal trust in" Mussolini. Universality ends, of course, with the bankers, landlords and open shop bosses, in Italy, as here. The workers and peasants of Italy are turning against the Fascisti dictator-ship in Italy, as the workers and farmers of this country are revolting against the robbery of the Chamber of Commerce dictatorship. "Promising spots" during these May days are getting fewer and fewer for world capitalism

The Dollar Forever?

The American dollar rules the world. It goes everywhere seeking its per cent of profit. Its home, the United States of America, must therefore, at all costs, remain invisible against those who would challenge its right to rule.

Ekaterina Kalinin, wife of the Soviet Republic's president, is forbidden admission to these shores, and thousands of Russian children must starve, denied relief. For the Soviets hold the rights of humanity above all the claims of gold.

But this Dollar Rule is planning a great reception to those Russians who will fall down before it and adore it. Such are the counter-revolutionary refugees now crossing the Pacific Ocean on a U. S. Army Transport, and soon to land at San Francisco.

Those who are now refugees stood with the imperialist troops of the United States who tried to batter down Workers' and Peasants' Rule in Siberia. When the Stars and Stripes left in degradation, defeated in their vile purposes, these White Guards fought with the troops of Japan's Mikado, making their last stand at Vladivostok. They murdered and pillaged to the last. When finally driven out of Vladivostok they stole ships, belonging to the Soviet Regime, and set out upon the Pacific. Denied the right to land in Japan or China, the American Dollar gave them welcome at Manila, in the Philippines, and now everything has been arranged for their reception in America.

They have the benediction of President Harding, Secretary of War Weeks, and John Payne, Chairman of the American Red Cross. It is said that they may come since the Russian quota of immigrants has not been exhausted. Weeks says they will make "desirable citizens", which means that they will bulwark the rule of the Dollar in America, even as they staunchly stood by Czarism in Russia. They will be good supporters of the bosses' "open shop" drives. They will be true soldiers in the strike-breaking armies of Gary, Schwab, Rockefeller and Armour.

It is time for America's workers to act. The children of Soviet Russia, under the Red Flag of Communism, will survive all the misery the American Dollar inflicts upon them. They can do it. But, Workers of America! What of your children? Will you allow the reactionists, the human scum of all the earth, to come here and help the American Dollar keep your children in slavery forever? It is for you to answer.

May Day Is Over

Successful demonstrations, beyond the expectations of the most hopeful, characterized the passing of International May Day in all lands. This was especially true of those countries where the workers are in agony beneath oppressive Fascisti rule. Thus, even in Italy and Hungary the red flag of the social revolution was raised in spite of Mussolini and Horthy.

In Germany, for the first time since the fall of the Kaiser, the workers were united as never before, under Communist inspiration, against the German capitalists, Cuno and Stinnes, as well as against the French imperialists, Poincare and Loucheur.

In British workers, hungry and jobless, raised their cries against royalty, against the empire, against the bankers and landlords, as they have never done before. Also in other lands.

Even here in the United States, the demonstrations in many cities were larger and more spirited than ever. Under the slogans of Amalgamation, the Labor Party, a United Front of the foreign and the native born, release of class war prisoners, and war on American Fascism, as well as recognition of the Russian Soviet Republic, the masses were everywhere aroused to great enthusiasm and new hope.

"Russia is much stronger militarily, and in every other way, on this May Day than she was on the last May Day," said Leon Trotzky, speaking at the review of the Russian Red Army in Moscow.

So might it be said of the world forces of militant labor. This May Day has shown them stronger than ever before. Hard work, intensive effort during the days to come, will result in an even better showing on May Day, 1924. Workers! Forward to new and greater struggles! Forward to another and more victorious International May Day the coming year.

Do you agree with us? Then join the Workers Party!

The Silence of Guilt

It is some time now since we published the facts proving the Anti-Soviet and Anti-Communist conspiracy of The Call and The Forward, the recognized mouthpieces of the Socialist Party. No word has come from these organs of reaction denying our charges. It is the silence of guilty ones, who have no explanation to make, no excuse to offer. Every Socialist Party member now knows the counter-revolutionary brand of leaders he follows, the subversive nature of the organization he supports and the anti-labor mission of the papers he reads. He is, therefore, now confronted with the alternative of going backward to labor-conservatism or forward to labor-militancy.

In this crisis Morris Hillquit and Victor L. Berger run off to Europe, deserting the National Socialist Convention to be held in New York City, May 19, to attend the marriage at Hamburg, Germany, of the Second and Two and One-Half "Socialist" Internationals, May 19-20.

This is the same Hillquit and the same Berger who played the Socialist Party into the hands of the Johnstons and Keatings at Cleveland, Ohio, last December, and who are now on the fence in their attitude toward the genuine effort to create a real Labor Party at the Chicago Conference in July. They pass the buck to the abandoned May 19th convention, leaving it to decide whether the Socialist Party is to participate in the July gathering. Thus the Socialist leadership confesses itself bankrupt. It has wandered deeper and deeper into the entangling morass that it entered with the expulsion of great masses of the party in 1919. The next few months should see this same leadership completely discredited forever.

If anglicization is done as we suggest, the Ku Klux Klan will be a patriotic organization in the metal and other trades, industries have met in the sessions of their international organization. The American Mining Congress in Washington, D. C. One of the speakers at the banquet held was the "Dis-Hard" railroad "open shopper", W. J. Large, of the Delaware and Lackawanna Railroad, who spoke against public ownership of railroads and of coal mines. These bosses were unanimous, however, in favor of "company unions", to keep the workers from organizing real unions of their own. Let the workers in the mining industry accept this challenge and build more powerfully against the mine bosses.

Censoring Mencken and Dell

Upton Sinclair submitted to the "Christian Science Monitor" an advertisement of his book, "The Goose-Step: A Study of American Education," consisting of two opinions of the book, the first written by H. L. Mencken and the second by Floyd Dell. Thereupon he received from the "Christian Science Monitor" telegrams refusing to publish the advertisement unless the following sentences were cut out:

By Mencken: "You simply offer the bald and horrible facts." Also: "An appalling picture of moral and mental debasement."

By Dell: "It even has a Rabelaisian ouch. Surely the monstrous and comic and horrible crudities of our Carthaginian civilization have never been better pictured."

Stand by Your Class

Two families,—mothers, fathers, children,—11 in all, have been wiped out in New York City's working class district in Harlem. They were victims of an East Side blaze that swept their fire-trap tenement home. This new tragedy gets inside space in the kept sheets of capitalism. Worker's don't count. But columns and columns of space are still being devoted to lament over Butchkavitch, and capitalist parliaments, the world over, are passing resolutions to save the carcass of Tikhon, who conspired with Wrangel, Yudenitch and other gods of the Paris allies for the overthrow of the Soviet Republic. Capitalism cares for its own. The workers must learn to stand by their class ust as faithfully.

Do Not Forget Them

President Harding should not forget to send invitations to the editors and board of managers of the New York Call and the Forward, to "Sammy" Gompers, and his retinue of Anti-Soviet propagandists, to attend the reception to be given the Russian White Guardists when they arrive in San Francisco from Vladivostok, refugees of the spreading world social revolution. These will all join lustily in the general "hurrah" for these last remnants of disappearing Russian czarism.

Wisdom of the Poor Fish

The Poor Fish Says:

It's all right for the rich to have so much money. They have so many expenses.

Withheld for Higher Prices

Sugar costs you dearer today, than a few months ago. There is no sugar famine, prices of sugar has gone up. No sugar famine, but profiteers want more money. All they do is change the price tags.

The Farm "Crisis"

By HAL WARE

Introducing John Farmer. (Species of 1923)

It is natural that land individualism should have first reached its limits in America. Also that American Capitalism should be unprepared and incapable of solving the farm problem.

The farm "Crisis" is actually the "quickening" of a new era in American farm production. What direction it follows depends as much on you City Workers as upon the Farmers themselves.

You must understand that no change has occurred to the land or other factors. They have had good rains, the land is fertile, they want to work, horseflesh is cheap, all the "natural" factors are favorable.

The American Farmer is the most efficient individualist in the world. His produces: 4.4 times as much as the Italian farmer; 2.5 times the English, and 1.2 times the German, which is another way of saying that every farmer and farm laborer in the United States each feeds 9 Americans and 1 European beside himself.

And yet everywhere I go farmers tell me they cannot make 2 plus 2=5. They owe back interest on notes, Their Mortgages are due. There are liens on their machinery, on their cows, pigs and other stock. In some cases they have been forced to give liens even on the 1923 crop that has not yet been planted. In other words as individualists they are broke.

John Farmer at last waking up to the facts concerning his true social status as an exploited working producer. His reactions are not those of the City Worker, however. He becomes militant; far more so than the city worker. He will stand for any action, no matter how radical, so long as it gives him the LAND. As foreclosure looms nearer, his capitalistic illusions vanish. He demands action from his representatives.

Analysis of the origin of our recent "Farm Blocs" and progressive representatives, the upsets in the recent elections; what do you find? That the farmer is back of the movement. But he has already found that he is no better off,

Just now he is listening to the Capitalists who tell him that he is a "business-man," that like other business men in times of "over-production" he must cut down the production of his business.

And in the same vein his own so-called "leaders" are crying for better business methods in co-operation in the selling of his products. They all seem strangely silent on the basis of his production. The Land, and the fact that it is not the individual but the very system of individual farming that is BANKRUPT.

A New Deal for the Farmer

They dodge the only solution possible, namely actual repudiation of old debts and a general movement to consolidate small farm units into larger industrial farms. We must advocate a new deal for the farmer. One that will have a ghost of a chance in an industrial society, i. e. industrial farming. But industrial farming by farmers.

Above all we must fight for the principle that the land shall be held by the working farmers who are working the land.

That the farmers who pool their mortgaged and rented farms, their mortgaged and debt burdened tools and stock shall be freed from debt and possess the land so long as they take part in the production of the staple foods as stockholder in the new farm "Companies."

You do not have to wait for "human nature to change." Economic pressure has changed hundreds of thousands already and it is no exaggeration to predict that at least a million will be forced into tenancy in a year's time.

In spite of a nation-wide campaign of press propaganda to poison the minds of the farmer against the City Worker, in spite of the "Wobs" and your tactics in condemning him; John Farmer is beginning to realize that he is a worker and wants to meet you more than half way.

He will want your help. He is ready to make very radical demands, but you must understand his aim—it leads back to the LAND, back to food production. You need both his food and his support—to get it. Jump in and help him get his.

Against the Masses

By JAY LOVESTONE

I. A Rigid Constitution

The American Constitution is replete with the most cleverly devised and deadly effective means of baffling the will of the masses and making it impossible for them to alter the form of the government. The Constitution makes it impossible for the working masses directly to propose or even ratify changes in the fundamental law.

An extraordinary majority is required even to amend the Constitution. A two-thirds majority of both Houses on application from the Legislatures in two-thirds of the States is required merely to set in motion the machinery for Constitutional amendment. Then, the ratification of the proposed amendment can come only after it has been assented to by conventions or the legislatures in three-fourths of the States, as Congress may decide.

On this basis, approximately one-fiftieth of the population, so distributed as to constitute a majority in the thirteen allest states can defeat any amendment proposed. With the control of the Government and the press resting securely in the hands of their employers, it is practically impossible for the workers to utilize the constitution as a means of effecting a fundamental change. Because of countless obstacles, the workers cannot win a bare majority for a mere reform. It follows then that the belief that the workers can, under even more aggravated circumstances, win a two-thirds majority for a fundamental change, is utterly untenable. Likewise, the belief of the reformist Socialists that the American Constitution makes it possible for the working class to make a revolution in the formally legal way is farther from the truth by a greater distance than that through which Lucifer fell.

Apropos of this feature of our constitution Woodrow Wilson said:

"None of the written constitutions of Europe are so difficult of alteration as our own."

Of over two thousand proposed amendments only nineteen have been adopted so far. The first twelve were inconsequential. The next three were adopted thru the force of arms—that is, while the Northern Army of Occupation still held the conquered Southern States or as a price for readmission to Congress. In fact, not a single one of the Constitutional amendments adopted to date is of a fundamental, social nature. In no other country in the world has the employing class such an effective barrier against possible encroachments by the workers. This distinction between legislative and constitutional amendment does not exist in any other country in the world.

The First of May! Proclamation of the Communist International!

NOTE—This May Day Proclamation of the Communist International arrived too late for publication in our regular May Day Issues. But we publish it now because of the keen interest it must have for all militant workers of America. It is a brilliant analysis of world conditions and problems as they confront labor today. It is as follows:

WORKERS OF ALL COUNTRIES.—The founders of May Day intended it to be a mighty demonstration of working class solidarity, an expression of the growing class consciousness of the workers, a declaration of war on capitalist society. That indeed is what it was. In 1890 the bourgeoisie looked forward to the First of May with fear and trembling, as to the Day of Judgment. Today, however, in all countries where reformism has developed, they regard the May Day demonstration with contempt. The reformists have done their best to reduce the First of May to the level of a Bank Holiday.

Every class-conscious worker should protest against this degradation of the festival of Labor. May Day should give clear expression to the longing for unity that possesses all sections of the proletariat, it should demonstrate the readiness to fight which has begun to stir even in the countries where the White Terror reigns—in Hungary, in Italy and in Jugoslavia.

The day is not far off when this lulling will be gratified. The capitalists in all countries in spite of themselves are preparing the way for this. They are unable to re-establish the old "normal" conditions, the capitalism of pre-war days. They therefore make the desperate attempts to create a new and more powerful form of capitalism. They make commanding gestures, and exclaim: "Peace!" "Work!" But their deeds are senseless destruction.

They organize war and civil war. They hope to establish the empire of the new capitalism by the degradation of the workers to a class of slaves, to a herd of beasts of burden. That is the object of the capitalist offensive.

The reformists' parties have done their best, in open and secret coalition to further the shameful ends of the capitalists. But they were too feeble, and so the capitalists are abandoning them and are placing their hopes on fascism.

Fascism is nothing more than the continuation of the policy of the social-patriots, employing other and more drastic means. What the social-democratic leaders failed to achieve by cajoling and deceiving the workers, fascism is to achieve by violence. Fascism is capitalism armed for the last attack against the proletariat. It reveals the true face of bourgeois democracy—the democracy from which the reformists awaited salvation. They wait in vain, for they themselves feel too feeble to conduct the fight, as the leader of the Amsterdam Trade Union International, Edo Fimmen himself recently confessed.

The workers must mobilize to the last reason to fight fascism. The United Front of the Exploiters must be opposed by the United Front of the Proletariat!

When the Communists first issued the call for the United Front, the great mass of the non-communist working-class made no response. Today the will for unity has awakened among the proletariat everywhere. The apostles of reformism preach a policy of tranquility, civil peace and coalition in vain. They can no longer suppress the will for unity among the proletariat. They no longer hold their followers in the hollow of their hands; they can no longer lay down the law for the labor movement. The wage demands, the strikes, the demonstrations in the Saar Valley, in Belgium, in Czecho-Slovakia, in Horthy's Hungary and in other countries show that ever larger numbers of the workers are beginning to assert their will and independence. The United Front will be realized not through the wisdom of the opportunist leaders, but thru the sure instinct of the masses.

The workers are no longer prepared to believe that their best policy is to live "in peace" with the capitalists. The policy of civil peace has brought them nothing but low wages, high prices, longer working hours, short time unemployment, degradation, and violent repression. To these is now added the daily increasing menace of war. The capitalists, it is true, are crying for peace—not from humane or pacifist motives, but for the sake of business and profits. They are Americas, however, crying for peace. They tried it at Versailles, but in vain, and are now themselves obliged to speak of the treaty which was to be the greatest act in history as the "shreds of the Peace of Versailles."

Every day aggravates the antagonism between the imperialist powers and creates new ones. War has become the normal state of capitalist society, as the recent events in the Ruhr once more prove. The proletariat alone, conscious of their aims and prepared for extreme sacrifices in a determined struggle, can give permanent peace to the workers of the world.

The fight against fascism and anarchy implies a fight on behalf of Soviet Russia. Soviet Russia is a thorn in the flesh of capitalist society. It regards, and justly regrets, the very existence of the Bolshevik State as a permanent threat of world revolution. It therefore hates with the same intensity it formerly loved the autocracy of the Tsars. Hence the abuse, vilification and persecution to which Soviet Russia is subjected. Precisely for that reason the duty of all class-conscious workers is to place themselves unreservedly on the side of Soviet Russia. Shoulder to shoulder with their Russian Comrades they must give capitalism its deathblow.

WORKERS!

DEMONSTRATE ON THE FIRST OF MAY AGAINST FASCISM, AGAINST THE DANGER OF WAR, FOR THE UNITED FRONT, AND FOR SOVIET RUSSIA!

The world revolution MUST COME, in spite of all. The frenzy of the Fascisti, the invasion of the Ruhr, the cynical betrayal of the Second International are all in vain—nothing can save the bourgeoisie.

Long Live the World Revolution!

Long Live the Dictatorship of the Proletariat!

Long Live Communism!

Plan to Organize All Labor

Militants Seek to Bring Unorganized Millions into the Trade Unions

Foster Tour Thru East Is Big Ovation

William Z. Foster's tour of Eastern cities, following his victory verdict in Michigan, has been one big ovation.

The parade and mass meeting held by the Defense Committee of the Detroit Federation of Labor was one of the greatest successes run by organized labor in that city.

Reactionary threats came to nothing at Pittsburgh, Pa., and the reign of terror which exists there was broken when Foster addressed a wildly enthusiastic gathering in Moose Temple.

A record breaking meeting was also held in New York City at which C. E. Ruthenberg, just back from his conviction at St. Joseph, Mich., and Robert Minor, who, may be the [illegible] trial, also spoke.

Meetings are scheduled in Akron and Cleveland, Ohio; and Baltimore, Md. Other meetings have been arranged for Philadelphia, on the 11th, at the Turngemeinde Hall, Broad and Columbia; in Boston, on the 13th, at the Scenic Auditorium, Scenic and Warren, and in Buffalo, on the 15th.

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL

There was one mighty call that shook and stirred the First Eastern District Conference of the Trade Union Educational League in New York City. Every one of the delegates went back to his union and his job with three words ringing in his ears, a gripping urge to action. This appeal of militant labor along the Atlantic Coast, to all labor, is:

"ORGANIZE THE UNORGANIZED!"

This battle cry alone throws the full strength of the Trade Union Educational League in this Eastern District deep into the midst of the industrial struggle in this part of the nation.

"The workers follow the man who organizes them," said William Z. Foster, in addressing the delegates on this important question. "If you radicals organize the workers, you can make the whole working class stick with you and work with you."

During the next few months, when the various organizations of the Trade Union Educational League, thruout these Eastern States report, they will be called upon to tell what they have done to "Organize the Unorganized!"

The meaning of this TUEL effort may well be judged when it is known that the nearly 200 delegates at the Eastern Conference came from 17 big industrial centers including New York City, Buffalo, Elmira and Rochester, N. Y.; Boston, Peabody, Lynn and Lawrence, Mass.; Woonsocket and Pawtucket, R. I.; Baltimore, Md.; Washington, D. C.; Philadelphia, Pittsburg, Harrisburg and Chester, Pa., and Paterson, N. J.

What a rich field for exhaustless organization energy! The vast masses of unorganized in the New England textile industry! The tremendous human factor on the far-flung network of railroads radiating out of New York City! The organization problem still begging for complete solution in the hard and soft coal fields of Pennsylvania! The hundreds of thousands of industrial serfs in the steel mill hells of the same state!

"During the organization preparations for the big steel strike," said Foster, "we tried to get Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, to come to Pittsburgh to address the steel workers. But we failed. He was too busy patching up the Versailles Peace. He could not make a short trip to Pittsburgh from Washington to help organize the steel workers, but he did make two trips across the ocean to Europe to help the imperialists of this and other countries put over their vile schemes in Paris."

There are the needle trades, all vast industries in the East; the shoe and leather industry, poorly organized; vast opportunities in the building trades, in the metal trades, in the printing trades, not to mention the cry of the workers who go down to the sea and over the world in ships in America's growing marine transportation industry.

There were delegates from all these different fields of human effort at this Eastern District Conference of the TUEL; yes, and there were delegates representing even window cleaners and office workers, and to them all the demand goes out to measure their success in the months to come, by the response they have won to the slogan:

"Organize the Unorganized!"

One glance at the helpless millions of unorganized workers thruout the land, is the most powerful argument for the starting of the "Organize the Unorganized!" campaign.

Thus of the 2,000,000 metal workers, only 200,000 are in the labor unions; only 100,000 of the vast army

Organize!

The call to organization work, issued by the Eastern Conference, of the Trade Union Educational League, was contained in resolutions as follows:

WHEREAS, The capitalist system of production, recovering partially from its state of collapse, is now entering upon a period of temporary activity, the "prosperity" before [illegible]

WHEREAS, this temporary revival of industry by creating a great demand for workers, gives the trade unions an exceptional opportunity to repair their shattered ranks and to organize the many millions of unorganized workers, and

WHEREAS, The Eastern District of the Trade Union Educational League, recognizing the needs and opportunity of the situation, urges that the organization of the unorganized workers be made one of the immediate great tasks of the labor movement, and

WHEREAS, The proper way to do this most effectively would be for the American Federation of Labor to set up a general organizing committee of all trades, said committee to have sub-committees for the respective industries, and the whole apparatus to function as one great machine to sweep the unorganized millions into the unions, but

WHEREAS, The general officers of the A. F. of L., by their habitual inactivity and especially by their complete failure to organize the industries during the great opportunity presented by the war, have shown their total incapacity to map out such a general organizing campaign and consequently the utter uselessness of appealing to them to take the lead in the present situation, therefore be it

RESOLVED, That the Eastern District of the Trade Union Educational League, sounding the slogan of organize the unorganized, will seek to bring this about by stimulating the local unions, central bodies and Internationals to put on intensive organization campaigns in their respective jurisdictions and to bring the masses into the unions during this favorable opportunity to organize.

Capmakers in Grip of Black S. P. Reaction

By SELMAR SCHOCKEN

Refusal to allow William Z. Foster to reply to the attacks of Gompers on the amalgamation stand of the Trade Union Educational League, refusal to allow J. Louis Engdahl to greet the delegates on behalf of the Workers Party, in spite of the fact that numerous yellow Socialist Party spokesmen had been invited, adoption of a resolution supporting the Labor Party idea that excludes Communists, as well as the favoring of a loose form of alliance of the different needle trades unions, as opposed to amalgamation into one solid union, constituted some of the reactionary measures that found favor with the "Socialists" in control of the 14th Biennial Convention of the United Cloth Hat and Capmakers' Union, in session in Boston.

The Boston-eating president of the American Federation of Labor was an invited guest. His appearance marked the first step toward the reentry of the Capmakers and Milliners into the A. F. of L. from which they had been expelled some seven years ago for daring to organize the milliners, jurisdiction over whom was claimed by the United Hatters. President F. M. Greene and Secretary Martin Lawlor, of the latter organization, had already extended "fraternal greetings" to the convention.

Speaking at the very hour when the National Conference of the Needle Trades Section of the Trade Union Educational League was in session, Gompers seized this opportunity before this "Socialist-controlled" convention to defend the Federation Machine and hurl new vitriol at labor's militants.

The convention declared for the establishment of a 40-hour week, to be distributed over five days. The Executive Board is instructed to take action to advance this demand, as well as the improvement of wages and working conditions "when the time for such a step is opportune."

The convention endorsed the call for a conference to form an Alliance of the Cap Makers with the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, the International Ladies' Garment Workers Union, the Journeymen Tailors' Union, the Furriers' Union, and possibly the United Hatters. The minority of the committee had declared for amalgamation.

Delegate Feingold, St. Paul, who urged amalgamation, was supported by Delegate Eva Shafran in the discussion on the Labor Party. Miss Shafran demanded vigorously that the Cap Makers join the Labor Party, insist on having all political parties of the working class represented. She denounced the exclusion of the Workers Party.

The "Socialist" counter-revolutionists could not, of course, forego their obligatory resolution, asking for "the release of all political prisoners in Russia." The fight for the resolution was led by Chairman Segall, of the Resolutions Committee, and the "S.P." mouthpiece, Goldeny, of New York; while Editor J. M. Budish and Delegate Feingold, from St. Paul, were instrumental in opposing this piece of menshevist propaganda.

Budish maintained that the union has no right to weaken the Soviet Government which had to overcome unbelievable odds, before it attained its present strong position. The resolution was referred to the General Executive Board.

For the Labor Party!

Monster Political Convention of the Workers of America, Chicago, July 3, 1923. Every Local Union, Central Body, Farm Organization, State, National and International Body and Political Group Invited. A Chance at Last for Bringing About United Action of the Workers of Hand and Brain on the Political Field.

Dear Sirs and Brothers:—In nearly every country except this the workers have organized politically as they have organized economically. Hostile laws are being passed, favorable laws declared unconstitutional or nullified by judicial decree, a Palmer injunction in 1919 crippling the Steel strike the same as the Daugherty injunction went the very limit to defeat the shopmen's strike in 1922, and the vicious Esch-Cummins law has proven a heavy burden on farmers and railroad workers alike.

Now as never before, when the flagrant misuse of the courts and other public agencies has been developed to a point where the workers on the farms and in the workshops are wondering where they are to turn next, the urgent necessity of the situation has compelled the workers to realize that salvation lies alone in united political action by the workers of hand and brain.

Duplication of political efforts, competition of candidates of rival political groups of workers must cease.

In view of the above facts, and in response to the last request of many individuals and organizations, THE FARMER-LABOR PARTY OF THE UNITED STATES is calling a NATIONAL CONVENTION to which will be invited representatives of all "labor, farm and political groups" for the purpose of devising means for knitting together the many organizations in this country in such a manner as will enable the workers to really function politically.

Invitations to send representatives to this convention of the Farmer-Labor Party have been sent to all national organizations in the country, but it is known that many locals in the rank and file are unaware of the invitations, and it was therefore voted to send credentials to all local and state organizations in the country, so that each may send a delegate to the convention.

Where funds are low or the expense great, local unions and other bodies should combine in meeting the expense of a delegate, but in no case should any city in the country fail to have at least one delegate in attendance.

The expense of holding the convention will be considerable, and all local unions are urged to make possible, should such an illness or disaster occur, as soon as possible to help the Farmer-Labor Party meet this cost. Send all contributions to the National Office of the Party.

Fraternally yours,
FARMER-LABOR PARTY OF THE UNITED STATES,
J. G. Brown, Secretary.

The Workers Party has accepted an invitation extended to it to send delegates to this convention. It believes that thru this convention the workers and farmers will make their first great step forward in organizing their political power for the struggle against the interests that now exploit them. It urges every trade union, labor political organization, co-operative society, labor sick and death benefit organization, in fact every organization of workers and farmers to join in making this convention an impressive demonstration of the determination of the proddcers of this country to use their political strength to protect and forward their common interests.

Wicks Arrested When Terror Reign of Steel, Coal, Railroad Barons Spreads to Bellaire, O.

(Special to "The Worker")

BELLAIRE, OHIO—The official reign of terror that is being waged by the minions of the United States Steel Trust, the Coal Barons and the Railroad interests, thru a vast territory extending from Altoona, Pa., thru Pittsburgh, and into the West Virginia and Ohio coal fields broke out in Bellaire, Ohio, May 1.

It is the organized despotism of steel, coal and the railroads fighting trades unionism; a part and parcel of the same terrorism that jailed a miner in Wheeling for distributing the program of the Workers Party and that threw Fred Merrick and 22 others into the county jail in Pittsburgh.

H. M. Wicks, labor editor of "The Worker," who was to be the principal speaker here at the May Day celebration, was arrested by Chief of Police Gobert and some Pennsylvania railroad detectives in less than a half hour after he had stepped from the train at 9.30 on May Day morning, just before the parade started down the street. He was taken to the police station and lodged in jail. Altho three members of the joint May Day Committee representing all the miners' locals in this vicinity called and volunteered to furnish any bond necessary for the release of Wicks, the local authorities refused to release him. When the committee demanded to know why Wicks was being held, Mayor Wyatt said: "Well, he is not being held for anything he said, but for what he might say."

Wicks was held until after the meeting. About seven-thirty that evening he was released, after being fined $10 and costs for "disorderly conduct" and the sentence suspended.

This act was the culmination of a campaign of slander and villification that has been waged by the local papers and the Chamber of Commerce against the May Day celebration. Bellaire is situated in Belmont County, one of the most productive mining sections in America, and was the center of many bitter clashes between miners and officers during the mine strike of last summer. It was in this county that the pitched battle at New Lafferty occurred, resulting in the death of a deputy sheriff and the subsequent arrest of two Italian leaders of the miners, Dominick Venturato and Dan Agosti.

Venturato is now serving a life sentence in the state penitentiary at Columbus, after being convicted on framed-up evidence before a farmer jury. Agosti is still in the county jail at St. Clairsville, awaiting disposal of his case.

Since the mine strike the forces of reaction have tried in every way known to them to crush every sign of militancy on the part of organized labor in this section of the state.

Wicks Again Arrested

After Wicks' release the May Day committee of miners secured him for a hall where a dance was in progress and he addressed the people assembled there. Shortly after his

Merrick Is Out on Bail at Pittsburgh

By DON BROWN

(Special Wire to "The Worker")

PITTSBURGH, Pa.—After hearing before Squire Riley, Fred Merrick was released on $10,000 bail; George Kaitrelis and Morris Jenkins were released under bond of $5,000 each. Valentine Kovac, an old man, was set free after having been held in jail for ten days without a hearing. The county officials discovered that he was not the man they wanted. Morris Sober was also discharged without bail.

Morris Passernick, a slight pale youth, was released under $2,000 bail.

Marking for the last seven of those taken in the raid on the Labor Lyceum will be held shortly.

Ten thousand dollar bonds are still demanded for each of them. They are Alex Bednick, Edmund Horacek, A. Rostrum, John Kowalski, Alexander Boytak, John Urban, and Paul Karnatel.

It is evident that local officials are willing to go any length in their attempt to put the Workers Party out of running order. At the hearing possession of a copy of "The Worker" was held sufficient evidence to convict a man of being a member of the Workers Party, which is held to be seditious under the outrageous and unconstitutional sedition law of this state. The real fight will start at the trial.

As cards are all stacked against defendants in preliminary hearings before Squires, selected by District Attorney Mike Spaire works on a tee system, thus always deciding as the District Attorney demands.

Department of Justice Agent, H. J. Lennon, is the most prominent expert witness in the case, revealing whose hand is behind the systematic persecutions.

Push Amalgamation in the Marine Industry

One of the most forward moves in America is the formation of a National Committee within the marine industry, to be known as the International Marine Workers' Amalgamation Committee. The aim is to amalgamate all the existing unions into one Industrial Union of Marine Workers. There are approximately 30 different unions catering to longshoremen, harbor workers and seamen. Many of them are independent unions, and there are 15 autonomous units within the International Seamen's Union of the A. F. of L. In no other country are marine workers so divided as in the U. S. A.

Speaking with the organizer of this committee convinces one immediately that nothing short of a well-coordinated section of seamen within a real international of transport workers will ever be able to render any assistance to the world's marine workers. He is just as emphatic about the national situation. He says: "We must organize local committees in every port of the U. S. A. and Canada, and bring every union to understand that their interests are identical, no matter whether their workers are ashore or afloat.

The Conviction of Ruthenberg at St. Joseph

By C. S. WARE

At ten minutes of eight on Wednesday evening, May 2nd, after three and a half hours' deliberation, the jury which for two and a half weeks had heard evidence thru which the State of Michigan was endeavoring to convict C. E. Ruthenberg of "assembling with" the Communist Party of America, marched into the court room.

They came in single file, their heads hanging, shame-faced.

The clerk called the roll and directed the foreman to rise.

"Have you arrived at a verdict?" he inquired.

"We have," answered Foreman Thomas Smith, in a hardly audible tone.

"What is your verdict?"

"Guilty," mumbled Smith, turning his head so that he would not face Ruthenberg. At the request of the prosecution they had "preserved the safety of the greatest nation on God's green earth," but they were not elated by their achievement.

According to the News Palladium, a local Michigan paper, commenting on the verdict, stated, "Ruthenberg's philosophy and his previous jail ex-

C. E. Ruthenberg Showing Proceed Different Kind of Prosecution and Jury in His Trial at St. Joseph, Mich.

[illegible] Ruthenberg [illegible] Foster [illegible] Chamber of Commerce [illegible] Standard Oil [illegible] and a gas service station [illegible] who is a member of the American Legion, brought in a verdict of guilty in the contempt charge [illegible] Foster arrived at a verdict?

The answer to this question is not hard to find. The Ruthenberg jury had on it men with particularly strong prejudices against the things which the Communists stood for. Juror Kahn, the treasurer of the Chamber of Commerce marched into the hotel dining room at St. Joseph with the members of the Rotary Club; the prosecution had succeeded in holding on to Juror Ward, member of the American Legion on the jury in spite of the efforts of the defense to disqualify him. As a whole the personalities on the jury were by their environment and their interests strongly prejudiced against the defendant.

The prosecutors had learned from the Foster case. They knew that it was going to make the same mistakes. During the progress of the Ruthenberg trial, Assistant Attorney General O. E. Smith, in a secret conference with Bachman, the foreman of the Foster jury who voted for conviction was on the stand for a day for direct examination by Attorney Frank Walsh and under cross examination for three days by Prosecutors Gore and Smith. Bachman probably told Smith what the explanation of Communist principles from the witness chair had much to do with removing from the minds of the jurors the misapprehensions and distortions which the prosecution was eager to cultivate.

When it came to the turn of the prosecution to cross-examination, they satisfied themselves with a few perfunctory questions. In the Foster case both Gore and Smith tried their hand at endeavoring thru devious and involved questions to "trap" Ruthenberg answer in such form as to give the jury the prosecution's distortion of Communist principles. These questions, however, only served as an opportunity to state over and over again to the jury what Communism really was and what its methods and principles of work. They proved a boomerang for the prosecution. This mistake was not repeated in the Ruthenberg trial. The prosecution did not dare permit a frank, bold avowal of Communist principles from the witness chair by the defendant because it would have made impossible any further prosecutions and in that it would have given the defense a platform from which to address the jury. Ruthenberg from talking to the jury from the witness chair. During the direct examination by Frank P. Walsh, Prosecutor Smith was seen to be dozing. While Ruthenberg was attempting to put the Communist principles in the most favorable light, Smith interrupted at every fifth or sixth sentence and Judge White cautioned Ruthenberg "be brief" and ruled out all illustrations of the principles he was stating.

Evidently Bachman posted Smith on the trial tactics which would succeed in arousing the prejudices of the jurors to the highest pitch. The results were evident thruout the trial.

Whether it will be the first jury of labor leaders, a shoe merchant, who is treasurer of the Chamber of Commerce, a fruit grower, a Standard Oil salesman and a gas service station employee, who is a member of the American Legion, brought in a verdict of guilty in the contempt charge against Foster arrived at a verdict?

The answer to this question is not hard to find. The Ruthenberg jury had on it men with particularly strong prejudices against the things which the Communists stood for. Juror Kahn, the treasurer of the Chamber of Commerce marched into the hotel dining room at St. Joseph with the members of the Rotary Club; the prosecution had succeeded in holding on to Juror Ward, member of the American Legion on the jury in spite of the efforts of the defense to disqualify him. Bachman probably told Smith what the explanation of Communist principles from the witness chair had much to do with removing from the minds of the jurors the misapprehensions and distortions which the prosecution was eager to cultivate.

After finishing the "Program of World Revolution" on which the charge of "sedition" was founded, the chapter on religion from the "A.B.C. of Communism" by Bukharin. By this time Judge White had become frightened. He told the prosecutors that they were going too far. The defense attorneys claimed that the prosecution had already gone too far; that no court which renders a verdict on the basis of the facts can uphold a verdict of "guilty" of criminal syndicalism secured by reading anti-religious literature to the jury.

The same tactics were followed in appeal to the patriotic prejudices of the jury. Ruthenberg had opposed the war. Ruthenberg had stood on the Public Square in Cleveland before ten thousand people and denounced the conscription law. He had served ten months in prison for daring publicly to state his views during the war. "Slacker" shouted Prosecutor Smith to the jury.

The final appeal to the jury by Prosecutor Smith was made by tearing from their context in the literature of the Communist Party and the Communist Labor Party, which were declared illegal by the courts, a few phrases which to the jury, ignorant of the class struggle, sounded like a call to violence. Ruthenberg was charged with "assembling with the Communist Party of America." The main question at issue was whether the Communist Party advocated "crime, sabotage, violence or other unlawful methods of terrorism as a means of accomplishing industrial or political reforms." Under Judge White's ruling it was unnecessary for the prosecution to prove that the Communist Party had advocated anything in the State of Michigan. It was sufficient, the judge argued, under his interpretation of the law, that the Communist Party elsewhere had adopted principles which violated the law and that subsequently they had met in the State of Michigan.

This was the issue in the case. How then did the prosecution proceed to prove it?

One of the most convincing items of proof was to read from Bukharin's "Program of World Revolution" a chapter devoted to the struggle of the Russian Communist Party against the Russian state church. It was thru reading a Communist viewpoint on what science has to say on religion that the prosecutors succeeded in arousing the prejudices of the jurors to the highest pitch. The results were evident thruout the trial.

Conference of Needle Trades Big Success

By BEN GITLOW

The First National Conference of the Needle Trades Section of the Trade Union Educational League was a big success. Seventy-five delegates were present representing every important needle trade center in the United States and Canada. Among the delegates were some who officially represented local unions.

The conference demonstrated that the League is a vital, living institution in the needle trades organizations. In the conference as delegates were leading officials of unions in various localities. Also many of the delegates present came from leagues whose membership had full control of their respective needle trade organizations.

There were present leaders tried in the struggles of the needle trade workers, many militants who had fought in some of the bitterest struggles and many who demonstrated by their comportment in the debates that they were made of the fighting stuff that is a prerequisite for militant leadership in the labor movement.

This First National Conference signified that amalgamation is the next step in the needle trades and that when it comes it will find at its head a revolutionary, experienced leadership fully aware of its tasks and capable of fulfilling them. The needle trades will be worth while watching more than ever.

One of the greatest difficulties in getting a national movement started among the workers in the needle trades was the lack on their part of a national outlook. Being engrossed in the activities of their various locals they lost sight of the national scope of the militant movement. The result was that among them, until very recently, a local psychology predominated.

The First National Conference succeeded in definitely obliterating this local psychology. At this conference a national viewpoint was built up in the minds of the militant workers. They began to view the situation not from New York, not from Chicago, not from Montreal, but from the viewpoint of the whole needle trades organizations of the United States and Canada.

The unimportant local difficulties that before loomed tremendously important in their minds faded into insignificance and the national problems that effect all the 500,000 organized needle trade workers assumed prime importance.

At the coming conventions of the International Ladies Garment Workers and the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, as a result of this national psychology established by the conference in the minds of the militants, the militant delegates will make a fight that will be startling in its effectiveness and that will, I am sure, baffle the reactionary officialdom.

The most important discussion at the conference took place over the consideration of the proposals originating for a federation of existing needle trade organizations proposed by the Cap Makers' Union. The issue was amalgamation vs. federation. The delegates, 100 per cent, favored amalgamation as the only solution for the present difficulties confronting the needle trade organizations, and the only effective means for building up a powerful fighting machine of all needle trade workers.

However, there were some, and their number was not large, who believed that in the evolution of the needle trades organization towards complete amalgamation a federation of the existing organizations will necessarily be the next step.

These, therefore, wanted the League to help in the formation of a "Federation" as a step in advance towards amalgamation.

The overwhelming majority of the conference would have nothing to do with such a middle compromising course. As amalgamationists they wanted insistently and uncompromisingly to fight for amalgamation. They wanted amalgamation brought about by the rank and file and not a federation imposed upon the rank and file by the existing reactionary officialdom.

They wanted a radical change in their organizations, not the continuance in a federation, of all the present evils. They know the weakness and shortcomings of federation and wanted the opportunity of exposing its fault to the vast membership. They were sure that in an issue of "Amalgamation vs. Federation" the rank and file of the needle trade organizations would almost solidly support amalgamation.

The conference dealt with a large number of organizational and principle matters. Resolutions on many important matters concerning the militant and revolutionary workers' movement were adopted. The conference indorsed the principles of the Red Trade Union International and officially joined the International Propaganda Committee of Needle and Textile Workers.

With the election of a National Committee of 20 members, representing 13 needle trade centers, the conference ended, closing a most important event in Labor history.

Organize the Unorganized! Mighty Call to All Militants by Eastern Trade Union Educational League Conference of 1,000,000 textile workers are organized; 100,000 of the 1,000,000 miners; 10,000 of the half million steel workers; 2,000 of the 200,000 packing house workers; but half of the millions of the unorganized; 10,000 of the quarter million lumber workers; 200,000 of the 1,200,000 railroad workers; 10,000 of the 100,000 metal grinders; with similar conditions existing among the needle workers, the marine transport workers and every other American industry.

In another column we publish in full the organization resolution that was adopted. Its passage alone was worth the whole effort that has gone into this conference. By the unanimous adoption of that measure, this Conference made labor history. Delegates who came with phrases received scant attention. Those who had something practical and definite to offer were cheered. Foster didn't say very much, but when he talked his words counted. The Eastern Organizer, Joseph Manley, spoke little, but worked diligently. When he did have something to say, his words had the worth of rich jewels.

Organization Drive Has Kick

"We are going to force the organized American labor movement to quit its criminal neglect of the unorganized," said Foster. "We are going to tell the workers of this country about those of their officials who fall down on this vital organization job. We are going to point out their failure. This organization resolution has all kinds of kick in it.

"One reason the old officialdom of the labor unions does not like to carry on the work of organization, is that they are not sure what new elements will come into the unions. They do not know what the newly organized workers will do. A few thousand new recruits may upset their balance of power. That is what we want to do. We want to upset some of their balances. Let us force all the fakirs into line. Let us plunge into this organization work to the best of our ability."

Organizer Manley also scored the refusal of the reactionary bureaucracy of the American labor movement for its failure to carry on the work of organizing the unorganized.

"This reactionary bureaucracy did nothing to organize the workers during the favorable situation presented by the war," he said. "And the same reactionary officials are doing nothing during the favorable economic situation that we have at the present time. The real organization work that was done during the war was carried out by a few discredited militants," showing how John Fitzpatrick, president of the Chicago Federation of Labor, Foster and himself, from Chicago, had to come East into the Pittsburgh steel district to help organize the steel workers.

"Go to your unions and to your jobs," urged Manley, "and bazoo your fakirs into line. Campaign to organize the unorganized. Expose these fossilized fakirs, wherever you find them, and wherever they are trying to prevent the progress of organization work. Show up these petrified mummies who toddle down to their offices in their limousines only every other day. Most of you don't know how late they come down to their offices, nor how early they go home. But find out and tell the workers about it. Show that these Rolls-Royce labor officials are not doing a thing to organize the unorganized, and you will begin to work havoc in their reactionary ranks. Get busy in your locals, your central labor bodies, in your internationals. Get on the organization committees. Help push this work. This campaign to organize the unorganized is going over even bigger and faster than the drive for 'Amalgamation' and the 'Labor Party'."

And that was the feeling that was in the twice enthusiastic demonstration as the delegates roared their applause in approval of Manley's remarks, even as they had cheered what Foster had to say on the same question.

It was interesting to read the communications that came to this Eastern Conference of Militants from the various international committees of the Trade Union Educational League, calling for greater organization activity.

Thus the call came from the General Committee for Amalgamation in the Food Industry; from the International Committee for Amalgamation in the Building Trades, and the International Marine Workers' Amalgamation Committee, the last just organized on the eve of the Conference it greeted.

It was significant that in selecting the executive committee for the Eastern District, Organizer Manley combated, among others, Fred Merrick, of Pittsburgh, one of the 23 arrested a week ago because of their efforts to organize the coal miners and steel workers of Western Pennsylvania. Merrick is now in a Pittsburgh jail, held under $50,000 bonds, but he went on the Eastern District TUEL Executive committee just the same.

James Campbell, of the Buffalo, N. Y., Moulders' Union, who was chairman, adjourning the conference, declared it to be the most historic gathering of labor ever held in this section of the country, second only to the First Conference of the National Trade Union Educational League held last August, in Chicago. He urged that every effort be made to secure as big a representation as possible from this section of the country at the approaching Second National TUEL Conference, to be held in Chicago, Sept. 1-2.

The Eastern District Conference was the climax of conferences held by the Needle Trades, the Textile Trades and the Eastern Railway Section of the TUEL. Thus the TUEL, with the forthcoming conferences of the Shoe and Leather Trades, at Boston, May 13, and the Progressive Miners, at Pittsburg, June 2, gets a firm grip on the organized labor movement along the Atlantic Coast a little more than eight months after its first National Conference in Chicago.

The TUEL was born in struggle and is going forward its own militant way battling down all obstacles. The First National Conference in Chicago, in August, 1922, was raided by the police and the department of justice a few days following the attack on the Communist Party convention in Michigan. Foster has since been on trial at St. Joseph and Aronberg, one of the Michigan defendants, was chairman of the First National Conference of the Needle Trades Section. Nearly all the delegates carried the scars of the industrial struggle.

Tim Buck brought the fraternal greetings of the militant workers of Canada. He said that the disease of dual unionism had been completely eradicated on the other side of the border, that the Canadian militants are accepting the program of the Trade Union Educational League.

Thus the workers everywhere throw in their lot with the militants of the labor movement. The slogans that call for amalgamation, for a Labor Party, for the release of the class war prisoners, for the organization of the unorganized, these are the slogans that lead the workers to the final struggle and the ultimate victory—the emancipation of all humanity from the heavy chains of wage slavery.

The Church and Revolution

By ELMER T. ALLISON

In the village where I was reared, in the borderland between North and South, there stood a "meeting house" of the Methodist Episcopal Church, SOUTH, dedicated to the service of God if not of man.

A sad but eloquent relic of the four years bloody fray for supremacy between the agricultural and financial capitalists of the North and the landed capitalists of the South, which split the Methodist organization along the line of economic interests of the capitalists of the contending sections. The Elders of this church were still loyal to the Lost Cause of Southern Capitalism and maintained the factional division which occured 40 years before.

If we are to believe Bishop Blake, of the American Methodist Church, who spoke at the All-Russian Church Council which unfrocked Patriarch Tikhon, for treason to Soviet Russia, a few days ago, the Church has learned a thing or two since the Civil War days.

Bishop Blake told the Council: "Revolutions and upheavals are not born of death, they show new life and should fill our hearts with gladness." The Church cannot stop new movements, he said, but must join them and work with them until the ancient Christian principle of "he who does not work shall not eat" is put into practice for all.

Bishop Blake speaks only for the advanced minority in the Church. As a whole the Church is reactionary, trimming its sails to the winds of capitalistic interests at all times. This fact, the masses have learned or at least sensed, hence the gulf between the masses and the church. Facing the greatest upheaval in their years of history, the church is in crisis, the Church stands aloof from this struggle, or takes sides with capitalist interests against the workers. Instead of leading the masses into the new, larger life of the future, it seeks to restrain them, to modify and nullify revolutionary programs and make its stand for the present position of the Church the world over today.

Bishop Blake and his progressive minority might recall to mind that it required a fundamental revolution in Russia to bring the Church to a realization of its duty of service to the masses. Is it likely that it will take a different course elsewhere?

Textile Unity Is Achieved, Says Manley

By JOSEPH MANLEY
Eastern Organizer Trade Union Educational League.

The various organizations of workers in the textile industry are united at last on a common platform and program of action, as the First National Conference of the Textile Section of the Trade Union Educational League.

There were gathered together in this conference representatives of the Amalgamated Knit Goods Workers, Amalgamated Textile Workers, various Textile Councils, American Federation of Textile Operatives, United Textile Workers (A. F. of L.), Associated Silk Workers and the "One Big Union" of Lawrence, Mass.

Practically all the big textile centers of the New England states, with others in New Jersey and Pennsylvania, were represented.

This conference was the first big effort of the kind, and it came up to all expectations. It resulted in the election of permanent officers, with Albert Fleischer, New York, Secretary. The proposed program for the textile industry was endorsed.

There was a long and interesting discussion of departmentalized and sub-departmentalized industrial unionism as it should be applied to this industry. The delegates unanimously agreed that some departments of the general industrial union are necessary.

The conference passed a general resolution endorsing amalgamation for all trades, and also gave its support to the Labor Party resolution, specifically supporting the Chicago Conference in July.

Leather, Shoe Meeting, May 13, at Boston

By WILLIAM SIMONS
(Special to "The Worker")

BOSTON, MASS.—From all the shoe and leather centers of Massachusetts, the largest shoe manufacturing State in the country, comes an enthusiastic response to the invitation to attend the first national amalgamation conference of the International Amalgamation Committee of the Shoe and Leather Industry, Lynn and Brockton, Peabody and Boston, Haverhill and Chelsea; all of these will send delegates to Boston on May 13 and they will represent the militant shoe and leather workers in the State.

From New York City and Rochester, and from Chicago and St. Louis, delegates are expected to attend. This is a result of the activity carried on by the International Committee in distributing the Statement covering the industries showing clearly that so long as there exists so many unions in an industry, the workers are doomed to a bare living. The expectation of the committee is based on the active work of militants in each of the local groups already established.

The sabotage committed by the officials during the amalgamation move of the last few years has convinced the workers that nothing but a rank and file movement can bring amalgamation about. In Lynn recently the rank and file left the United Shoe Workers of America because their will was thwarted by high-handed officials. Now that Lynn is united in one organization, the militants in the Amalgamated Shoe Workers will carry on an active campaign to have it join in an amalgamation movement comprising all the existing shoe and leather unions.

The conference on the 13th in Boston, which will start at 10 o'clock in Paine Memorial Hall, 9 Appleton St., will lay the foundation for an amalgamation movement that will sweep over all the shoe and leather centers in the country. Now is the time when things are moving fast and all militants look forward to the conference with enthusiasm and hope.

Needle Trades Workers Hear Foster Saturday

This Saturday, 1 P. M., at Casino Hall, 85 E. 4th St., will be held a General Meeting of all members and sympathizers of the Needle Trades Leagues. William Z. Foster will be the principal speaker. The purpose of the meeting is to launch the Amalgamation Drive in the Needle Trades in New York. Ida Rothstein will report on the Amalgamation tour she has just completed. There will also be a report from the National Needle Trades Conference.

Charges Burns Shielded Man Who Helped Organize Kaiser's Spy Service Here, Is Bribe Taken

By MILDRED MORRIS, Staff Writer, Federated Press and "The Worker"

WASHINGTON.—Charges that two members of the department of justice have received bribes totaling $2,000,000 may lead to a congressional investigation of the activities of William J. Burns' Detective Agency and produce a scandal of big proportions.

The charges were made by Gaston B. Means, who is accused in affidavits of accepting one bribe of $50,000 and another between $15,000 and $20,000, "for long jobs, one of which was closed associates. It is charged that other operatives in Burns' bureau are known to be open to bribery.

The affidavits filed against Means bring to light the interesting fact that the department of justice has agents who do not appear on the payroll. They are known as "special dicks" men, who work directly under Burns. They are paid from a lump sum appropriation which is not specifically accounted. Neither is there any accounting of their activities. Most of them are stool pigeons in organizations under the ban of the department of justice, such as the Workers Party. Others are engaged in even stranger activities.

Means was one of those blue ticket men and may still be so far as anyone knows. He had been employed in connection with the private affairs of high officials altho paid with the public's money. Two instances are known, of his being assigned to help eminent officials out of delicate situations. He is said to have the "low down" on other members of the cabinet and the publication of his confessions would have startling effect.

Were all the facts known of the manner in which the department of justice is run, they would reveal, it is said, that strained feelings long have existed between Daugherty and Burns. While congress was bombing Daugherty with charges of waste and frauds prosecutions, Means is said to have got hold of information embarrassing to a certain member of the cabinet; at the behest of this official Daugherty ordered Means suspended; the latter continued to work for Burns.

Burns is absent from Washington. He is thought to be too busy rounding up all the terrible Reds to give time to charges against his agents. One of the affidavits says when information of Means was sought at the department of justice, Burns would neither deny nor affirm that Means worked for him.

Means was charged a few years ago with the murder of a wealthy North Carolina woman who made him beneficiary in one of her wills. Before the United States entered the war, he was employed in this country as a German espionage agent.

Burns' Superintendent Means, Trapped in His Relations with Kaiser's Koenig

This is the third installment of the exposures showing that the William J. Burns International Detective Agency organized the spy service in this country of the German Imperial Government. Sherman Burns, brother of "Bill", speaking for the hero of our exposures, "The Kaiser's Mr. Burns", says the Burns Agency will not reply to the charges made. This silence is the best confession of guilt.

This week we publish extracts from the court record in the effort to have the license of the Burns' Agency revoked, expounding further the alliance between "Bill, the Detective" and "Bill, the Kaiser", from 1915 to 1917. It shows the following:

By ROBERT MINOR

The efforts to show a direct connection between the spy staff of the William J. Burns International Detective Agency and the German Imperial Government that fell in November, 1919, are illuminating by a look at the examination of Gaston B. Means, former superintendent of the Burns' Agency.

Attorney Meyer Steinbrink questioned Means as follows:

Q. Are you acquainted with Captain Boy-Ed?

A. The German Attache, yes, I knew him.

Q. Where did you meet him?

A. I met him and talked to him at different times before and after the war.

Q. Mr. Means, if I may suggest, if you will listen to my question. Try and answer the question. My question was where did you meet him?

A. I think I met him in Washington first.

Q. By introduction? A. Yes.

Q. Who introduced you? A. A young lady.

The former Burns superintendent testified further that the young lady who introduced him to the German spy was not connected with the Burns agency and that he did not meet the spy, Boy-Ed, in the Burns offices at any time, nor at the Great Eastern Hotel, the Burns' headquarters in New York City.

The efforts of the examiners to get Means to admit that he had visited the offices of the Hamburg-American Line, and his final admission that he delivered the Burns reports to an unknown man in a room in the same building, are shown in Means' testimony:

Q. When in New York do you visit the Hamburg-American offices at all?

A. Not the offices. I visit that building.

Q. Have you any offices there of your own?

A. No. I visit the Greek Letter Fraternity League.

Q. Has that office ever been used by you as a meeting place with any officials of the Hamburg-American Line?

A. No.

Q. Have you ever gone into the Hamburg-American offices from the early Fall of 1914 up until, well, up until the present time? I mean the Hamburg-American offices at 45 Broadway?

A. You mean the individual offices?

Q. Individual offices? A. No.

Q. Never? A. No.

After a long course of questioning and admissions of the witness that his business in the Hamburg-American building had not been solely with the "Greek Letter Fraternity League," and that he had visited two men of the Hamburg-American Line whom he named, Means was asked:

Q. Anybody else?

A. Yes. Another office there.

Q. Who?

Thereupon Means turned to the Comptroller and said:

"Mr. Comptroller, I have never, I have always made it a point never to name a client or a man for whom I was doing any work, or assumed that I was doing work, not that there is any mystery about it, but I feel morally obligated in breaking the confidence. There is no mystery about it."

The Comptroller said, "If there is no mystery, tell us about it." There followed a long wrangle between the attorneys, Mr. Steinbrink saying that a suggestion had been made that the facts should not be disclosed because Burns had been working for the United States Government, whereas the truth was that Burns had been working for the German interests and the Hamburg-American Line. Burns' attorney said that Burns had never maintained that he was working for United States Government, and that there was a discrepancy of a year. The Comptroller directed the witness to answer the question.

The witness: May I tell you and Mr. Steinbrink confidentially what I went there for?

The lawyers, the witness and the Comptroller left the room for a while and then returned.

The witness: I want to make another point clear, that this office that I went in was not in the Hamburg-American office at all.

Q. It was in the building?

A. Yes.

The Comptroller: Go right ahead and answer Mr. Steinbrink, and anything that is violating any secrecy the representative of the press will leave out.

Witness (continuing): I talked to what I assumed to be—this is confidential—what I assumed to be an officer of the Hamburg-American Line.

The witness was asked about this man whom he assumed to be an officer of the Hamburg-American Line:

Q. Do you recall his name? A. No.

Q. Would you remember it if you heard it?

A. No, I would not because I did not ask his name, but I knew he was connected.

Q. If you don't know his name, if you would not remember this name if I mentioned it to you, how do you know he was connected with the Hamburg-American Line and was an officer?

A. Because I was directed to go by Mr. Paul Koenig to a certain office in that building. I could tell from his conversation.

Q. Were you taking all your orders from Mr. Paul Koenig in this matter? A. No.

Q. From whom were you taking orders?

A. From William J. Burns.

Paul Koenig, referred to here, was the chief of the German Imperial Government's espionage agents in the United States, second only to Captain Franz von Papen. Photographic facsimiles of cancelled checks and check-stubs taken from von Papen's possession (which can be exhibited if my statement is challenged) show the following payments made by the Kaiser's chief of spies to his sub-chief, Koenig, with notations on the stubs to show what the money was for:

Check No. 111, March 29, 1915, to Paul Koenig, $509.00. Notation on check-book stub: "Secret Service bill."

Check dated April 18, 1915, to Paul Koenig, $90.94. Notation on check-book stub: "Secret Service bill."

Other checks are: May 11, 1915, to Paul Koenig, "Secret Service," $66.71. July 16, 1915, to Paul Koenig, "Compensation per F. J. Boss" $150.00. August 4, 1915, to Paul Koenig, "5 bills secret service," $118.92. Check No. 167, August 26, 1915, to Paul Koenig, various cases in secret service," $247.24.

Of all the above checks photographic facsimiles can be exhibited. Of the following only the check-book stubs are available: October 11, 1915, to Paul Koenig, "Secret Service September," $186.47. November 29, 1915, to Paul Koenig, "Secret Service Sep. $77.24.

Another check to G Amsinck & Co. for $700, is distinguished by the fact that the corresponding stub in von Papen's check-book is marked "fuer Horn." It is dated January 18, 1915. On February 2, occurred the attempt to dynamite the Vanceboro bridge for which Werner Horne, a German officer working under von Papen, was arrested.

All of these checks were drawn on the Riggs National Bank of Washington, D. C. The deposits have been traced and it is established that every deposit to this account of von Papen's was made by Count von Bernstorff personally, except some made by another member of the German Embassy.

Supreme Court Seeks More Light in the Gitlow Case

More light is evidently being sought by the United States Supreme Court in the case of Ben Gitlow, convicted under the criminal syndicalist law of New York state. It has restored the case to the docket and ordered a reargument, according to information received by Gitlow's lawyers. The case was argued a month ago and a decision was being awaited that affected, not only the criminal syndicalist law in New York state, but in 35 other states.

Mutual Aid Welcomes Spring

The League for Mutual Aid, an organization of the radicals, by the radicals and for the radicals, will welcome Spring and New Members at a gala dance and get together at Beethoven Hall, 210 E. 5th St., Friday evening, May 11th.

Howat Speaks in New York on May 20th

Alexander Howat, leader of the Kansas miners in their fight against the Kansas Industrial Court, will speak in New York Sunday afternoon, May 20th, in the New Star Casino, 107th Street and Lexington Avenue.

This is Howat's first public appearance in New York, and a big crowd will undoubtedly turn out to hear him. Howat will pay particular attention to the offensive of the coal barons against the United Mine Workers' Union.

Howat's rise to fame came as a result of his strenuous opposition to the Kansas Industrial Court, established by the Kansas Legislature, upon the instigation of Governor Allen. The law establishing the Court forbade strikes, and when Howat refused to order striking miners back to work, he was jailed. President Lewis of the U. M. W. of A. ordered Howat to obey the decision of the Industrial Court, and when Howat refused, he was removed as President of the Kansas region, Dist. No. 14, of the U. M. W. of A.

Recently he addressed a meeting of 5,000 miners in Charleroi, Pa., where he made a spirited defense of his position and fired a broadside both at the coal operators and President Lewis.

The meeting on May 20th is being run by the Miners' Relief Committee in New York, affiliated with the Pittsburg Miners' Food Relief Conference.

May Festival in Williamsburgh

A May Festival and Dance will be given by the WILLIAMSBURGH ENGLISH BRANCH of the Workers Party, Saturday Evening, May 19, at the EDUCATIONAL ALLIANCE, 76 Throop Avenue, Brooklyn. Tickets, including hat check, 50 cents.

The proceeds of this dance is going towards meeting the expenses incurred in renovating our new headquarters at 715 Broadway (near Flushing Avenue).

Prepare for United May Day in 1924

That the Jewish (Socialist) Daily Forward, and its tools in the labor movement, continued the attack on the May Day United Front efforts of the Workers Party, is shown by the following statement issued by the New York May Day United Front Conference:

It came to our attention that Mr. Max Pine in an article in the Forward of May 5th, states:—"that the Italian Chamber of Labor did not affiliate with our conference, that we did not hire any halls for the celebration of May 1st, and that we did not even hold one meeting under the auspices of our conference. He further states, "that we had advertised a meeting at the New Star Casino, knowing that the big hall was rented to the conference of the United Hebrew Trades."

First, as to the facts. The Italian Chamber of Labor took up the question of affiliation with the United Front Conference at their executive board meeting on Friday, March 31st, and we were officially informed by their secretary, Comrade Arturo Giovannitti, that the decision to affiliate was practically unanimous, and at no time were we informed by Comrade Giovannitti as to their withdrawal. They did not have any meetings of their own but participated at the meetings of the Conference.

As to the May Day United Front Conference not holding any meetings under their auspices, well, we had known Mr. Max Pine to be a man who is not very "particular" as to stating facts correctly, but we never knew him to be a man who would play a joke on himself.

Does he mean to say that the many successful meetings held directly under the auspices of the May Day United Front Conference at the Central Opera House, Lexington Theatre, Webster Hall, Harlem Casino, Bohemian National Hall, Hotel Workers Hall, New Plaza Hall and a number of other meetings held in smaller halls, were no meetings at all, because Mr. Max Pine and other "leaders" of his brand were not invited to address them? Especially when the meeting at the Central Opera House and Lexington Theatre, were advertised in the New York Call as being held under our auspices, the Forward not accepting the advertisement, unless we struck out the sentence—"held under the auspices of the M. D. U. F. C.")

As to advertising the New Star Casino Meeting of the hall was hired by Secretary Paul Agnell five weeks before May 1st. A check for $25 was sent as a deposit and the proprietor promised to mail the contract, which he failed to do. Only Thursday, April 26th, were we informed that he had rented the hall to the Socialist Party for an exorbitant price of $250, just $100 more than the price offered to us.

It is rather plain to everybody that the conference of the Hebrew Trades seeing that we hired a number of the largest halls in the city got wise to it and had bargained the New Star Casino away from us.

The 22 meetings he refers to in his article, we presume, include the number of street meetings that were advertised in the New York Call and Forward and never held. The open-air meeting at 110th Street and Fifth Avenue, being the only outdoor meeting held, was under our auspices.

All these "statements" and "facts" and the whole tone of Mr. Pine's article leaves the impression that it was done in order to cover up the failure of their meetings. After the big advertisements in their official press they could only muster a few hundred people at the New Star Casino and at the Irving Place Theatre, while our meetings at the Central Opera House, Lexington Theatre, and especially at Webster Hall, were packed. But aside from this the M. D. U. F. C. forced the United Hebrew Trades to abandon the demonstration they were preparing against the Soviet Government of Russia and against all the militant and struggling elements on the labor movement of the world.

In their declaration on April 17th, they are calling upon the Jewish workers to transform the Red Proletarian Holiday into a demonstration of black reaction against Soviet Russia.

But due to the agitation and propaganda carried on by the United Conference for International Proletarian Unity for presenting a United Front against all the black forces of reaction and brutal oppression—against the white terror of the capitalist class, they did not dare to openly attack the only workers government in the world—Soviet Russia.

And now when it is becoming quite clear to them that they are beginning to lose the confidence of even those workers who blindly followed their lead in the labor movement they are coming out with statements that are really putting them in a very poor light.

The May Day United Front Conference, at the last Conference held April 29th, decided to elect a provisional committee of seven and authorized this committee to make the necessary arrangements for the calling of a conference which would take the necessary steps in organizing a real united front on May Day, 1924.

We hope that by next year the consciousness of the workers of New York will develop to such an extent that it will force those elements in the labor movement who try to split the ranks of labor to take a back seat, making it possible for the workers to close their ranks for an aggressive fight against the ruthless capitalist class.

Executive Committee of the May Day United Front Conference, Paul Agnell, Secretary.

Adopt Pledge at Newark

The May Day pledge adopted at the Newark, N. J., May Day Meeting was as follows:

"We, members of the working class, assembled in celebration of Labor's international holiday, do hereby resolve to work with all our might to further labor's cause, and we at the same time, call upon the entire American working class to organize itself on the economic and political fields, so that in the near future, the ruling powers will be compelled to release all political prisoners; recognize the first Worker's Republic, Russia; and in other ways realize what working class solidarity means.—United Front May Day Committee, Newark, N. J.

New Open Shop Menace to Labor

By JAY LOVESTONE

During these May Day days, the country is buzzing with speech. The newspapers are filled with articles. Everybody is talking. What are the issues of the coming fight? Who are the leaders? Who are the traitors? Who are the true fighters? Who will win? Who will lose? Every day there is already added fuel to the fire. Every day there is already added fuel to the flames. Every day there is a big addition to the fighting spirit.

The last great class conflicts in America, such as the steel strike of 1919, etc. The workers succeeded in repelling the attack of their bosses on their unions and living conditions. The capitalist group was defeated.

Since the Open Shop Drive was brought to a halt by the heroic resistance of the workers and the peaceful sport the powerful employers have been preparing. Tariff, taxation, foreign affairs, prohibition, railways and agricultural relief will fill up the space in our metropolitan and rural press during the campaign.

The outstanding issue of the campaign will be the question of relationship between workers and employers. This issue will come to a head in the Open Shop question. That is why the giant industrial magnates and their lieutenants controlling the Republican and Democratic Parties, are talking and acting so early.

Daugherty For the Open Shop

On March 19, in a letter to the Florida State Bar Association, the strikebreaker Daugherty openly announced that he would strain every ounce of his energy to have the Republican Party committed to the Open Shop in the coming campaign. Daugherty has indisputable merit in rendering service to the employing class. The Attorney General put in his plea for law enforcement against the militant workers and for prohibition enforcement. In the every day parlance of the workers this means that the Republican Party will openly encourage and aggressively support the new attack on the workers. The enforcement of prohibition is, of course, a joke. The Administration will continue to employ the enforcement of prohibition as a subterfuge for building up a strong party machine thru patronage and a potential strike breaking army thru the appointment of thousands of Federal marshalls who can be deputized for strike duty.

"Hell-and-Maria" Dawes Thunders

"Hell-and-Maria" Major General Dawes, formerly a lieutenant of Mark Hanna, the apostolic father of American imperialism, who forced McKinley on the nation in 1896, is also making himself heard. This Chicago banker speaks for mighty steel, railroad, rubber, metal, automobile, telephone, oil, textile, cement, meat packing, and fertilizer interests employing over 4,000,000 workers. As early as last December this spokesman of the workers in an address before the Chicago Chamber of Commerce hurled defiance at the laboring masses. Thus bellowed "Hell-and-Maria": "The politicians these days are afraid of the labor vote. They are afraid to offend the criminals. We need men who are not afraid of mobs—who are ready to fight!" And recently this expert in profanity went even further. He openly dedicated himself to having the Republican Party take the leadership in the new Open Shop drive.

When Daugherty and Dawes talk they mean business. Daugherty and Dawes are not mere talkers. They are doers. Their lives present a record replete with the blackest of crimes against the workers. How this policy is applied in industry was well illustrated by Samuel M. Vulcain, President of the gigantic Baldwin Locomotive Works, in an address delivered before the New Orleans Chamber of Commerce on April 12th. Said Mr. Vulcain:

I have got 25,000 men working for me in a little foundry back east. I'd like to see any union labor leader start something amongst them. Why, when the railroad strike was starting, a bunch of labor delegates came around to the plant. In twenty minutes I had every damned one of them in jail. I was told I had no right to put them in jail. I said: "But they are in jail, aren't they? Now go and get them out." You have got to act quick when you are facing a crisis.

This is what the workers in every industry will face if the Dawes and Daughertys have their way.

Workers Are Facing Crisis.

The workers are facing a crisis. The Government is preparing to fight the battles of the capitalists. The workers more aggressively than ever before. They will be crushed by the capitalist juggernaut run by the Government.

It is obvious that the workers can take a leaf out of the book of their employers. The bosses know how to fight. The employers are amalgamating their giant corporations into super-corporations in order to crush the workers more easily. They are centralizing both the political power they have thru their ownership and control of the Government.

Unless the workers do likewise they will fall victims to the rule of the rough shod over them. In order to save themselves from this capitalist tyranny the workers must amalgamate their forces and unite into mighty, fighting industrial unions. The workers together with the workingmen farmers must organize themselves politically. They must organize a powerful independent party that will actively fight for the city and rural working masses on the political field.

Negro Art Players Here in Repertoire at Frazee

By JOHN DALE

Raymond O'Neil, director of the Ethiopian Art Theatre, deserves appreciation for bringing his players to the Frazee Theatre. The Negro actors, whom he has himself chosen and trained for 12 months, are promising material.

As a certain raiser they present the one-act play "The Chip Woman's Fortune," an excellent piece of work. The scene is set in a poor Negro home, about to lose its treasured Victrola, because of inability to keep up with the weekly payments. The simplicity of the dialogue, the genuine touches of the life of a poverty-stricken workingclass family, with their naive efforts at understanding what is right and what is wrong, is all so realistic as to be thoroly refreshing.

Then there is Oscar Wilde's "Salome." Credit is due to Evelyn Preer, radiant in her portrayal of the fiery Salome. Sydney Kirkpatrick as Herod gives a forceful presentation of the vain, fear tortured King, and Laura Bowman, as Herodias, his wife, does her part well. Solomon Brace as Jokanaan, came nearest the mark of fine acting.

It is to be hoped that the Ethiopian Players will put on less of these sensatate productions and more plays of present day Negro life in America. For then they will give the public something different.

Moscow Art Theatre Farewell

For the farewell engagement of the Moscow Art Theatre in New York for two weeks beginning May 21st, Morris Gest announces that he has arranged for the Russian players to appear at Jolson's 59th Street Theatre, Stanislavsky and his fellow-artists, after two weeks in Philadelphia, then to Chicago, Boston, where at the Majestic Theatre they will play two weeks, returning here for the finale of their American tour. During the farewell fortnight in New York, the Moscow Art Theatre will present four productions in repertory order just as on the home stage in Moscow. For the first week the schedule will be as follows: "Tsar Fyodor Ivanovitch", Monday and Tuesday evenings, May 21 and 22; "The Lower Depths", Wednesday and Thursday evenings, May 23 and 24; "The Three Sisters", Friday matinee and evening, May 25; and "The Cherry Orchard", Saturday matinee and evening, May 26.

Exciting Popularity Contest Is Feature of Defense Spring Festival

The Spring Festival Dance for the defense of the Michigan and New York Criminal Syndicalist cases to be held this Saturday, May 12, at Webster Hall, 119 E. 11th St., has just notified us of the details of the "Popularity Contest" which will be a feature of the occasion.

The local comrades are asked to caucus very carefully and pick from among their number one whom they consider the finest and reddest Bolshevik—male or female. They will then organize themselves into a boosters' committee for the purpose of obtaining the election of their comrade they have chosen. All methods of electioneering have been declared permissable except "force and violence." Each boosters' committee will have to pay 25 cents to place its candidate upon the ballot. Boosters will then canvass for votes among the dancers. The successful candidates will receive a prize that will be dear to the heart of a radical.

PICK YOUR CANDIDATE NOW! Organize your boosters committee! Only by careful electioneering and campaigning will your candidate succeed.

The Labor Party

The Labor Party resolution, adopted by the Workers Conference of the Fraternal Union Educational League, urging participation in the Chicago Conference, in July, follows:

WHEREAS, Because of its persistence in the futile and antiquated political policy of rewarding its "friends" and punishing its "enemies", American Labor has become practically a political zero, all branches of the Government, local, state and national, being almost completely in the hands of the exploiting class, and

WHEREAS, That disastrous policy, besides depriving Labor of all say in the Government, also systems atically poisons and cripples the trade union movement in its industrial fight by forcing upon it the current demoralizing capitalistic conceptions of economics, and by throwing open its doors to all sorts of aspiring political crooks of the capitalist parties, and

WHEREAS, The only remedy for the situation, the only way Labor can become a real political factor and free its trade unions from the present devistating capitalistic influence is by setting up a great and militant political party of its own, therefore be it

RESOLVED, That the Eastern District Conference of the Trade Union Educational League heartily endorses the principle of independent working class political action and pledges itself to do all in its power to bring about a great labor party, based upon the trade unions and including all existing working class political organizations, and be it further

RESOLVED, To this end, that all the delegates here assembled do everything possible to have their respective local and international unions represented at the coming National Convention of the Farmer-Labor Party, to be held in Chicago beginning July 3rd, and to which all branches of the labor movement have been invited.

Socialists! Attention!

We call the attention of those who still remain in the Socialist Party, and have any revolutionary spirit left, to read the latest news from the Georgian Soviet Republic to the effect that members of the Georgian Menshevik Socialist Party are leaving that organization en masse. Scores of letters are being published by papers in Georgia from old Mensheviks declaring they do not want to remain any longer in the party that betrays the interests of the Social Revolution.

Sees Mistake; Kills Self

That all are not black, even among the White Terrorists, is seen in the news from Manila. The Philippines, that Capt. Petrovsky, commander of one of the ships stolen at Vladivostok by former Admiral Stark, named "Battery", had committed suicide, leaving a letter stating in part that:

"I believe that we members of Admiral Stark's flotilla have committed a crime against our mother country. It seems that we "Whites", are the only ones who are still at least those of us who are still honest, are in the wrong. We have cut off our return to our own country. I cannot live here (Manila) any longer. It is against my conscience. Therefore, the only thing for me to do is to die."

Ex-Admiral Stark tried to give Capt. Petrovsky a private burial; no doubt as punishment for the above declaration. But the rebellious sailors forced a burial with military honors due to the deceased. Upon the receipt of this news, President Harding, Secretary of War Weeks and the others who invited these emigres to this country, will no doubt have their numbers thoroly combed for any Bolshevik taint.

Clare Sheridan in Europe

By NANCY MARKOFF

Five years after the world war, this May Day season finds Europe in a world greatly changed. Clare Sheridan has just written a book ("West and East—Clare Sheridan Writes") on Europe as she saw it in her travels within the last three or four months. Possessing a fine sense of humor and also a keen feeling for the little pathetic and touching sides of human life, Clare Sheridan gives us the human side of Europe's story.

She visited Ireland during the revolution when the Republicans lost to the Free Staters. You can feel the rapid pulsation of human anxiety in her short quotations of little talks with just folks. "You must not confide in anyone. You cannot tell who are your friends or your enemies. There are police—and plainclothes police—who are still watching everything and everyone." Can anything be more descriptive of human anxiety? In her description of her meeting with Rory O'Conner you feel the powerful grip of absolute faith in a cause by a strong man.

When she tells of her meeting with De Valera you are face to face with the problems confronting a leader whose envoys have misinterpreted his instructions, which has brought about much chaotic misunderstandings. Mrs. Sheridan understands the Irish people, she understands their problems, therefore this chapter is exceedingly good.

There are many little chats with people in every important European city as well as conversations with the leaders of revolutionary movements and existing governments. Her style has caught the general wave for impressionistic pictures that we get in our contemporary drama.

And she gives one a good insight into the lives of the people of Europe and the changes brought about by the war. In one nation monarchy is gone forever, in another the Workers' goverament is struggling for expression against the bitter hostile contempt of its befuddled neighboring nations, in still another nation the compromising socialists are prattling about "democracy and fair play for all," and the chaos ensuing is bewildering.

These facts stand out glaringly: the disinherited nobility is boozing and jazzing itself out of existence; monarchy is gone forever; the creed of nationalistic greed is slowly but surely digging its own grave; internationalism is the hope of the world.

The Negro—Another Labor Problem

By WALT CARMON.

The lack of unskilled labor in the basic industries, caused by the curtailment of immigration, has caused such a demand for negro labor that according to a recent statement of Secretary of Labor Davis the migration of the negro to the north during the winter just past was greater than any winter migration known.

Most of these are going to the industrial centers: Chicago, Detroit, Youngstown. Agents are combing the south for negro labor to the great inconvenience of the cotton grower and the manufacturer. So acutely is this felt that today migration is not only a live topic for the southern press but arrests are even made of labor agents promoting such migration.

A survey of the department of agriculture estimates 13 per cent or 32,000 of the total number of negro farmers, or 3 per cent of the total negro farm population; have departed; Alabama reports 3½ per cent, and Arkansas shows a movement of about 15,000. Arthur Evans, a Chicago Tribune correspondent, some months ago claimed 100,000 to 150,000 to be a conservative figure for this migration beginning early last summer. Some place these figures considerably higher.

From 1916 to 1920, with industry running on a war production, every industrial center had its large quota of negro labor imported to replace the immigrant who was no longer coming to this country. Every large industrial center was presented with the sight of colored workers packed in box cars, warehouses, every and any hole that would hold a human being. With unsanitary conditions, unaccustomed to the severe winters of the north the plight of these unfortunates was pitiful. But with high wages luring them on nothing could stop this flow of colored workers into our industrial cities. And they had come to stay. Census reports from all these districts show the great gains in colored population.

Can organized labor show any additional strength as a result of this migration? No figures are available but we can be sure it was infinitesimal. And this despite the great growth of labor unions during the war period. But when the ranks of organized labor were filling so rapidly—as were the coffers of the unions—negro workers were "small fry". When the depression set in the question presented itself in an entirely new aspect. The unorganized negro worker—man and woman—proved to be the club the employer used to drive down continually and consistently the daily wage. In Chicago, over a period of one year, according to a statement of the secretary of the Urban League, 20,000 colored workers were without employment.

By this time, the still predominantly in the field of unskilled labor, the negro had already entered the ranks of semi and skilled workers.

A Voice from Prison

From one of the prisons where are confined the victims of the capitalist class struggle comes the following letter addressed to William D. Foster, from one whose spirit the capitalist class has not been able to break:

"I received your letter. I do not fear the truth, our cause is honest and just. You have no idea how I worry about you and the other militant brothers and comrades in trouble now. I know the defense council does not look for any finances from the helpless comrades in prison, framed by our capitalist blood-suckers who live in luxury on the sweat of the workers, but I will say this: I am going to sell my tobacco which we get every month (or our hard labor in prison here; I am glad and willing to do without smoking the coming month just to aid us and the other loyal comrades to fight for justice and freedom, and I hope every worker and workers' son will answer this call in the hour of need to help fight and keep our best militant workers out of prison as labor of America needs such fearless men. I wish you would also write to my former friends who were good socialists when I was among them. I hope you will hear from them with some financial aid. You will also hear from me in a few days. I am going to see some of my friends in prison here and try to get up a donation of at least five dollars and have it forwarded to the Defense Committee. I am also glad to tell you I received the Labor Herald, and believe me it is real stuff. I have read it three times already. I will close with best wishes and kindest regards; believe me I am, Yours, for industrial freedom, D. J.

Here is the voice of the militant proletariat that prisons cannot still. To those on the outside who tire of the struggle it should be a source of inspiration to further effort. There is but little excuse for inactivity and apathy on the part of those who are still at liberty when such dauntless courage and persistence is displayed by our comrades in the prisons all over the world. It is a glorious roster that the capitalist class of America has compiled for the workingclass during the past ten years.

Russia's Industrial Revival

New Pamphlets!

ISSUED BY THE WORKERS PARTY

The following pamphlets have just been issued by the Workers Party. They deal with live issues confronting the workers of the United States and should be read widely and distributed in every shop, mine, mill and work-shop in the country. Party Branches are urged to place their orders at once at the prices quoted below and begin their sale at all meetings.

"FOR A LABOR PARTY," by John Pepper.

(Re-issued and enlarged.) The second printing of this pamphlet on the most pressing problem confronting American workers consists of 64 pages and is brought up to date. Ten thousand of this pamphlet have been sold. It strikes at the heart of the problem of the formation of a labor party by the workers, backed by the organized unions. It keenly analyzes the problem and shows the vital necessity of the workers taking this step.

In lots of ten or more 11 cents.

"THE AMERICAN FOREIGN-BORN WORKERS," by C. S. Ware.

Who are the Americans? From what countries have they come? What percentage take an active part in American politics? What relation do they hold to the native-born American workers? What part have they played in the development of American industries and the enrichment of their owners? These questions and many others are answered in this pamphlet. Facts are interestingly supplemented with statistics and colored charts.

"UNDERGROUND RADICALISM." An Open Letter to Eugene V. Debs. By John Pepper.

Debs has been an opponent of the Workers Party upon some tactical problems. Yet he is nearer to an agreement with its revolutionary principles than he is with the policies and tactics of the Socialist Party in which he holds membership and for which he is now speaking and writing. The whole question of underground parties, tactics, and the putting into effect of revolutionary principles is discussed in this little pamphlet which is addressed in a friendly spirit to Debs, the great warrior.

"RUSSIA TO-DAY, 1923!" By James P. Cannon.

Russia To-day, 1923! is just the sort of a little propaganda pamphlet to give to the hard-boiled opponent of Soviet Russia. It is more than this; it is a convincing propaganda pamphlet for Communism. Comrade Cannon, Chairman of the Workers Party and for seven months a fraternal delegate of the Workers Party to the Executive Committee of the Communist International, gives authentic information as an eye witness of conditions in Russia and the strength of the Soviet Government. Subjects dealt with are "Labor Unions in Soviet Russia," "Reconstruction," "The Red Army," etc.

Communists of Mexico Have Daily

NOTE:—This is the third article on the Second Congress of the Mexican Communist Party.

By BERTRAM D. WOLFE

(Special to "The Worker")

MEXICO CITY.—From his jail in Vera Cruz came the voice of Heron Proal, to the Second Congress of the Mexican Communist Party, announcing by message the purchase on credit of a printing press for the Communist four-page daily newspaper here, "El Frente Unico."

The delegates from Vera Cruz applauded for party support for the paper on a more adequate basis, and threw an interesting sidelight on the poverty of the peasants by explaining that the paper cannot be sold to them but must be given to them because it costs more than the land which represents their right to live. "They pay 12 pesos a year for their land," explains one. "We are forced to charge 10 centavos (five cents) a day for the paper, which makes over 36 pesos a year for three times the cost of their right to live. The party must make it possible to sell the paper for five centavos and also to give it free to the poorest elements."

Later, under the head of Press, the Secretary of the Party, Manuel Ramirez, moved that "El Frente Unico" be taken over by the party as its national daily organ for the use of workers' and peasants' unions, that is continue to be published in Vera Cruz but that its circulation be made nation-wide and funds raised everywhere to purchase outright the mortgaged printing press, on which $500 pesos is owing, and thus put the paper out of financial danger.

"La Plebe", he explains, will continue to be the national political organ of the Central Committee published weekly in Mexico City. His motion carries unanimously.

The delegate from Orizaba reports that the "yellow labor government" here, in conjunction with "yellow labor leaders" in the unions, is persecuting the Communists, preventing them from getting work and boycotting them. He requests moral and material aid for his district and the sending in of representatives of the National Executive.

A peasant delegate rises to inquire how he can explain to his fellows in United Front, the Red Trade Union International, and reasons in favor of co-operation between peasants' Union and the Communist Party. He listens patiently to patient lectures by Ramirez, Lorenzo, Carrillo and others.

The Red Labor International is taken up. An anarcho-syndicalist tendency manifested by one of the delegates, is rebuked by Manuel Ramirez.

"As Communists" he declares, "we believe in a united front of labors' political and industrial organizations. Clause 2, of Article II, of the Statutes of the Red Trade Union International, provides for the interchange of committee members of the Red Unions and Communist Parties at the Second Congress of the Red Unions which he attended as delegate from the Mexican "Red" Unions) we threw out that clause because the anarchists of the entire world attacked it. In its place we provided for Committees of Action in such emergencies as confront the French, German and Belgian Parties and Unions in the present Ruhr crisis, where they have formed a temporary united front. But this is not a good, because it is not permanent, it is not planful, it is not organic. "We continue to believe as Communists, in organic unity, but offer this as a concession to unclear elements in order to form a united bloc. "Here in Mexico it is difficult to form a united front with the present yellow leaders. (The shameless ones, he calls them.) They have a united front with the government. In any workers' crisis, the government plucks them by the ear, whispers instructions, and they are obeyed.

"Consequently, efforts for the united front in this country take the form of Committees of Action, similar to the Syndicalist Revolutionary Committees of France and Spain, which are nuclei within both sets of unions to form a United Front."

The convention takes up the agrarian problem, urges the peasants to refuse to be disarmed, elaborates details for the uniting of the agrarian communes into a nation-wide organization, provides for lessons on stock-raising and other matters in the daily paper, "El Frente Unico" plans to unite the peasants unions with the Red Union International.

Resolutions are adopted congratulating the workers of the United States, thru the Workers Party, on the victory scored by Foster in the jury disagreement; congratulating the American workers on Foster's work and leadership, providing for reaffiliation of the Young communists with Interchange of committee members, denouncing the formation of tenants' unions by the yellow leaders in places where tenants' unions already exist—which they were not able to control; calling for the workers of all factions to unite in armed batallions of combat against the Fascisti and counter-revolution.

Frederick W. Leighton, director of the Mexican Branch of the Federated Press, addresses the convention in Spanish on the work of the Press, announcing the imminent starting of a Spanish news service, and calls for greater support and the appointment of a party representative on the "all-faction" advisory committee. The Federated Press is endorsed and a delegate provided for.

It is reported that the paper "Laborista", of the rival Laborista Party has stated that Senor Flores Magon has returned to Mexico to assume leadership of the Communist Party, and that the capitalist paper "El Universal" said that the Party wanted a united front of all workers in order to put Magon at its head. The convention adopts a resolution interested those interested that it has nothing in common with Magon who is an anarchist.

Help Soviet Air Fleet

DETROIT, MICH.—In accordance with a proposal submitted by the editors of the "Glos Robotniczy" (Voice of the Workers) the workers gathered at the May Day celebration held in "The International Workers' Home" in Tamarack, Mich., took up a collection of $75.55 for the Red Air Fleet of Soviet Russia in order to demonstrate their opposition against the war plans of the international counter-revolution in general, and the Polish reaction in particular.

Miners Fight Barons' Raids in Pittsburgh

PITTSBURGH.—The Progressive International Committee for Relief to Miner Workers of America has voiced an emphatic protest here against the illegal and unconstitutional abuse of governmental authority exhibited in the raid April 27, on the committee's office in the Labor Lyceum, and the arrest of Fred W. Merrick, Morris Pasternak and Max Jenkins, who had been assisting the Committee in its work.

The pretext for this raid, which was that a May Day plot for a violent uprising was being hatched, was so flimsy that it was necessary to bolster it up in the groom by a superb collection of exaggerations, misstatements, and lies. A sample is the statement that at the time of the raid hundreds of envelopes containing seditious literature were being prepared for mailing. This so-called "seditious" literature was the Committee's program, together with a letter appealing for funds for the conduct of Progressive work. These programs had for weeks been given wide circulation, been reprinted in many labor papers, and had been supplied the general press without the least hint having been received from any governmental agency that the programs were considered seditious, as indeed they could not be.

Howat Detained in Canada

The action of the Canadian authorities in detaining Alexander Howat because of his alleged connection with William Z. Foster and other so-called "dangerous radicals", despite protests from labor officialdom is not a bit behind the United States when it comes to smashing constitutional rights to fragments.

Protest Governmental Outrages

The Progressive Committee calls upon the miners to oppose these abuses of governmental authority with every means at their disposal. Let every miners' local adopt a resolution similar to the following:

RESOLUTION ON THE PITTSBURGH RAIDS ADOPTED UNANIMOUSLY BY THE LOCAL OF DISTRICT ....

Whereas, on April 27, 1923, the Labor Lyceum office, Pittsburgh, Pa. was broken into and many Pittsburgh workers were raided and arrested on charges of criminal nature, and

Whereas, these raids and arrests were systematically executed and clearly in violation of the rights of individual freedom as expressed in the National and State Constitutions, and

Whereas, the committee for which these brothers were arrested were entirely legal and openly in the interest of the Organized Labor Movement, and

Whereas, such illegal and unconstitutional actions by governmental agents threaten to undermine the very foundations of democracy and the foundations of the American Nation,

Therefore, be it resolved that we, Local Union No. 1299, U. M. W. of A., Dairytown, in session assembled, do hereby protest, and that we go on record as emphatically protesting such high-handed and unwarranted abuse of governmental authority as exhibited in these raids and their results.

Be it Resolved, that we demand the immediate release of the brothers arrested, the restoration of the seized property, and further, be it

Resolved, that copies of this resolution be sent to the authorities of the city of Pittsburgh, of Allegheny County, the state of Pennsylvania, and the National Government and given to the press.

Raise Defense Funds

The collection of a fund for the purpose of defending Ed Da Ponte of Pittsburgh and for the conducting of a general FREE SPEECH fight in Western Pennsylvania has begun and met with hearty response from the workers.

Pending the completion of permanent plans, let every Progressive miner rush a Defense contribution even tho small to W. A. Guiler, Charleroi, Pa., candidate for International Board Member in District Five. I. M. W., at the last election.

Keep Up The Progressive Fight

These governmental outrages should be convincing proof that the Lewis machine is becoming desperate. Howat's triumphal tour thru District Five, where thousands of miners received him with enthusiasm such as has been aroused by no other man, culminating in the monster demonstration at Charleroi, April 22, while at the same time the rank and file refused even to listen to Pat Fagan and the members of his payroll gang, show that the Lewis machine in its stronghold, District Five, is at the brink of destruction. Victory for the Progressive forces over the dark interests now oppressing the rank and file of the Miners' Union is just within our grasp. More programs must be distributed, more funds supplied for the furtherance of the Progressive Movement to take advantage of the wave of interest aroused among the miners by those outrages. Rush your orders for programs and your contributions to Thomas Myerscough, Secretary-Treasurer care of W. A. Guiler, Charleroi, Pa.

Miner's Conference, June 2 and 3

The Progressive Miners will positively hold their conference as announced, in Pittsburgh, June 2 and 3.

IN MEMORIAM

The committee has the sad duty to announce the death thru being caught in a fall of coal, of Brother Rudolph Ograyensek, President of Local Union, No. 1355, Avella, Pa. Brother Ograyensek was one of the leaders in the District Five, Progressive Miners' movement, and his loss will be deeply felt not only by his surviving wife and six children, but by the entire Progressive Movement.

The Struggle in the Air

Every enlightened worker will enthuse over the achievement of Kelly and Macready in spanning the American continent in a non-stop flight in 26 hours and 50 minutes. It is a victory of peace. It must not be converted to the uses of war.

Every conquest over time, over space, every device that saves labor is a victory for the working class. But these conquests are not labor's victories until their benefits have been put at the disposal of all.

Soviet Russia today alone strives to develop an air service for human needs. Airships flying between the widely separated cities of Russia in Europe, and Siberia in Asia, are developing a much-needed closer contact between workers and peasants. The Workers' Republic uses its Red Army to develop an air service for peaceful purposes. In capitalist lands every nerve is strained for the creation of an improved air service for war.

Thus the United States uses airplanes but little for transporting mails, and other domestic services, altho its military air force of 53 squadrons, is 40 per cent ahead of Great Britain's military air strength. In support of her imperialistic ambitions, France has built up 140 active-service squadrons, totalling 1160 machines, an air strength greater than that of all Europe. This tremendous French air force has but one ambition,—the crushing of the workers' revolution in Europe. Thus the airplane, a symbol of progress, becomes an instrument of reaction. Instead of knitting all humanity together as one united whole, thruout the entire world, it becomes a weapon of hostile groups of nations struggling for commercial supremacy.

As long as capitalism lives it will continue to subvert every scientific achievement to the brutalizing purposes of its bloody imperialistic adventures. The last war proved this to the workers and peasants of Soviet Russia. Will it require another world war to convince the exploited masses of other lands of this fact? Will American workers allow U. S. bombing planes to murder London's millions with clouds of poison gas, in a probable war with England? Will the developments in the Ruhr lead to a new war on Germany in which France will use the achievements of her chemists and inventors to advance the devil's dreams of her imperialists?

These are problems that the workers of England and the United States, of France and Germany, must ponder upon, as the kept press goes frantic with joy at the first non-stop flight across the American continent. Humanity advances to new achievements. Let the workers win those achievements for all humanity.

The Day of Rest

Owners of big laundries in New Jersey spent last Sunday enjoying the sights of America's premier watering place, Atlantic City.

Andrew Gray, of York 149th St., New York City, took his four-year-old son on this same Sunday on an outing to see the fishes at the Aquarium, in Battery Park.

But how differently the laundry owners, the bosses, and this worker, Grey, responded to this day of rest.

Newspaper reports claimed the laundry barons were having a good time. Their ears still tingled delightfully at the speech they had heard from the lips of Judge Harold B. Wells, of Bordentown, N. J., that "the greatest danger of the age is the tendency for six hours a day work and the five-day week. No great man," he had said, "will ever be developed by working six hours a day and five days a week."

But here was Andrew Grey, workingman, victim of long hours. Even a few hours in the open air had gotten the best of him. Going home on the Elevated he fell asleep, according to the New York Times. He dreamed—about his job—all that he was allowed to think about. Mechanically he awoke, as if called by an alarm clock, got off at his week-day station and hurried to his job, knowing his son innocently looking out the window of the train, ignorant of the father's departure. Not until Grey reached his shop, to find the doors closed, did he realize his mistake. He jerked himself back into his Sunday "freedom" out of his week-day slavery. Later he found his son at the police station, where he had been taken.

It is these automatons, with benumbed brains driving bodies thru a daily routine, that the Jersey Laundry Owners, who lash their help thru ten and 12 hours a day, if not more, would transmute into "great men." But it can't be done. The facts of life prove that such deplorable industrial conditions merely result in the creation of a nation of helpless, illiterate workers, the kind the open shop bosses want to fit in with their inanimate machines.

The workers will continue to fight for the six-hour day and the five-day week, because this shorter work-week will give them the time they seek for study and leisure, without which no working class will be able to build a higher and more perfect civilization. Unfortunately, in but one country, Soviet Russia, is that opportunity now being given to the broad masses of the workers and peasants.

The New York Call has another great newspaper achievement to its credit. It failed to publish a single word about the important conferences of the needle trades, textile and railroad sections of the Trade Union Educational League just held in New York City. But it did give considerable space to Gompers' attack on the T.U.E.L. before the Capmakers' Convention. The "Socialists" believe in democracy and the square deal—for Gompers.

The Church Goes Reactionary

The growing social revolutionary ferment in Russia, as well as upon every other institution of the country, is reflected in the reactionary character of the Russian Church, which is the attack on the Russian Soviet Republic following the execution of Butchkavitch. Church militants, on the other hand, are accepting the revolution and adapting themselves to it.

It was Bishop Blake of Chicago, speaking in Moscow before the All-Russian Church Council that uttered the keynote for the reactionaries. "The church cannot stop new movements, but must join them. Revolutions are not born of death. They just show new life. The slogan 'Those who work not shall not eat' is an evangelic truth. The time will arrive when it will be a slogan for everybody."

It was Bishop Blake that went into Soviet Russia after Butchkavitch had suffered the penalty for treason to the Workers' Republic. His latest utterances will no doubt be savagely denounced by all the kept press.

But these denunciations will only prove that the church in these United States is still clinging to the dark past. This make it easy to understand the black reaction that persecutes the Bishop Browns and the Dr. Grants. They will prove that the workers' and peasants' revolution in Russia has jerked the church, whether the synagogue of the Jew, or the Cathedral of the Catholic, out of darkness, where it was kept by the Rasputins, and brought into the bright light of present day, working class problems. The spirit of the czar must be restless indeed to know that the Living Church of Soviet Russia denounces capitalism as a sin and gives its support to the spread of the world revolution.

The church, in America, as elsewhere, must choose. If it believes in Butchkavitch, in Tikhon, in Czarism, in capitalism, then it must go down with them in a common extinction. If it is for the New Day, then it must go forward supporting the workers in their struggle for the victory of the social revolution.

"Prosperity is here to stay," announces Herbert Hoover. But he did not say who is going to get the benefit of this "prosperity." The big exploiters surely will, unless labor gets busy for amalgamation, a Labor Party and a Workers' Government.

Drive Out These Slanderers

Not the least of the many important decisions reached by the Eastern District Conference of the Trade Union Educational League was the determination to give battle to all labor officials who not only slander labor's militants, but also act as detectives, spies and provocateures against them.

It was recalled that Samuel Gompers, in addition to his other crimes, had pledged the Wall Street government at Washington that the American Federation of Labor would co-operate with the department of justice in fighting radicalism.

Such criminal deeds against the organized workers by their own officials could be committed in no other labor movement in the world. It is high time that the workers forced their officials either to quit scabbing on the police, on the detective agencies and the department of justice sleuths, or to get out of organized labor.

If Gompers and Furuseth, with their Wolls, Wallings and Wrights, want to go into the police business, we are sure that Governor Pinchot, of Pennsylvania, or Governor Smith, of New York, would gladly give them a commission in the Constabulary (Cossacks) of their respective states. Or Burns might employ them in his International Detective Agency as gumshoe experts to stalk Volsted law violators. But there should be no place for them and their black hand work in the trade unions of this country. These slanderers cannot be halted to soon in the performance of their anti-labor crimes.

John D. Rockefeller, Jr., will no doubt want the United States to start war on China because some rude Chinese bandits ran off with his sister-in-law. There are plenty of precedents to be found in our relations with Mexico.

Help "Organize the Unorganized."

Gompers Never Fails

Samuel Gompers never fails the capitalist class. He was with the bankers in their support of Wilson's League of Nations (the Black Capitalist International). He joined the enemies of the workers in dragging the American Federation of Labor into the Labor Bureau of the League. This is the bureau that is headed by Albert Thomas, "Socialist" munitions minister of France during the war. Now Mr. Gompers has endorsed President Harding's move for participation by the United States in the International Court of Justice, another offspring of the Versailles Treaty.

This is the same Gompers who shies timidly at the Amsterdam (Socialist) Trade Union International and fights the Red International (Moscow) of Labor Unions. Gompers is just as hostile to the international efforts at organization of the workers as he is friendly towards capitalist attempts at world unity.

Gompers declares that, "With the present world organization of commerce and industry there must come not only world organization of economic agencies but also of political," and he considers that, "The cornerstone in the political structure may well be the International Court of Justice."

These utterances are surely an indication that the head of the American Federation of Labor is more feeble-minded than we had thought. If labor can expect nothing from the U. S. Supreme Court, appointed by an elected president, then it has surely less to hope for from an irresponsible "International Court" controlled by the dominant group of capitalist nations. If America is to have a representative on the bench of this world court, Harding might well appoint Gompers. Wall Street could choose no more faithful servant.

The Week

"No Classes" for Constitution

Timid statesmen in the labor movement, who are anxious to crawl onto the Labor Party band wagon, are trying desperately to find points between the Workers Party and the proposed "Labor Party."

Thus the editor of the Kern County, (Cal.) Union Labor Journal declares that, "The Workers Party repudiates all other parties and proceeds upon the basis of a new constitution for the United States, while the Labor Party proposes no change in the American constitution."

Shades of Samuel Gompers! That ought to palsy the hand and blast of even the head of the American Federation of Labor, for Gompers has shown himself in favor of constitutional changes, even to the wiping out of the "dry" amendment. That California labor editor should guess again.

The Laugh of the Hour

I find in the meetings I address that there is one name it is impossible to mention without evoking storms of laughter. Labor audiences groan when Gompers is referred to. They boo Daugherty, hiss Burns, but when Samuel Gamaliel Harding, who goes on a vacation six days a week, and plays golf on the seventh, provokes pure unadulterated mirth. Now that the President has had such a good time in Florida, he should make his promised trip to Alaska over the vaudeville circuit as a preliminary engagement in his best golfing suit. He would then continue, as he is, the laugh of the hour, without even Charlie Chaplin as competitor.

He Grabs a Live One

Samuel Gompers grabbed a live Central Labor Council when he directed his anti-radical efforts against the organized workers of Seattle. Secretary James A. Duncan of the Seattle C. L. C. has determined stand against Samuel Gompers' onslaught, and Seattle labor is to be complimented for unanimously supporting him.

It All Depends on the Kind

Lewis E. Pierson, Chairman of the Irving Bank-Columbia Trust Co., of New York City, is the latest big business man to return to this country in love with the Fascisti Dictatorship of Premier Mussolini, in fact Mr. Pierson is also president of the Merchants' Association and had to hurry home to break the glad news about Mussolini's achievements against the Italian workers to the meeting of the United States Chamber of Commerce. In fact, we are willing to give a prize of at least a quadrillion German marks to any big business exploiter who denies he is opposed to the Fascisti Revolution in Italy. It is the revolution that the bosses object to. It is the kind of revolution, the kind, for instance, that was carried to victory by the workers and peasants of Soviet Russia. Let all American workers and farmers get that straight, and then there won't be so much fuss about "the right to revolution."

Certain of a Few Votes

"The Committee of 48" has nominated Senator William E. Borah, for President, in the 1924 elections, and the news is given front page space in The New York Call. That ought to get the Idaho statesman at least a few votes of those who wander around in "No Man's Land" between the forces of reaction and Revolution. But that is about all he will get.

Read the Labor Press

Thomas W. Miller, alien property custodian, is back in Washington from "The West" and has told President Harding there is no rival against his aspirations for re-election. Evidently Mr. Miller failed to read the labor press with its news about the organization of a real Labor Party in this country.

German "Socialist"—We are opposed to the proletarian dictatorship.
Trotzky—And therefore you are the slaves of French imperialism.

Exposing Anti-Soviet Alliance of Church with Big Business

It is admitted the capitalist propaganda attack on Soviet Russia, incidental to the execution of Butchkavich, was one of the best organized since the birth of the Workers' Republic.

This is being shown by new facts brought to light from day to day not only in this country, but in European lands as well.

The viciousness of the Francis McCullagh article in the New York Herald, and affiliated papers, is better understood when it is known that he is a Roman Catholic, that he was pro-Czarist and that he was a spy of the British government.

The character of news reports are also better realized as one studies the confession of Mrs. Marguerite Harrison that she was a spy in Soviet Russia of the United States Army, and that, as a matter of fact, all capitalist newspaper men and women are potential government spies and informers.

But it has remained for the Daily Herald, the British labor organ, to reveal the inside workings of the lie factories, that are continuously turning out misleading propaganda against the Workers' Republic.

Thus it shows that the central feature of the anti-Russian campaign, intended to prepare the way for the breaking of the British trade agreement with Russia, was the protest, on April 13, of 17 religious leaders against "the ruthless warfare of the Soviet government against all forms of religious belief".

The Daily Herald points out that this protest was couched in the strongest terms, and signed by the Archbishops of York and Canterbury, the Catholic bishop of Westminster, the Chief Rabbi, and a number of Free Church Divines.

And the main evidence upon which this protest was based, was a quotation, on the authority of "The London Times", from Pravda, official organ of the Russian Communist Party, of March 18.

"We have declared war on the denizens of Heaven", was the salient phrase in that quotation.

On that text the divines very largely based their denunciation of the Soviet Government. In due time the copies of "Pravda" arrived in London from Moscow, and H. N. Brailsford, prominent author, went thru them, declaring there was no such sentence in the paper.

"I can find no trace of it in the original. In plain words, it is not there", declared Brailsford, in his paper, "The New Leader".

And of the whole article in question he writes that it "seems hardly calculated to move even an archbishop to terror. The clear fact, writes the diplomatic correspondent of the Daily Herald, is that some person or persons interested in fomenting an anti-Russian agitation at the moment have gravely deluded the Archbishops and their fellow-divines.

But this does not absolve these so-called dignitaries of the church from voluntarily and gladly, it seems, without investigation, flinging to the world a charge against the Soviet government which proves to be based on faked evidence.

This manufactured religious protest was only one side of the agitation which was to lead to the breaking of relations with Russia. The protest of business men was the other side.

The Daily Herald charges that the British foreign office had a direct hand in the organization of the businessmen's anti-Russian agitation. It is charged that the letter sent by the British Foreign Office by the Association of British Creditors of Russia, asking for the withdrawal of the delegation, was drafted and sent at the suggestion of a high Foreign Office official, and that the draft was even read to him over the telephone for his approval before it was dispatched. It asks whether this was done with the knowledge and approval of those higher up.

It was on these same false reports that Secretary of State Hughes based his withdrawal permission granted to Mme. Ekaterina Kalinin to visit this country, for the purpose of raising relief for orphaned children in Soviet Russia.

The church has, therefore, become an instrument of the big business interests, not only in attacking Soviet Russia, but in directly causing the loss of life among the hungry and orphaned children of the First Workers' Republic. Such is Christianity, in the year 1923 A. D., under the rule of capitalism.

Italian Communist Editor Sent to Prison by Fascisti Dictatorship After Speech in Switzerland

At a large gathering of Italian and Swiss workers in Zurich, Switzerland, Pietro Nenni spoke on the situation in Italy. While Serrati was in Moscow, Comrade Nenni took his place as editor of Avanti, the official organ of the Italian Socialist Party, which, after the expulsion of the right wing at the Congress of Rome last October, voted to join the Third International. As a result of his Zurich speech Nenni was imprisoned by the Fascisti Government shortly after his return to Italy.

The Origin of Fascism

He pointed out that it was not until the latter part of 1920 that there was any danger from the Fascisti movement, when it began to be a distinctly reactionary and class organization.

The Fascisti movement soon succeeded in becoming the united movement of the bourgeois class. The industrial group gave it their support soon after it had been adopted by the agrarians. The order was sent out to attack Socialists and union members, and the struggle soon assumed the aspects of class war.

Three factors contributed to the rapid Fascist victory.

One factor was of a psychological nature: the proletariat was divided, it had lost faith in its leaders, and its enthusiasm had changed to disillusion.

Another factor was of a political nature: the bourgeoisie was united. All bourgeois political factions rallied around the banner of Fascism, from the Free Masons to the higher clergy; and all together were responsible for the exasperation of the middle classes.

The third factor was the decisive one: the State, from the very beginning, sided with the Fascisti. Premier Bonomi had been Minister of War in Giolitti's cabinet, and provided for the arming of the Fascisti. The courts and the police were placed at the service of the Fascist bands. The railroads were used for their concentration tactics. Crimes were left unpunished. Many People's Houses were destroyed under the benevolent eye of the public authorities. Then Facta, the last hope of the democratic elements, became prime minister. But he quickly lost the support of Parliament and the Monarchy, and represented only the merest shadow of authority. When at the end of 1922 the Fascisti came into power, the legal state had ceased to exist. . .

The Present Outlook

When the speaker expressed the opinion that the present situation offered no hope for a speedy revival of the class struggle, he was asked if this meant that Fascism had really won out . . .

Materially speaking, this question can only be answered in the affirmative. But looking at matters from a more fundamental point of view, the situation is quite the opposite.

We have today a concrete political example of the nationalist doctrine. Mussolini declares from the government bench what Daudet and Maurras created by life to their paper for so many years. We are going thru an experiment in benevolent despotism, of the same type that existed in the 18th century. The conquests of a century are destroyed. The Fascist State considers the masses as the artist considers the clay which he uses to give life to his work: that is as inanimate material. The State will look out for the welfare of everyone: Nobody must make a move. The interests of the people are being well taken care of.

In the atmosphere of terror which now grips Italy, the class struggle may be confined to the unnatural limits of collaboration, but it is bound to break out again.

This makes the problem more complex. To-day Fascism is spreading from Italy to other parts of Europe because almost all the states are faced with the same problems. And this is where we must meet it. The bourgeoisie is far from surviving the mortal crisis of 1914. This last war was the prologue to new wars, and the struggle is not for the freedom of nations but for iron, coal or oil. In the Ruhr the century old conflict between France and Germany is being revived. It is a struggle for economic supremacy. One half of Europe feels that its salvation lies in being after for the other half. Now in this struggle, which will be long and violent, lies the disaster of bourgeois society. The blows which the reactionary forces are hurling against us bring to mind Nero, who let Rome burn as if to spite the new order which was in the process of formation. But vengeance does not stop the inevitable course of events.

In closing, Comrade Nenni declared that at every success of the world proletariat the Italian Socialists rejoiced as at their own success and he spoke of the stirring examples of devotion to the Party and to Avanti which he witnessed daily and which were a proof that faith was still strong, and that the sturdy plant of Communism might be bent, but was not uprooted.

England Yields to Moscow

Newbold, Communist, Ousted from British House of Commons

Great Britain's conservative, Anti-Soviet, Bonar Law government is this week rocking to a fall as a direct result of its most recent attack on the Russian Soviet Republic.

The Tory Ministry has shown not the slightest indication of recovery from the attack of all British labor under the cry of, "No war with Russia!" supported by great demonstrations last Sunday in all industrial centers.

The government hysteria showed its temper when parliament reassembled on Tuesday and John T. Walton-Newbold, the Communist member, was suspended for denouncing the Deputy Chairman, Captain Fitzroy, as "A Bourgeois."

British reaction is backing down in its aggressive stand that for a time threatened new war on Soviet Russia. The London diplomats are yielding to the firm stand of Moscow that declares, "We want peace, but we are ready to fight, if we must."

Labor spokesmen in the British House of Commons point out that the differences between Moscow and London would never have arisen, had the British government granted Soviet Russia full recognition. It is already pointed out that many charges contained in the 10-day ultimatum were untrue.

One of the events that is causing British statesmen to tremble is the fact that the British workers, thru their trade unions and Labor Party, went over the heads of the government in sending the messages to Moscow that paved the way for a peaceful settlement of the present differences.

The sentiment of the labor members in the House of Commons is shown by the great protest against the ousting of the Communist, Newbold. The vote was 300 to 88 against him.

Urge Unity of Leather and Shoe Workers

By JACOB KASSNER, Secretary, International Amalgamation Committee, Shoe and Leather Industry.

BOSTON, Mass.—The conference of militants of the shoe and leather industry held here, gave the work of the International Amalgamated Committee a national character, for delegates were present, not only from the shoe and leather centers of Massachusetts, but from outlying points. They represented local amalgamation groups and local unions.

The conference went on record for the amalgamation of the numerous existing shoe and leather unions, also calling upon them to organize the industry, which at present is only 40 per cent organized.

The treacherous conduct of the officials of the United Shoe Workers in hiring scabs to defeat the striking Lynn shoe workers, was severely condemned. The delegates put themselves solidly behind all workers now in prison or under indictment for militant activity, as Mooney, Sacco, Vanzetti, and the defendants in the Michigan case.

They decided to support the conference on July 3, called by the Farmer-Labor Party, to launch a Labor Party.

William Z. Foster, Secretary of the Trade Union Educational League, and Joseph Manley, Eastern Organizer of the League, told of the rapid growth of the Amalgamation movement, and of the consternation in the ranks of the reactionaries. Foster pointed out the bankruptcy of the leadership of the A. F. of L., and stressed the importance of unifying the political activity of labor thru the formation of a Labor Party.

The conference decided, that its campaign was to be a rank and file proposition, conducted in the A. F. of L. unions, and in the independent unions. To bring the message home to all union members, an organizer is to visit all shoe and leather centers, as soon as possible. Local groups are to be established in all centers, which have not yet been reached.

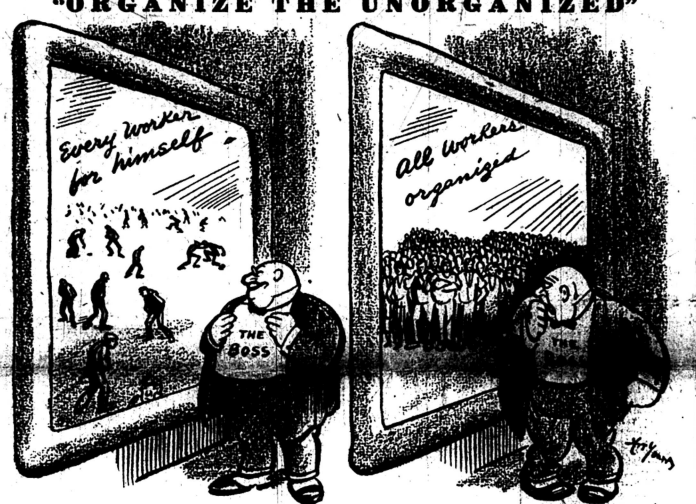
The financial report showed a deficit, in marked contrast to the charge of the International President of the United Leather Workers International Union that the International Amalgamation Committee was trying to "get rich" from the sale of the Statement. A special circular from this President to all the locals of his International was read, giving rise to merriment on part of the delegates as they listened to the familiar strains of "destructionists", etc., etc.

The statement of the Committee, which is still being circulated, will be enlarged to include a Departmentalization Plan to be prepared by a special committee, along the lines already adopted by the Metal Trades, Railroad and other Amalgamation Committees.

The Conference, receiving greetings from various militant organs, pledged its support to the Labor Herald, the official organ of the Trade Union Educational League, and to the following: "The Worker," the Young Worker, the Voice of Labor, the Freiheit (in Jewish) and Nowy Mir (in Russian).

The newly elected National Committee was strengthened by the election of Michael T. Berry, the Lynn shoe worker. All the delegates pledged themselves "to work with untiring devotion for the program of Amalgamation in the Shoe and Leather Industry."

"ORGANIZE THE UNORGANIZED"



THE PICTURE THE BOSS LIKES AND THE ONE HE HATES

The "Organize the Unorganized" drive of the Trade Union Educational League has won its first victory thru securing the endorsement of this campaign by the Harrisburg Convention of the Pennsylvania Federation of Labor. Numerous other state and city central labor bodies are now taking up this question and it will be urged before all conventions of international labor unions. The tens of millions of America's workers must be organized.

Howat Reply to Attack on John Brophy

By ALEXANDER HOWAT

The recent attack made on John Brophy, President of Dist. 2, by International Vice-President Phil Murray thru the columns of the Mine Workers' Journal and the Press of the country, shows to what extent some of the International officials will go in order to discredit any official of the Miners' Union who dares to differ with them as to the policy and the principles for which our organization shall stand.

Vice-President Murray would try to lead the miners to believe that President Brophy was on the verge of accepting a 20 per cent reduction in wages for the miners of Dist. 2, and that he prevented it, and once more saved the Miners' Union from destruction.

Nothing is further from the truth, and no one knows this better than Murray himself. If he wanted to play the game squarely, why did he not say something about it to President Brophy when speaking to him the day before he made the attack against him? There was not the least justification for Vice-President Murray's attack on Brophy.

The miners, however, will not be deceived. They are beginning to understand if you refuse to line up

Pennsylvania Labor in Defiant Challenge to Gompers' Attack on Amalgamation, Labor Party and Recognition of Soviet Russia

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL

It is well that the first reply to the latest czarist edict of the Gompers' reaction now ruling the American Federation of Labor has been quick and decisive. It is also cause for congratulation that this initial challenge to Gompers' attempted "White Terror" over America's organized workers comes from no less a body than the Pennsylvania Federation of Labor, headed by the Socialist, James H. Maurer.

This is the full significance of the Pennsylvania Labor Convention at Harrisburg, when this powerful state labor body did all the things that the Gompers tyranny has told the Minneapolis Trades and Labor Assembly and the Seattle Central Labor Council they cannot do. This convention:

1. Reiterated its demand for a Labor Party and instructed its delegate to carry the fight to the next A. F. of L. Convention.

2. It took an almost unanimous stand, lacking only one vote, for the amalgamation program of the Trade Union Educational League.

3. It reaffirmed its stand demanding the recognition of and the opening of trade relations with Soviet Russia.

Gompers' A. F. of L. oligarchy had ordered the Seattle Central Labor

May First Manifesto of Burns "D. of J."

William J. Burns is again very busy with propaganda. As he has very little prospect of success with the workers if he issues statements and manifestos in the name of the Department of Justice, he has chosen a better-sounding name. He has simply stolen the honest revolutionary name of the Central Executive Committee of the Communist Party of America. We have just received the complete text of a May First Manifesto with the signature: Central Executive Committee of the Communist Party of America. We declare that this manifesto is a lying and falsification, as is generally

Buffalo Labor Council Goes on Record for Labor Party

By H. M. WICKS

(Special to "The Worker")

BUFFALO, N. Y.—The Central Labor Council of Buffalo decided at its last regular meeting to start a campaign for the purpose of aligning all the labor unions in the vicinity solidly behind a local Labor Party.

For many months there has been rapidly developing a spontaneous demand on the part of organized labor in Buffalo for a Labor Party independent of and opposed to the old parties.

Since last February the Central Council has been on record in favor of independent political action, when it accepted a report of James C. Campbell, chairman of the Organization Committee containing a recommendation that the Council enforce a local Labor Party.

However, those politicians who trode-stepped to Gompers' tom-tom, tried to kill the recommendation by inaction and were succeeding fairly well when resolutions from the affiliated unions began to make it uncomfortable for them.

Opposition Is Silent

The experience of the Buffalo workers in the street car strike of last year was a salutary lesson in the coercive power of the capitalist government, both city and state. In spite of that experience the legislative committee of the Council continued he old Gompers policy of "reward your friends and punish your enemies," and supported "Al." Smith, for governor, and the Tammany Hall machine in the state elections. The Council was told that these "friends of labor," would force a thoro investigation of the street railway company officials; Instead of assailing the officials, according to their promises, the political crooks at Albany, under Tammany leadership, juggled a few more million dollars per year into the pockets of this labor hating corporation.

Mayor Schwab, former brewer, now indicted as a bootlegger, posed as the "friend of labor" during the early days of the strike, but his flagrant use of the police force as scab herders and his notorious double-dealing soon exposed him in his true colors. In fact every act of the poli-

Cannon Meets Big Response in Michigan

GRAND RAPIDS, MICH.—In this locality, dead to radicalism for many years, the revolutionary movement is beginning to show unmistakeable signs of life. Whether it is the propaganda emanating from the neighboring country, where the famous Red trials are being held in St. Joseph, or some other cause, Grand Rapids is now on the revolutionary map.

This was apparent when the meeting for James P. Cannon resulted in bringing 200 people into the hall to hear the story of Russia. This may seem a trivial number compared to larger centers, or more progressive centers, but to Grand Rapids it has the significance of a historic event. It means the definite turning of the tide in our favor. To say that Comrade Cannon measured up to the expectations of the audience is merely to relate that which is well known to everyone who has ever heard him. The important thing is that Grand Rapids, once a favorable spot for radicalism, is coming back.

known, the Communist Party was dissolved on April 7, 1923, and, of course, the Central Executive Committee of the Communist Party also ceased to exist. Only Inspector Lamb bemirch today the good old revolutionary name of the Communist Party thru such expropriatica. This May Day manifesto is no work of ordinary impostors, but is the fabrication of the most powerful underground organization in this country —the Department of Justice.

To show that this manifesto is nothing but a police statement, we reprint the most attractive part:"... today Millions of Workers in all parts of the World are appealing to you Workers in America, to join forces with them to begin to prepare yourselves so that when the opportune time arrives you will be in a position to wage Civil War against the common enemy, the Capitalist Class.

"America. A country without a constitution.

"America. A country that is ruled by a small handful of capitalist dictators.

"America. A country where workers are sent to prison for their political opinions, others are framed, sent to jail, to the penitentiary, to the gallows, electric chair, lynched, or stood up against a wall and shot.

"America. Where organized labor thru its mis-leadership is Deaf, Dumb and Blind to the actual conditions surrounding them.

"America. The most highly developed capitalist country in the world will be a fit place to live in, when the workers thru Force of Arms take control of the Government, confiscate the Mines, Mills, Factories, Railroads, Steamship lines etc, and have all means of production and distribution operated in the interest of the Workers, by the Workers and For The Workers. Then and not until then can we say that this is the Land of the Free.

"Fellow Workers! The World Revolution is developing in many countries and as Europe goes, so goes America.

"WORKERS OF AMERICA!

The police wished to make preparations, and as a pretext they manufactured as "underground" manifesto. One need only analyze a little the language of the manifesto, and one would immediately recognize the oratorical delivery of the Department of Justice.

"PREPARE! PREPARE! PREPARE!

"LONG LIVE THE RUSSIAN REVOLUTION!

"LONG LIVE THE WORLD REVOLUTION.

"LONG LIVE THE COMUNIST PARTY OF AMERICA.

"Issued by the Central EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE OF THE COMUNIST PARTY OF AMERICA."

The reason why the Department of Justice has issued this manifesto is made apparent in the May 1 issue of the N. Y. Times:

"Following the mailing of anonymous circulars by the Central Executive Committee of the Communist Party of America, an 'underground' organization, the police have made preparations to safeguard public officials, prominent citizens and public buildings and churches.

Not a Communist, but only a Department of Justice agent could, in the political situation in America today, speak of the imminence of Civil War and "force of arms." The hysterical cry, "Prepare! Prepare! Prepare!" is not the phraseology of American Communists, but the cry of fear of detective phantoms. Communists are not professors of literature, but even the simplest Communist knows that the word Communist is spelled with double m. But the Department of Justice is in a state of war not only against the truth, but also against English spelling.

The finest phrase of the manifesto shows best of all the phantasy of the detective. It reads: "The workers are sent to jail, to the penitentiary, to the gallows, electric chair, lynched or stood up against a wall and shot." Our opinion of American Democracy is not any too good. It is true that workers are sent to the penitentiary and jail, and are lynched. But for us, the truth is more than enough. It is not true that in the present class struggle in America workers are being sent to the gallows, the electric chair, or stood up against a wall and shot. The truth is sufficient to fill us with hatred for the brutality of American capitalists. But the phantasy of the detective gallops swiftly. He sees gallows and electric chairs and firing squads, because he wishes the workers be treated in this way by the capitalists.

MORRIS SEDER — MORRIS PASTERNAK

And the Handsome Sleuths Who Arrested Them

HENRY J. ALLEN, Department of Justice Agent — "A DETECTIVE"

SKETCHES BY OUR STAFF ARTIST, DON BROWN

"Artificial Eyes Inserted"

By ALFRED WAGENKNECHT

Scranton, Pennsylvania—and there on the window, in large letters of gold, the sign: "Artificial Eyes Inserted." There they were, in neat display on a square of plate glass; deep blue eyes, steel grey eyes, kindly brown eyes and mixtures, looking at me and seeing not.

I turned the corner. His eyelid, inverted, flagged its tear-moistened red at me a hundred steps away. The eyeless socket now, is always crying. A derelict miner, stone-blind, his face shot blue. He rattled a tin cup—for pennies. Mine operators did not go in and out of the side entrance of the Anthracite Bank, before which he sat.

We went to Old Forge that night, McCarthy, Dziengielewski and I, together with a delegation of miners from other local unions. Rinaldo Cappellini was to speak. The union hall was crowded to the last foot of standing room. Miners' children, with pinched faces, sang. One played an accordion. Songs by Irish, Italian, Belgian, American miners varied the program. Then came the speeches.

These miners speak in a language extremely elemental. Their days are spent in battling with darkness and danger—and the boss. They fight mother-earth for cars of anthracite. They fight for their legs, their arms, their eyes, their lives. The words they weave into thoughts are small and simple words—words that harmonize with the clenched fist.

The elections for officials of Dist. 1, United Mine Workers of America, is on. Enoch Williams, Garfield Lewis, George Isaacs, Toni Pan, Alex Campbell make speeches for the progressive, Cappellini slate. Cappellini speaks too, and is given an ovation. And this is what they say:

"We are on the eve of an election, brothers. Shall it be Billy Brennan or Rinaldo Cappellini. Cappellini led you to victory in last year's strike and as compensation was suspended from the United Mine Workers. Then out of 151 locals, 143 voted for his reinstatement. Cappellini campaigned for the election of Brennan as district president. Then Brennan joined the Lewis machine and deserted you. We will not say that Brennan is a company man. But we do say that the coal companies are for Brennan. Right now coal operators are forcing their men to join the miners' union to increase the Brennan vote. It has been said that we do not want a dago for president, but our answer is, we don't care if it's a Negro, as long as he keeps the bread of our children buttered, as long as he is not on the operators' side of the fence, nor on the fence, but on our side of it.

"Brothers, the reason we are wearing these red carnations tonight is because we never intend to raise the white flag. Two years ago you were not allowed to meet in a hall as we are doing tonight. You were not even permitted to walk the streets in twos and threes. Then came the strike. You fought and won. You must continue to fight or you'll slip backwards. Standing still means defeat. Let the operators catch you asleep and they will break your backs just as surely as the breaker breaks the coal.

"To fight right we must not split. We must fight in and with the United Mine Workers for all we want. We must learn to know the labor movement and our labor officials from Gompers down, brothers. There is an invisible line that runs clear thru all industry. On one side are the bosses and those labor leaders who have fallen for the bosses' narcotic phrases and other things more substantial. On the other side are the working masses, creating a new leadership, demanding a new line-up. Foster, Mooney, Howat, jail birds all, are men who are fighting a square fight. It is men such as these the operators would like to trim so that they could get workers who would eat coal dust for breakfast, coal dust for dimer and drink rain for supper to wash it down.

"There are yellows among us, brothers, there are probably some in this hall. The boss gives them a lolypop to suck and they think they are in clover. And then, when they find that they don't like the flavor they run to the union and ask it to pull the lolypop out of their mouths. To others the operators hand out more substantial food. And those who refuse these gifts the operators call bolsheviki. In this light we suppose the Cappellini slate is the bolsheviki slate, which means that it is the slate that will fight for the rank and file. Don't be afraid of names. Never kick in. Kick forward."

In this way they spoke. Not a word as yet about nationalization of the mines, or a Labor Party, or an alliance with the railroad workers, or a single national agreement with the operators, but a most fertile field to plant these progressive ideas.

It was after Cappellini referred to the accident that cost him an arm that I noticed the unusual number of one-eyed miners present. Miners, like other people, have only two eyes each. When a miner loses an eye, he has only one left. I remembered the sign in large letters of gold—"Artificial Eyes Inserted." The blue and grey and brown eyes I saw upon that square of plate glass may find their way into one-eyed miners' heads. Yet even if so, they will see with one eye only.

They battle then for the remaining eye. They fight against losing one of two. They struggle for life and light and against the darkness and helplessness of the blind.

Anthracite miners in Dist. 1 do not intend to sit at the side entrance of Anthracite Banks, derelicts, totally blind, rattling tin cups for pennies.

TO ALL N. Y. BRANCHES

The next meeting of the City Central Committee will be held Saturday, May 19, at 8 P. M., at 208 E. 12th St.

It is of great importance that the delegates attend the meetings and that the branches demand a report from their delegates.

We will from now on inform every branch as to the attendance of their delegates, and we will request the branch organizers to see to it that those delegates who will not attend the meetings regularly a hould be withdrawn and new comrades elected in their place.

Pennsylvania Labor Jolts Czar Gompers

Connecticut, without the support of the Farmer-Labor Party, to renounce its advocacy of industrial unionism, or amalgamation of craft unions in each industry, and to cease urging the recognition of Soviet Russia.

It will be interesting to watch how Gompers will proceed against this lese majeste in Pennsylvania, no doubt unexpected and so close to his citadel as Washington, D. C. When the Pennsylvania workers took their stand for amalgamation, they made their state the 13th to adopt this demand of the TUEL, and carried the amalgamation campaign close to the Atlantic Coast, Ohio having previously been the amalgamation state farthest east. This militant position was taken before the workers had scarce died away of Gompers' speech before the Capmakers' Convention, in New York City, denouncing amalgamation, the Trade Union Educational League, William Z. Foster, in fact any and everything in the labor movement with a tinge of red.

Pennsylvania labor has called Gompers' bluff. For Gompers' threat can be interpreted as nothing more than bluff. Even his egoism cannot possibly deceive him into believing that he can turn back with his palsied hand the great waves of sentiment sweeping the labor movement of this country demanding amalgamation and a Labor Party. And it is unfortunate for the Gompers' reaction that the world's imperialists, especially the Bonar Law conservative government of England, should turn its latest attack on the Workers' Republic on the same hour that Gompers chose to spew his latest spleen towards Moscow.

It is well that Pennsylvania has challenged Gompers, since its defy is also a threat to the conservatism that dominates the United Mine Workers of America. Pennsylvania is the biggest coal mining state in the land. It is here, especially in District 5, the Pittsburgh District, that President John L. Lewis has tried to force the militants into a dual movement. It is here that Lewis, in Dist. 2, has attacked John Brophy and Christ Golden on the "Lewis Expulsion" issue. The coal miners are the backbone of the Pennsylvania labor movement, the hope of the steel workers and the ally of the railroad workers.

Thus it may be expected that Lewis' failures to drive the Pennsylvania, Kansas and Nova Scotia militants into a dual movement, will be but the forerunners of like failures for Gompers in similar efforts against state and local central bodies.

It is rather significant that the "Socialist" New York Call halts for a moment in its allegiance to the Gompers' machine to publish the statement of the Minnesota (St. Paul) Union Advocate, which declares that, "The workers of the northwest will not be thus intimidated." Minnesota, like a dozen other states west of Chicago has taken a stand for all the things that Pennsylvania has declared for. It has elected a United States Senator, Henrik Shipstead, on the Farmer-Labor Party ticket, and it is the home of "The Minnesota Plan" of amalgamation in the railroad industry. It is this plan that is "giving the national officials of the railroad craft unions a great deal of anxiety."

Gompers' latest declaration against the Soviet Republic can only serve to unmask the Wall Street propaganda that the present A. F. of L. administration has been carrying on against Workers' Rule in Russia.

Quoting from the Minnesota Union Advocate, "At this late date it seems ridiculous that the entire labor movement of the world does not insist on the recognition of Russia as a condition precedent to the settlement of the world industrial problem."

It is significant that at this time, not only the left wing, but the whole machinery of the British trade union movement is straining every effort to push forward the amalgamation of its various craft unions, and that the 143 members of the Labor Party in the British House of Commons are solid for the recognition of Soviet Russia, carrying with them a mass of Liberal, non-labor support.

Gompers' latest pronunciamento is the futile howl of frantic reaction on its last legs. This will become more and more apparent as the new days come and the wave of militancy rises and rises over the land.

Gellert Exhibition

Friends and admirers of Hugo Gellert, well known artist of the working class, are invited to attend the exhibition of his drawings at the Kevorkian Galleries, 40 W. 57th St., New York City. Gellert's work represents the expressionistic school of modern art and design and is decidedly worth while seeing because of its warmth in color and deep understanding of life. Gellert is well known for his contributions to "The Worker", "The Liberator" and other working class publications.

(Special to "The Worker")

WORCESTER, Mass.—The Worcester City Central Committee of the Workers Party has sent an open letter to President Wallace W. Atwood, head of Clark College, as follows:

Sir:—The Worcester City Central Committee of the Workers Party of America desires to call your attention to the following news item that appeared recently in the local press: "Dr. Atwood's life threatened for antagonism to Socialism.... Clark President tells City Council Alumni Association he has been marked for killing, because he dares to stand in protest against teachings of Radicals."

The Workers Party is the only organized body of Radical Working Men and Women in Worcester, and since you have not come forth to deny the above assertions attributed to you, we conclude that you wish to parade up and down the front pages of the press as a "martyr" or "hero," while at the same time insinuating that radicals believe in acts of individual violence.

The Workers Party never did, and would not have taken you seriously in your amusing vaudeville performance were it not that your alleged assertions were given wide publicity in the local press.... this is our apology for our interest in your alleged utterances.

The utter disregard for human life under Capitalism and the placing of private progerty, profits and wealth above human rights has brought into being a movement that labors unceasingly (by educating and organizing the exploited masses of humanity) for the abolition of this insane, unjust and unsocial disorder, known as Capitalist Civibration.

The Workers Party is the advance guard of this working-class revolt and its program explicitly states that the emancipation of the working-class from wage-slavery can come about only by the organized efforts of the working-class. The Workers Party condemns individual acts of violence.

Therefore, We, The Worcester City Central Committee of the Workers Party of America, demand that you publicly disclose the identity of the individual or individuals that have made these alleged threats upon your life, or that you disclose the nature of the threat; assuring you that we shall cooperate with you in bringing the guilty party concerned to justice. We make this demand upon you because of the seriousness of this charge, and because of our good name and reputation as a working-class Political Party that believes in organized methods of working-class action. We desire, however, that you never received such threats from any radical party, or, if you did, such threats were made either by government or private spies, or fool pigeons, provocateurs or, perhaps, in your madness for publicity, by your own self.

Your failure to publicly deny the statements attributed to you as quoted above, or to disclose the nature and source of the alleged threats upon your life, will be sufficient reason for the Workers Party to conduct a campaign of publicity that will aim to expose you to the glaring light of public opinion for what you are. We demand proof or public denial.

For The Worcester City Central Committee, Workers Party,
Otto Anderson, Chairman.

Miners Aid Michigan Defense

Old Forge, Pa., Local No. 1296, United Mine Workers, following an address by John McCarthy, of the Labor Defense Council, voted a .25 cent assessment for the Michigan Defense. The president of this local is Antonio Pasc. He supported this move enthusiastically.

Local Union No. 131, U. M. W., also voted a 25c. assessment upon its membership for the Michigan Defense.

Coal Miners Protest Raids

Wyano, Pa., Local No. 3257, United Mine Workers, has adopted resolutions protesting against the attacks on the Workers Party in Pittsburgh, and the arrest of 24 workers in that city, April 27. Copies of the resolution were sent to the mayor of Pittsburgh and the governor of Pennsylvania. Good work. Keep it up.

First in Four Years

Cleveland, Ohio, had the first May Day celebration this month in four years. This was the first May Day demonstration since 1919 when the forces of 100 per cent pay-triotism broke up the gathering in the Public Square with armored tanks. William Z. Foster was the speaker. The collection totalled $311.89.

The Miners Celebrate

Collinsville, Ill., celebrated May Day with a Mass Meeting in the Miners Theatre. The speaker of the day was Freeman Thompson, of Springfield, Ill., President, Sub Dist. No. 4, United Mine Workers. James Wolker of Collinsville, Miners Board Member of this District, was chairman of the meeting.

A WOMAN COMRADE

By ROSE PASTOR STOKES

In Fitchburg, Mass., I was fortunate to share my meeting with Maissi Heikkinen. While I talked on the Communist Defense in Michigan, she talked in Finnish on the work of the Trade Union Educational League. I don't know a word of the Finnish language, but as she spoke it, it was worth listening to—like beautiful music.

If Comrade Maissi had not chosen the work of making class conscious workers, she could have had all the thrilling experiences of the stage or become a star in Filmland. (The Finnish movement here knows her for her fine work in the dramatic field in the past.) She is very lovely with her Gloria Swanson nose, her fine lips and perfect teeth, her golden hair that rundon soft ringlets, a smile that would win her a fortune on the Screen and a voice as soft and musical as are mighty few voices on the American Stage.

She is a mother, with a little girl of nine at home. Perhaps, that is why she is more concerned with the practical problems of the working class than with art. She knows that the future of her child, and of the children of all the workers, depend on the solution of these problems. She knows that only when the workers have freed themselves from the bondage of the capitalist system, will Art and Life become one for the masses.

The conscious revolutionary workers in America should be proud and glad to own the Comradeship of Maissi Heikkinen.

No Retreat for Militant Penn Labor

By JOSEPH MANLEY
Organizer, Eastern District, Trade Union Educational League
(Special to "The Worker")

HARRISBURGH, PA. — Pennsylvania, the work-shop of the world, has gone on record for Amalgamation, the Labor Party and the "Organize the Unorganized" campaign.

With only one dissenting vote the Pennsylvania Federation of Labor voted in favor of a united front by the workers thru the amalgamation of the various trade unions so that there will remain only one union for each industry."

Two resolutions were presented dealing with the formation of a Labor Party. They provided that such a Labor Party should comprise all working class political organizations. After a lengthy discussion, the keynote of which was, that the mere adoption of the resolution was of little avail, a motion was adopted that concurred in the resolution, and in addition referred the matter to the delegate to the American Federation of Labor Convention.

Rumors flew around the convention hall that Samuel Gompers was going to revoke the charter of any Central Body or State Federation that endorsed trading with or recognition of Soviet Russia. In face of this rumor the convention without any discussion reaffirmed its previous stand "for trade relations with and recognition of Soviet Russia."

A resolution calling for the organization of the unorganized steel workers brought forth severe condemnation of the lack of initiative shown by the A. F. of L. in this vital matter. The resolution demanding the immediate launching of a campaign to organize the steel workers was unanimously endorsed.

The Jacob Dolla case was one of the big questions to come before the convention. A resolution demanding the release of Dolla, recently transferred to the Western Penitentiary of Pennsylvania, near Pittsburgh, was introduced by Clinton S. Golden, of the Machinists' Union, Philadelphia; L. G. Hines, of the Metal Polishers' Union, Philadelphia, and Harry Gifford, Cigar Makers' Union, Philadelphia. These delegates spoke in favor of the resolution, as did James H. Maurer, president of the state federation, exposing this infamous frame-up. This brought several criticisms of the A. F. of L. officialdom, to whom the $70,000 balance of the steel strike funds was turned over. This is still being held in trust. Not a penny of it has been devoted to this victim of the steel strike. Many delegates pointed out that while the former Organizing Committee of the Steel Strike was on the job, all those attacked by the steel bosses received ample protection. This is now lacking, and the committee in charge of the funds, in the opinion of the delegates, should be called to explain why no fight has been made for the freeing of Dolla.

A telegram was sent to Governor Richardson, of California, demanding a new trial for Tom Money and Warren K. Billings.

Many of the side lights on the convention were interesting, and to one who understands the trade union movement they were indicative of the clash between utterly opposing principles.

For instance, one well meaning delegate introduced a resolution which charged Gompers with villifying the character of William Z. Foster. The feature of the discussion on this resolution was the respectful tone adopted towards the mention of Foster's name. The same could not be said of the feeling for Gompers.

A President of one of the Miners' Districts arose and said, "Foster is very well able to defend himself."

The committee members to whom this resolution was referred were asked if they had read Gompers' charges in the Federationist. They said, "No," and seemed to doubt, as did many others, that the Federationist was "the official voice of the A. F. of L." Several prominent delegates loudly proclaimed that they "never read it."

At the mention of Gompers' stupid attack upon the Garland Fund, the jeers and laughter were loud and long.

The conclusion to be drawn from the progressive stand of this convention is that the militants are making great inroads into the various "machines" of the organizations. The personalities of Gompers and Foster loomed large, not because they happen to be individuals in the trade union movement but because Gompers typifies to the rank and file the dead policies that have brought our organizations to their present condition and Foster typifies the policies and living issues of an awakening rank and file that finds its most militant expression in the Trade Union Educational League.

10,000 Seek 5-Day Week for Painters

By SELMAR SCHOCKEN

A general strike of 10,000 painters of New York City, voted by referendum to begin Monday, May 21, may bring the whole wrangle in the building industry of New York City to a head. The vote which was taken by District Council No. 9, of the Brotherhood of Painters, Decorators and Paperhangers, was overwhelmingly in favor of a general strike.

The demands of the union are the full enforcement of the five-day week, which the employers conceded four years ago, as made necessary by the extreme health hazards of the craft, but failed to comply with, alleging that existing emergencies warrant a 5½-day week whenever they see fit, and the restoration of collective bargaining, which the employers are trying to destroy by an insidious and dishonest bonus system, in the face of the union's demand for orderly negotiations for a standard wage scale. Painters have been receiving $9 a day, and in instances a bonus, but now demand a standard scale of $10 a day.

The situation in the building industry is far from being settled, in spite of the fact that a self-appointed "Committee of Fifteen", under the leadership of R. H. Shreve, an architect, is trying its utmost to bring about a better understanding between the Labor Unions and the Employers' Association. Simultaneously, such "representatives of public opinion" as Mr. Nicholas Murray Butler, President of Columbia University, are engaged in attempts, to vilify the labor movement, announcing that the wages paid at present to the workers made it necessary for Columbia, to postpone its $10,000,000 building program. "The workers in the building trades regard this as an attempt to beat down wages by bluff or by the club of decreased employment," declared Michael J. Colleran, President of Plasterers' Union No. 60, in a letter to Butler, answering the issue raised by the professor.

"More important still, neither method will work," continues Colleran. "In the first place you cannot bluff the building trades workers today into accepting a wage reduction."

Conferences between the Bricklayers, the Stone Cutters, Stone Setters and a number of other unions on one side and the Building Trades Employers' Association on the other are being continued since the beginning of May. So far no agreement has been reached in any trade, and the officials of the Employers' Association are using all efforts to play one union against the other, one trade against the other.

If anything, these conferences have proven the need of one solid union for the Building Industry which could effectively deal with the one solid Building Trades Employers' Association, whose President and Executive Board, by common agreement, have the last say in all dealings of the contractors in all the different trades. Under present conditions a half hundred officials are dilly-dallying with the bosses for weeks over the matter of signing a new contract which is to contain only conditions as they already exist. The Employers' Association refuses, waiting for a better opportunity to beat down the present standards. That is why a definite stand of the painters' union may prove of greatest importance to the whole industry.

Burns Sleuths Used Frame-up to Aid Kaiser's Cause Here

This is the fourth installment of the exposures showing that the Burns Detective agency organized the spy service of the German Imperial Government in this country. In this article we show the Burns detectives used the frame-up to help advance the Kaiser's interests in the United States, just as Burns uses the frame-up against the workers on behalf of the open shop bosses.

By ROBERT MINOR

The frame-up has always been one of the favorite weapons of the William J. Burns International Detective Agency. That the Burns detectives should use it to advance the interests of the German Imperial Government in this country was to be expected. How this was done is revealed in the testimony taken in the futile proceedings to have the license of the Burns Agency revoked in New York State.

The facts were given under oath by Detective Harry J. Connor, former member of the staff of the Burns Agency:

Burns' attorney, Hedges, asked the witness:

Q. Don't you know that any inquiry at the time it was made as to whether British boats were being provisioned was a perfectly proper inquiry, this being a neutral country?

A. "That may have been a perfectly proper inquiry, but it was a representative of the German Government—

Q. Supposing the Kaiser had employed a man to inquire whether the Americans were obeying the law?

A. It was not done in the interest of the United States. It was done in the interest of the German Government.

Q. Supposing it went right to the German Government, was that proper?

A. I think it is improper.

Q. Why?

A. Violating the neutrality laws.

Q. Provisioning this vessel?

A. Yes.

Q. Wasn't that what Burns was hired to find out?

A. Yes but they knew very well in the very beginning that they weren't being provisioned.

Q. Who knew it?

A. The men assigned to the case.

Q. What men? A. Gager.

Q. He knew they weren't being provisioned?

A. Certainly.

Q. How did he know it?

A. Well, from his own conversation he knew.

Q. As near as I can make out your habit of mind is that you credit a fact by something someone told you.

A. I don't know that I would have reason to believe otherwise.

Q. You believed that this Government was obeying the neutrality laws? A. Yes.

Q. And Burns was hired by someone to find out if the law was being violated? A. He was.

Q. Therefore, he was hired by somebody, say the Kaiser, to find out if the citizens were violating the neutrality?

A. Our information is that he was hired to create German sympathy in the United States.

Q. That Burns was hired to create German sympathy?

A. By coming out in the press and saying that British warships were being supplied with foodstuffs.

Connor testified that another Burns detective named Boisenoy, with the connivance of Paul Koenig, placed a "detectaphone" in Koenig's room in the Great Eastern Hotel, Burns' "undercover" headquarters in New York. This testimony reads in part:

A. Gager was working under the direction of Gaston Means. Means was Burns' operative.

Q. Was he (Gager) also known as "Colonel?"

A. Yes, he represented himself as a British, a colonel of the British Army.

Q. Frank Gager is the man you referred to?

A. Yes, known as "Pop Gager."

Q. Just what work was being done there? Please tell the whole story.

A. Gager was assigned to get affidavits from the tugboat captains stating that they were supplying the British warships with foodstuffs and the like. He secured a number of affidavits which were false from his own lips. They installed a detectaphone. He enticed this tug-boat captain to his room at the Great Eastern Hotel and had Paul Koenig and the stenographer, whose name I just forget, take this conversation between Gager and the tug-boat captain. Koenig employed Gaston Bosonoy and the stenographer himself. Gager's duty was to get these affidavits and try to discredit the British Government.

Q. In other words, it was work which in effect and in its result, was work as against the British Government or the Allied cause?

A. That is correct.

Q. Now this took place, did it, at about the time that the statement appeared in the public press in connection with the wire-tapping cases, that the revelation of that would hurt the Government of the United States, since it was work that was being done by the Burns agency for the Federal Government, is that correct?

A. That is correct.

Q. As a matter of fact at that very time the Burns agency was engaged in work for the Hamburg Line and against the British Government, is that correct?

A. That is correct.

Q. Now, do you know the method that was pursued of inducing this captain to take provisions out to the vessels in the harbor? (Meaning to the British warships.)

A. They were paid so much money for their affidavit, the amount I don't know.

Q. So that with reference to the work, and especially as against this tug-boat captain, it was what is known in your profession and vernacular as a "frame-up?"

A. Frame-up.

Howat Wants U. S. Aid to Enter Canada

Alexander Howat, refused admittance by Canadian immigration authorities to Canada, to make a May Day speech at Glace Bay, Nova Scotia, has carried his fight to Secretary of State Hughes at Washington.

In putting his case before the authorities at Washington, Howat points out that he had been invited to come to Canada by the coal miners of Dist. 26, and that he intended to present to them his side of the persecution he has suffered at the hands of the Lewis administration in the United Mine Workers' Union.

Howat declares that, "I am an American citizen, and, like any other citizen of this country, have a right to expect all the powers of this government to be used to compel the Canadian government to respect the rights of not only a few of the people in this country, but the rights of all the people.

"If the Canadian authorities are justified in keeping me out of Canada, then they undoubtedly must have the same right to keep every other American citizen out of that country, which would indicate that the treaty arrangements between the two countries is a mere scap of paper and amounts to nothing."

Howat will tell the story of his May Day expulsion from Canada, as well as his whole struggle within the Mine Workers' Union to a mass meeting at the New Star Casino, 107th St. and Park Ave., this Sunday afternoon.

Successful Open Air Meetings

This is the fourth week since the Downtown English Branch first launched its victorious Open Air campaign. Meetings have been held at Rutgers Square, 10th St. and 2nd Ave. and 7th St. and Ave. C, lasting from three to four hours each. Eager crowds gathered around the platform to hear the message of the Workers Party. From the expressions of interest on the faces of the listeners and from the sympathetic comments the speakers felt that they had succeeded in conveying the message of Communism in all its practical phases. Amalgamation, the Labor Party and a Workers Government was acclaimed by all.

"The Worker" was readily purchased and last but not least recruits to our ranks were made.

The Downtown English Branch invites you to attend or co-operate in the open air meetings, which will be held on Friday night, the 18th at 5th or 7th St., Ave. C, and on Saturday night, at 6th St. and 2nd Ave.

The Downtown English Branch also invites you to attend its class in the Communist Manifesto conducted by the capable Comrade Sjaklind on Thursday nights at eight at 208 E. 12th St.

The Bad Dreams of The Herald

Kenneth Durant, American correspondent of the Russian Telegraph Agency, has written a letter to the editor of The New York Herald as follows:

On May 8th the New York Bureau of the Russian Telegraph Agency, in its routine news report to Moscow, cabled the following item:

"New York Herald dispatch dated Moscow May 7 says 348 persons executed in new reign of terror during first two weeks of April at Butyrsky prison." Dispatch says that in order to avoid disturbing the neighbors the executioner used silence and hatchets.

The dispatch referred to was a "special cable to the New York Herald" under a Moscow date line in a box with the head "Red Executioners' Victims Were 348 in Two Weeks," published in the Herald May 8, 1923.

We have received today the following cable from the Russian Telegraph Agency at Moscow, referring to our cable of May 8:

"Herald rumors alleging executions terror deliberate lies without foundation."

Hypocrisy of British Tears Shed for Reaction Exposed

Despite British tears and appeals to sentimentality, the truth about the Archangel expedition of the British, French and American governments, for the overthrow of the Soviet government, is coming to light. Interest is growing about the fate of the Archangel expedition, and the breaking off of commercial relations with the Soviet government.

The following correspondence interchanged by the British Government and the Soviet government, and particulars of the charges against Tikhon, issued by the Russian Telegraph Agency, are of importance:

Documents published in the Press reveal Tikhon as a conscious agent of the anarchists who was in full accord with the interventionist aspirations of the most reactionary Russian circles. Tikhon (alias Belavin) was in close touch with these circles even before the Revolution. At that time he was the chairman of the Yaroslav section of the Union of Russian Men (the Black Hundreds). Tikhon has systematically changed the whole Church organization, from the Synod to the congregation, into a counter-revolutionary apparatus, which carried out the orders of the Patriarch to resist the Soviet authorities. Tikhon twice succeeded in provoking bloodshed. One occasion was in 1918, in Central Russia, in connection with opposing the decree of separation of the Church from the State. Another was in 1922, in Petrograd and Smolensk, in connection with strict orders given not to allow the Church treasures to be confiscated for famine relief. Tikhon, who was looked upon by Russian monarchist emigrants as their representative in Russia, was in close touch with all important Russian and foreign interventionists. He admitted himself that for two years he supported Denikin, Kolchak, and Krasnov thru the assistance of the clergy of the occupied areas, and that he tried thru the Archangel churchmen and the Archbishop of Canterbury to induce the English troops to remain at Archangel. He openly agreed with French intervention, plans of which were communicated to him in 1918 by Rene Marchand, on the instructions of the French Consul, Chevilly. He gave his benediction. The largest Russian counter-revolutionary organizations, the "Tactical Centre," "National Centre," and the Conference of the Russian Clergy, which assembled together with the most important monarchists in Carlowitz in 1922, also had Tikhon's blessing. Tikhon sympathized openly with the decisions of the conference to utilize the famine, cold, and epidemics for monarchistic restoration aims, which explains his policy in connection with the confiscation of Church treasures. Tikhon's activities disgusted not only the laboring masses, but even the clergy, who induced Tikhon to renounce the title of Patriarch. A characteristic letter of the Siberian clergy, signed by the Metropolitan Peter, appeared in today's Izvestia, in which the clergy consider that Tikhon ought to receive the punishment he merited, and ask that the coming All-Russian Church Congress which takes place on April 29 in Moscow shall condemn Tikhon's offence.

Police Sergeant at Fitchburg, Mass., Admits Brutal Treatment of Workers

FITCHBURG, MASS.—Rose Pastor Stokes addressed a meeting of American and Finnish workers here on "The Communist Defense in Allchigan." Among the audience, which completely filled the Moose Hall, was a very imposing looking police sergeant and a plain clothes man of the Department of Justice. They had come for trouble, and listened very intently to the speech of Comrade Stokes to catch up anything which might give them a pretext to break up the meeting.

Comrade Stokes outlined the class struggle before and after the Proletarian Revolution in Russia, showing that the attack upon the Communists in organizing the workers against the attacks of the capitalists on their unions and standard of living—"the attack of the capitalist class upon the workers is inevitable whenever they attempt to arouse the mass of workers to action to defeat the open-shop, and to prevent the annihilation of the unions," said Comrade Stokes.

"It is Howat and Foster that are persecuted by the bosses, while Gompers and Morrison are allowed perfect freedom and are assisted by the capitalists in their work of destroying the labor movement and destroying the solidarity of the workers.

"Howat and Foster aim to mobilize the workers and strengthen their organizations so as to smash the drive of the bosses against Labor. And they are successfully doing this work. That is why they are attacked by the Government."

She also told of the widespread raids by the Department of Justice which resulted in the arrest of 6,000 alien workers and the deportation of many hundreds, in 1920. Even the police officer agreed with Comrade Stokes, for at the end of the meeting he lingered near the door and told Comrade Stokes that he agreed with much that she said.

"We remember how people were arrested in the raids of 1920, without any cause, right and left, just as you described it, and how brutally they were treated at Deer Island." He invited her to come again.

Lynn Responds to Defense Appeal

LYNN, Mass.—The case of the Michigan defendants was given a splendid presentation by one of them, Rose Pastor Stokes, at a meeting of several hundred workers assembled in Lasters' Hall.

Before she went on with the case, she painted a background of the class struggle which is woven into the Michigan case.

After her talk, there were many questions about Communism, a Labor Party and the tactics of the Workers Party. The speaker explained, in answer to a question, why it was impossible for the Workers Party to unite organically with the Socialist Party.

A collection was taken for the defense of the comrades arrested in Michigan. The meeting was one of the most successful that the Lynn local has ever arranged.

Foster Stirs Boston with Trial Story

By WILLIAM SIMONS

BOSTON, Mass. — Communism made plain to the workers of Boston —this was the stunt pulled off by William Z. Foster before 1800 workers who packed Scenic Auditorium to the doors. Communism, confiscation, violence, spies—these were the subjects that gave Foster an opportunity to show how the fight was won in his trial in Michigan. The defense did not flinch, but threw back in the teeth of the prosecution their charges of confiscation and violence.

The enthusiasm engendered at the meeting was remarkable. As I write this, several comrades are discussing the meeting, remarking that the audience was spellbound by his sincere, and intelligent presentation of the case. "And his anecdotes are good," says another. They will talk about this meeting for some time to come. It acted as an inspiration to the comrades.

No recent meeting has had so many trade unionists present, and for that reason the effect is so profound. Foster spoke, as a trade unionist does to other trade unionists. They recognized him as their own, and when he appeared in the hall he was cheered madly for about ten minutes. And when he rose to speak, it took him some time to quiet the cheering mass.

Foster's appeal for funds to fight for Ruthenberg and the other defendants met with a hearty response, several hundred dollars being collected.

Loud applause greeted every mention of Foster's co-defendants, especially Ruthenberg, and Minor, who is next in order for persecution.

It was a meeting of workers to hear a worker tell how he and his comrades were fighting the fight of the entire working class. Other speakers were Max Bedacht, a co-defendant, and Michael T. Berry, Editor of the "Amalgamated Shoe Workers." The chairman was a prominent member of Painters Local 1, Michael O'Flaherty.

Pro-Political Action Wins in Mexico

NOTE—This is the first and concluding article of the series on the Second National Convention of the Mexican Communist Party.

By BERTRAM D. WOLFE
(Special to "The Worker")

MEXICO CITY.—The big session of the Second National Convention of the Mexican Communist Party was the session of the report of the national executive council, the appraisal of the situation in Mexico and the tasks of the party for the coming period. He opened the debate by reading the theses of the Communist International on the subject.

While "votes of confidence" are always, and rightly so, offensive political bombast, in the Mexican Communist Party, based on the history of the party, stems and begins the brilliant speech of the chairman. He is obviously an outstanding figure. He draws examples from the history of Argentina, Brazil and Chile, from England, Germany, Russia. He speaks of "historical facts that we cannot destroy by a mere cloud of words."

"This country has been the scene of a series of insurrections, intermittent, but ever possible and often present, from 1821 to 1910. Governments were not elected into office but insurrected into office. Elections had little significance, often did not occur. But conditions here have changed since 1910 and the party has condemned itself to stagnation because it has not perceived this and adapted its tactics to changed conditions."

He speaks clearly, intensely, brilliantly and with relentless logic and his face seems more Indian than ever under the stress of his thinking. He speaks without notes, yet never drops a link in the chain of his thought. He takes the wind out of the sails of the opposition and steals its thunder by branding in searing phrases the parliamentarism of careerists of the labor movement.

He gives ten measures whereby the party can prevent careerism and assure itself that the goldust of its parliamentary fraction be revolutionary and not bourgeois. These are: (1) Inspection by the central committee of the personnel of local nominations; (2) Responsibility of elected officials and nominees to the central committee; (3) Full power of the committee to set aside local nominations; (4) Be ruthless with careerists. Choose not "experienced parliamentarians" who tend to form a professional bureaucracy in the labor movement. Choose rather workers without parliamentary experience so long as they be trusted fighters of proved ability and courage and long experience in the labor movement; (6) Limit their salaries to a workers' wage; (7) The Central Committee must control the parliamentary fraction, instruct it, be represented in its caucuses, prepare with it, its debates on vital issues, select its spokesmen, define its attitudes; (8) Every candidate must render a signed resignation in advance of the campaign which the central committee may use at any time after he is in office to force his resignation from office; (8) Work within parliament must be subordinated to vital mass issues outside of parliament. Elected officials must never lose contact with the masses; (9) They are not legislators and statesmen but workers' representatives inside an institution which serves the enemy, which they must show up, and which the workers will eventually destroy; (10) Let the fraction be small so long as it be dependable, rather than large and wavering.

"There is only one Communist in the British House of Commons, but the whole country rang with the audacity of his attack on the throne in answer to the address of the crown. Even the labor delegation was stirred. He denounced the throne altho it was high treason, because that was his mission. It was not his mission to keep within the law, regard himself as a statesman, receive his salary and give alms from it to the party."

Long silence follows his speech. The opposition finds itself robbed of its thunder. When its leader rises to the attack, he is weak, uncertain and a bit awed. Young Carrillo of the Communist Youth follows with a clever speech outlining the disastrous results of non-participation in elections with well-selected examples from recent local history in various states. "Our comrades believed that the mashes yearned for a political party that was anti-parliamentary," he challenged. "They believed that by abstention we would conquer mass support. We have not. The experiment of conquest of mass support thru abstention has been tried and has failed. Let us abandon our unsuccessful tactic."

All that day and all the next, the debate goes on pro and con. Slowly it changes its character from a debate to a school room lesson. When the vote is taken it is UNANIMOUS! Every delegate has been educated to the viewpoint of the National Executive and the anti-parliamentary period of the Communist Party of Mexico is at an end.

The convention draws near to a close. It is the last day.—Sunday. The week's labors are ended. The new committee is elected. Among the new names is that of Mexico's leading artist, Diego Rivera. Lo-renzo, the bearded "philosopher", and Ramirez, the canny secretary are re-elected to the new committee.

At Sunday noon they sing the International and adjourn to a dinner given in their honor. The dinner is followed by sweet, melancholy Mexican songs. Then come exhibitions of Indian and Mexican dancing. Ragged workers come in their ragged Sunday best—some barefoot, some sockless and sandaled, some in native Indian costume with long serapis or blankets of many colors wrapped around them—squalor, misery and hope.

Follows the cheering—the inevitable "long live's" or vivas. Once more the International is sung, and the convention is over.

Buffalo Goes Strong for a Labor Party

tician, who had eclipsed the careers of labor fakers ahead of him, stood aghast into the hall, and left without a word.

As the question of a Labor Party could no longer be evaded, the Central Labor Council decided, at the previous meeting, that a special session for business would be set aside for May 10th in order to definitely decide the policy of the Council on the question of a Labor Party.

When the special order of business was called, the chairman of the organization committee, Campbell, made a motion that the Council proceed with the launching of a local Labor Party. After presenting a masterly argument in favor of his motion, Campbell sat down prepared to listen to the attacks from the reactionary side of the hall. The next speaker was Jouhl Doyle, chairman of the legislative committee of the Council. Instead of speaking against the motion, as everyone expected, he spoke strongly for it. It was plain to everyone that the old guard realized the fight against the demand for such a move in Buffalo was hopeless. Not one of the 20 or more speakers that discussed the question said one word in criticism of it.

Local Unions To Be Visited

In order to insure the success of the Labor Party, every local union that can be reached within the next two weeks will be visited by representatives of the Council and at the next regular meeting of the Council, May 24, the official call for the launching of the Party will be issued. Altho many of the more impetuous radicals were irritated at the delay in calling the conference, those who were in favor of what they termed a "referendum" of the local unions explained their course by pointing to the fact that discussion in the local unions will result in aligning all organized labor solidly behind the Party and insure the success of its candidates at the coming elections.

James C. Campbell, chairman of the Organization Committee and John Doyle, chairman of the Legislative Committee, will call a joint meeting of the two committees for the purpose of devising plans for presenting the position of the Council to all the local unions in the jurisdiction.

All Forces Will Unite

In order that all organizations of workers, industrial, fraternal or political may unite on the local Labor Party, invitations are to be sent to such organizations.

The local branch of the Workers Party has already gone on record in favor of participating in the conference and will refrain from placing its own candidates in nomination for the city elections, thereby assisting in creating a genuine United Front on the political field. The local leaders of the Socialist Party have tried by subterfuge to discourage the Council from launching a Party, but they will undoubtedly be forced to enter the conference or bring upon their heads the condemnation of all organized workers in Buffalo. The remnant of the Socialist Labor Party will not participate and it is doubtful if the Proletarian Party group, which is very small, will participate. The absence of these latter will have no effect upon the success of a Labor Party as they are absolutely without influence in this locality, none of their members being active in the labor movement.

The German, Jewish, and Italian workingmen's fraternal benefit societies will be invited and a number of them have already evinced a desire to participate in the conference.

Candidates for every office contested this fall will be nominated and a platform drawn up that will contain the most pressing demands of the working class in this vicinity.

Actors Like to Act in "The Rivals"; Realism Found in "Mary the 3d"

By JOHN DALE

It is a play that the actors like to act, and that ought to be reason enough to draw the throngs to the offering of the Equity Players, "The Rivals", at the Earl Carroll Theatre, whither it has gone to make room for "Sweet Nell of Old Drury", at the Equity 49th St. Theatre.

Francis Wilson, who is the president of the Equity players, and who is the very enjoyable "Bob" Acres in this comedy of Richard Brinsley Sheridan, confesses to the actors' liking for this piece in a curtain speech after the second act. These actors' efforts before the curtain are getting to be something more than curtain speeches. They are taking on a propaganda flavor with "President" Wilson talking about the Actors' Theatre; speeches at the Garrick telling of the triumphant drives of the Theatre Guild for $500,000 and more for a new home, and Butler Davenport explaining his Free Theatre before his own footlights at the Bramhall Playhouse.

"The Rivals" was originally performed at the Covent Garden, London, in 1775, and is a sample of the Sheridan comedies that delighted British audiences at the time when the American colonists were getting ready to overthrow the King's rule in this country. It has been a favorite on many stages during the last century and a half, never more so than now with its cast including the attractions as Madlyn Arnold, Sidney Blackmer, J. M. Kerrigan, James T. Powers, Mary Shaw, Violet Heming, Eva Le Gallienne and Vivian Tobin.

"Mary the 3d" Is Realism

In "Mary the 3rd", at the 39th St. Theatre, one gets a realistic cross section of American home life that almost smells of the dissecting room, the operation is so complete. It is a family of the middle class, a lawyer's home, that is revealed for us, with a three-cornered struggle between three generations. There is the changing viewpoint towards love and its domestic obligations as seen thru the eyes of Mary the 1st, of 1870; Mary the 2nd, of 1897, and Mary the 3d, of 1923. Thru the years woman is lifted to a social status on an equality with that of man. Mary the 1st, the Grandmother boasts of her success in catering to the smallest whim of the man she married, thus claiming she had wound him about her finger. Mary the 2nd rattles her chains, but it is only thru her daughter, Mary the 3d, and her son egged on by the sister, that she finally breaks them with the realization that she has never loved, or been loved, during 25 years of married life. Yet viewing the wreckage of her parents' wedded life, Mary the 3d, plunges into matrimony also, agreeing to quit when love dies, but nevertheless believing that love will live on forever.

One of the brilliant flashes of the play lays bare the great social crime of woman's economic dependence on man. This touch lifts the play out of the ranks of others of its kind, and makes it worth while.

Louise Huff, who reappears in the several Mary roles, and finally as Mary the 3d, leaves nothing to be desired in her portrayal of the modern girl who wants to know. She has an able supporting company. The play is by Rachel Crothers.

ROBOTAGE

The word "robot" is making a dent in the English and American languages. The dent will become a hole. The word will jimmy its way thru into the structure of recognized and underfood language.

"A few years from now this word 'robot' is scheduled to slip easy from tongues and sleep soundly in the dictionaries with such authorized companions as dummy, or mummy, or perhaps, rummy. And while a dummy is a stuffed human form for showing samples of sales goods, and a mummy is a dead human figure embalmed with the arts of ancient Egypt, kept for decorative or memorial ends, a robot is a human figure without human pain, joy, or other feelings made by a modern factory process, an obedient, competent shadow of a man, resulting from modern chemistry, mechanics and other factors of civilization and its progress. Even in our lifetime's we may come to see this or that servitor spoken of, not as Smith's 'man Friday' but as Smith's 'robot.'"—Carl Sandburg, from "A Note On Robots."

Message to Greeting in U.S. Communist Youth Convention, May 20th

Communist. The Y. C. I. of the Y. C. I. has warmly welcomed these developments in the Young Workers' League and has just received the young workers' organization into membership in the Young Communist International.

The Y. C. I. has always considered the Young Workers' League as the vanguard of the revolutionary youth in the U. S. and the hopes of the working-class youth on the Continent have always been centered on your League. They realize that even if the Y. W. L. is not a section of the Y. C. I., there was in the very stronghold of the capitalist world dictatorship, a valiant organization of the working-class youth which marches under the banner of Communism and the proletarian world revolution. Your dedication fully justifies this opinion of the International Youth movement.

The slogan, "To the Masses of the Working Class Youth", must also be distilled by your League. If it works consciously and tirelessly, your League will not be denied the fruits of our struggle, and become a mass organization of the working-class youth in the United States. And we hope earnestly that the day is not very far off when the Y. W. L. can declare its unreserved affiliation to the Y. C. I., as the American section of the latter.

With revolutionary greetings,

The E. C. of the Y. C. I.
(Signed) R. Schuller, Sec.

It is expected that the Second National Convention of the Young Workers' League, which opens in Chicago on May 20 and ends May 22, will reaffirm its previous decision with relation to affiliation to the Y. C. I., and carry on its proceedings in accord with the spirit, the principles and the tactics of the Young Communist International, as formulated in the decisions of the Third Congress recently held in Moscow.

Party United Front Policy Is Approved

By C. E. RUTHENBERG,
Secretary, Workers Party.

The Executive Council of the Workers Party met on May 7th and 8th, and discussed many important questions of Party policy. The following is a summary of the questions decided:

United Front Policy

The United Front Policy of the Party, as outlined in a recent circular to the Party members, was discussed by the committee and the continuation of the policy endorsed.

The political committee was instructed to initiate a campaign among the Party membership to bring about better understanding of the United Front Policy and its limitations.

Party Re-Organization.

The Organization Committee of the Party was instructed to work out a plan for the re-organization of the Party districts so as to increase the number of districts and reduce their size.

The plan outlined proposes to cut down the districts in such a manner as to make the district organizer a local organizer with territory with which he can keep in constant personal touch.

First attention will be given to the large cities and industrial centres in re-organizing the districts. Branches lying outside of territory which can be reached by the district organizers will be attached directly to the National office.

It is also proposed that in carrying on its future organization campaigns the Party endeavor to organize along the line of trade union or shop branches wherever possible.

While this policy is to be started now, the existing Party organization is not to be disturbed at once and the new policy is to be put into effect only after consultation with the language sections on the question of working out ways and means so that the re-organization can be carried out without interfering with the existing language sections.

No steps will be taken until after the report of the Organization Committee submitting a detailed plan.

Party Headquarters

The question of removing the Party headquarters to Chicago was discussed at length.

It was seemingly the opinion of the majority of the Executive Council that Chicago is the logical place for the Party headquarters, but that political conditions and the organizational situation of the Party made it impossible to take any immediate steps to change the location of the Party headquarters.

"Freiheit" Editorship

The resignation of Comrade M. J. Olgin as editor of the "Freiheit" was accepted unanimously.

The committee had sought three many months to adjust the situation in the "Freiheit" in such a way as to make it possible for Comrade Olgin to remain at his post, without sacrificing Party politics, but its efforts had been in vain and the committee found no other course open than to accept Comrade Olgin's resignation. Comrade Benjamin Gitlow was appointed editor to succeed Comrade Olgin.

Daily Paper.

A proposal was submitted to combine the "Worker" and the "Voice of Labor." As against this, an amendment was offered urging the Chicago comrades to develop the "Voice of Labor" as a local Chicago paper, so that there would be no competition between "The Worker" and "The Voice of Labor."

Action on this question was deferred so that the question of a daily newspaper could be taken up first, it being argued that the decision on this question would decide the question of combining the two Party weeklies.

The need of the Party to finance the defense of comrades under indictment and trial were considered in this connection. It was decided that in view of the great need of defense funds no immediate campaign for funds for a daily paper could be undertaken. The final decision was that tentatively July 1st be set as the date for the beginning of the campaign for funds for a daily, and November 7th as the date of publication, the final decision as to beginning the campaign to be made at a meeting in June on the basis of the political situation at that particular time.

Problems of Our Party

IV. The Question of Tactics.

By JOHN PEPPER.

The Workers Party of America is the product of the fusion of two Communist parties. The fusion was brought about by the Communist International. It was the result of the efforts to bring the masses of Communist workers in the United States into one party. And since it is a fusion, it is natural that the two fractions should bring into the united party their own traditions, their own methods of work, their own conceptions of Communist tactics.

The Workers Party is the product of the fusion of two Communist parties. The fusion was brought about by the Communist International. It was the result of the efforts to bring the masses of Communist workers in the United States into one party. And since it is a fusion, it is natural that the two fractions should bring into the united party their own traditions, their own methods of work, their own conceptions of Communist tactics.

"And it is natural that the two fractions should bring into the united party their own traditions, their own methods of work, their own conceptions of Communist tactics. And it is very often even the case that the differences in the Party are based on historical traditions from the Italians, the Germans from the Russians. The workers belonging to these nationalities are still very deeply rooted in the social and political conditions of their old countries. The greatest event for the Italians is Fascism in Italy. For the German workers, the occupation of the Ruhr, for the Hungarian Communists, the White Terror of Horthy. For the Polish workers, the heroic election fight of our brothers in Poland. For the Russian comrades, the miracle of Soviet Russia, so dear to all of us.

The agitation and propaganda of our comrades in the various language Federations, centers mainly about these great events in their respective countries. And yet, all the members of the language Federations are living here in the United States. We likewise observe the most enthusiastic activities of our comrades in the Federations to be in closest connection with their old countries. Our Italian comrades arrange a collection for the persecuted Communists of Italy, our German comrades send relief for the hungry children of German Communists. Our Hungarian comrades put forth great efforts to collect money for political prisoners suffering in Horthy's prisons. Our Polish comrades have made a collection for the support of the Communist election campaign in Poland. Our Ukrainian comrades collect money for the support of the Ukrainian publishing activities in Europe. Our Russian comrades are of course with heart and soul interested in relief of Soviet Russia. Our Jewish comrades collect money or needy Jewish workers in the Ukraine.

If we look thru the press of the various Federations of the Workers Party, we find with few exceptions very little about the political and social struggle of this country. In one were to read the nine dailies and twenty-one weeklies of the Workers Party carefully, one would get the complete picture of all European countries, but a very incomplete picture of the political life in America. And yet we should not forget that all these workers, speaking various languages, are living here in the United States, that they are exploited by capitalists here, that they are oppressed by the capitalist government of the United States.

Of course, everything which interests our Federations is really very important. To be a Communist, means to be an Internationalist. Fascism, occupation of the Ruhr, Horthy terror, Polish election fight and foremost Soviet Russia, are absolutely important for us all. All this is part of the world reaction and world revolution. But here in this country, our first duty is to struggle against the American part of the world reaction, and to advance the American part of the world revolution. It is not internationalism when our Italian comrades concern themselves first and foremost with Italy, the Germans with Germany, the Hungarians with Hungary, but it is an uninternational reversion to nationalism. It is the unpleasant truth, but for that very reason it must be stated, that many of our Federations are in many respects, still national Ghettos. And we must affirm that a Ghetto remains a Ghetto even if, instead of the yellow badge, the red badge is worn.

Why the Lack of Interest in American Political Life?

What has caused so many of our Federations to stick in these national Ghettos? What has caused so great a part of our comrades to interest themselves so little in American politics?

Two important causes are responsible for this.

First, the general tradition of the American working class. For forty years, Gompers and the American Federation of Labor have preached the unimportance of politics. For forty years the American Federation of Labor, has taught that the workers should not concern themselves too much with the government, and that legislation should not interfere too much in the affairs of capital and labor. This apolitical conception has been reinforced from the left, thru the I. W. W. which has a naive fear of political activity. Nor is the political tradition of the Socialist Party very brilliant. The Socialist Party even in its best days has never understood how to bring down their policy from the heaven of doctrinary principles to the earth of the daily interests of the laboring masses. Naturally, the apolitical tradition could not have survived for years, if the material conditions had not made it possible. The absence of a centralized government which interferes in the daily life of every worker has been the main factor, the one-sided trade union or the one-sided doctrinaire sectarian attitude of the American labor movement in its whole past.

The second reason which is responsible for this lack of interest in American political life is the composition of our party membership. The majority of our comrades are foreign-born workers. A great part of our comrades are not citizens. A great part of them are one-sided trade union or one-sided doctrinaire sectarian mother-tongue, and do not understand the English language at all or understand it only slightly. The foreign-born workers often do not feel at home here in America; their attitude is that they have no right to interfere in the political life of the United States. The non-citizens are deprived even of the most elementary political rights. Without a knowledge of the English language it is naturally very hard to follow the political life of a country which rests on the fiction of a unified English-speaking nation.

A Big Beginning School of the Political Struggle?

It is a vital question for our Party that our comrades take active part in the political life of this country. But this is possible only with their active participation in the general American life.

What should we do? How can we attain this goal? How can we elevate our Party to becoming a factor in American political life?

It would be a betrayal of the working class if we accepted the solution advanced by the yellow N. Y. Call, that we should count only the English-speaking workers as a political factor. We ought not to forget that the majority of the workers in the most important industries are foreign-born, that the most exploited and oppressed, unskilled laboring masses are foreign-born. A Communist Party without these elements would be no real Communist Party. The Workers Party has so many foreign-born members, not because it is un-American, but because it is a true expression of the composition of the proletariat in American big industry.

It would be no solution if we were to combine national separatism by dissolving the Federations. On the contrary, thru the destruction of the Federations, we would destroy our only possibility for propaganda capable of reaching the non-English-speaking population.

It is naive Utopianism for many comrades to believe that we can bring the foreign-speaking comrades nearer to American political life by condemning English language classes. A political party cannot be transformed into a big Berlitz School of Languages, with the English grammar as its political program of action.

What then, is the correct method? We have only two means by which to draw our comrades into American political life. First, political education; second, the political struggle itself.

Political education means that the Party must analyze carefully every important political question. It must work out the right political policies, and make them the general possession of the entire party membership. In the last year, our Party has already made the first steps in this direction. We have installed a research bureau. We have organized a Party press-service. And most important of all, for the first time in the history of the American Communist movement, we have published a whole series of leaflets, pamphlets and books, dealing in general principles, but about concrete American political problems.

Great advance has been made by our Party in active participation in the political struggle. All our campaigns—Amalgamation, Labor Party, Defense, Protection of Foreign-Born—mean a common struggle of the foreign-born together with the English speaking workers—a concrete active fight against the American capitalists, and against the American capitalist government.

It is vital for our Party to realize the slogan: Be American!

Be American means rising from isolated language Federations to the general points of view of the whole Party. Be American means to rise above local narrowness and to think on a national scale. Be American means to rise above individual bosses or trusts, or trades, in order to see the whole American ruling class.

Be American means, not to forget for a moment that the great center of all class struggle is the central

Party Shows Big Growth in Chicago

(Special to "The Worker").

CHICAGO. — Local Chicago, Workers Party, is made up of 52 branches as follows: 10 Czecho-Slovak including 3 woman's branches, 5 English branches, with a sixth to be soon launched in Pullman; 1 Finnish, 2 German, 2 Hungarian, 5 Italian, 2 Jewish, 1 Lettish, 6 Lithuanian, 4 Polish, 1 Roumanian, 3 Russian, 2 South Slavic, 4 Scandinavian and 4 Ukrailian. All branches in Pullman, Burnside, South Chicago and Grand Crossing are, or should be represented in the sub-central committee at Pullman. An effort is being made to have a sub-central committee in Cicero to include Morton Park, North Berwyn, Forest Park, and Town of Lake, also to build an English branch in Cicero.

Chicago comrades and workers are again reminded not to miss Lanoni's lecture on May 20th. This inspiring lecture, with the play and the musical entertainment is the event of the season. All Workers Party members are expected to turn out to the membership meeting on May 21st at Imperial Hall to hear and discuss Lanoni's message on the Communist International and Workers Party trade union members are expected to guarantee a full attendance at the W. P. E. C. meeting on May 23rd at Wicker Park Hall.

The Chicago Labor Defense Council is asking that Party units continue their support. The Jewish, South Slavic and Italian comrades already agreed to turn over a part of the proceeds of their annual picnics to the Defense. A few live comrades find that it is not difficult to get contributions on the Labor Defense Lists and that the 10 cent pamphlets sell quite readily.

Letters to the Editor

TRIBUTE TO DEBS

Editor, The Worker —At a meeting of the local branch of the Workmen's Circle, a letter from the Socialist Party suggesting that the branch present a bouquet of flowers to Eugene V. Debs when he appeared here was received and favorably acted on.

After the collection, I suggested that Debs, as a revolutionist, might be more pleased if, instead of spending the money on flowers, we would present him with this sum and ask him to transmit it to the Labor Defense. This suggestion met with immediate and unanimous favor, with the consequence that the sum was raised to $25 (less than $10 was originally collected).

The check for this amount was presented to the chairman of the Debs meeting who did not relish this procedure, as you might well suppose.

The precedent is a good one and should be followed by Party organizations which are requested to send a token of their esteem for Debs when he visits in their cities.—Herbert Benjamin, Reading, Va.

Big Farewell Planned for Tractor Party

(By S. S. R. Press Service).

A rousing Farewell mass meeting will mark the departure from this port of the persons who will be selected in the nationwide voting contest to go to Russia as "living messages" with the 20 tractors to be sent by the Friends of Soviet Russia.

In connection with this good-bye party there will take place the first public showing of a new Russian film—Soviet—The Fifth Year—which is now in preparation and in which is seen more impressive than ever "Russia Thru the Shadows."

The farewell in New York will be only the first of a series of public affairs along the route of the American party. The S. S. R. offices in Berlin, Moscow, and Petrograd and the Russian authorities will co-operate to make the trip of paramount interest. Moving pictures will be taken and opportunity will be provided for an intimate acquaintance with those who are shaping Russia's destiny.

Every day brings further indications that the announcement of the tractor drive and of the voting contest have stirred enthusiasm among the American friends of the Workers' Republic. Labor papers have issued calls for co-operation thru their editorial columns. Several of them have undertaken special campaigns among their readers. The throb of new activity can be felt thruout the F. S. R. branches.

In the near future the national office of the organization will make public a list of persons entered in the contest. Many of them are nationally known, but among those in the lead are the "Jimmy Higginses" of the movement, those brothers who in a contest of this type at last find their reward for hard work.

Even literature is represented among the contestants. A contribution by Floyd Dell, the well known novelist, nominates for the trip to Russia none other than Edna St. Vincent Millay, the poetess.

From Cover to Cover

By MAX SHACHTMAN.

A complete proof of the lengths to which the bourgeoisie of America has gone in attempting to suppress and undermine the Communist movement in this country is given in the first pamphlet issued by the Labor Defense Council entitled "Defend Your Liberty."

Here we have examples of the work of the Government Deportation, the third degree, spies, illegal raids, prepared by pre-arranged trials, and the other innumerable low tricks that are the weapons of the Burns's and Daugherty's tyranny.

All the issues involved are here presented. The history of the trial is briefly but satisfactorily sketched. The pages contain photographs of every one of the chief figures in the trial, the prosecution and those behind it, the defense, the indicted and the men who are behind them, the men and the organizations which form the Labor Defense Council.

The appendices contain the Michigan Federation of Labor report on the trial, the Criminal Syndicalism law under which the defendants are being prosecuted, the names of those who were arrested, those who surrendered and those for whom warrants are still out.

There is no worker in the United States who can afford to be without this pamphlet. It gives the facts about a case that involves the very life of a movement that has for its goal the abolition of the misery from which the workers of America now suffer. The case of the very utmost importance, as important for the United States as the Cologne Communist trial was for Germany in the days of Karl Marx.

They Know No Shame

Ignorance of shame is the only foul quality that enables some debased humans to go thru with the crimes assigned to them.

This is the only explanation we can give for the report that Algernon Lee has been selected for and accepted the chairmanship of the Eugene V. Debs meeting at Madison Square Garden, New York City. Thus Lee commits a new crime against Debs and against all labor.

Debs went to prison because he stood true to the St. Louis Proclamation, the anti-war declaration of the Socialist Party. For this hostility to the capitalist war he was put away in a capitalist bastille, to rot and die.

During this same war Algernon Lee was a "Socialist" alderman in New York City. Instead of championing the Socialist Party's anti-war proclamation he voted for the "Victory Arch" that spanned Fifth Ave., of wealth and splendor, an arch that recorded so that all might see the victories of Wall Street's dollars in foreign lands. On that "Victory Arch" was inscribed the name "Murmansk" where the red soldiers of the Russian Soviet Republic fought back the invading armies of America's money kings or their northern borders.

When Algernon Lee voted for the "Victory Arch" he committed the double crime of seconding the ten-year sentence imposed by Judge Westenhaver, in Cleveland, upon Debs, and of aiding American capitalism in its attempt to drive still further its dagger into the heart of the First Workers' Republic.

This is the same Algernon Lee who proposed the resolution that was adopted at a secret meeting of the board of managers of the New York Call, only a few weeks ago, establishing the Anti-Soviet, War-Upon-the-Communists policy of this "Socialist" publication.

Debs championed the St. Louis Anti-War Proclamation. Debs stands by Soviet Russia. Debs supports the Communist Defense in Michigan. Lee has revealed his degradation by taking an opposite stand, supporting this betrayal with all the bitter vindictiveness characteristic of the worst foes of labor in the ranks of the bosses. Gompers and Daugherty could do no more.

There will be no blush of shame upon the face of Algernon Lee as he rises at Madison Square Garden to present Eugene V. Debs to the workers assembled there. This will be so because he knows no shame. Neither do those who have urged him for the performance of this crime, not only against Debs, but against the whole working class.

The Weapons of Labor

American labor in taking up new weapons acts a little clumsily. But it is learning.

Thus in San Francisco there is a controversy, of small proportions to be sure, over the question of failure to nominate Tom Mooney as the labor candidate, in a recent special congressional election.

Some say Mooney should have been the candidate, in spite of the fact that he is serving a life sentence in prison, feeling thus that the ballot could be used as a political labor weapon. Others argued that it was necessary to put up a candidate not in prison, believing that this would best serve the big purpose of the campaign, which was to solidify all labor's forces into a Labor Party. The latter viewpoint won.

Mooney was sent to prison for urging labor's elemental right to organize. He was a victim of the broadest struggle of the workers, to unite their forces into labor unions. Mooney, therefore suffers for having engaged in a "bread and butter" demand of the greatest significance to the largest numbers, and therefore should have made an ideal candidate around whom all workers could rally.

Compare with this situation the fact that the workers in Paris have been repeatedly nominating and electing Marty, the sailor, in prison for mutiny in the French war fleet before Red Odessa.

The strike called by the Industrial Workers of the World, with the release of the war prisoners as one of the demands, is also arousing discussion. The Socialists scold the I. W. W. because "the general strike is a hazardous thing to attempt without a wide solidarity of the workers."

Yet a beginning must be made. The American Federation of Labor was called on to strike for Mooney in 1919 and, in spite of a tremendous agitation, responded in very small degree. The I. W. W., however, tho few in numbers, is, nevertheless, putting up a spirited fight in the present effort, the herald of greater efforts to come.

The time is here when labor has great use for all the weapons at its command. It is, therefore, absolutely necessary that labor becomes thoroly acquainted with the use of all these weapons, so that it can use them all effectively.

Vorowsky, the Pioneer

When Columbus discovered this western world in 1492, and later when the first settlers arrived in Jamestown, Va., and the Pilgrims set foot on Plymouth Rock, in New England, in the early 17th century, the conquest of the American continent had only begun. There was more to the venture.

Then these venturesome pioneers of a new civilization, waves upon waves of them, have swept westward towards the Pacific, building the new order of great agriculture, of coal, steam, steel and electricity. Large numbers of these pioneers died in the wild places, crossing mountains or "death valleys," fighting stubborn nature, opposing savage beasts, warring with the old civilization of the native Indian.

So the Russian Soviet Republic is today sending out its social pioneers, not over a continent, but over the world, urging the demands of a still newer civilization, Communism, that finds its greatest opponent in the savagery of the dominant social order, capitalist imperialism.

One of these pioneers was Vaslav Vorowsky, martyred at Lausanne, Switzerland, May 10th, by the savage blood lust of Paris diplomacy. Vorowsky had been at Genoa, The Hague and the First Lausanne Conference, offering the Soviet Program of World Peace. He had been in Italy, the Soviet representative at Rome, successfully facing day after day the murder threats of Mussolini's Fascisti Rule. But he worked on, calmly, untiringly, fearlessly. At Lausanne the Swiss government gave him no more protection that is received by an ordinary traveller. This in spite of the repeated death warnings received by him from the Swiss Fascisti.

The shot that murdered Vorowsky will return to plague the kings and imperialists of London, Paris and Rome. New pioneers, of the same faith and steadfastness as Vorowsky, will go forth over the world taking up the struggle where he was compelled, by the assassin's bullet, to drop it. Vorowsky was the pioneer of a conquering cause. In spite of persecution, in spite of martyrdom, that cause, the Cause of Communism, will go forward to the conquest of this black reaction called capitalism.

"Judas" Grable Gets His Reward

Judas got 30 pieces of silver for his historic betrayal. E. F. Grable, dethroned president of the Maintenance of Way Employes, is higher priced. So does his treason to the railroad workers is worth more to the ruling class. So President Harding has elevated him to the position of "labor" representative on the "Railroad Labor Board," at $10,000 per year for five years.

This is only one of the many rewards the railroad barons, thru their government at Washington, have paid out during the past year for able assistance given them by the Judases of the labor movement on account of the 1922 railroad strike. Grable stood at the head of these traitors. His greatest crime was keeping the members of his union at work, scabbing on the strikers of other unions, in spite of the fact that they had voted overwhelmingly to strike in solidarity with other railroad workers.

During the hot resentment over Grable's treason the Maintenance of Waymen met in convention at Detroit, Mich., and swept Grable into the discard, electing in his place F. H. Fljozdal, and taking a stand for the amalgamation of the railroad unions and other progressive measures.

That Fljozdal put on a false mask of radicalism in order to step into Grable's shoes is now revealed in a full page signed statement in the Railway Maintenance of Way Employes' Journal. Fljozdal attacks William Z. Foster and the amalgamation program of the Trade Union Educational League, offering the usual advice of "travel at a slow and safe rate." But that advice will not fill the dinner pails of the railroad workers sentenced to labor at 23 cents an hour by this same "Railroad Labor Board" to which Grable has been elevated.

The Railway Maintenance of Waymen, in the case of Grable, showed themselves able, when aroused, to clean out the Judases in their midst. It looks as if the time had arrived to give some attention to Grable's successor, "Grand President" F. H. Fljozdal.

Our Youth in Convention

During the next few days, May 20-22, the Second National Convention of the Young Workers' League will be in session in Chicago. We extend our Communist greetings to these spokesmen of America's militant youth. May all their deliberations help blaze the way to the workers-and-farmers government, upon their banners. They must translate these powerful appeals into living realities—a powerful, closely-knit, industrial organization of labor, an all-inclusive political expression of the workers, a united struggle for the winning of the new Communist order.

Young minds will readily accept new ideas. The boys and girls on one-sixth of the land surface of the earth have been released from capitalism's heavy chains. The youth of the Russian Soviet Republic are watching your Second National Convention, members of the Young Workers' League. It is our earnest wish, in sending our greetings to you, that you may have something worth while to report to them, and to the youth of all the world, when this important gathering of yours reaches the hour of adjournment.

"The Pope is a friend of peace," declares Cardinal Gasparri, Papal Secretary of State. [illegible] Pope is a friend of peace [illegible] Communist Party. We are [illegible] Pope's attempts to [illegible] imperialism are still shooting. Thus Europe cannot allow Bolshevism to stay, still the day is not far off when the most reactionary capitalists will have to change their attitude and to extend their hand of friendship to Soviet Russia, indeed they hate so much. But the question is whether Russia will be disposed to accept this hand.

We can depend upon the militant workers in the various lands to take care of this last problem, confident that it will be their hands that will be extended, en masse, in friendship to the workers and peasants of Soviet Russia.

Parker Proposes "Pardons"

Alton B. Parker, corporation lawyer and presidential candidate against Roosevelt in 1904, who is now president of the National Civic Federation, proposes of the L. W. W. prisoners by urging President Harding to commute the sentences of the 20-year prisoners to ten years. He declares this will make it possible for them to seek a pardon, making it convenient for the "big business" press to insist that the I. W. W. were not free speech victims, but guilty of overt acts. Parker also insists the prisoners be forced to promise "to support the constitution" of the United States." If the Wilson democrats and Harding republican administrations had lived up to the U. S. constitution there would be no "war" prisoners. What the Wall Street money lords want the workers to do is to live up to their interpretation of the constitution which the workers never can do, without enslaving themselves to capitalist greed forever.

One Life or 80,000

The hypocritical kept press and the smug churchmen who dole out orthodox religion might ponder on the statistics coming out of Germany. Before the war only 1,200 Germans took their lives each year. Now the total has crawled up 5,000 per cent to 60,000 yearly. This is the result of the poverty resulting from the great war blessed by the churchs of all lands, including those of Germany. Yet the church passes no resolutions of protest for the 80,000. It only worries about Butkewitch, Tichon and others of their kind who would perpetuate this system.

"Open Shoppers" Meet

The "Open Shoppers" of the National Association of Manufacturers are meeting in New York City, plotting new wars on organized labor. Among the most active participants in this gathering is Captain Robert Dollar, the millionaire anti-union ship owner of San Francisco, who a reputed to be the big power back of the plot that sent Mooney and Billings to prison for life.

President Edgerton, of this labor crushing organization, proclaimed, he would rather see his shop go up in smoke, or would rather sacrifice his life, than the open shop. He may suffer even worse than that. The workers may decide to take over "his" shop and put him to work in it.

The Way Russian Workers Do It

By ISRAEL AMTER
(Our European Staff Correspondent)

The Russian Steamer "E Russo" has arrived at Hamburg loaded with 1400 tons of rye. The steamer is to be met by representatives of the International Workers Relief Committee, the National Council of Factory Committees and the Rhenish-Westphalian Consumers' League.

The rye will be ground in the mills of the League at Essen and Bochum and then—sold?

No, this rye has been sent by the Russian workers to Germany for quite a different purpose. It is a gift of the workers of Soviet Russia to the needy workers on the Ruhr—to the unemployed, to those working short hours, to the families of political prisoners. It is a token of the solidarity that Russian workers feel for struggling workers in all parts of the world.

The Russian workers belong to the Red Labor International: only part of the workers of the Ruhr as yet accept the tenets of struggle proclaimed by the Red Labor International. Most of the workers on the Ruhr belong to the Amsterdam International. The Amsterdam International does nothing for the Ruhr workers. All that it did was adopt a resolution stating that it would call a general strike in case of war. Fimmen, secretary of the Amsterdam International, declares that a state of war exists on the Ruhr, but Fimmen does not call a general strike. Fimmen says the workers are indifferent to what is happening.

The workers in the Red Labor International are not indifferent. The Russian workers are not indifferent—they send material aid to the struggling, fighting comrades. The leaders in the fight are the German Factory Councils, protagonists of the Red Labor International, in which militant Communists are taking a leading part. The French adherents to the Red Labor International—the General Federation of Labor Unitaire—are not indifferent. Together with the Communist Party of France, they are carrying on a fight against the tyrannical imperialist Government of France.

The Red Labor International is not indifferent: it cannot be. Its motto is: Fight and struggle for the working masses in all countries of the world.

The Russian workers, who fought thru the Revolution, the five years of bloody counter-revolution and the year of famine, the Russian workers who are just recovering from the destruction of banditry and imperialist onslaught—these workers of Soviet Russia are the first to think of their fighting, needy brothers on the Ruhr.

They are not sending only one steamer. A second steamer "Arcos" is loading with 25000 tons; a third, the "Red Labor International", taking on 6,000 tons at Reval as fast as the work can be done.

That is the way Russian workers do it. They are the most wonderful workers in the world.

Howat Shows Cruel and Heartless Manner in which Lewis-Murray Officialdom of Miners' Union Deserted Pennsylvania Membership with the International on all questions of importance, you are to be discredited, if it is in their power to do so.

Brophy is one of the real progressives in the labor movement. Brophy and the miners of Dist. 2 stood with the men in Somerset County and refused to desert them when the winter months were coming on, while at the same time the miners in the Coke Regions were being deserted by the International. Regardless of what the outcome of the strike may be in Somerset County the members of our union will give credit to the miners and officials of Dist. 2, for the manner in which they stood with the men who stood so nobly with the miners of the country during the miners' strike last summer.

Win or lose, Brophy and the men of his district have made a real fight; one that the coal barons in Somerset County will not soon forget.

When the general strike of the miners was settled last summer, the officials of Dist. 2, outlined a policy to protect the interests of the men in Somerset County and other parts of the District where they had joined the union and stood with the miners all thru the strike.

President Lewis, however, would not permit them to carry out the arrangements they had made, but forced his own disastrous policy upon them.

Anyone conversant with the real facts that existed in Somerset County and the Coke Regions when the general strike was settled last summer, is convinced beyond any question of doubt, that the strike in Somerset County and the Coke Regions of Pennsylvania could have been won long ago had it been conducted as it should have been. Had President Lewis adopted the policy advocated by President Brophy there would have been a different story to tell in connection with the strike in the Coke Regions today.

Brophy held to the principle that the organization should stand with the men who enlisted in the strike in the non-union fields one year ago and should refuse to sign with any company in Dist. 2, unless the company agreed to sign up for all their mines in that District which, of course, would include the miners in Somerset County, and some other parts of the District.

Where the men joined the union during the strike after April 1st, 1922, Lewis and Murray, however, insisted that Brophy should sign with the companies for some of their mines while the men at other mines of the same companies and in the same district were forced to continue to strike and starve alone.

This is the reward the miners in Somerset County and other parts of that District received at the hands of the International for the fight and the sacrifice they made last summer when we were so much in need of their assistance.

The miners of the country will readily understand the demoralizing effect of such a policy, for the men in Somerset County could not but feel that they had been deserted and betrayed by the organization that had pledged itself to stand with them to the last.

The same miserable policy was carried out in Dist. 5, and the Coke Regions. Practically all the large companies who have mines in the Coke Regions also have mines in Dist. 5. The mines of these companies were signed up in Dist. 5 to furnish them with coal while the men at the mines of these same companies in the Coke Regions who had made such a gallant fight to establish the Miners' Union in that section of Pennsylvania were being deserted and left to fight alone, and while the officials of Dist. 5 were signing up and putting these mines in operation, these same companies whose mines were only a few miles away across the line in Fayette County, were throwing the miners and their wives and children and furniture out on the streets in the most cruel and brutal manner conceivable.

Later on, about the time the International had collected the $4 assessment from the miners the strike in the Coke Regions was called off by the International and these men who had made one of the most remarkable struggles for industrial freedom in the history of our union, were forced to make a complete and unconditional surrender, and many of these brave men and their wives and children are suffering the pangs of hunger today because of their loyalty to the organization and their activity during the strike. Many of these men are locked out, blacklisted, and unable to secure a day's work,—crucified by the operators and deserted by our own union. This is the so-called notable victory that the members of our union were told so much about thru the columns of the Mine Worker's Journal some time ago.

If the surrender made by our officials in the Coke Region is to be regarded as a "Notable Victory" the distinguished editor of the Mine Workers' Journal should let the miners know what it would require to constitute a defeat, as anyone knows, or should know, that the miners in the Coke Regions or any other part of the country without an organization to protect them are at the complete mercy of the coal operators, and as a general proposition are subject to the wages and conditions fixed by the mine owners which is clearly evident in the Coke regions at this time.

This applies not only to the miners but to the workers at any other class of labor where they have no organization to protect them.

If the miners would give this question a little thought, they will see without a great deal of trouble the tremendous blunder that was made by President Lewis as to the manner in which the strike was conducted in the Coke Regions and Somerset County, Pennsylvania, and the cruel and heartless manner in which these men and their families were deserted by the International when victory was within their grasp. These are some of the things that Vice-President Murray also stood for, the crucifixion of the miners in the Coke Regions and Somerset County.

Yet with these cold facts staring him in the face he had the audacity to make an unwarranted attack on President Brophy, to try and destroy him not only with the men of his own District, but with the miners the entire country. But in this he will fail, for the miners know that Brophy is fighting for nationalization of the mines, which offers a real solution for the miners troubles, while making his fight he has dared to differ with the powers that be, and as a result has brought down on his head all the wrath of the International.

President Lewis and Vice-President Murray may continue for a time being their high-handed tactics in trying to discredit and destroy those who dare to differ with them or who has the courage to oppose them when he has good reasons to believe they are wrong as they have been in several instances, but today is drawing near when John L. Lewis and Philip Murray will learn that the rank and file are yet a power, and that in the end, the great principles, of justice must and will triumph over all, and no power or influence in the miners union can prevent it.

Unite Labor's Forces in the Labor Party

Manifesto of the Workers Party of America

Workers and farmers of the United States!

The workers—the producers—of this country stand before a great decision.

Shall the industrial workers and farmers unite their forces?

Shall they form one great political organization of industrial workers and farmers to fight the political battles of these producers.

Shall a Labor Party be formed to carry on the struggle in the political arena to secure for the industrial workers and farmers more of what they produce thru their labor—a higher standard of life, not only in the necessities of life food, clothing and homes to live in, but the opportunity for better education, for recreation, for enjoyment of all the good things of life.

The Farmer-Labor Party of the United States has called a great convention of labor to be held on July 3rd. To this convention it has invited all trade unions, all organizations of farmers, all labor political groups to send delegates in order to UNITE IN ONE GREAT POLITICAL PARTY OF INDUSTRIAL WORKERS AND FARMERS THE FORCES OF LABOR IN THE UNITED STATES.

The Workers and the Government

Political parties exist to advance the interests of the groups they represent. Every struggle between economic groups becomes a political struggle. The power of the government is used by the group in power to strengthen its position and the competing group endeavors to wrest the governmental power from it.

The struggle of the industrial worker for better wages and working conditions is not only a struggle against the employers in the form of great capitalist organizations which own the industries. It is also a struggle against the government, for the capitalists have unchallenged control of the government whether the Republican or Democratic party is in power.

What happened when the coal miners went on strike to maintain their wages and to protect their organizations against the open shoppers? The government stepped in. The government in control of the capitalist employers and serving the capitalists employed their agencies of coercion, injunction, deportation, courts and soldiers, to make the miners accept the terms of the bosses.

What happened when the railroad shopmen tried to prevent a reduction in their standard of living? They found that they had to fight the Railway Labor Board appointed by the government. They found a Daugherty injunction issued by a court of that government taking from them all rights of free speech, free press, freedom of assemblage and the right to organize to advance their common interests.

SURELY NO WORKER WHO THINKS CAN ANY LONGER BE IN DOUBT ABOUT THE PURPOSE FOR WHICH THE PRESENT GOVERNMENT OF THE UNITED STATES EXISTS. IT IS A STRIKE-BREAKING AGENCY FOR THE BOSSES. IT'S JOB IS TO MAKE THE WORKERS ACCEPT THE WAGES AND WORKING CONDITIONS WHICH THE BOSSES ARE READY TO GIVE THEM—AND TO USE INJUNCTIONS, COURTS AND EVEN SOLDIERS TO COMPEL THE WORKERS TO ACCEPT.

The Farmer and the Government

The government under control of the capitalists is just as definitely the enemy of the farmers.

The capitalists rob the industrial workers thru paying them low wages and compelling them to work under bad working conditions.

The capitalists rob the farmers thru exorbitant freight charges, thru heavy charges for storing and marketing goods, thru paying them low prices for what they produce and charging robber prices for what they must buy.

The capitalist bankers rob the farmers thru mortgages, thru the loans which they must have in order to get thru the bad part of the year.

Again it is the capitalist controlled government which is the greatest weapon of the capitalists in taking from the farmers what they produce. The government fixes freight rates in the interest of the railroads. Thru laws passed by Congress it gives the railroads great subsidies, such as the 6 per cent guarantee of earnings when the railroads were returned to private ownership. Thru farm credit laws and similar banking measures the government aids the capitalist bankers in robbing the farmers.

Workers in the factory and mine and workers on the land alike suffer thru the exploitation of the capitalists—exploitation in which they are assisted and which is upheld by the government.

Labor Divided

In the face of these conditions the forces of labor are divided. Some workers and farmers have supported the Republican Party and some the Democratic Party, to find that both parties served the capitalists. Other groups of workers and farmers have been divided into small, ineffective labor political groups.

Labor has no United Political Front—no organization uniting industrial workers and farmers into one solid, powerful, political organization to meet the parties of the capitalists and fight for the political interests of labor.

Workers and Farmers of the United States!

THE TIME HAS COME TO UNITE LABOR'S FORCES IN A LABOR PARTY IN THE UNITED STATES.

The experiences of the industrial workers and farmers have taught millions of these workers and farmers that they must unite politically in a class party of labor, if their organizations are not to be crushed and their standard of living forced down.

As a result of these experiences there has grown up a great demand for the organization of a labor party. Trade unions representing nearly two million workers have endorsed the idea of independent political action by labor thru a labor party. The United Mine Workers of America, the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, many of the railroad unions, are for the labor party.

Just recently the Pennsylvania Federation of Labor, the West Virginia Federation of Labor, The California Building Trades Council, and the Buffalo Central Labor Council have endorsed the formation of a labor party.

The conventions called by the Farmer-Labor Party for July 3rd presents the opportunity to realize the demand of these millions of workers for the formation of the Labor Party.

Every trade union, every farmers organization, every political organization of labor, every fraternal and benefit organization made up of workers and farmers should send delegates to the July 3rd convention.

LABOR MUST UNITE POLITICALLY.

The workers and farmers must challenge the rule of the great capitalists of Wall Street and make of the government an instrument to insure their well-being and a higher standard of life rather than an instrument to help the Wall Street capitalists amass greater and greater fortunes for themselves.

FORWARD TO THE LABOR PARTY!

FORWARD TO THE RULE OF LABOR AND THE WORKERS REPUBLIC IN THE UNITED STATES.

CENTRAL EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE,
WORKERS PARTY OF AMERICA.
C. E. RUTHENBERG, Executive Secretary.

Socialists Desert United Front

Reject Plan to Build for Labor Party

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL

Two acts of its 11th Convention in New York City definitely fix the status of the Socialist Party in the American labor movement.

FIRST—It refused to repudiate any part of, or censure Abraham Cahan, of the Jewish (Socialist) Daily Forward, for making the most vile attack on Soviet Russia yet heard in this country.

The Socialist declaration on the "Labor Party" was a complete surrender to the most reactionary elements in the American labor movement, who dominated the Cleveland Conference, shut out the Workers Party delegates, and adopted a policy of boring from within the old parties. This position of the Cleveland Conference was recently re-stated by Arthur E. Holder, its new secretary, a Johnson man in the International Association of Machinists, who declared no effort would be made to organize a "Labor Party".

The Socialists thus take a stand against the militants in the American trade unions, who demand a "Labor Party", conclusively shown by the recent Trade Union Educational League referendum of 32,000 local unions.

Gag Censure of Cahan

James Oneal, editor of "The Call" and Daniel W. Hoan, the Socialist mayor of Milwaukee, assisted by a parliamentary ruling of Chairman Cameron King, of California, were able to gag the attempted censure of Cahan.

It isn't a spirited gathering this 11th National Socialist Convention. There isn't a delegate left, as there was not in Cleveland, Ohio, one year ago, among the many who fought in the years 1919, 1920 and 1921, to win the party for the Communist International. The result is that most actions are unanimous, with hardly a whimper from any radically minded delegate. Thus the Workers Party appeal for a United Front was rejected by Delegate Oneal, of the resolutions committee, without a word in opposition, not even from delegates like King, of California, who had participated in such a united

Howat Likes "The Worker"

Alexander Howat, the militant spokesman of the Kansas coal miners, says:

"I feel lost when I do not get my copy each week of "The Worker." It is one of the best labor papers I have ever seen. It certainly has a great bunch of fine and able writers. Every line of it is interesting, giving just the sort of reading matter that the workers of this country ought to have. Workers everywhere ought to read "The Worker."

Set June 4th for Sentence of Ruthenberg

(By Federated Press)

CHICAGO.—"There is only one fixed date on this court calendar in the Michigan Communist cases," announces the Labor Defense council in setting at rest rumors circulating thru the labor press regarding the next move at St. Joseph, Mich.

"C. E. Ruthenberg, convicted of criminal syndicalism, has been notified to appear before Judge C. E. White for sentence June 4. At that time, under Michigan practice, the defense will be permitted to move for leave to carry the case direct to the state supreme court on a bill of exceptions. If Judge White grants this motion sentence on Ruthenberg may be postponed until the higher court has heard the case.

"No other case arising out of the department of justice raid on the convention in August, 1922, has been fixed for trial. The Labor Defense Council is pushing the defense campaign with energy and will be ready for the next attack by the Michigan prosecution."

Rumors printed in some of the eastern labor papers had quoted Asst. Atty. Gen. O. L. Smith of Michigan to the effect that Robert Minor will go to trial June 4 and that Wm. Z. Foster, freed by a hung jury, would be retried. Another rumor spoke of an intention by the U. S. government to take over prosecution of the cases.

Speaking of "poison pens", the worst yet is the editorial poison poured forth by the prostituted pen pushers on the kept newspapers of the country, not only against the Russian Soviet Republic, but against the militant labor movement every where. A strong Communist press will provide the antidote.

Johnston Hits Gompers Defy to Militants

(By Federated Press)

WASHINGTON. — The action taken by the executive council, American Federation of Labor, to compel central labor unions and local bodies affiliated with the Federation to boycott the Russian government is receiving criticism in labor circles here.

"I do not know what Seattle did to arouse the council to take action against it but the council's pronouncement would seem to place the Federation in the position of establishing a sort of censorship over central labor unions and local unions. I would not say it was wise action," said William H. Johnston, president, international machinist's union, which has gone on record favoring recognition of Russia.

"I do not approve of the council's statement that the Russian government is trying to destroy the American trade union movement. Mr. Gompers has many views with which I do not agree.

"The executive council's action will not affect the machinists. It cannot be applied to our organization or any of the international bodies."

Seattle Labor Is Hopeful

SEATTLE.—"The officers of the Seattle Central Labor council are confident that a satisfactory adjustment with the A. F. of L. can be attained," says Sec'y James A. Duncan. "This will remove any chance of the revoking of the charter and without any sacrifice of any principles or convictions on the part of affiliated unions regarding questions not strictly trade union in their nature."

The central body's charter which is threatened by the A. F. of L. executive council for alleged radical attitudes was revoked about ten years ago in a dispute over the affiliation of a local union but was reissued. Three local unions are now affiliated that are not in the A. F. of L. Complaint against this is enumerated among the other causes of displeasure at Washington.

Duncan indicates that attempts to dictate the thoughts of local Seattle unionists will meet a warm resistance.

Barbusse Joins Communists

The Soviet Russian Group of Proletarian Writers some time ago sent a message of greeting to M. Henri Barbusse, of France, in connection with the announcement of his entry into the Communist Party, and invited him to contribute regularly to Russian literary and artistic journals.

Labor Wants Political Party of Its Own

By EARL R. BROWDER
Associate Editor, The Labor Herald.

Labor wants a political party of its own. The truth of this statement has been decisively shown in the past few months, especially since the referendum went forth from the Trade Union Educational League. The response has been overwhelmingly "Yes" to the resolution: "That we endorse the formation of a Labor Party by the whole trade union movement, to be based upon direct representation from the local unions, and to include as affiliated organizations all existing working class political parties."

Last month we reported the scope the referendum ballots were taking. Since that time every mail adds volume to the overwhelming decision. The unions now on record in the League vote extend over 40 States and 47 International Unions. In the thousands of locals in which the issue has been raised, we have been informed of less than a dozen which failed to approve of a Labor Party.

The opposition comes generally from officials. It has been effective in but one way—that of suppressing the issue and withholding the ballot. The following letter is typical of many which we have received. We omit names of individuals and union:

"In regard to the referendum you sent this Local, will say that the secretary did not read it, and as you had sent me one at the same time I took it up at the next meeting. We had quite a time, but after all the discussion not a soul voted against it. Before it was put to a vote, the secretary said: 'I have orders from — — — that no resolution should be read if it does not bear the endorsement of the A. F. of L.' One of the members replied: 'If we wait for Gompers we will wait from now on.' Let me know if you received the ballot, for we want to check up on our officers."

If every local union had a few militants to "check up on" the officials, like this one had, there is little doubt that a few thousand more or

Big Business Rallies Forces for Action Against Workers

By JAY LOVESTONE
Author of "The Government—Strikebreaker"

Close to 7,000 representatives of every phase of finance, industry and commerce have just adjourned their gatherings in the spacious Hippodrome and the gorgeous Waldorf-Astoria in New York City. They assembled at the conventions of the United States Chamber of Commerce and the National Association of Manufacturers.

The delegates to the Convention of the United States Chamber of Commerce represented 1,480 trade and local commercial organizations; 14,500 persons, firms, and corporations holding individual membership and a general membership of 750,000.

In the Manufacturers' Convention there were represented 312 of the most powerful manufacturers' associations in this country.

The delegates to these conventions did not gather to talk. They were the elite of our capitalist class and they attended to their business in excellent fashion. Their business was to devise ways and means of increasing profits, intensifying the exploitation of the workers and crushing Labor beyond any recovery. The speakers hit straight from the shoulder.

In both conventions the spokesmen of the employing class consciously and otherwise behaved as if their organizations constituted the bridge between the general mass of people and the regularly constituted Governmental authorities. The atmosphere in both gatherings was surcharged with a spirit of insatiable hatred of and arrogant hostility to Labor.

Bless Apostles of Exploitation

Lewis E. Pierson, President of the Merchants' Association of New York bemoaned the fact that "the nation as a whole is divided into groups and classes, each seeking to perpetuate its own prosperity."

It was left to President Julius H. Barnes, just returned from the World Chamber of Commerce Convention at Rome and had been sprinkled with the holy water of Fascism by Mussolini, to strike the keynote of the proceedings. Barnes extolled the "enterprising spirit" of America as individualism. He attributed to this spirit the development of America's giant industries. A vicious attack on Soviet Russia took a good deal of time from Barnes.

Herbert Hoover, Secretary of Commerce, followed Barnes. Hoover waxed even more eloquent over American individualism and the menace of Government ownership.

Capitalists on Offensive

By JAY LOVESTONE

In the mother-tongue of American Big Business, there are no such words as "watchful waiting" and delay. Our capitalists are pursuing a strategy which is based on the principle that the best defense is a smashing offensive.

This is the outstanding impression I received as an observer of our captains of finance and industry at work in their national conventions.

Peaceful Meeting of Amalgamated Clothing Workers Attacked in 100 per cent Kansas City

(Special to "The Worker")

KANSAS CITY, MO.—The American Legion has begun an extensive campaign to have the American Flag displayed daily on buildings and homes. It was suggested by hinted that all not complying with this dictum would be branded as "Reds".

It is surmised, should the American Legion USE THIS METHOD of CANVASSING the patriots of Kansas City, it may result in something of a shock, as the homes and buildings not displaying the flag daily will far outnumber those displaying it. Their ingenuity in devising this ORIGINAL SURVEY is to be complimented as it far excels 'Kaiser' Burns' clumsy efforts of the past and present.

The dealers evidently have an over-abundant supply of American flags on hand, hence the 'patriotic' interest in the disposal and distribution of the flags by the American Legion Secret Service Organization, and those it represents.

It has become apparent that this patriotic Secret Organization is stimulating the activities of the local police department and is in close cooperation with them in their 'war' on alleged 'Reds.'

The Amalgamated Clothing Workers, on strike here, were holding a peaceful meeting of membership only, when they were suddenly interrupted by the police and agents of this Secret Organization. Three large patrol buses were parked downstairs and, obviously many arrests were anticipated in this 'framed raid.' The Clothing Workers, having felt the iron heel of the bosses ever since the beginning of their strike, and having six fellow-workers to defend because of arrest while briefly picketing, were infuriated by this indefensible invasion of their rights and demanded explanation for this high-handed police activity.

The fascisti, finding that it would be somewhat embarassing to explain wholesale arrests of Simple Trade Unionists in legal and lawful meeting, (no Trotzkys nor Lenins being present, and no other local radical celebrity at hand on whom to pounce) departed in disappointment.

As is now stands, sheer desperation may drive this American Legion Secret Service Organization out of business unless it justifies its existence by the manufacture of 'dangerous' prominent radicals,' whom it can arrest and thereby coddle the Employing Public's Fancy and thus maintain its right to that paternal support in its 'notoriously patriotic' activities.

Iron Heel of Master Class in Ohio Valley

By H. E. KEAS

WHEELING, W. Va. — John Bukса, a member of Yorkville, O., local union of United Mine Workers and secretary of the South Slavic branch of the Workers Party in the same locality, has been convicted here under the West Virginia "Red Flag" law, of "distributing seditious literature."

This vicious statute was passed by the West Virginia state legislature in 1919, and Comrade Bukса's case is the first to be tried under it. It is almost, the not quite, prohibits the working class from even thinking about any change in the forms of government.

Judge Alan H. Robinson presided With the exception of one or two rulings, his attitude was fair during the course of the trial. But the prosecuting attorney, Carl G. Bachman, and his assistant, Austin V. Wood, were a real treat during the course of the trial, and the writer suggests that they be placed in the private zoo of Ole Hanson, of Seattle fame.

Bukса's arrest occured March 9th, as he was alighting from a street car, on which he had come from the Ohio side of the river. While on the street car he had handed to several of the passengers copies of the official program of the Workers' Party, one of which was given to Weitzel. After getting off the car, Bukса had passed a few copies of the same circular to passersby. Weitzel, as soon as he alighted, made haste to report the occurence to Officer Turner, a Negro, who at once arrested Bukса and took him to the station. He was there given the third degree by the police, assisted by Department of Justice "dicks" who had been notified of the arrest, and held under the charge of "distributing seditious literature" and "treason" preferred by the State's attorney.

Bukса was not placed upon the stand in the defense, counsel confining argument to the right of speech, free speech, press and assemblage of both the Constitutions of the U. S. and the State of W. Va.

The jury returned a verdict of "guilty" in less than ten minutes. Altho they had been given copies of the Workers' Party Program as evidence, it was patent that they could not have carefully considered the content of the circular in so short a time. Altho the jury was composed of mill workers, clerks and salesmen, it is clear, from the rapidity with which they brought in a verdict, that their minds were made up before they entered the jury room. One cannot be fair to the working class in Wheeling, nor in the entire Ohio Valley and not incur the displeasure of the masters of bread. The merest wish of the steel and coal barons is the law.

A motion for a new trial will be argued Saturday, May 19th. If a new trial be refused, the case will be carried to the state court of appeals and if necessary, to the highest court in the land.

Thus another champion of working class solidarity is compelled to fight for his liberty in a capitalist court. This case is but part and parcel of the many attempts of the steel and coal barons to drive all labor organizations out of existence in the Ohio Valley.

A Similar Case to the raiding of Workers Party District Headquarters in Pittsburgh and the arrest of Fred Merrick and his fellow workers and their detention under exorbitant bail.

It is similar in nature to the case of Ill. M. Works arrested in Bellaire, on May Day, the refusal of the authorities to allow James P. Cannon, National Chairman of the Workers' Party, to speak in Martin's Ferry a few days before, one and the same with, the case of Agosto and Venturato, the United Mine Workers framed on the New Lafferty mine cases in which it is now alleged that the killing of Major, the mine owners, was the act of steel trust gunmen in the employ of the Steel Corporation to discredit the United Mine Workers union and cause the Government to declare for the "open shop." The iron heel of the master class rules the Ohio Valley.

front in his own state. The Chicago Labor Party Conference followed a like course.

The vote for maintaining affiliation with the Cleveland Conference was 38 to 12. Those dopey votes represent the efforts of a few organizers, speakers and Jimmy Higginses of the Socialist Party to maintain its "purity." They didn't worry about the ostracism of the Workers Party, about Berger's trading with La Follette, of the attacks on Soviet Russia, they could overlook all these things if they could only maintain the isolation of the Socialist Party.

"They ask us to organize a Labor Party," said Delegate Leo M. Harkins, of Camden, New Jersey. "If we want to organize something let us organize the Socialist Party."

"We are going to be the left wing, the steering committee of this new movement," pledged Delegate William Karlin, of New York. "When the big sweep comes, we want to be in on the stampede."

This stampede, of course, was to be lead by the Cleveland Conference.

Delegate William A. Toole, of Maryland, held forth the startling view that the Socialist Party was stronger today than in 1912, when the party had a million votes and more than 100,000 members

Delegate Otto Branstetter, of Illinois, the party's secretary, assured the delegates that there is no wide-spread demand today for a Labor Party.

"There will be no demand, for a Labor Party until the treasuries of the great unions and their official journals are opened to and at the disposal of a Labor Party," he said. "Altho there is no doubt that we will ultimately succeed in the organization of a Labor Party."

He declared the proposed Farmer-Labor Party Conference in Chicago, in July, to be only a "two-by-four half-baked effort at starting a Labor Party.

Branstetter then made the humorous assertion that the Socialist Party was the only political organization that had the support of the labor unions.

Pat Quinlan, a New York Socialist emissary to Buffalo, announced that he had a talk with Johnston, presumably William H. Johnston, of the International Association of Machinists, with the result that he was for the Cleveland Conference. Not one of the delegates stressed the need of united political action of the workers, of the present industrial crisis confronting America's workers. The question was merely one of "purity" versus "contamination", and the convention voted to subject the Socialist Party to any contamination with the old parties that the Johnstons and the Keatings might demand, at the same time sabotaging efforts to start a real Labor Party. The Socialist Party is out to capture the reactionary labor leaders by surrendering to them.

Lee to the Front

It was Delegate Algernon Lee, of New York City, who successfully engineered the fight against sending delegates to the Chicago Farmer-Labor Party Conference. It was proposed to send three delegates. Instead Lee brought in a motion to have a commission of three draw up a rejection to the Farmer-Labor Party invitation. He outlined what such a rejection should contain.

Delegate Lee said the statement would claim that the Socialist Party shares with the Farmer-Labor Party the recognition of the importance of uniting in a Labor Party. But that it believes, in order to realize this goal, the support of the principal unions of the country is needed. Lee said that capitalist compels the Socialists to admit that the time when this support may be expected has not arrived. He claimed that state conferences urged by the Cleveland Conference can be made the real basis for a Labor Party. The Farmer-Labor Party invitation was therefore rejected without a dissenting vote.

The effort to censure Cahan manifested itself in Oneal's report for the resolutions committee. An attack on Communist activities in the United States was also tagged onto the same resolution. In opening his tirade against the attempt to censure Cahan, Oneal claimed he was in disagreement with the editor of the Forward. But, he claimed, Cahan had been provoked into making his attack by the activities of the Communists during the past two years in New York City. Then, to show his disagreement with Cahan, Oneal went him almost one better in his own anti-Communist slanders. In one of his oratorical flights this Socialist intellectual fixed the number of theis coming out of the Soviet Republic at 246,000. This had all attested, Cahan to allow him the Russian Socialist Federated Soviet Republic is not in accord with the stand of the Socialist Party.

But along toward the end of the day's session, Delegate Livermore, of Massachusetts, got the floor, stated he knew nothing about parliamentary procedure, and asked Chairman King if he could put in a resolution. King allowed Livermore to read his resolution which was as follows:

"Whereas, That part of Abraham Cahan's address attacking the Russian Socialist Federated Soviet Republic is not in accord with the stand of the Socialist Party,

"Be It Resolved, That the Convention go on record as repudiating that part of Cahan's address attacking the Russian Socialist Federated Soviet Republic."

The resolution was signed by Delegate Donovan of Massachusetts with Livermore. Delegate Donovan moved the adoption of the censure of Cahan and then made a speech in behalf of the resolution. She pointed out that she had picked up the papers of the poison press attacking the Workers Republic, on the basis of Cahan's declarations, and claimed she did not think this was the position of the Socialist Party.

Delegate May Harris Mainland offered an amendment that would tend to promote peaceful relations between Communists and Socialists Delegate Abraham Shiplacoff challenged the amendment as not in order. But Chairman King held it was in order.

At this point Delegate Algernon Lee, one of prospective candidates for editor of the New York call, moved to proceed with the regular order, which was the report of the constitution committee. But the rebellion was getting under way and the effort to smuggle censure of Cahan was defeated.

But the outbreak soon spent its force. It lacked leadership. When Delegate Jean Milwaukee Socialist mayor, moved to table the entire matter, and the vote was taken, Chairman King ignored these, and the 11th National Socialist Convention had endorsed the entire views of Cahan in attacking the Russian Soviet Republic.

The plea of Delegate Donovan that "we do all in our power to aid the workers and peasants of Soviet Russia," had been ground into the mire of Socialist reaction.

The Socialist Party and the efforts of Delegate Donovan and Livermore to secure a repudiation of the Cahan report, was completely ignored in the New York call's account of the convention. Cahan endorsed his sentiments about the weakness of the Socialist Party by failing to have any news of the Saturday's proceedings appear in the Sunday issue of his paper.

It was Delegate Albert Weisbord, Boston Mass., fraternal representative from the Young People's Socialist League, who told the delegates that they were greatly mistaken if they thought that Debs' tour of the country would rebuild the Socialist Party. He declared any new members secured would be scared away by their first attendance at a Socialist Party branch meeting. Another delegate from Massachusetts estimated that all the young people had gone into the Communist movement.

While these discussions were going on in the convention hall, Eugene V. Debs arrived in New York City from Rochester, and went to the Bresbin Hotel, where he was interviewed by a score of newspapermen from the capitalist press.

"I don't know what the future has in store for the Workers Party," he told them. "Perhaps the Workers Party is right. If it is, and time will tell, then I will be glad to join it and give it my whole-hearted support."

Abolish Child Labor, Young Workers Urge

(By Federated Press.)

CHICAGO.—Amnesty, abolition of child labor, opposition to American fascism and to mob rule by the more violent American Legion posts—were among the demands of the Young Workers League in second annual convention here. Greetings to Russia, were sent and the present fraternal affiliation with the Young Communist International renewed. Fifty delegates from both coasts and intermediate points assembled for the opening of the three-day convention. Seattle, Los Angeles, Minneapolis, Milwaukee, Chicago, Gary, South Bend, Ind., Bellaire, O., New York and New England industrial towns were represented.

A NEW COMRADE

By ROSE PASTOR STOKES

Six weeks ago, somewhere in Massachussetts, Comrade James P. Cannon got hold of Comrade Florence Barnes and three other Comrades reorganized like herself and helped them form an English Branch of the Workers Party. She became the secretary, for the other three, which have since grown to eight.

In this short period the Branch has given a ball which helped to raise money for the work, and has held two successful mass meetings. It has also organized a Trade Union Educational League group, and has sent a representative to the New York TUEL Conference.

Comrade Barnes says, "I don't know much about theory yet, or party tactics, but I believe in learning thru doing. Some day I hope to be able to get up in meeting and introduce a speaker, or even learn to make a little speech myself."

Comrade Barnes is the daughter of Mrs. Harriet D'Orsay, who was a member of the S. P. in pre-Communist days, and never yellow. Today, when S. P.-ites meet our new members and upbraid her for not joining the "party your mother stood by" (Mrs. D'Orsay died two years ago) Comrade Barnes replies that she joined the only party that stands by the principles her mother stood for.

Comrade Barnes is a proletarian mother who has raised and supported a son and a daughter from boyhood by her own labor. The young daughter is a member of the Branch, and the son, only sixteen, will shortly succeed in getting himself and several other youngsters organized into a Branch of the Young Workers' League. The children have a step father; Mrs. Barnes, Comrade, hopes that some day Mr. Barnes will also join the Branch. "I've made a start," she confided to me, "I've started him reading the Liberator. He thinks it's Great!"

Farmers for Labor Party

Editor, The Worker:—I am very much interested in your Labor Party discussion in "The Worker", and also in other papers. It certainly will be a success because there is necessity for it. Even some of the farmers would join a movement of this kind.

The Nonpartisan League is dead, of course. Having spent six years in several states as an organizer for the Nonpartisan League, I am convinced that the farmer must be organized together with the city worker along class lines. Times are advantageous for this because 90 per cent of the farmers are bankrupt and many of them are losing respect for property (capitalistic) rights.

We should be able to get 4000 farmers in North Dakota to definitely join a Labor Party before the next presidential election. If this proportion can be secured in the other states, we will have for the whole country 340,000 farmers to support the industrial workers in their political struggles against capitalism.—A. K., Fargo, N. D.

The Great American Shell Game

By LUDWIG LORE

In spite of the intense excitement that accompanied the last day of the session, the New York legislature adjourned without doing anything that was worthy of the name. Instead of passing measures which would mean an extra good measure of liberal progression, the session has been the usual one of reaction, not to avoid positive legislation but to prevent its actual fulfillment, stopping every attempt at progressive legislation by the use of the veto.

The exciting show that was staged over the recall of the Mullan-Gage law had only less significance. It gave the voice discerning an opportunity to see more clearly the issues and the ballyhoo. It showed a little more closely, to see a little more clearly the personal interests that dominate so much of our state legislation.

It is a well known fact that Smith and his followers in the legislature were elected into office in the last election on a distinctly anti-prohibition platform. The repeal of the Mullan-Gage act became, therefore, the dominant question before the legislature during the past session. Miller, Smith's opponent, the personally a "wet," subordinated his personal views to his party platform, the more willingly, perhaps, because his chief-hope of success lay with the farmer element up-state, which is notoriously in favor of the strict enforcement of the prohibition measure.

Nevertheless, Smith and his colleagues showed a marked reluctance to approach this exceedingly troublesome problem. On the contrary, they were so obviously inclined to shirk their duty to their electorate, that their republican opponents felt called upon to bring them to terms.

Not that the latter have had occasion to change their position. But they were astute enough to appreciate the difficult position into which the Democrats, and particularly Governor Smith, had placed themselves. Smith has conscientious scruples against an extended term in the gubernatorial chair. He is most emphatically in the field for a presidential nomination. This fact, however, makes him very reluctant to take a position that may cost him the support of the South which, because of its disfranchised negroes, is still practically wholly democratic. Mr. Smith is therefore playing his game on the utmost care, for he realizes that one false move may easily end his usefulness as presidential candidate.

Let us see what happened. The democratic Senate presented a clean bill of health by adopting the repeal motion, relying upon the Republicans to defeat it in the Assembly, thus saving the democratic administration from the stigma of having refused to support the national prohibition amendment. But the Republicans were equally eager to establish an alibi. They, too, are looking forward to the presidential campaign, and desire nothing more ardently than to discredit Governor Smith who is undoubtedly a redoubtable opponent. For this reason they are straining every effort, to elect a number of additional assemblymen this fall in Greater New York, so that they may terrorize and discredit the Smith Administration. They, therefore, made tentative advances to the Democrats, offering them the necessary republican votes to accure the necessary two-thirds majority for the repeal.

The Democrats were thus forced into a position where they were compelled to act. What followed is well known. Whether the lateness of one democratic assemblyman, which almost wrecked the carefully built-up majority, was accidental or not, is hard to say. We are inclined to believe the latter. Be it as it may, the fact remains that the Republicans, in order to force the passage of the bill for the double purpose of strengthening their foodhold in New York City and hurting the Democratic party, ordered its New York City delegation to vote to a man for the repeal of the Mullan-Gage amendment.

So the clever republican politicians have made an effective appeal for support on both sides. Nominally, on the strength of their platform, they can still claim unqualified support for the dry amendment. In New York City, on the other hand, their candidates can proudly point out the fact that it was their votes that saved the day for the repeal act. Governor Smith, however, is in no enviable position. He must sign the repeal bill whether he wants to or not, there is no other way. True he will put off the fateful moment as long as is possible. He has already announced his intention of taking a lengthy vacation, and of calling a hearing on this question. But dodge as he may, the nut is there and will have to be cracked.

For the working-class the repeal of the Mullin-Gage law has no practical significance. To them it makes little difference who pays the grafters and hires the idlers that constitute our prohibition force. He knows that neither the state nor the nation will succeed in enforcing prohibition because its most ardent supporters are its most successful violators. In the hands of the politicians it is a two-edged tool trick with which he fools and amuses the public, and distracts the attention from the serious endeavors of life.

Growing Poverty in Germany

By ISRAEL AMTER

(Our European Staff Correspondent)

Germany's workers are steadily being impoverished. Despite the fact that the mark was stabilized, the cost of living continued to mount, while wages hardly crept forward. Profits increase, while children grow paler. Dividends grow and grow, hungry and desperate, commit suicide!

The workers complain and the government admits its impotence to change value, but the "Vorwaerts" merely shudders and requests the capitalists to be more temperate.

Only one body has been able to aid the German proletariat, at least to some degree. The Betriebsraete—the Factory Councils—which are greatly under Communist influence, have taken the matter in hand, and have forced the dealers to lower their prices.

Despite the impoverishment of the German worker is not due to the "villainy" of the Entente and particularly to France, may be seen in the following facts. There has been a steady diminution in the area devoted to the cultivation of the principal grains. The meadows have increased from 15.9 per cent of the total area to 17.9 per cent. According to official statistics, the decrease in the cultivated territory is greatest in those parts of Germany in which large farms predominate. The cultivation of wheat, rye, barley and oats has steadily diminished since 1919.

This has enabled the peasants and landowners to obtain high prices for food, altho the scarcity has been successful at a time when the German worker is hardest pressed. The coal production per man has diminished. Despite the employment of a larger number of men (150,000), despite a large amount of overtime, the efficiency per man has decreased from 972 kilos in 1913 to 580 in 1922. In the same period, by reducing the prices sky-high, the coal barons have earned fortunes.

The production of iron and steel has improved, transportation and navigation are on the upgrade, despite the many impediments Germany has to contend with. Building is in a serious plight, as there is very little being done, and not even repair work being undertaken. Savings dropped from a value of 930 millions gold marks in 1919 to about 100 millions in 1922.

German capital is unable to feed its workers. Hunger and misery are giving great impetus to the rebellious spirit of the workers. The greed of the German capitalists, the indifference and treachery of the Social-Democrats, and the cowardice and unwillingness of the trade union leaders to make a fight, are opening the eyes of the workers. Bolshevism is no longer a bugaboo. While the condition of the German worker is steadily deteriorating, that of the Russian worker is continually improving. To keep himself from complete degradation, the German worker will be obliged to take a step like the Russian worker and peasant took. The hunger and the misery that lead to revolution are making the German worker susceptible to the idea.

Sees Socialist Party in Retreat

(By Federated Press)

CHICAGO.—The reported action of the Socialist Party in declining our invitation to join in a coalition convention of all labor and farmer parties and organizations "is regretable but will not interfere with our program," said Jay G. Brown, secretary, Farmer-Labor Party, which is calling the July 3rd meeting.

"The net total convention of the Socialist party in New York seems to be running counter to the trend of labor feeling in this matter. The recent convention of the Pennsylvania State Federation of Labor demanded the formation of a United Labor Party. This is typical even of conservative unions. They are accepting our invitation to discuss labor unity for independent political action. Three political labor parties have responded favorably.

"We shall be glad to welcome the Socialist Party as soon as it thinks the time for united action is here. We think the time is July 3rd, when the convention opens in the Ashland Auditorium here."

T.U.E.L. Hits Bitter Strife of the Bakers

The bitter strife existing between the Bakers' American Federation of Labor and Independent locals, is typical of the senseless struggle afflicting the workers in modern American industry.

The basic cause of these differences is the existence of rival organizations, each of which naturally seeks to survive, sometimes at the expense of the other.

The situation is further complicated by the typical old style leader, continually playing on the prejudices of the rank and file, stirring their worst passions so that any rebellion aimed at them would be diverted to the rival union. This is being carried to an unbearable extreme. The disgraceful name calling and destructive abuse taking place at some of the Bakers' meetings, is destroying the morale of the rank and file.

While this continues the Bosses laugh in their sleeve, and the industry remains very much unorganized.

Our old style reactionary leaders have done nothing and will do nothing, to remedy this intolerable condition.

The actual situation must be made clear to the rank and file. A leaflet has already been issued by the T. U. E. L. Bakers' Section, which sets forth:

"1. TEMPORARY ADJUSTMENT. A local settlement of an agreement between our warring locals. This temporary agreement should have its roots in a thorough understanding of the rank and file.

"2. FINAL ADJUSTMENT. A national amalgamation of the International Unions involved in this dispute. Any local settlement arrived at is only temporary in character, and a little more than a first aid measure. The sole practical solution, and the only way that the Bakers can secure an united front and put an end to this ruinous jurisdictional war, is by amalgamating their respective International Unions."

On the basis of this program a continual barrage of publicity must be trained on this situation, every member of the various organizations involved, must become aware of the condition prevailing. Every office in the unions should be filled, not by those who seek to sabotage a settlement, but by progressives who really represent the rank and file and who accept this basis of settlement.

The militants must play a leading part in forcing a settlement, they should carry on a ceaseless agitation in the locals, district councils, etc. At the same time they should not lose sight of the national settlement.

One of the unions involved is committed by resolutions passed in its convention, to the principle of amalgamation. The other organization should also be committed to amalgamation, and in line with the recent action of many international conventions, the officers should be instructed to immediately get in conference, to bring about real amalgamation in this great base industry. The militants in the Bakers Union must express the desires and aspirations of the rank and file, and with the aid of our press lead this internal warfare into constructive channels.

The Government-STRIKEBREAKER

By JAY LOVESTONE

AN ARSENAL OF STARTLING FACTS ABOUT THE GOVERNMENT'S STRIKE-BREAKING ACTIVITIES

AN INTRIGUING STORY OF THE GREAT TEXTILE, MINE, AND RAILWAY STRIKES

Every worker, every trade unionist, every member of every labor organization must get this book in order to be able to fight effectively in the great struggle against the employers!

Thru this book travels on the hard road of cold, authoritative economic data, political and industrial facts, it is a live, thrilling story, of the heroic battles for freedom fought by the American workers.

THIS BOOK TELLS:

HOW the Government engineered and organized the last great Open-Shop Drive to smash the unions and force intolerable working and living conditions on Labor.

HOW the farming masses and ex-soldiers were defrauded by the powerful bankers and the Government.

HOW the textile workers were evicted, jailed, and shot down.

HOW the miners waged their heroic battles against their exploiters. The true Story of Herrin.

HOW the Government broke the Railway Shopmen's Strike.

HOW the Courts protected the Rich and prosecuted the Poor.

HOW the Supreme Court has put itself at the helm of all strike-breaking agencies in the country.

HOW the bosses use the army to crush the workers fighting for even the barest necessaries of life.

HOW an "Invisible Government" has been built up against the workers and farmers by the Employer's Association, the Ku Klux Klan, etc.

HOW the Press aids the employers attacking the workers and farmers.

HOW martial law is being fastened on the workers thru "Government by Injunction."

HOW new chains are being forged against the workers so as to rob them of every vestige of the right to organize and to freedom of speech and press.

READ THESE ASTOUNDING FACTS

All workers who want to be equipped with the most recent authoritative facts of the class struggle in America, who want the knowledge that will enable them to take their place in the struggle against employer tyranny and exploitation, must secure a copy of THE GOVERNMENT - STRIKEBREAKER—the stirring study of the class war in America.

Hardy Writes on Strike of the Seamen

By GEORGE HARDY

The seamen's strike called by the Marine Transport Workers' Industrial Union is still on, notwithstanding that every agency has been used to break the strike from bootlegwhisky to shanghaiing. However, many ships swing leisurely at their anchors in New York harbor, while the strikers hold their mass-meetings daily.

The strikers are demanding, more seriously, the release of all political prisoners. It is unfortunate that this demand could not be executed by a united action of all mariners. The M. T. W. has already been responsible for the increased wages offered which are from $80 to $100 in place of $40 to $65. But the strikers regard these as scab wages, intended ultimately to defeat the strikers, by refusal of recognition of the union. They know the shipowner would return to the old scale as soon as conditions warrant, if it is not won by organization.

The International Seamen's Union continues, with a skeleton of a union, to allow its members to work. The uneducated members are also signing in ships at increased wages. Thus no united effort is in evidence. Further: Andrew Furuseth, under date of May 4th, where he states he has written the President of the United States asking the American Secret Service "he employed to make a sweeping investigation" into American Marine services, and that: "American vessels now are manned by radicals."

This, at a time, when all the energies of organized labor should be used in organizing the unorganized and getting unity of conflicting groups, with solidarity ashore and afloat.

The political phase of this strike is emphasized by a demand in California for the repeal of the Criminal Syndicalist Law that has, and is sending many militant workers to prison for 14 years. The strike bulletin shows 95 per cent out on strike in San Pedro, Cal., with the port delegate and several strikers under arrest for daring to revolt against acceptance of insufferably low wages.

Internationally, the seamen are restless. The Belgian strike of railwaymen, telegraphers and freighthandlers has spread to the seamen. Red Star Liners are held up, and the British sailors are deserting their ships because the traitorous Havelock Wilson has again accepted arbitrarily a cut of $5 a month, without submitting it to the membership of the union. The Red International Transport committees are now holding mass meetings in Great Britain protesting against the reduction and calling on the sailors to join the rank and file councils to gain control of the union.

The latest adherent to the International Seamen's Section of the Red International Transport Workers is the formation in Great Britain of the International Oriental Seamen's Union. Their aims are political and economic. They have taken a great step forward, for their demands are (first) "equal wages and conditions as applies to Europeans," second: "full economic, political and social freedom"; third) "an ultimate aim of One International Union for all seafarers, with affiliation to the R. I. L. U."

Responding to the law of natural development the International Marine Workers' Amalgamation Committee which will aim at uniting all the existing marine unions in the United States into one Industrial Union, will co-operate internationally, with all militant workers and minorities. When the present strike is over we are hoping that all will have learned a lesson for more solidarity, and that, the I. W. W. marine workers will join the Transport Section of the Red International.

HELP!

America is going to the dogs. The favorite daughter of a prominent Detroit millionaire has married her father's gardener, and the wife of a Canadian Pacific railroad official has been fined $50 for simple larceny in department store stealing.

"To us our daughter is dead," the millionaire's wife proclaims to the press.

"This is a thunderbolt out of a clear sky!" the railroad official exclaimed as he paid his wife's fine.

There is some consolation in those utterances. But what are we coming to when our best people will act like that?

Labor Press Aids Exposure of Burns Detective Agency

The labor press is taking the fight of "The Workers" on the William J. Burns' International Detective Agency. Prominent among these publications are the Butte, Mont., Bulletin and the Terre Haute, Ind., Advocate.

The Butte Bulletin, edited by William F. Dunne, is the official organ of the Montana State Federation of Labor, the Central Labor Council of Butte, the Silver Bow Trades and Labor Council, the State Metal Trades Council and the Montana World War Veterans. It announces these exposures as the "most sensational in years."

The Terre Haute Advocate is published and published by the Vigo County, Ind., Central Labor Union, which declares, "The facts are known to the government authorities, but this spy is allowed his liberty while he frames dozens of workers for alleged crimes against the government."

This week's installment shows how the Burns Agency was not above using false passports when the occasion required, proving that Mr. Burns himself knew of this feature of his Agency's work.

The Burn's Agency Uses False Passports
By ROBERT MINOR

False passports were used by the William J. Burns' International Detective Agency to carry on the spying activities of the German Imperial Government in this country. This was the subject of additional exposures in the investigation carried on incidental to the effort to revoke the license of the Burns' Agency in New York City.

It was in this investigation that Norman T. Bailey, who had been the London manager for the Burns' Detective Agency, testified on July 12, 1917, in part as follows:

A. I conferred with Mr. Burns in his office in the Woolworth Building the first time I came over and we discussed the matters, and as I was leaving the office, Mr. Burns called me back, and he said, "When are you going back, Bailey?" "Well," I said, "now." I said, "I want to go back on Saturday." He says, "We are trying hard to get a German over the other side and we are having considerable difficulty getting a passport." He says, "You see Smith, the assistant manager, and he will tell you all about it." I saw Smith.

Q. Who was Smith?

A. Irving Smith. He is a detective in New York City.

Q. And Smith at that time was what in Burns' office?

A. He was an assistant manager.

Q. And Mr. Burns referred you to him and told you that he would tell you all about it?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you see him, following Mr. Burns' instructions?

A. Yes, sir. Mr. Smith told me that he was trying to get a fictitious passport to a German over on the other side, and that they thought I could possibly take this man over with me, that I would sort of allay suspicion and I could get him thru without any trouble. I had this conversation with Mr. Burns.

Also asked me the same question, if this man could go back with me that it would sort of allay suspicion in getting him thru into England.

Q. Was your business in New York terminated before the fictitious passport was obtained?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you return to England?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you subsequently learn thru the press some months later the occurrence in connection with the name of Captain-Boy-Ed?

A. I read an account in the paper where some man had been persuaded by his fiancee to make a confession to the United States Government that he had been mixed up in getting fictitious passports, passports to get Germans into England. This was in all the London papers, and I started in me thinking and I figured out as a British subject what sort of a chance I would have stood if I had taken this man over. They would have stood me up against the wall of the Tower and I would have gone just the same as those other—

Q. And what did you thereupon do?

A. I made up my mind to leave the Burns agency.

Q. Did you leave it?

A. Yes, sir.

Help "The Worker" Find the Worst Boss in the U.S.A.

Editor, Worst Boss Stories: I am now working for the worst boss I ever had. The father was bad, but his heir, the son, is worse.

The firm is one of the largest wholesale grocers in the city. I am an egg-candler. The business makes money hand over fist, but the conditions under which we candlers work are awful. The candling room is stuck away behind everything. It is dark, damp and cold. Only one window in this room since it was built. There is not a window in the place. Pitch dark. The walls covered with inches of dust. The 30-year stench of ten thousand eggs. In our work, the room of course must be dark. But one hour's profit would put windows into the room, covered with thick porous curtains—air for sickly-faced workers.

Each man used to turn out 22 cases a day, at most 25. But the son came. He needed money to squander. We are his machines for grinding it out. We were speeded up. Now we turn out 30 to 35 cases, and the boss has offered several candlers. I have to candle and grade some 10,000 eggs a day, one egg every two seconds! And then Howe buys the cheapest stuff, which is the hardest to candle.

However, in all this the young boss is not committing a criminal offense—at least not under the constitution—just making money. But there is another side. This fellow is the worst boss I ever had for thieving blood money out of the public. "We" sell to the restaurant and baker trade. Some restaurants send in orders for fresh eggs, but they get the cream of the rubbish that we pick out from the dirtiest, smallest and rottenest mess that I have ever been compelled to handle. In the winter my boss never sold a fresh egg. He sold his storage eggs for fresh, making 35 to 40 cents a dozen.

If you recall 40 people were recently poisoned and several died from food eaten in a Broadway restaurant. My guess is that they were poisoned by eating cake made with diseased eggs. It is possible that they came from my boss.

Ninety per cent of the egg trade supply more or less rotten eggs to the bakers. Spots, diseased eggs, red rots, bloody eggs, eggs covered with mold, go into the soup. There is no rankeer poison. The stink couldn't be smelled up by a million men. These eggs, candled out, my boss sent to the freezers. They are sold when frozen—no smell then.

Of course there are health inspectors. But our salesman, who sells these cans to the baking trade, is an ex-inspector himself. He has made all arrangements between the health inspectors and the boss. I see him when I coming in. They get no further than the office on their way to the candling room.

"Well, how are your eggs today?"

"Aw, all right," answers the boss and then the conversation is lost in low tones.

What brast exploits us working and robs and poisons us eating? The Boss!—M. C.

Sinclair Writes About "Hell"

Upton Sinclair is publishing this week an unusual literary production, which he describes as a blank verse drama and photoplay in four acts. It is entitled "Hell", and its subject is modern war as viewed from the internal regions. The story describes how Satan's jester gets into heaven, steals the golden key, and locks all the heavenly hosts inside. Then Satan and his demons, having earth at their mercy, proceed to make the last nine years of human history. The play was published serially in the "Haldeman-Julius Weekly", whose editor, Emanuel Haldeman-Julius, wrote of it as follows:

"An amazingly brilliant four-act drama, which is without equal in all literature; an original work that will create a vast sensation; a picture of Hell, that makes Sinclair the Dante of his age; humor, satire, irony, revolutionary criticism, mercy, less dissection of modern social life. "Hell" will shake the critics from their slumbers; "Hell" will raise hell wherever literature is read."

The play is published in a paper edition only, 128 pages, price 25 cents. The publisher is Upton Sinclair, Pasadena, California.

It can also be had by ordering from the Workers Party, 799 Broadway, New York City.

Howat at Barracksville, W. Va.

Alexander Howat will be the speaker at the grand ball and entertainment to be given by the Barracksville, W. Va., Workers Party co-operating with the Slovenian Benefit Society, on Wednesday, May 30, starting at 2 p. m. at the C. M. W. Hall. An effort is also being made to get Fred Merrick, of Pittsburgh, as a second speaker.

Labor Wants Party of Its Own-Browder

and an indefinitely-to-be-postponed "Open Shop Drive," called the Labor Conference a "pyramid hall of pretenders."

He thundered against the employers who frequent the golf links and clubs, permit a class development of dangerous discontent amongst their workers. Edgerton denounced the idea of giving the slightest consideration, to the needs of the workers in fixing their wages as "sophistical and wholly un-American." In attacking the advocates of a Bonus for the ex-soldiers Edgerton was especially bitter. He lumped the American soldiers whom he once called "the saviors of civilization," with the barbarian Boches. He told his ear-pricked listeners not to forget that "the ultimate goal of the German soldiery itself was the Treasury at Washington" which was "the rendezvous of the Kaiser's fondest thoughts." Edgerton went on to follow: "When the enemy was fighting to reach us, our soldiers said: 'They shall not pass.' And they didn't. Now let them exercise the same restraint upon themselves." He told his ear-pricked listeners not to forget that "the ultimate goal of the German soldiery itself was the Treasury at Washington" which was "the rendezvous of the Kaiser's fondest thoughts." Edgerton went on to follow: "When the enemy was fighting to reach us, our soldiers said: 'They shall not pass.' And they didn't. Now let them exercise the same restraint upon themselves."

The Manufacturers also received by cable the benediction of President Poincare, lickspittle of the French Treasury at Washington" which was "the rendezvous of the Kaiser's fondest thoughts." Edgerton went on to follow: "When the enemy was fighting to reach us, our soldiers said: 'They shall not pass.' And they didn't. Now let them exercise the same restraint upon themselves." The Manufacturers also received by cable the benediction of President Poincare, lickspittle of the French Guardian Angel of our own exploiters, telegraphed regrets over his inability to drink in the holy atmosphere of patriotism with the profiteekers as "deserving of most emphatic and unqualified recognition."

More Profits, Bigger Dividends

The delegates were dividend-hungry. Their attitude, and approach towards the problems confronting them in their exploitation of the workers showed this very clearly. Addressing the Manufacturers, Acheson Smith, Vice-President of the Acheson Graphite Co., told them that they were "entirely dependent upon alien labor to do most of the manual work," and that because of the present immigration conditions they are "facing one of the most critical periods in order to afford the employers a superabundance of cheap labor power. John C. Haswell, Chairman of the Immigration Committee of the Manufacturers proposed "that a thoughtful modification of the contract labor law would be in the public interest."

Both conclusions declared themselves unequivocally for the complete repeal of the cacess profits tax, the surtax and all such other "unjustice taxes." The idea of a sales tax which hit even the poorest workers and farmers was particularly popular amongst the delegates.

Special attention was given to the transportation problem. The Manufacturers minced no words. They spoke of "the failure of the railroads" the railway workers of the right to strike. The National Chamber brought to light part of its "careful study" of the railway problem in the Astor Gallery when the delegates were introduced to W. N. Doak, President of the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen. Doak pounded the very sentiments expressed by his predecessor W. G. Lee at the Western Railway Club last February, and speaking alongside of W. W. Head, Vice-President of the Big Business Rallies to Action!

American Bankers' Association, Doak could never be mistaken for a labor leader. He barely did look like a well-fed, smug, complacent banker. Doak whined: "Our railroads and their employees in my opinion are being administered in the manner of public muddling which certainly should cease." He went on to shed tears over the awkward position in which his workers were placed and spoke of the vital interests of the workers in the railway corporations making plenty of profits.

"That's a real friend of labor," said a delegate to the writer. Another delegate characterized Doak in time as "a good fellow who could teach the flannel-mouthed agitators a whole lot." Doak's address greatly pleased the delegates. It was the consensus of opinion that the bankers could count on Doak and his ilk to solve the vexing railway dividend and railway labor problems.

Bait To Divide Working Masses

The capitalist experts also considered ways and means of dividing the workers. Speaking before the manufacturers, Prof. David Friday, President of the Michigan Agricultural College, delivered the typical employing class propaganda aiming at dividing the city from the rural working masses. He said that the real grievance of the farmer was that the railroad worker, the public utility workers and other workers were getting a better opportunity for leisure and were improving their conditions of living while the farmers could not do this.

General Frank T. Hines, of the Veterans' Bureau told the Chamber to give preference to ex-soldiers in employment because they will thus "not only be rendering a patriotic service, but they will find it to be beneficially profitable."

Foresee New Depression

There was much blatant boasting about the terrific prosperity that has overwhelmed the country. But beneath all this empty talk there were frank admissions that Mr. Prosperity had already turned the corner and was perhaps deserting us in great hurry.

Benjamin M. Anderson, economist of the Chase National Bank, told the Manufacturers that the reaction had begun five or six weeks ago and that, "The business situation today does not seem to have the unlimited possibilities of expansion and profits which short-sighted optimists thought they saw in it two or three months ago. We really have no ground for intense, uninterrupted prosperity with the present situation in Europe and with the lack of equilibrium thruout the world which results from this."

And Colonel M. Rorty, President of the International Telephone Security Corporation, and President of the National Bureau of Economic Research told the Manufacturers, "If we consider only the lessons of past business cycles, we should say that most of the signs were today favorable to the beginning of a period of business depression."

Planning Anti-Labor Open Shop Drive

Anticipating this "readjustment" period during which wages would be freedjusted downwards, the Manufacturers proceeded to a vigorous discussion on a new Open Shop slaught on the workers.

Mr. S. W. Utley, President of the Employers' Association of Detroit, presided at the debate. Edgerton swore that he would rather see his factory go up in smoke than sacrifice the Open Shop principle. The automobile man, however, Mr. Leland, also dedicated himself to the new crusade against Labor. Then spoke the old Captain Bonfire, notorious union-smasher from San Francisco. He gave a picturesque description of how he broke the strike of the marine engineers affiliated with the American Federation of Labor, and how he has established peace with these engineers thru a system of monthly luncheons with the shipping owners.

Next followed Captain William Porter White of the Lowell Paper Tube Corporation who threw down the gauntlet to Labor. He foamed at the mouth saying: "Labor conditions are getting worse in this city every day. New York will not be so easy to clean up as was San Francisco. In San Francisco they had men of courage. In New York, I regret to say, they have not."

The Manufacturers crowned their efforts by adopting a United Front Program against the workers. This program is dealing with law and order in industry, taxation, immigration, foreign trade, the Bonus, and so forth, will be presented to the coming Conventions of the Republican and Democratic Parties. Its final form will be left to the National Committee consisting of three members from each of the 15 industrial states.

These Conventions brought out the unity of the Stock Exchange with the Government in all its naked ugliness.

High Government officials and representatives of the army and navy were the chief figures in these conclaves of the most powerful financiers and industrialists. Secretary of Commerce Hoover pledged the support of the Government to the perpetuation of the private ownership of the means of production and exchange. Strikebreaker Ben Hooper, Chairman of the Railway Labor, denounced Socialism, and praised Gompers to the Manufacturers.

Finally, the Manufacturers adjourned with an entertainment and luncheon tendered them by Vice-Admiral J. B. McDowell aboard the battleship Wyoming. The National Chamber adjourned "with a daylight sail to the Military Academy at West Point."

Workers Must Act At Once

The workers must take a leaf out of the book of their bosses. The workers must get ready to meet this new drive prepared against them at these conventions. A campaign of intensive working class organization must be launched. No time must be lost in these preparations.

In the class war, as in all other wars, the best defensive strategy is the mighty offensive. The workers must organize to take the offensive in their own self-defense.

A Radical Irish Magazine

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY

Many attempts have been made to reach the Irish workers in America with the kind of propaganda that produces the maximum results with the minimum expenditure of energy and money, but they have all been unsuccessful. This may sound queer, but it is nevertheless true.

Some people believe that any revolutionary effort that does not present an important public with a full fledged revolution after the five o'clock whistle blows is a flat failure. They seem to think that the business of bringing about the downfall of capitalism is subject to the laws that govern the business of exchanging watches for pawn tickets.

If at the end of the year the pawn broker is nearer being broke than when he started, he is justified in considering the advisability of adding the profession of bootlegging to his other accomplishments.

Not on the revolutionist. Every time he opens his mouth and says something—sensible of course—in condemnation of the existing robber system and in favor of the establishment of a Communist society he makes progress and is therefore successful.

If that is clear we shall proceed. In 1908 James Connolly published a Socialist paper called the Harp. It rendered good service. Harps are no longer as popular as of yore so the next effort to reach the Irish workers thru the medium of a paper called the Irish Worker was made by Jim Larkin in 1918. After a few issues that paper gave up the ghost but its spirit still lived until 1923 when the Irish American League published the Irish People and continued it as a weekly for six months. The latter was the most ambitious and successful so far made.

It has often been said that the Irish never begin to fight until they are licked and if it can be said of any group it is true of the few comrades in Chicago who decided to bring forth a monthly magazine called "The Irish People," that will tell the Irish workers in America some things they are not told by their bourgeois, superstitious press. It will tell them about the labor movement, what Gompers is doing and not doing, what William Z. Foster is doing and why he is doing it, why Ireland is not free and how to free it, why the United States Government does not like Soviet Russia and did not recognize the Irish Republic, why they should not support the Democrat and Republican parties and why they should support a Labor Party in fact it will tell them mostly everything that can be read—in other words—in the Voice of Labor. "The Worker," and the Labor Herald.

The editor of the Irish People is T. J. O'Flaherty. M. J. Scanlan, of the Amalgamated Street Carmen's Association, is Business Manager. The publishing address is 1918 Addison St., Chicago, Ill. The subscription is $1.00 a year. Send in a sub.

Among the contributing editors are William F. Dunne, editor of the Butte Bulletin, Michael T. Berry of the Amalgamated Shoe Workers, Donagh Dwyer of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers and several others with long terms of service in the labor movement to their credit.

"UNDERGROUND RADICALISM"

AN OPEN LETTER TO EUGENE V. DEBS

By JOHN PEPPER

Debs has been an opponent of the Workers Party upon some tactical problems. Yet he is nearer to an agreement with its revolutionary principles than he is with the policies and tactics of the Socialist Party in which he holds membership and for which he is now speaking and writing. The whole question of underground parties, tactics, and the putting into effect of revolutionary principles is discussed in this little pamphlet which is addressed in a friendly spirit to Debs, the great warrior.

"FOR A LABOR PARTY"

(Re-issued and enlarged)

By JOHN PEPPER

The second printing of this pamphlet on the most pressing problem confronting American workers consists of 64 pages and is brought up to date. Ten thousand of this pamphlet have been sold. It strikes at the heart of the question of the formation of a labor party by the workers, backed by the organized unions. It keenly analyzes the problem and shows the vital necessity of the workers taking this step.

Socialist Party Convention Rejects the United Front

By JOHN PEPPER

THE UNIQUE SOCIALIST PARTY—AN OPPORTUNIST SECT

The Socialist Party convention was a debacle without equal.

The Socialist Party collapsed ideologically even before the debate. The Socialist Party collapsed as an organization after the vote. It lives today only as an invalid. It is dragging out a miserable existence. The hand-organ can play only a few melodies, for it is itself an invalid. At times it plays the Red Flag, at times the dirge of Hillquit and Berger. But all the melodies sounding are but a pretext for the old cripple to beg his nickels and dimes as dues.

The whole history of the Socialist Party in recent years has shown every thinking worker that the Socialist Party has no program, no organization, no campaigns. This last convention has shown that the Socialist Party hasn't even leaders. It was a pitiful spectacle to see the few delegates without initiative, without thoughts.

The leaders of the Socialist Party—both the right wing and the left wing simply deserted the convention. Hillquit and Berger sailed to Europe. Debs confined himself to a banquet-speech outside of the Convention. Scott Nearing did not participate at all. Only Oneal and Branstetter were present as the representatives of the petty Tammany Hall of the Socialist Party officialdom. It was like a small-town show without stars, with second raters, and even with amateurish supers.

There was not one speech in this convention which attempted to analyse the political and industrial situation in this country. Not a single resolution which attempted to point out the tasks of the working class in the present situation, or at least the role of the Socialist Party. The emptiest Convention of the smallest trade union is more instructive and richer in content than this so-called National Convention of a so-called political workers' party. This Convention has definitely shown that the Socialist Party is a sect which is out of contact with the real political life of the United States, and one of the real needs of the working class. It may sound paradoxical, but it is true nevertheless, that in spite of its opportunism, the Socialist Party is nothing but a sect. We are accustomed to consider opportunism and reformism as maladies of mass parties. But the Socialist Party is a freak—an opportunist sect. In this respect it is a real American product, suitable for Barnum, like the Bearded Lady, the Missing Link, or the Mexican Midget. The Socialist Party of America is the midget among the opportunist parties.

The Socialist Party is an Appendix of the Lower Middle Class

What has this Convention done? What was its biggest achievement? The screaming headline in the New York Call gives the answer: "Socialists Reject Workers' Party United Front." The biggest achievement therefore of this Convention is negative. That is no mere accident. The Socialist Party is not a single positive answer to the needs of the working class. The Socialist Party has no answer to the capitalist offensive for the open shop. The recent big mergers in industry are no problem for the Socialist Party. The Socialist Party is not interested in the sufferings of the farmers. The Socialist Party does not dare to notice the great preparedness of the army and navy for the next war. The Socialist Party has no answer, whatsoever, to all these flaming and burning questions. These questions did not even exist for the Socialist Party Convention. The only important thing for the Socialist Party was to reject the call of the Workers Party for a United Front in the interest of the working class, and as an answer to the challenge of the capitalists and the preparedness of the government.

But we do not wish to be unjust. The Socialist Party has in fact noticed one question in the rich industrial and political life of America. One single campaign has indeed been launched by the Socialist Party Convention—a campaign for the impeachment of Chief Justice Taft for receiving an annuity of $10,000 from the Carnegie Foundation. Indeed, a big issue! The capitalists are seeking to prolong the hours of work! The Republicans intend to choose the open-shop as the issue for the campaign of 1924! Unscrupulous speculation is raising the cost of living for the workers from day to day! The trade unions will be smashed without amalgamation! In scores of states we have anti-syndicalist and anti-seditious laws! Free speech is nowhere guaranteed for the working-class! The United States government is preparing new intervention in China! And yet the only serious campaign of the Socialist Party is the impeachment of Chief Justice Taft! It is characteristic in the highest degree that the Socialist Party has stolen even this slogan. The campaign against Taft is the possession of the Hearst papers. It was created by the N. Y. American and by other typical yellow expressions of the lower middle class. The S. P. has degraded itself to an ideological appendix of the lower middle class.

The Russian Chief-Command

Why does the Socialist Party reject the United Front with the Workers Party? The Socialist Party has the following string of pretexts. 1.—The Russian chief-command. The Socialist Party says that the Workers Party is being commanded from Moscow by the Russian Communists. That is, of course, ridiculous and untrue. The Communist International is a world-party with a centralized leadership, and has an international discipline. The Workers Party recognizes that discipline. The Russian Party is only one of those 56 parties which compose the Communist International. Of course, it is the greatest and most influential. It has so far been the only Party which has been able to lead the working class to a permanent victory. It sounds especially comical when the Socialist Party of America makes this accusation against us. The S. P. is almost entirely led by Russians—Morris Hillquit, Abraham Cahan, Meyer London, Shiplacoff, Jacob Panken, etc., are all Russian Jews. And if we had to choose between the Russian leadership of New York or the Russian leadership from Moscow, we would rather choose Lenin, Trotsky, Zinoviev, Radek and Bucharin.

Who Is Un-American

The second pretext of the Socialist Party against the United Front with the Workers Party is that the Workers Party is not good enough respectable company. The Workers Party is mainly composed of "damned foreigners," while the Socialist Party is a party of real Americans. The membership figures of the S. P. show that almost half of it consists of foreign language federations, and when we examine more closely the so-called English-speaking elements in the S. P., we see that even these are mainly foreignborn, principally Jewish elements. It is a well-known fact that Jewish workers, and small Jewish business men, even more so, assimilate the language much more quickly than the Polish, Italian or South Slavic workers of the basic industries. We would advise the Socialist Party to try and ask the Ku Klux Klan or the Daughters of the American Revolution whether they believe the Socialist Party to be a genuine American Party. A few months ago at the Cleveland Conference, even the Socialist Party was still ashamed to use the accusation of un-Americanism. A statement of the S. P. delegation at Cleveland says the following. "Nor can we agree with the sentiment that the Workers Party or any other organization should be excluded because it is alleged to be un-American. It ill becomes any member of a labor organization to resort to phrases used by the most reactionary interests in creating prejudice against organized labor." With this statement the Socialist Party directs the strongest criticism against its own degradation.

Against Amalgamation

Those were merely pretexts. Now we should like to speak of the real reasons.

The first real reason against the United Front is the stand of the Socialist Party towards amalgamation. The S. P. is an ally of the Gompers bureaucracy, and is therefore an enemy of amalgamation. The craft unions are no longer sufficiently effective as weapons against the bosses. Even Eugene V. Debs writes in connection with the great strikes of last summer: "The only reason that the brave soldiers who fought these heroic battles against starvation went down to ignominious defeat, thousands of them having been rewarded with the blacklist in addition to their lost jobs, is that they fought under a craft union instead of industrial union standard, and consequently became the prey either of their misleaders or of the designs of their masters and exploiters."

The S. P. Convention has not a word for amalgamation of craft unions into industrial unions, and still less any word against the misleaders of organized labor. The Socialist Party is an ally of the treacherous trade union bureaucracy against the working class, and it must therefore reject the United Front with the Workers Party against the treacherous bureaucracy, in the interest of the working class.

For Cleveland, Against Chicago

The second real reason for the Socialist Party's rejection of the United Front with the Workers Party is the stand of the Socialist Party towards the Labor Party. The Socialist Party, latest at the last Convention of the Labor Party, has definitely withdrawn from the machine of the Cleveland Conference, is in power, and therefore it has to decide between the Cleveland Labor Party. Two decisions of the Convention show with crystal clearness the position of the S. P. One decision is the acceptance of the resolution in the Conference for Progressive Political Action, and the other to reject the invitation to the July 3rd Convention of the Labor Party. Both decisions are equally invalid. They are but a pretext for the old cripple to beg his nickels and dimes as dues.

The Attempt to Sabotage the Labor Party

The Socialist Party says that the Conference for Progressive Political Action means the beginning of a new Labor Party. What do these decisions mean? It is an open betrayal to continue the affiliation with the Conference for Progressive Political Action, and at the same time to boycott the Chicago Convention of July 3rd. The Conference for Progressive Political Action is today abandoned by all militant elements, is nothing but an attempt to hinder the creation of an Independent Labor Party, in favor of the attempts of the La Follette Group to create a lower middle class third party. The July 3rd Convention will mean the first step on a mass-scale to the formation of a real Labor Party. The Conference for Progressive Political Action means the systematic sabotage of the Labor Party. Participation in the July 3rd Chicago Convention means an alliance with all militant elements of the American labor movement. Continuation of affiliation with the Conference for Progressive Political Action means today nothing but an alliance with one part of the reactionary officialdom of the labor movement. The Socialist Party has betrayed the idea of a Labor Party, and for that reason it rejects the United Front with the Workers Party, which conducts a hard struggle for the Labor Party.

An Agent of the Capitalists

The Socialist Party rejects the United Front with the Workers Party because it has degraded itself to an accomplice of the agents of the capitalists. The S. P. is the ally of Gompers who is the worst and most open agent of the capitalists within the labor movement. The S. P. is against amalgamation, that is, it is for the weakening of the trade unions, for the defeat of strikes, for the victory of the bosses. The S. P. is the ally of Johnston and Keating who in turn are the allies of La Follette. The S. P. is therefore an agent of the lower middle class progressives within the ranks of the working class. In Wisconsin, Victor Berger and the entire Socialist Party delegation quite openly in one camp with the middle-class politicians. At the St. Joseph trial against the Communists, the Socialist Party solidarized itself not only with the police agents of the capitalists, but directly with the agents of the Department of Justice. The Socialist Party adopts a resolution for the recognition of Soviet Russia, and solidarizes itself with Abe Cahan's Jewish lies, as much as with the anti-Semitic lies of the N. Y. Herald. The S. P. has no religious or racial prejudices against lies if they are suitable as slander against Soviet Russia. In obstructing the United Front the Socialist Party becomes an agent of the capitalists, because it thereby splits the forces of militant workers, developments of events which only trade unions, checks the defensive of organized labor against the open shop.

And the Socialist Party is an agent of the capitalists not only on a national, but also on an international scale. The S. P. Convention has adopted a resolution which makes possible the union with Scheidemann, Noske, Vandervelde, and Branting, under the Hungarian Social Democracy, with the Polish Socialist Party, and with all other betrayers of the proletarian revolution and bloody executioners of rebelling workers. We believe we have the right to demand a reckoning from all those elements in the Socialist Party who do not belong to the petty Tammany Hall of Hillquit and Berger. Why has Eugene V. Debs not spoken for amalgamation and for the United Front? Why has he not defended the Russian Workers Republic against the shameless Cahan? Why did not Scott Nearing lift his voice against the betrayal of the Labor Party? Why did not James Maurer defend the resolution for participation in the Chicago July 3rd Convention, when the Pennsylvania Federation of Labor of which he is president agreed to participate in that Convention? How could those who favored an International without social peace, in the end vote for unity with war-time ministers, lackeys of royalty and bloodhounds?

The United Front For All That!

But notwithstanding the betrayal on the part of the Socialist Party leaders and the Socialist Party Convention, the Workers Party still seeks to establish the United Front with the workers in and around the Socialist Party. In spite of all efforts of S. P. leaders, we already have the United Front with parts of the rank and file of the S. P. We have the United Front with the Italian Federation of the S. P. in the struggle against Fascism. We have the United Front with Socialist Party workers in California within the Labor Party. We have the United Front with S. P. workers in Pittsburgh in the defense of persecuted Communists. We had the United Front with S. P. workers of Philadelphia in the May Day celebration.

We still seek the United Front because it is indispensable in the defense-struggle of the workers against capitalists.

Two Falsifications

The answer of the S. P. Convention to the Workers Party states an untruth when it says that Communists want the United Front only as a maneuver to show up the Socialist Party leaders. And it is a deliberate falsification when James Oneal, chairman of the resolutions committee, attempts to array Communist documents against us. He claims that the December 1921 theses of the Executive of the Communist International. We demand of James Oneal to quote this phrase or even a similar thought in the text. He will not succeed. This thought has been falsely put into the theses of the Communist International by him or by his friends. The second falsification concerns a letter by Karl Radek. The reply of the resolutions Committee of the S. P. Convention to the Workers Party says, "It is also a matter of common knowledge" that Radek has written a letter in which he says that the United Front "was only a tactical maneuver." That is also a fraud. Radek has never written such a letter. It is incumbent upon James Oneal to make public the text of this letter. If not, he and his committee will appear as miserable forgers in the eyes of every honest worker.

The very contrary is the truth. The Comintern has always declared that the tactic of the United Front is no stratagem for us, but is the mightiest weapon against the capitalists and the only rescue for the unity of the trade unions. Zinoviev, chairman of the Communist International, said at the Fourth Congress:

"Therefore, comrades, our tactic of the United Front is not presented only as a strategy against our enemies. Of course, we have the full right and the duty, to evolve strategical plans against our enemies; but the United Front is presented because of the whole historical situation, because of the whole situation of capitalism, because of its economic and political situation, and because of the situation within the labor movement. If what I have told you concerning the policy of the Second and Second-and-a-Half Internationals is correct, if it is true that for the future they are preparing a deliberate systematic splitting of the trade unions and the working class, our tactic of the United Front results unavoidably therefrom. It follows that for these reasons and for many other reasons we must begin a counter-effort against this plan of the Second International. And that is the tactic of the United Front." (The speech from which this quotation is taken appeared in the German book, "The Communist International on the Advance," G. Zinoviev, Karl Hoym, Hamburg, 1923. The excerpt is on page 62.)

And we in America can add: We want amalgamation, we want to resist the open-shop, we want the Labor Party, and therefore we will continue to struggle for the United Front of all the workers.

Newark, N. J., for Labor Party

Newark, N. J., members of the Workers Party should attend a general membership meeting to be held May 28, at the Labor Lyceum, 704 So. 14th St., at 8 p. m., to work out plans of sending a delegate to Chicago to the Farmer-Labor Convention for the formation of a National Labor Party, July 3,

"RUSSIA TO-DAY, 1923!"

By JAMES P. CANNON

Russia To-day, 1923! is just the sort of a little propaganda pamphlet to give to the hard-boiled opponent of Soviet Russia. It is more than this; it is a convincing propaganda pamphlet for Communism. Comrade Cannon, Chairman of the Workers Party and for seven months a fraternal delegate of the Workers Party to the Executive Committee of the Communist International, gives authentic information on the present economic conditions in Russia and the strength of the Soviet Government. Subjects dealt with are "Labor Unions in Soviet Russia," "Reconstruction," "The Red Army," etc.

"THE AMERICAN FOREIGN-BORN WORKERS"

By C. S. WARE

Who are the Americans? From what countries have they come? What percentage take an active part in American politics? What relation do they hold to the native-born American workers? What part have they played in the development of American industries and the enrichment of their owners? These questions and many others are answered in this pamphlet. Facts are interestingly supplemented with statistics and colored charts.

Even Potato Peelers Join Plaza Strike

By SELMAR SCHOCKEN

A strike of the bricklayers for a flat wage of $12 a day and a two-years' contract added to the difficulties of the New York Building Trades bosses, who brought them to the realization of the fact that their efforts at jollying the union officials along with conferences had evidently failed with the rank and file.

The Bricklayers who, thru the bonus system, have actually earned $12 per day for some time, had notified the employers in April that from May first, $12 would be the basic wage. Conferences failed to agree on the proposition. The strike of the Bricklayers which resulted may affect many thousands of other building trades workers who would automatically be idle if the struggle lasts for two weeks.

Cooks Strike at Hotel Plaza

Simultaneously with the Bricklayers, the Hotel Workers joined the movement for general wages and conditions. Just as the fashionable luncheon throng was finding seats around the palm-strewn dining room of the Hotel Plaza, on Monday afternoon, a little procession of cooks, pastry experts, bakers, potato peelers, ice cream makers and various other useful and necessary kitchen employees, eighty in number, made its way out of the service entrance on 58th street.

To the last man they organized and became members of the Hotel Workers Branch of the Amalgamated Food Workers, a thoroly progressive organization, during the recent big drive which netted the union 1,500 new members within the last three months.

Their wages range from $17 to $35 a week, and they demand an increase of $3 for all workers now earning less than $25 and of $2 for those receiving above $25. In a most cheerful spirit they all marched to the Union Headquarters at 133 West 21st Str., where they were received by Secretary M. Obermeier and a staff of well trained organizers who will concentrate all efforts to the fight which is to result in a general clean up of the entire Hotel Industry of New York.

Metal Workers Out in L. I. C.

Another progressive and militant organization, the Amalgamated Metal Workers, has begun to utilize its drive for the organization of the unorganized for the improvement of working conditions in the Metal Industry.

They started this movement at the Ford Instrument Company in Long Island City, where they demand the 44-hour week with the 48-hour pay.

Every single employe of this factory joined the strike, and the Company has not been able to find scabs to replace the 300 workers who walked out. A general organization campaign directed from the Headquarters of the A. M. W. at 51 E. 10th St., is utilizing all the strikers who are distributing literature and help in every way to materialize the slogan: The 44-hour Week and a Living Wage.

"Fifth Year" Movie Should Make Big Hit

By JOHN DALE.

Another "movie" has come out of Soviet Russia. It is called "The Fifth Year" and ought to bid big for unbounded enthusiasm from the greeted the showing of "Russia Thru the Shadows."

The first exhibition was given "The Fifth Year" film in a studio near Times Square, with numerous press representatives present. These extended their whole-hearted praise, as well as a few suggestions to William F. Kruse, of the Friends of Soviet Russia, who is arranging the film for showing in this country.

"Russia Thru the Shadows" grips hardest upon the emotions when it shows the first long train of tractors from the United States turning over the soil in the valley of the Volga for the new harvest, not only after the civil war and intervention, but after the great suffering of the famine.

"The Fifth Year," the crucial year in the life of the Soviet Republic, as it is reviewed in this essentially news film, also has its great emotional climax. It comes when we see the children, the millions of children as one visualizes them, the hungry, orphaned and homeless children of the war, brought home to the realization of the fact that their efforts at jollying the union officials along with conferences had evidently failed with the rank and file.

The Bricklayers who, thru the bonus system, have actually earned $12 per day for some time, had notified the employers in April that from May first, $12 would be the basic wage. Jane Cowl Typifies the New Woman in "Juliet"

It is easy to understand why "Juliet" has eclipsed any other production of Shakespeare's tragedy of Juliet" by its long run at the Henry Miller Theatre.

Miss Jane Cowl is truly a great artist. She has achieved one of the greatest bit of acting I have ever seen her do. There is such rare beauty and richness that one is transfixed by the dream like wonder of her voice and person.

But it is not only her person and capable rendering of the part that makes this play stand out. It is a new tone that she injects into this play. Juliet thru Miss Cowl typifies the new woman, the girl of courage and action. She knows what she wants and goes out to get it. We admire her strength of character and we love her, for her sweetness and beauty. Thus Juliet strikes a responsive chord in us as never before.

The rest of the cast are all good. Rollo Peters makes a very romantic, manly and courageous Romeo. Dennis King as Mercutio, kinsman to the Prince of Verona is excellent. Altho his part is a small one, nevertheless it goes far towards making the play. The scenery adds tremendously to the artistic beauty of this production. It is one of the plays this season that one should not miss.

He sailed last Saturday on the Olympic for Salzburg, Leopoldskron, in Salzburg, Austria, accompanied by his manager, Rudolf Kommer, to proceed with plans not only for his Summer seasons in Salzburg and Vienna but also for his first American season.

Back Labor Party Drive Urges Howat

By WILLIAM W. WEINSTONE

Alexander Howat, militant trade union leader of the Kansas miners, fervent opponent to the Kansas Court law caused his imprisonment by the authorities of Kansas, and his expulsion from the United Mine Workers by the reactionary Prexy John L. Lewis machine, addressed the New York workers on the conditions of the American worker, at the New Star Casino.

Howat forcefully portrayed the pitiful condition in which the American workers find themselves after the war. "During the war the representatives of the government promised a new day for Labor when the war was over. We were told of all kinds of promises. But what happened? On Armistice Day in 1918, we were told that the war was over. But in 1919 when the miners demanded an increase in wages to realize some of those promises and to meet the high cost of living, we were told by the employers and the representatives of the government that the war was not yet over. "These exploiters of the miners and of the people, for they had, charged excessive prices for their coal, insisted that the war was not yet over. Nor is the war yet over, but the war that is on today is the war of the working class against the exploiters and against their representatives that make the oppressive laws of this country in the interests."

In 1919 the miners went on strike, the government took the part of the coal operators against the workers, said Howat. "Every striker in Kansas would have kept away from the mines had not Lewis called off the strike with the declaration "we can't fight the government."

After relating the experiences of Labor since the war, Howat drew the conclusion that "Labor must no longer rely upon promises of the officials of the government, but must depend on their own power to right their wrongs. "The time has come for the great working class of this country to consolidate their forces and form one mighty political party of Labor." The time is here when the policy of rewarding our friends and punishing our enemies must be thrown overboard by the American workers. Let us finish the whole damn bunch of them! The July 3rd Convention of the Labor Party must be made the turning point in the history of the American worker, and the beginning of the new period. It is the duty of every worker to have his Union attend the Convention so that there be gathered at this Convention the representatives of the organized workers to establish the unity of the workers on the political field."

The other speakers at the meeting were Joseph Manley, of the Trade Union Educational League, and I. S. Myerscough, secretary of the Progressive Miners League. An appeal on behalf of the locked-out Fayette County, Pa., miners brought in over $350 at the meeting.

Russia Now!

"The Fifth Year of the Russian Revolution," by James P. Cannon. Five cents per copy. Pub. Workers Party, 799 Broadway, New York.

Reviewed by B. T. ALLISON

The most refreshing pamphlet that has been issued on Russia within the blue moon is "The Fifth Year of the Russian Revolution." by Comrade James P. Cannon.

The simple narrative style of the brochure which is in fact a report of the speech delivered by the manager on the Russian workers, its character with the common people, the workers and peasants, it long but winning battle against the forces of the capitalist world are related, as is also the educational work of the Soviet Government in its ranks.

The expropriation of private property is brought vividly, so vividly to one's mind, that one realizes what it means to the Russian workers. In the amusing anecdote between the author and a worker riding on the Moscow street railways—formerly owned by Belgian capitalists and for which the Conference at Genoa was then seeking to recover.

In reading the final chapter on International Communism one feels the strength of the forces working for an International of workers and the necessity of consecration to attain it. The little pamphlet deserves a wide circulation especially among the opponents of Soviet Russia.

Socialist Party National Convention Delegates Remain Silent in Face of Attack on Soviet Russia

Cahan Rages in Attack on Soviet Rule

By H. M. WICKS

A compilation of the most loathesome back stairs gossip against Soviet Russia, emanating from the journalistic houses of prostitution of the entire capitalist world, combined with the vapid ravings of his own distraught mind, constituted the keynote speech at the opening of the 11th National Convention of the Socialist Party in New York City, Saturday, May 10.

Abraham Cahan, notorious Bolshevik baiter and editor of the Jewish (Socialist) Daily Forward, delivered this opening address in place of Morris Hillquit who is now in Europe.

Cahan, altho not a delegate, was introduced by Algernon Lee as "that old, loved and trusted fighting Socialist comrade," and immediately launched in a tirade that was so acrimonious, intemperate and obviously false that the majority of the delegates were stunned.

Only the immediate satellites of Cahan—the schibblers of the New York Call and others who owe their existence as ornaments of the Socialist Party to the Hillquit machine—appeared pleased.

Otto Branstetter, the national secretary of the Socialist Party, smirked in the most cringing and servile manner, while Lee, as chairman grimaced like a trained baboon at each barrage of hillingsgate hurled at the leaders of the World Revolution.

Defames Lenin and Trotsky

Prefacing his attack with the declaration that the Bolshevik revolution was at first an experiment and that he was anxious to see it carried out even tho it was under the leadership of Communists, Cahan first asserted that most of the leaders of the Russian Revolution were sincere and then proceeded to contradict himself in the most flagrant manner.

Stooping to the gutter for epithets of degradation to hurl at Communism, Cahan declared that Trotsky is a "bombastic windbag" and that Lenin is a physical wreck, and that his present physical condition "is undoubtedly due to his earlier complete moral collapse." Then, in order that no one could mistake his cowardly attack upon Lenin, the mountebank, Cahan, screeched deliriously that the great leader of the Bolshevik revolution was a "muddlehead lunatic."

In almost any gathering of workingmen on earth this vile assault would have been the signal for vigorous protests from at least a part of the audience, but in this Socialist Party convention the few workers sat aghast, scarcely believing that one professing to speak for the working class could sink so low, while the petty bourgeois elements remained motionless, refusing to respond to Cahan's obvious pause for applause.

"Did you see in the papers about that $13,000,000 fund sent out by the Bolshevik Government to corrupt the world?" asked Cahan. Then he recited the latest piece of capitalist propaganda going the rounds against Soviet Russia. Bukharin, who is said to have asked for a report on expenditures, was denounced as a "simple minded fellow—a mere baby in intelligence."

Karl Radek, according to Cahan, is an adventurer who has a shady past in various European Parties and cannot be considered an honest man in any sense of the word.

Gregory Zinoviev, president of the Executive Committee of the Communist International, is the "rotten egg" of the whole Communist movement. "He shot $00 in Petrograd" and "some say he has deposited enormous sums in a bank in Switzerland for future use."

In dealing with the Communist movement in America he again repeated the infamous lie to the effect that the Friends of Soviet Russia, the only working class organization in the United States effectively fighting the famine in Russia, are a gang of thieves and that the treasurer has now "scedaddled", and that hundreds of thousands of dollars were stolen outright. Cahan shamelessly boasted that his activity was responsible for the failure of the tool drive of the Friends of Soviet Russia, an admission that, if true, brands him as more contemptible than any other capitalist hireling on earth. The creature not only deliberately conspired to enforce perpetual starvation upon the helpless children of the famine region in Russia, but has the audacity to boast of it before a conference professing to represent a part of the labor movement in this country.

Admits "S. P." Failure

As Cahan raved on, he began to perceive that his remarks were making but little impression, so he glared at the delegates, few in number and scattered about the hall, and shouted that the Socialist Party has failed. "The fact that so few comrades are present is proof that we are a failure." But, in spite of the present failure there is hope for Socialism in the United States today "the same as there was in England 30 years ago." Ignorant of the vast difference in the economic life of Britain of 30 years ago and the highly developed industrialism of the United States today, this charlatan endeavored to explain his weird notion of the creation of political parties. About the only intelligible thing he said was that "we have got to go about it in an Anglo-Saxon manner." Like the balance of the ignoramuses at the head of the Socialist Party this fakir imagines that capitalism here must be overcome in a different manner than elsewhere in the world.

Cahan then defended the British parliamentary leaders, J. Ramsay MacDonald & Co., for dining with the king of England and said that he would welcome the day when the same performance could be repeated in this country. As there are no hereditary kings here in the British sense, Cahan would have to content himself with the spectacle of Victor Berger and Morris Hillquit pirouetting before Warren G. Harding and the First Lady of the Land.

After this digression his disordered mind soon wandered back to his pet aversion, Soviet Russia and he concluded by asserting that a group in Russia had got hold of a good thing and did not want to give it up, as most of them were grafters.

"In dealing with the Communists we must always fight them. Never show them any favors, but knock them on the head." This advice seems to have been followed by the yellow leaders of some of the needle trades unions who employ sluggers and gangsters against the "left" opposition in their own unions.

When he left the platform six of the delegates applauded, the others looking at one another in bewilderment. Especially was the effect upon the out-of-town delegates noticeable. They had never heard anything to equal Cahan's assault upon Soviet Russia even from the most rabid capitalist propagandists.

This outburst, obviously official, coming from one of the foremost figures in the Socialist Party, brands them potential assassins of the working class of the United States. Just as Scheidemann and Ebert in Germany perpetrated outrages against the revolutionary workers that even the Kaiser and his minions shrank from contemplating, so the Hillquits, Bergers, Cahans, Oneals, Lees and others of their ilk in this country brand themselves the vilest of traitors in their verbal assaults upon the vanguard of the working class. Potential assassins of the revolutionary workers but not possessing the power to indulge their aspirations, these scoundrels at the head of the Socialist Party content themselves with repeating and amplifying the propaganda of the British government spy and newspaper correspondent, Frances McCullagh, and the American detective and union smasher, William J. Burns.

Afraid of W. P. Communication

Secretary Otto Branstetter announced that he had a communication from C. E. Rutherford, secretary of the Workers Party, calling for a united front of labor. Instead of reading it he waited for action from the floor. Evidently the machinery was not in good working order, for after a painful pause Branstetter announced that the document was rather lengthy. Finally Oneal came to the rescue with a motion to refer it to the resolutions committee. Then came a discussion on International relations. Under this head were two propositions submitted on the agenda. One that the delegates to the International Congress at Hamburg be instructed to vote in favor of unity of Socialist and Trade Union forces of the world. The second that the delegates be instructed to support the reunion of Socialist forces in one International on the condition (1) that no party be admitted unless it specifically repudiates "Burgfrieden" or Social Peace, and (2) that no other condition be imposed.

William Karlin, a lawyer of New York, declared that the amendment to the second proposition to refuse to admit parties unless they repudiate Social Peace would exclude most of the leaders of the Internationals and therefore it was not advisable to adopt it, thereby eliminating these "comrades."

Mayor Hoan Makes Blunder

Mayor Daniel W. Hoan, of Milwaukee, Victor Berger's man "Friday," asserted that both motions should be voted down, because Berger and Hillquit are now in Europe and can be trusted to act in the interest of the party at the Hamburg conference without instructions. "We have decided to hold aloof from all Internationals until one has been created that we can honestly join." The eminent mayor, whose historical achievement was his leading of the jingo Preparedness Parade in Milwaukee in 1916, is so ignorant of the Party to which he belongs that he did not know that the Socialist Party affiliated with the Vienna 2½ International last year.

Oneal declared that "no Socialist could oppose either of the propositions." Since resolutions adopted by the Social Patriots, masquerading as Socialists, in Europe, become meaningless "scraps of paper," the same as the treaties of their various capitalist governments, in times of war, Oneal could safely advocate adoption of both propositions on the agenda, thereby trying to save the face of the Socialist Party before the workers of the United States.

Then came Cameron King of California, with a plea to vote down both propositions. "Why should we, who have less than 12,000 members, presume to tell J. Ramsay MacDonald, and the leaders of the German party what attitude they should take toward their own government. We should not try to dictate to these great men. Why, this proposition would exclude Hjalmar Branting of Sweden, and in case comrade MacDonald entered the British cabinet he would be excluded. I tell you comrades it is unthinkable! We must go in with these men and help them rebuild the International which was so badly shattered during the war."

Cameron King, himself, was a jingo during the late war, and an enemy of the "Huns." Now that the capitalist governments of Germany and the United States are at peace, King, like all other yellow socialists, can again establish diplomatic relations.

Pat Quinlan, of Buffalo, arose and declared that he was quite positive that some of our International Delegates would vote to affiliate with the identical people who murdered Karl Liebknecht and Rosa Luxemburg.

William H. Henry, the Indiana henchman of the Berger-Hillquit combination, informed Mayor Hoan that the Socialist Party was a member of the Vienna 2½ International, which came as a distinct shock to the poo-bah of Milwaukee.

Finally Algernon Lee moved to refer the whole question to the committee on resolutions. It was apparent that the discussion was reaching the danger point. Lee assured the delegates that in his opinion unity between the Second International, with headquarters in London, and the Vienna Union was a foregone conclusion. This motion carried and disposed of this troublesome question for the time being.

When the resolutions committee reported on the question of International relations, it rejoiced, in a carefully worded statement, at the prospect of unity of the Second International and the Vienna 2½ International. It declared that such unity should be based upon the principles of the class struggle, carefully avoiding reference to the question of "Burgfrieden", or Social Peace, that aroused so much discussion on the first day. Thus with the adoption of a meaningless and ambiguous demand for recognition of the principle of the "class struggle" the question of affiliation with Vandervelde, War Minister to the King of Belgium, and with Scheidemann, Ebert and other assassins of the working class, the way is paved for the Socialist Party to again enter the ranks of the International of the Great Betrayal.

Russian "Political Prisoners"

William M. Feigenbaum, one of the writers on the New York Call, introduced a resolution demanding "freedom of political prisoners in Soviet Russia." Feigenbaum declared that the Socialists of America must demand freedom of speech, press and assembly in Soviet Russia and protest emphatically against the "merciless persecution of our comrades" of the Social Revolutionary Party. He buttressed his remarks with quotations from the lying statistics furnished by the Berlin propaganda bureau of the Allied White Guards, which is under the management of Victor Tchernoff, formerly a member of the Kerensky cabinet in Russia.

O'Toole of Maryland, in a plea against the adoption of the resolution, said that in case it was adopted the Workers Party would take away the rest of the membership of the Socialist Party in Baltimore, his home town. He referred to the fact that the convention had declared in a previous session that the enemies of Russia "were our enemies," but that if that resolution were adopted, as a matter of decency and to keep the record clear, the convention would have to repudiate its earlier declaration. "Can we afford to place ourselves in the same class with the capitalist press in its attacks upon Russia?" asked O'Toole.

Finally James Oneal again came to the rescue with a motion that it be referred back to the resolutions committee for redrafting, so that the language of Feigenbaum could be moderated, while maintaining the counter-revolutionary sense of the thing.

Cannon Tells Twin Cities About Russia

By NORMAN H. TALLENTIRE
Organizer, District No. 9

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn. — The visit of James P. Cannon, National Chairman of the Workers Party, to Minneapolis and Saint Paul brought out three of the best meetings that have been held in the Twin Cities for many months.

The tense and close interest given the speaker during his talk gave evidence of the fact that the interest of the Workers of America in the struggles of the Workers Republic is not abated. The clear and logical explanation which Comrade Cannon gave of the workings of the New Economic Policy was listened to with close attention throuout, punctuated by bursts of applause, and approval as the speaker drew a picture of the steady and sure advance of the Proletarian state in the world, as well as in internal affairs.

Cannon made no attempt to gloss over or evade the suffering and privations of the Russian masses during five years of Revolution, but explained clearly the fact that Russia after her period of travail is now emerging from the shadows and is on the road to still greater power and strength.

The listeners were eager to hear he details of the "NEP", and after the conclusion of the lecture kept the speaker answering question after question in respect to the new development. The impression left by the speaker was one of renewed hope and confidence in the final success of the Russian workers in their struggle with World Capitalism, and also instilled new enthusiasm into the local comrades who are carrying on the work of organization in the Twin Cities.

The lecture on the Third (Communist) Internationale was also followed closely by an interested audience seeking first-hand information as to the workings of the organization which at present time is leading the world proletarians in their struggle against wage slavery.

The Workers Party organizations will undoubtedly benefit materially as they have already, benefitted spiritually, as a result of the visit of their National Chairman to the Twin Cities, as well as the benefits derived from the lectures and discussions.

Tallentire and Cannon in Duluth

DULUTH, Minn.—The Workers Party units of Superior and Duluth have arranged an entertainment with Norman H. Tallentire, at present organizer for District 9, as speaker. His subject will be: Why a Labor Party in the United States? The first meeting will be held at the Workers Hall, Duluth, June 5, 8 p. m., and the second in Superior, Workers Hall, June 10, also 8 p. m.

James P. Cannon gave a lecture here on "Russia Today," to an eager audience of 250 people. People among themselves after the meeting were talking like this: He is the best speaker that has been in this territory and that the Workers Party will surely gain prestige among the masses of the workers with men of his type.

The trade union movement here is disgusted, due to the inability of the unions to protect the workers against the open shop attacks. The well known blacklisting system has been operating efficiently and the militant workers have been torn from the ranks, either to leave the place or else become submissive. What else can you expect in a steel trust town?

United Front at Boston

A United Front May Day Celebration was held under the auspices of the C. C. C. of Boston, Tuesday, May 1, 1923, at Lorimer Hall, Tremont Temple, Boston. Robert Minor was the principal speaker. Other speakers included: A. Konikow, in Russian; I. Friedman, in Jewish, and C. Samprucci in Italian. The hall was crowded to capacity. The collection amounted to $345.22. When expenses were deducted there remained a net profit of $236.87. That sum was divided equally among the four defense committees, namely, Labor Defense Council, National Defense Committee, Sacco-Vanzetti Defense Committee and the Merrick Defense Committee, Haverhill, Mass.

CANNON MEETINGS

Monday, May 28, 8 P. M., Springfield, Ill. Hall to be announced later.
Wednesday, May 30, 8 P. M., Christopher, Ill. Open House.
Wednesday, May 30, 8 P. M., Ziegler, Ill., Peoples Theatre.
Thursday, May 31, 8 P. M., St. Louis, Labor Lyceum, 823 N. Garrison St.

New Attacks Show Russia's Need of Help

(By F. S. R. Press Service).

The trend of the Russian news during the last month has emphasized powerfully the necessity for Russia's economic rebuilding. In terms of actual bloodshed and threats of war the enemies of Russia have demonstrated recently that they are sharpening their fangs to swoop down once more upon the first Workers Republic in the world.

To withstand their attacks it is essential that Russia's industries be rehabilitated, especially her agriculture. The establishment of Russia's farming on a modern basis, the abundance of bread that it will mean, would make the country comparatively independent of its neighbors and certainly better prepared to meet intervention should it be forced.

What is more, with Russia's agriculture on a firm basis, the capitalist countries will be less likely to initiate wars.

This is the gist of the appeal that is advanced by the Friends of Soviet Russia in the present nationwide campaign for tractors to be sent to the Soviet Republic. In the latest developments of world affairs it points out the complete justification of the alternative which it places before the American workers: "Cannons or Tractors?" Specifically it calls attention to certain events as an index to the entire situation:

"England is ready to break trade relations with Russia and has sent ships to support her threat.

"At Lausanne a member of the Fascisti murdered Vorovsky, the Soviet representative.

"The Swiss government expels Ahrens, Soviet delegation attache.

"In America some reactionary forces pass resolutions condemning Russia and others forbid the urging of trade relations with and recognition of Soviet Russia.

"The Friends of Soviet Russia justly asks in face of these developments—Which shall we send to Russia cannons or tractors?

"We propose to send twenty tractors as our immediate answer."

Contributions to the tractors drive should be sent to the national office of the organization, 201 West 13th Street, New York.

The Internationalism of Mr. Gompers

Samuel Gompers, head of the American Federation of Labor, has again shown his brand of internationalism by his statement in reply to the plea of the International Federation (Amsterdam) of Trade Unions for a general strike against war.

This is the same Gompers who urges affiliation by the United States government with Woodrow Wilson's League of Nations and supports President Harding in his campaign to lure this country into the so-called World Court of Justice, an off-shoot o "The League."

Gompers is for internationalism for the capitalist ruling class Any international action that will help the world banking cliques gets the approval of the present head of the A. F. of L.

But for even the gesture against war, proposed by the Yellow Amsterdamers, Gompers has nothing but rebuffs and denunciation. He declares that:

"Those who think that it is possible to make effective a genera and all-inclusive declaration that in the event of any war, no matter how defensive, there should be an immediate general strike o workers in all nations are living in an unreal world, and, further more, are seeking to promote a doctrine that it is neither possible nor desirable to promote successfully."

These sound like the words of a big capitalist fighting labor not those of an official of labor. Discussion is permissible as to the extent and possibilities of world labor action. To say that such action is not possible is to confess belief in the complete failure o the working class struggle. To say that such action is not desirable is to plead guilty to the charge of being a "Labor Lieutenant" of the capitalist class. Thus, when Gompers says that world solidarity of labor is "neither possible nor desirable," he reads himself completely out of the labor movement, and takes his place as a faithful tool in the ranks of the "open shop," anti-labor bosses.

We are certain that large sections of the American labor movement are conscious of Gompers' active hostility to labor's rea interests. Additional numbers of workers are waking up to the ever more hostile anti-labor role Gompers is playing. And in this awakening is born the strength being aroused in support of the campaigns for Amalgamation, for a Labor Party, for the Organization of the Unorganized, and for world labor solidarity under the standards of the Red International of Labor Unions.

Gompers is himself dealing in unrealities if he fails to take notice of this rising tide.

Bryan's attendance at the Presbyterian General Assembly at Indianapolis, Ind., has been just one defeat after another. The churchmen even refused to endorse his anti-evolution campaign. But "Bill" Bryan can be depended on to discover another issue, albeit not a winning one.

A Victory for British Labor

The most militant section of the British labor movement has won an important victory in the King's appointment of Stanley Baldwin, rather than Lord Curzon, as premier to succeed Bonar Law, resigned.

It was only the powerful threat of labor, politically and industrially, that halted the decision to put Curzon, the King's foreign secretary, a die-hard foe of Soviet Russia, into power.

Curzon's attack on the Workers' Republic, in his 10-day ultimatum, bolstered with fabrications of falsehood such as only the British foreign ministry is capable of, was to be only the beginning. Curzon, if called to the head of the government, planned new aggressions against Soviet Rule.

The London Herald, the labor daily, had exposed warlike preparations, consisting of the dispatch of light cruisers and mine sweepers to Russian waters. The Daily Herald had been active in revealing the plots of British militarists ever since the manufactured protest of church and state dignitaries, on behalf of Butchkavitch, was sent to Moscow.

The Daily Herald showed that Great Britain was preparing for something more than a mere diplomatic rupture with Soviet Russia. When it made that charge it spoke for the 143 Labor Party members of the British House of Commons and for the 6,000,000 organized workingmen and women of Great Britain.

Soviet Russia can get along without British recognition. The Workers' Republic can even forego trade and financial relations with London. Soviet Rule can even stand against British imperialism and all its Paris allies. But it will mean another tremendous sacrifice for the workers and peasants of Russia.

But Curzon has been rejected. The selection of Stanley Baldwin indicates that the King's government is on the defensive. We can depend on the British workers to maintain their offensive. The Curzon 10-day ultimatum will be jammed down the throats of British reaction. Krassin will stay in London. All of which should be an inspiration for the workers of the United States to push Washington into recognition of the Soviet Republic, that must be given every possible opportunity to breathe, and live, and grow to new strength.

Now it is 57,000 German marks to the dollar, and still there are German "Socialists," and some in other lands, who have hopes for the German capitalist republic.

Do you agree with us? Then join the Workers Party!

A Defeat for Nonpartisanism

The complete futility of drifting back into the old parties is an invitation to defeat and disaster, has been amply proven once more since the appointment by the alleged radical, Gov. William E. Sweet, democrat, of Colorado, of Charles B. Adams, conservative corporation lawyer, as U. S. Senator to fill the vacancy caused by the death of the republican Senator Dr. Nicholas.

Gov. Sweet was elected as a result of the "protest" wave that swept the country at the 1922 elections. His election was heralded as one of the great achievements of the Gompers-La Follette-Keating "non-partisan" policy that fights the creation of a real Labor Party of the workers and farmers.

Even as late as its current issue, the Locomotive Engineers' Journal, May 1923, proclaims "Governor Sweet, a progressive Democrat, who is one of the most independent and liberal men elected last November," who will "doubtless appoint a progressive Democrat to the senatorial office."

Edward Keating, democrat, former congressman from Colorado, now editor of "Labor", the railroad organ published at Washington, D. C., ran all the way home to Denver, in the hopes of having the senatorial mantle fall on him. It was Keating who led the fight at the Cleveland Conference for Progressive Political Action, against the admission of the Workers Party delegates, and against the building of an all-inclusive Labor Party.

But Keating's ambitions have fallen by the wayside. Gov. Sweet has not only remained true to the democratic party, but to the reaction within that party that controls its every action. Keating's Gov. Sweet appointed the lawyer of the Santa Fe Railroad, Adams, who is in favor of the anti-labor Esch-Cummins law, who urges American participation in the Black Capitalist International, the League of Nations, and takes a stand for an increased militarism and navalism. Thus the much-heralded "balance of power" in the U. S. Senate swings in favor of Wall Street and the "open shoppers."

It is hoped that the workers and farmers of Minnesota will take these things into consideration as they prepare for the special election to choose a successor for the late Knute Nelson. There will be a primary on June 18, an election July 16. A start was made in the right direction last November when Henrik Shipstead was elected Senator on the Farmer-Labor ticket. It would be a criminal betrayal of their own class interests for the exploited in the cities and on the land in Minnesota, to allow La Follette, Keating and their like to persuade them to run a "respectable" candidate on one of the two old party tickets. There must be nothing short of a workers' and farmers' candidate on a class ticket.

The Lowest Level Yet Reached

The declarations of the 11th National Convention of the Socialist Party mark a new and lower level reached by this anti-revolutionary organization in its downward plunge into the black pit of reaction.

The developing tendencies within the Socialist Party were clearly revealed by the decision to trail with the Gompers-La Follette-Keating-Johnston brand of old party politics and to sabotage the organization of a real Labor Party.

But the lowest level in the descension of the Socialist Party was also registered by the convention's approval of the speech of Abraham Cahan, editor of the Jewish (Socialist) Daily Forward. Cahan's position is now well known. His endorsement and publication of the Frances McCullaugh articles dropped him into the secret conspiratory midst of the Russian counter-revolutionary emigres in this and other countries.

Even Boris Brasol, head of Russian (counter-revolutionary) National Society, in this country, charged by Norman Hapgood in the International Magazine with furnishing Henry Ford with his forged and manufactured propaganda against the Jews, will applaud Cahan's speech before the Socialist National Convention Thus Cahan again, even as in the publication of the articles of the Jew-baiting McCullaugh, becomes the enemy of the workers of his own race. And his views are endorsed by the Socialist Party.

It is inconceivable that the organized "Socialists" should find any lower depths into which to descend. But, no doubt, they will even discover these. Hillquit and Berger are in Hamburg getting lessons from the reactionists of the Second (Socialist) International. They will in turn transmit these lessons to those who are still content to linger in an organization that conducts a major attack against the first Workers' Republic, the Russian Soviet Government; against the Communist International, and against its American section, the Workers Party.

That was and is the policy of Cahan's Forward. It has been accepted as the editorial policy of the New York Call. It has been indorsed by the Socialist Party in National Convention. Scheidemann himself could ask for nothing more.

A Vesuvius Shakes Fascism

Our American Fascisti of the U. S. Chamber of Commerce and the National Association of Manufacturers will be very sorry to learn of the troubles confronting their friend, Mussolini, and his dictatorship in Italy.

Black gloom will seize upon Judge Elbert H. Gary, of the Steel Trust, as he hears of the "heavy defections," in the words of the New York Times, suffered by the Mussolini terror, that Gary claims ought to be copied in the United States.

For the Mussolini ship is sinking. This was shown by the recent rebellions within his own cabinet. It has been made very apparent again by wholesale desertions from the Fascisti ranks in the Neapolitan district. Even the censored reports from Rome indicate that a Vesuvius eruption has hit the White Guard ranks of modern capitalism's anti-labor Napoleon.

"The premier is greatly grieved," announces the N. Y. Times, in recording the feelings of Mussolini. In such terms did Marc Antony speak at the bier of the dead Julius Caesar.

We cannot yet say that the Fascisti Dictatorship is dead. But it is dying. It was and is a dictatorship of the minority, of the capitalist few over the many, who even imported bull fights from Spain to amuse the discontented multitudes, even as Nero and others tried in the centuries gone. But the promises of Mussolini have not been kept. The Italian lire, only in lesser degree, like the German mark, keeps falling in value. The demands of the Italian workers are not met.

The crumbling of the Italian terror will proceed, slowly perhaps but surely. The Fascist dictatorship will be supplanted by the rule of the workers, the rule of the majority, that will triumph because it will be supported by the many.

This Week

By JAY LOVESTONE

It is amusing to see the scramble among the presidential aspirants of new dodges to be reached down into the depths to get the golden egg and drag out the "Alexander Hamilton" that he has often delivered before going to the White House, and read it off as the unveiling of a statue in Washington dedicated to the aristocratic and conservative colonist, Alexander Hamilton. This champion of the colonial aristocracy must have turned in his grave as Harding denounced "factions" and deplored "class rule." Hamilton was the mouthpiece of the money class and gloried in it. Harding's denunciation of class rule now is a confession that the dictatorship of dollars is slipping, and that there is real danger that the class rule of the bankers and landlords will be wiped out forever thru the rule of the workers; otherwise, why does Harding worry so much about it?

Gompers Investigates Radical Press

Sam Gompers and his executive council of the American Federation of Labor have no funds to organize the workers of the country. But additional funds of the federation have been spent to work upon another prong on the militant press of the American working class.

This dirty job has been carried on by Chester M. Wright, renegade Socialist, who graduated thru the New York Call and New York Tribune, to the head of Gompers private propaganda service.

This Gompers' slauth declares, "There is employer propaganda; but this is of comparatively small importance and small volume."

The brain that reached that conclusion feels itself qualified to declare that Communist publicity is hurting the labor movement. That viewpoint does not go farther than the Gompers' offices in the A. F. of L. Building at Washington, D. C. The workers generally know that their worst enemy is the bosses' daily press, and that their most powerful ally is the press of the Communist movement. Let Gompers take a straw vote of the workers and find out.

Frayne Gets a Medal

Hugh Frayne, organizer of the American Federation of Labor, and bosom friend of Sam Gompers, is wearing a "distinguished service medal" as a result of his services in the late war. He didn't go to France. He just remained at home, forged all sorts of documents for workers, and "rendered distinguished service" on the War Industries Board, thus aiding nobly in Wall Street's bloody slaughter.

The same newspapers that tell of Frayne's heroic sacrifice and its reward, report an address by Dr. W. F. Lorenz, director of the Wisconsin Psychiatric Institute, before the National Conference of Social Work, in Washington, D. C., to the effect that 20,000 ex-soldiers are now serving terms in American prisons, "largely as the result of unemployment and physical and mental injuries due to the war."

Hugh Frayne is very proud of his medal. His self-admiration no doubt compels him to display it at every opportunity. He is conveniently deaf to the execrations of the worker ex-soldiers in prison because he, with labor's reactionary officialdom, betrayed America's working class during the war.

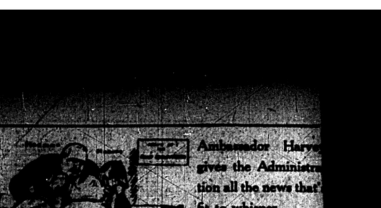
He Gave Bread Away

Clarence Saunders, head of the Piggly Wiggly stores thought he could fight the great chain of Atlantic and Pacific Tea Stores. In a price competition he gave bread away free, in Chicago, for a day, being compelled to withdraw his offer because the hungry throngs nearly tore down the buildings housing his stores.

Now the financial pages report that Saunders is disposing of his 97 Piggly Wiggly stores to the National Tea Co., and the consolidation of "tea and coffee stores" advances another step. Saunders was compelled to sell or face bankruptcy. Capitalist competition is a game of the big fish eating the smaller fry. The organized workers and farmers must become the biggest fish of all, conquering the whole capitalist system and converting it to their uses. Be until then, will bread be really within the reach of all.

Don't Throw This Paper Away Pass It on to Your Neighbor



"Hideous Crime", "Miscarriage of Justice" Two Views of the Conviction of Ruthenberg

Edmund R. Brumbaugh, in an editorial, "Ruthenberg Is Ready?," in the Mid-west Labor News, Official Organ of the Nebraska Federation of Labor, Omaha Central Labor Union and the Women's Union Label League, writes:

Charles E. Ruthenberg is guilty, says a jury in Michigan—guilty of that strange, new crime that came out of the war and post-war hysteria—"criminal syndicalism". And so he becomes liable to a heavy fine and long imprisonment.

An apostle of violence, an advocate of anarchy, a prompter of chaos stands Charles E. Ruthenberg before a stupid world.

Yet no one who has seen and heard the man, who has watched him in action, who has a little sympathetic insight into his purposes, can view such a verdict favorably. Cool, capable, earnest, logical, he is anything but a menace to society. He talks like a professor, he argues like a master of debate, and his communications to his comrades are models of restraint and remarkable exhibitions of knowledge and of confidence.

Then why such a verdict? Back of the first cause, a jury with the minds of fretful, frightened children, are other causes, close to the heart of things, intimately joined with the fundamental wrongs of the social order.

For one thing, "Ruthenberg has both education and guts," as someone has expressed it more truthfully than elegantly. He knows, and knowledge is power. He fears nothing—another aspect of power. Such a man is dangerous to his enemies. The enemies of Ruthenberg are afraid to meet him in fair, open encounter. They cannot hope to argue him down. They invoke the law, law made largely for the selfish designs of a small ruling class, and all the forces of the law, judges and juries and jailors and policemen, are enlisted to drive him into a living death. For Ruthenberg represents a principle, and that principle is odious to the exploiters of labor and the enemies of liberty.

One does not need to be a Communist to be aroused at this miscarriage of justice. One does not need to look toward Moscow as a Mohamedan toward Mecca, in order to demand that the impending appeal to higher courts shall be heard, and that justice be given which the lower court denied. One does not need to be a pessimist, either, in order to be doubtful of the outcome. Appealing to higher courts is simply ascending to a higher realm in the ruling class hierarchy. A just decision in the present case will be a miracle.

Ruthenberg goes to prison, perhaps. He is ready. If he goes, he will go fearlessly, just as fearlessly as he has fought for his principles in days that are gone. In the meantime, more and more workers will wake and march on. Movements are more than men. Movements cannot be convicted for "criminal syndicalism." And if movements are based on correct principles, they are invincible, for they partake of the immortality of truth.

RUTHENBERG CONVICTED
Editorial from Miami Valley Socialist (Dayton, Ohio)

The conviction of C. E. Ruthenberg, former Socialist candidate for Governor of Ohio and at present executive secretary of the Workers' Party, on the charge of violating the criminal syndicalism law of Michigan, excites scarcely a ripple even in the labor world. But of all the hideous Anti-American crimes committed in recent years this is going to stand out as in ancient days the judicial murder of the Galilean agitator stood out. Ruthenberg—however mistaken his opinions—has been guilty of nothing but opinions. Personally we know him to be a man of the purest moral type, a scholar, a gentleman, a man of rarest courtesy and kindness. He has already served two prison terms for his opinions. He has never been guilty of the slightest criminal act. In American juries can be brought to convict men for holding unpopular opinions, and if the American public approves or acquiesces in such conviction, we suggest that the statue of Torquemada, the Great Inquisitor be substituted for George Washington, and our school children be taught with reverence the modern rack and rack and other bloody symbols of the age-old effort of Darkness to keep out the Light.

The Government-Strikebreaker

By JAY LOVESTONE

Published by the Workers Party, 799 Broadway, New York City. Cloth bound, 368 pages, $1.50.

"Too long have the militants in the American labor movement turned to other countries for their lessons and inspiration."

This sentence, from the foreword to Jay Lovestone's new book, represents one of the most serious handicaps under which the American Labor Movement has long suffered. To date there have been few complete studies of the functioning of the American capitalist state power against the American working class based upon the actual facts of the workers' struggles in these United States. Lovestone's book is that variety of TNT which the American workers have long waited for.

The official documents, utterances, and even secret correspondence of the employers and government officials are presented. To read this book is to follow the unfolding of the great drama of the class struggle as it is today being acted on the stage of life. One sees the troops—fixed bayonets—lined-up against the workers in the great steel strike of 1919; the entire government marshalled threateningly behind President Wilson, when in 1919 he made his famous statement to the mineworkers: "A strike under these circumstances is not only unjustifiable; it is unlawful," and in 1920, the Palmer red raid attacks, when thousands of American workers were jailed. The last scene, of what might well be termed the first act, the Open-Shop with its "American Plans, Welfare Clubs, and Company Unions, lays bare in all their ugliness the very vitals of the Employers Associations.

The drama then progresses with a rapidity of action up to the present moment. Scene after scene of ever intensified oppression and murderous brutality. Unemployment and the spectre of starvation, the "textile workers in revolt," the miners on strike, an army at war." "Herein," lesson in American class war." the tragedy of the strike of the railroad workers, a working class divided against itself cannot stand. The drama of the class struggle moves forward powerful, immense, inevitable—the stark naked, ugly truths of the us time and again of the force of the entire capitalist state against the working class unfold themselves Lovestone has no time, no space, no need for theorizing. The facts, dripping with blood and dirt, these are presented quite simply and at times even a bit diffidently.

Lovestone has done a splendid piece of work. Some realizer of a colossal task which the collection and correlation of so much hitherto unavailable material represents. Furthermore, the direct and masterful method of presentation evoke in one the hope that this is but the first of many books by this author. The American worker needs such facts. The American Labor Movement needs such books.—Clarissa S. Ward

Let the Autocrat, Gompers, Be Taught He Is the Servant, Not the Master, of the Labor Movement

A Statement by the National Committee of the Trade Union Educational League

In his ultimatum to the Seattle Central Labor Council, Samuel Gompers gives one more illustration of his autocratic methods and reactionary policies. For a long time this central body has been an eyesore to Gompers. Time and again, exercising its rights within the A. F. of L. constitution, it has dared to break with the 19th Century policies of Gompers and to think and act in accordance with our modern needs. It has endorsed amalgamation of the craft unions, recognition of Soviet Russia, the Red International of Labor Unions, independent working class political action, and a host of other progressive policies.

Because of this the Seattle central body has been marked for the slaughter. Gompers died intellectually 40 years ago, and his constant effort, all too successful, has been to cramp the labor movement into a narrow cell of his own restricted outlook. Throwing aside the A. F. of L. constitution and trampling underfoot the elementary principles of free speech, he proposes to force Seattle to abandon its progressive attitude. He demands that it turn back the hands of time, by giving up its advanced policies, and by readopting his antiquated viewpoint, which is three overthrown years ago. And if it refuses, its charter shall be revoked and the local movement demoralized and broken up.

This organized work of reaction has gone on for many years. But a short while ago Gompers illegally and violently reorganized the New York Central Labor Unions because of their progressive tendencies, and more recently still he attacked the Minneapolis Trades and Labor Assembly for similar reasons. But his assault upon the Seattle Central Labor Council is the most outrageous of all. The whole campaign is ineffective as well as stupid and tyrannical. The progressive forces are not intimidated by it. In New York, Gompers did not diminish, but increased the Labor Party sentiment; in Minneapolis he has strengthened the radicals and given them a better understanding of the task before them. And just as he brandishes his pop-gun of charter revocation at Seattle, the convention of the Pennsylvania Federation of Labor shows how little it is terrified by adopting almost unanimously exactly the three measures for which Gompers condemns Seattle—amalgamation, recognition of Soviet Russia, and the Labor Party. Gompers is a modern Mrs. Partington, vainly trying to sweep back the irresistible rising tide of progress.

It is high time that Gompers' illegal and unconstitutional campaign of reaction in the unions be stopped. The rights of the progressives and revolutionaries have been violated all too long. It is sincerely to be hoped that the Seattle Central Labor Council, responding to its best traditions of militancy, will stand its ground and refuse to be terrorized by the arch-reactionary Gompers. It should stoutly defend its incontestable constitutional rights as an affiliate of the A. F. of L. to pass its opinion on all issues confronting the labor movement. The demands of Gompers should be flatly rejected, and if he dares to revoke the charter, the fight should be carried, not only to the A. F. of L. convention, but also to the thousands of local unions and central bodies thruout the whole labor movement. Seattle, you have an urgent duty and a great opportunity confronting you. On the one hand, an pain of treason to progress, you must not weaken before the reactionaries; and on the other, if you will but take up the gauntlet for free speech in the unions you will surely win a great victory. In such a fight against bureaucratic reaction and autocracy, the powerful and rapidly organizing forces of progress will be behind you to a man. Let the autocrat Gompers be taught that he is the servant, not the master, of the labor movement.

Fight Gary's 12-Hour Day

Oppose Enslaving Edict of Steel Kaiser

Farewell to Ruthenberg is Big Ovation

C. E. Ruthenberg, Secretary, Workers Party, was given a tremendous ovation, Wednesday night, in the Harwood Demonstration" at Webster Hall, in anticipation of sentence being imposed by the Michigan court, Monday. Frequent and prolonged applause was often changed to the united singing of "The Internationale" and other revolutionary songs.

Ruthenberg, himself, announced that this could not be a farewell meeting, in the sense of its being his farewell in the struggle with the capitalist system.

"I am going to tell you a little story," he said. "The three articles were introduced against me in [illegible] while in Sing Sing prison.

"The ruling class puts workers in prison, it does not destroy their spirits. It only makes them more determined to struggle.

"Prisons do not kill enthusiasm for the class struggle, but pits iron into men's souls. If the capitalist class desires to make strong men in this struggle, let them continue to put us in prison."

Ruthenberg called for agitation to secure the release of Mooney, Billings, Sacco, Vanzetti, and other class war-prisoners, including the members of the Industrial Workers of the World. He told of the imprisonment of the Communists, Joe Martinez and Israel Blankenstein at Pittsburgh, and of Jacob Dolla, also in Pennsylvania.

"In all ages men have dreamed of the time when they will throw off the yoke of capitalism, and stand erect," said Ruthenberg.

"We have at last reached that era in human society when we have conquered nature, when thru the genius of the ages, we have inventions and machinery, which can give to us all happy lives, education and recreation. But today only the few are benefitting. But these few cannot get along without the workers.

"The very industrial processes have taught the working class that it has the power and ability to throw the masters off its back. So the struggle is waxing bitterer than ever, because it is the final struggle of the workers to establish the Soviet Republic of the world."

Here the audience broke into singing the refrain from "The International," starting with "'Tis the final conflict."

The collection totalled $379. Another "Farewell Rally" was held in Williamsburgh, at Royal Palace Hall, Friday night.

Paterson, N. J., Foreign-Born Meet

Workers in half a dozen nationalities in Paterson, N. J., attended the mass meeting to protest against the anti-foreign-born legislation planned by congress. Among the speakers were Antonio Presi, editor, Alba Nova, Italian weekly of the Workers Party, and J. Louis Engdahl, editor of "The Worker." The workers of all nationalities in this great industrial center are being organized by the local United Front Conference.

One Day Late

In view of the fact that Wednesday, May 30, was Memorial Day and printers did not work, "THE WORKER" was forced to come out day later than usual.

A Call to Action!

"The Worker" this week starts its biggest fight for labor. This fight is your fight—workers of America!

"The Worker" plans to rally all possible working-class strength to combat the hideous plot of Judge E. H. Gary, the United States Steel Corporation, and the American Iron and Steel Institute, to continue the brutalizing 12-hour day in the steel mills.

This fight does not concern the steel workers and their families alone. It touches every man, woman and child of the American working class.

Gary and his "open shop" steel trust are a direct menace to all who toil for an existence. Gary crushed the steel strike in 1919 with the huge profits won during the war—$1,000,000 per day. Gary stood back of the "open shop" war on the miners and railroaders, 1922. Gary was behind the attack on the miners' union at Herrin, Ill. Gary, with his non-union steel products, has fought against unionism in all the building trades. Gary told the Fascisti Dictator, Mussolini, while in Rome recently, that what the United States needs is a dictatorship just like Italy's anti-labor White Terror.

Gary's steel trust is rich and powerful. It piled up a surplus, during the war period, 1916-1920, of nearly a billion dollars—$825,958,160.

The steel capitalists own three-fourths of the anthracite and bituminous coal mines of the nation. These same capitalists, Gary's financial allies, are the great power among the 25 financiers and industrialists who control four-fifths of the steam railroad mileage of the country.

Gary Speaks for "Open Shoppers"

When Gary speaks, his words are the words of the "open shoppers" in all industries. His plan to continue the 12-hour day in the steel industry, is a threat to establish the 12-hour day in every other industry. The continued labor crushing "open shop" in the steel industry acts as a stronghold from which to carry on the war for the "open shop" everywhere.

It is against this menacing danger that America's working class must rally every atom of strength. "The Worker" is planning to do all in its power to reveal the hypocrisy of Gary's defense of the 12-hour day, to expose the anti-labor policies of Gary's steel trust, and to point out the fact that even within the ranks of organized labor itself there are elements that work against the struggle to unionize the steel trust, that oppose the wiping out of this menace to labor.

Against the demand of the Steel Baron Profiteer, Judge E. H. Gary, for the 12-hour day and the "open shop," the workers must emblazon on their standards the slogan, "Organize the Unorgan-

Tell Us Your Story!
Write It Down! Send It In!

"The Worker," in carrying on its campaign against the 12-Hour Day, plans to co-operate with a score of other labor publications to get the truth about conditions in the steel industry. We feel there is no one better able to tell the story of the steel worker, and his family, than the steel worker himself.

We are, therefore, calling upon the steel workers everywhere, of all languages, to write down their stories. What do you, steel workers, think of the 12-Hour Day? Do you like it, as Gary claims? Does it rob you of physical and mental development? Does it keep you away from your family? What is your answer? Write it down! Send it in!

We will not use your names, workers in the Steel Mills. But we do want your stories. Send them to "The Worker," 799 Broadway, New York City, no matter what your nationality, no matter in what language you write. We will have your letters translated. But if it is easier for you, send your message to any of the publications co-operating with "The Worker" in this campaign, here is a partial list:

Help Spread "The Worker"

Tens of thousands of copies of this issue of "The Worker" are being rushed into the mores of Gary's "steel hells" in these United States; from Bethlehem, Pa., in the East, to Pueblo, Colo., in the West; from Duluth, Minn., on the North, to Birmingham, Ala., in the South.

These copies of "The Worker" will be distributed under difficulties. But they will be distributed. During the recent raid on the Workers Party headquarters in Pittsburgh, Pa., the sleuths and thugs of the Pittsburgh Steel Czars held that the greatest crime possible for a steel worker or coal miner was the possession of a copy of "The Worker." But the truth must be told. It will be told.

Millions of copies of "The Worker" distributed wherever Gary's 12-hour day prevails should be labor's answer to the Steel Kaiser of America. You workers who have won the 10-hour day, or the 8-hour day, or the 40-hour week; or you sympathizers in the labor movement, how many copies of "The Worker" will you send into the citadels of the American steel empire? Send in your response on the blank below:

Solidarity of Labor Aided by Aeroplane

(By The Federated Press)

BERLIN, Germany.—May Day greetings from nation to nation by aeroplane!

To this spectacle the workers and peasants of Russia were treated, when on May 1st a German aeroplane flying from Berlin to Moscow distributed thousands of May-Day greetings from the communist party of Germany to the workers and peasants of Russia.

"Communication by air has brought together what formerly seemed distant," said the leaflets thrown down from the aeroplane. "In a few hours it is now possible to reach Moscow from the capital of Germany. Thus must solidarity and the common fight of the workers of all countries also bring us nearer to each other, and must unite our strength for the attainment of complete victory over capitalism."

London and Moscow are now but 32 hours apart from each other. That is, if one avails oneself of the regular aeroplane service now established between Germany and Russia on the one hand, and Germany and England on the other.

Tchicherin or Krassin or any of the men who have dealings with England can now take the following quick route: leave Moscow in the morning by aeroplane and arrive at Koenigsberg in Prussia in the evening; leave by night train (in a comfortable sleeper) for Berlin and arrive there the next morning; board the London-bound aeroplane in the morning and arrive in London before night of the second day. The actual travelling time is but thirty-two hours.

Seven Weeks' Fight on the 12-Hour Day

The campaign of "The Worker" against the 12-Hour Day will extend thru at least seven issues, taking up every phase of the black reaction in the steel industry.

The subject matter that will be treated in each succeding issue is tentatively announced as follows:

1. Is the 12-Hour Day injurious, physically, mentally and morally to the steel workers?

2. Does the 12-Hour Day give the steel worker an oppoctunity to develop his social and family life?

3. Does the steel industry demand two 12-hour shifts because of a labor shortage?

4. Can the steel trust afford an 8-hour, 3-shift working day?

5. Do the steel workers want the 3-hour day?

6. Why does the United States government, federal, state and local, support the Steel Trust in its war upon the steel workers?

7. Why does Gompers oppose the organization of the workers in the steel industry?

Steel workers in sending in their letters giving their views of the problems confronting them may discuss any of the above questions.

27th Wall St. Bomb Suspect Released After Gompers, Burns & Co. Exploit New Hysteria

Noah Lerner, the 27th victim of the anti-Communist hysteria of William J. Burns, head of the United States Secret Service, and his benefactor, Attorney General Harry M. Daugherty, has been released from police custody after being "grilled" for thirty hours, terrified by the freaks of the New York City Bomb Squad, exhausted every trick known to them in order to manufacture a plausible story for the Wall Street Explosion upon the basis of a fabrication told by Thomas Doyle and his wife, late of Kurbas Colony, Siberia.

Burns' two noted theories connected with the explosion were petering out. He had made many vain promises to the effect that "Wolfe Linde" a famous ten-thousand-word confession would certainly convict Moscow and the Communist International of responsibility for the bomb. After chasing all over the United States and most of Europe and bringing "Windy" Linde, the author of the alleged "confession," to these shores, whence he was deported again without permission to enter the country, even for a brief period, Burns tried to kill by silence his bombastic promises.

Then came the arrest and confession of one "Wilson" in California. The valiant sleuth hot-footed it to the Pacific Coast. The outcome of the revelations of Mr. Wilson are not recorded outside of the archives of the Burns' Agency. Just when everyone but the foolish detectives were forgetting the bomb incident, convinced that Mr. Du-Pont, of the Powder Trust, or his employes were the real murderers, Lerner, a mere youth, who happened to be an electrician in the Kurbas Colony, was arrested because of the idle gossip of the disgruntled Doyle family.

Lerner was arrested and charged with murder in connection with the Wall Street explosion of September 16, 1920, after Mrs. Doyle had related a story to the police of alleged conversations between herself and Lerner in the Kurbas Colony, on the other side of the earth. All enemies of Soviet Russia were anxious to have the story corroborated, so Mrs. Doyle and her husband received the felicitations of both Mr. Burns and his echo, Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor.

Appears Before Labor Body

At the personal request of Samuel Gompers, Mrs. Doyle appeared before the Central Labor Council of New York, was introduced by the reactionary president, Sullivan, and delivered a vicious attack upon Soviet Russia. On that same evening the Council went on record against the concoction of lies told by the feminine part of the Doyle perjury combination.

At the next meeting the Sullivan machine barred a Kurbas representative from defending the Colony against the attacks of Mrs. Doyle.

Special Article by Gompers

In the current issue of "The American Federationist," Sam Gompers utilizes the unproved story of the Doyles for another of his rabid assaults upon the First Workers' Republic. In true capitalist press style he neglects to publish the fact that the Doyles now stand branded liars before the American public because of the breakdown of the Burns' case against Lerner.

Every avenue of publicity was used to inflame sentiment against Soviet Russia and its American supporters during the time the Lerner case was under "investigation." As usual the half-witted defense attorneys declared they would certainly convict Lerner and that it was only a matter of hours until they would round up other conspirators in other cities in the country. Burns, himself, proclaimed that he knew the names of some of the bombers, but that others were in Russia, and that his valiant operatives would eventually "get them." Probably Burns is still laboring under the self-hypnotism of the imaginary "ten-thousand-word" confession" secured from "Windy Linde."

Echoes From Grand Rapids

Recently there has been a wave of incendiarism in Grand Rapids, Mich., near St. Joseph, where the Communist trials were held and are to be held in the future, and the entire capitalist press shrieked for vengeance against the infamous "reds" that were endeavoring to burn the entire city.

There is no disturbance so trivial of late that the so-called defenders of "civilization" do not all join the anvil chorus of denunciation against the radicals. These people seem actually disappointed when the real culprits are discovered. In the case of Grand Rapids, Mich., the origin of the incendiarism was discovered when two small urchins were apprehended and confessed they started the fires "just for the fun of it."

That portion of the public that receives its information from the yellow sheets of capitalism will now breathlessly await the next horrible "red plot" that threatens its sublime existence.

The Cry for Blood

The anti-whipping bill has been passed by the state of Florida, but, "Thank God!" cry the blood-lusters, "There is no anti-lynching law!"

An Answer to "Strikebreaker" Hooper

On July 3, 1922, Ben W. Hooper, Chairman of the Railroad Labor Board issued a strike-breaking order outlawing the railway workers who were fighting against intolerable working conditions and starvation wages.

Exactly one year after the issuance of this ukase against the workingmen—July 3, 1923—there will be opened the Convention called by the Farmer-Labor Party for the organization of a national independent political party of all the workers and farmers. A memorable day in the annals of American Labor and a most effective answer to the strikebreaker Hooper. Untold servant of the railway barons and lickspittle of the industrial and financial monarchs of the country.

Debs—Chairman of the Socialist Party

By JOHN PEPPER

The Convention of the Socialist Party elected Eugene V. Debs to the National Executive Committee of the Socialist Party. The National Executive Committee chose Debs as chairman of the party. For the first time since 1919 Debs is now a leading member of the Socialist Party.

Debs has become Chairman of the Socialist Party.

We must emphasize this fact, for it is of political significance.

The Socialist Party has lately fallen into two factions. The right wing under the leadership of Morris Hillquit, Victor Berger, and the left wing under the leadership of Eugene V. Debs. The right wing had the party completely in its power. The petty Tammany Hall of Victor Berger and Hillquit was the undisputed ruler of the party, and determined its policy. The left wing had no organization. It was but a vague revolutionary sentiment.

The right wing controlled the party, but the party could exercise an influence upon the laboring masses only thru the left wing. The Socialist Party received 60,000 votes in New York at the Nov. 7, elections of 1922 and 40,000 votes in the mayoralty elections in Chicago, not thru Hillquit and Lee, but mainly thru this vague revolutionary sentiment which is embodied in the person of Debs. The Socialist Party as the bearer of an ideology and as a mass organization is dead. It would be ridiculous to deny that the Socialist Party still wields an influence over militant masses, thru the vague revolutionary sentiment represented by Debs. The Socialist Party without Debs is an insignificant opportunistic sect. But whether we like it or not, Debs is today the leader of the political actions of tens of thousands of workers.

Where are these workers? These workers compose a middle stratum between the Socialist Party, and the Workers Party. They are deeply disappointed with the petty Tammany Hall of Hillquit and Victor Berger. But these workers are not yet members of the Workers Party, and in many ways are not as yet adherents of the Communist ideology. These workers were discouraged from joining the Workers Party, partly thru the brutal persecution by the government, partly because the Communists had an underground organization, and had to function as a secret agitation and propaganda was not suited to reaching them.

Those workers who continuously split between the Socialist Party and the Workers Party today consider Eugene V. Debs as their leader.

We do not imply thereby that Eugene V. Debs is himself vacillating between the Socialist Party and the Workers Party. He did vacillate for some time. When he was liberated after the penitentiary of Atlanta on Dec. 25, 1921, he declared, "I cannot make a definite statement of my opinion," as to which Party is in the right—the Socialist Party or the Workers Party. But in his statement of October 8, 1922, he declared, "I have arrived at the definite conclusion that my place in the future as in the past is in the Socialist Party." Yet he declared at that time that he does not identify himself with the policy of the Socialist Party in everything.

And since then we have seen that on almost every question he had a different opinion from that of the official Socialist Party. The official Socialist Party is an ally of Gompers and an opponent of amalgamation. Debs, on the contrary, indorsed the Trade Union Educational League, and branded the traitors of the American Federation of Labor bureaucracy as traitors. The Socialist Party lives on the slandering of Soviet Russia. Debs has on the whole defended the Russian revolution, even if with some sentimental pacifistic reservations. The Socialist Party is against the United Front, whereas Debs declared, himself in favor of the United Front of all working class forces. Ideologically, the Socialist Party has, for a long time, been an adherent of the Second International. Debs, however, declared himself against social peace, against support of war, and for the class struggle.

The laboring masses who were influenced by the Socialist Party were not won over thru the counter-revolutionary activity of Hillquit and Berger, but thru the policy of Debs for Amalgamation, for Soviet Russia, for the United Front, for the class struggle. The masses who voted for the Socialist Party did not vote for the official Socialist Party, but for the Socialist Party of Eugene V. Debs, for a party which, even if it does not exist organizationally, exists ideologically, like the left wing of the old Independent Socialist Party of Germany. Naturally, the official Socialist Party drew all the advantages thereof, in the same way as the Second International secured the advantage from the vacillating policy of the Second-and-a-Half International.

We have a new Debs before us today. In 1921 he could not as yet choose between the Socialist Party and the Workers Party. In 1922 he chose the Socialist Party, but with criticism, and he remained an ordinary party member. In 1923 he became member and chairman of the National Executive Committee of the Socialist Party. We must wait now to see if he will accept also the official policy of the Socialist Party. In any case, he has accepted the official leadership of the Socialist Party under remarkable circumstances. The same Socialist Party convention which elected him unanimously as leader has decided against his policy on all questions. The Socialist Party convention declared against interference in internal trade union affairs, which means against Amalgamation. The Socialist Party convention tabled the motion to repudiate Abe Cahan's attack on Soviet Russia, which means that it indorsed all his shameless slanders against Soviet Russia. The Socialist Party convention declared against the United Front and against participation in the Farmer-Labor Party Convention in Chicago, that is, against the Labor Party.

Against Amalgamation, for trade union officialdom, against Soviet Russia, against the United Front, against the Labor Party—that is the standard which the Socialist Party Convention has given its newly elected leader Debs.

What will Debs do? Will he fight for his previous views, or will he carry out the decisions of the Convention? This question interests us, not because of the personality of Debs, but because of the political position of those laboring masses who still listen to Debs. Debs faces a dilemma. If he fights for his own political views, he must fight against the petty Tammany Hall of Hillquit and Berger. But the destruction of the petty Tammany Hall of the Socialist Party officialdom means the death of the Socialist Party. And yet, if Debs chooses the other way, and accepts the policy of the petty Tammany Hall of Hillquit and Berger, the laboring masses who have confidence in him today will quickly abandon him. That also means the death of the Socialist Party in another way.

Debs has taken over the leadership with the slogan: "We should not speak of differences of opinion, we must now rebuild the Party." But willy-nilly, no matter what road he takes, his destiny is to destroy the Socialist Party. It is a tragic dilemma, but Debs will not play the role of tragic hero. We know of no tragedy where the heroism of the hero consists of hesitancy and vacillation.

In the Gas Business

CHICAGO.—What has Gen. Charles G. Dawes, who is constantly emitting poisonous fumes against labor, to say about himself?

This organizer of the Minute Men of the Constitution, an anti-labor society, tells his story in his autobiographical sketch in Who's Who in America, Vol. 12, p. 879. Recounting his achievements in the world war in the course of which he became a brigadier general in government storekeeper in France, and his success in swinging Illinois for McKinley and Mark Hanna in 1896, Hull to Maria Dawes sums up his real work as follows:

"Incorporated in bar, 1886; in practice, Lincoln, Neb., 1887-94; SINCE THEN INTERESTED IN GAS BUSINESS at Evanston, Ill., La Crosse, Wis., Seattle, Wash., etc."

Textile Union Lukewarm on Labor Party

By SELMAR SCHOCKEN

An amalgamation resolution with teeth in it was defeated by the Fifth General Convention of the Amalgamated Textile Workers, held in New York City, Tuesday. The delegates went on record in favor of an innocuous declaration for industrial unionism, that can bring about no results in the organization campaigns the numerous textile unions.

The convention was also lukewarm on the question of the Labor Party. It rejected definite resolutions calling for the formation of a Labor Party based on the trade unions and including all working class political elements. Instead a stand was taken for the "principle" of independent political action, but the convention failed to send delegates to the Labor Party Conference in Chicago, in June.

Not content with this failure to mark progress, the delegates were forced to listen to attacks from their officials upon William Z. Foster, secretary, and Joseph Manley, Eastern Organizer of the Trade Union Educational League. The complaint seemed to be that "The League" had gone direct to the rank and file of the textile unions, without asking the permission of the officials.

A fight for the eight-hour-day and the 44-hour-week will mark the next year of activity of the organization, and the general executive board also stands instructed to work for wage increases all along the line.

One of the important decisions of the convention was the severance of relations with the "Federated Textile Unions," a loose federation of unions with a leadership, even more reactionary than the United Textile Workers, defeating all attempts of genuine co-operation and rather an organized block against industrial unionism and amalgamation of the many different craft and group unions, now existing in the Textile Industry.

The convention, however, invited the Associated Silk Workers, a locally orientated union organized on industrial lines, of Paterson, N. J. and the Dentry Carpet Weavers of Philadelphia, Pa. The A. T. W. attempted on previous occasions to arrange for close co-operation or even these unions for the introduction of the week-work system of payments opposed to the piece rate system in the Silk Mills of Paterson.

The convention declared for an independent Labor Party "on principle," but failed to elect a delegate to the Labor Party Convention in Chicago, on July 3rd. An intensive campaign is to be started among the Silk Workers of Greater New York and vicinity, which are only partially organized. While the Weavers and Twisters possess a 100 percent organization with a collective agreement, trade board and "impartial chairman," the great mass of the less skilled workers, especially women, are almost totally unorganized. The resolution providing for the organization campaign, emphasizes the necessity of getting these workers into the union, if there is to be an active and militant organization in Greater New York.

The All-Russian Union of Textile Workers and its Moscow provincial Executive Committee had sent greetings in the following letters.

"The All-Russian Union of Textile Workers sends greetings to all comrades in the Textile Workers' Union of America, and especially to those workers who recognize the class struggle and who realize the complete industrial organization of the masses into progressive labor unions.

"We know in Russia only the Textile Workers' Union. It includes the workers and all employees connected with any part of the industry. We have the honor to be all these industries organized 100 per cent organized, and our total membership is 1,200,000 workers, 70 per cent of whom are women. Membership in our union is thoroughly voluntary, and the spirit of the members is excellent.

"We look forward to the day, when the great American Textile Industry will be thoroughly organized, and when its workers will have overcome the capitalist aggression and abolished their wage slavery. the day when the textile workers will be the makers of and control their own destiny.

"We send you comradely greetings on the international battle front of labor, and wish you every good fortune this year and keep your hearts be strengthened for your struggles.

"M. I. Lobedeff,
"Secretary Central Executive Committee
"A. R. T. U."

Comrade A. T. Markoff, president of the Moscow Textile Workers, wrote:

"The Moscow Provincial Executive Committee of the All-Russian Union of Textile Workers wishes to send its fraternal greetings to the industrial union of the Textile Workers of America. The membership in the Moscow Province number 150,000 and work in 153 factories, 98 of which are nationalized undertakings, the others are owned by the government and by private manufacturers.

"Our trade union structure is industrial, our tactics aggressive, our methods democratic. Our members are participating in the textile trade schools and learning to manage the industry themselves. We are working forward a communist state with state capitalism as a beginning."

The convention was presided over by Thomas McDonald, of the Northampton Silk Workers' Union, Cornelius Guthrie of the Woolen Workers' Union of Burrillville, R. I., acted as the secretary of the gathering.

Burns Agency Placed Spies in U. S. Munition Plants

Nearly all agents of the department of justice confess themselves ignorant of the record of their chief, William J. Burns, head of the United States Secret Service. This is their only reply when they are confronted with the suspicions now being made public by this columnist.

Such an instance was the interview that H. W. Wicks had with a "D." of the agent during his recent arrest at Bellaire, Ohio, an agent that was employed by the Steel Trust town from Cincinnati, Ohio.

Wicks tells the story in the current issue of "The Liberator." His conversation with the Daugherty-Burns agent was as follows:

"Have you been reading The Liberator and THE WORKER where we took a fall out of your chief, William J. Burns, for organizing the German spy system for the Kaiser in this country?"

"Quit your kidding!"

"I'm not kidding. I mean it. We have old 'fixer' on the run, which probably accounts for your interest in this arrest."

Then after a few more questions concerning the Trade Union Educational League, the Burns' agent left, perhaps, as the saying has it, "Sadder but wiser."

This week we publish another installment of these Burns' exposures showing how the William J. Burns International Detective Agency placed spies in American munitions plants.

Place Spies in American Munitions Plants

Detective Harry J. Connor, former member of the William J. Burns' International Detective Agency, in the proceedings to revoke the Agency's license in New York State, testified that a certain Thomas O'Brien, formerly employed as a strikebreaker, became an agent for Burns in several American munition plants, under his (Connor's) direction. Connor was asked in regard to O'Brien:

Q. What work did you assign him to do in Bridgeport?

A. Night inspector of the U.M.C.

Q. That is the Union Metallic Cartridge Company?

A. Yes.

Q. And at that time you were working for the Burns agency?

A. Yes sir, and working hard for them.

At this point Attorney Hedges for Burns interjected:

Q. To your entire satisfaction?

A. To Mr. Burns' satisfaction.

The examination proceeded:

Q. Did you ever talk it over with Burns?

A. I did.

The witness Connor said that Burns' undercover man O'Brien was transferred into the plant of the Crucible Steel Harrison, New Jersey, Crucible Steel Company at Harrison, N. J. O'Brien, from his post in that munitions plant, supplied information to the Bihns agency which in turn was furnishing information to the German agent.

Q. Was O'Brien subsequently transferred from Bridgeport to some other work?

A. He was O'Brien worked hard at Bridgeport and was taken out so there for no reason, just because the man up there didn't like him.

Q. Where was he transfefred?

A. To the Bliss plant.

Q. Munition plant?

A. Yes sir. He worked there for several weeks and he was sent to the "Who's Loony Now?" Gives Way to "Who's Liberal Now?"

By JAY LOVESTONE

A time there was when the phrase "Who's loony now?" was on the tip of every American's tongue. Sassy street urchin and reverend grandfather, light-veined baseball fan and sweating stock-broker—all used to go their separate but wisely "Who's loony now?" on their lips.

But "Who's loony now?" is dead—dead even beyond the grasp of most memories. A new stock-phrase will soon be popular on the "Main Street" Exchange. I'll bet good, 100 per cent white patriotic, reactionary American dollars against brand new pink German Socialist Marks that the new phrase, or craze, will be "Who's a liberal now?"

The Liberal League

The other day there was organized "The Liberal League of America". This League is to serve as the haven and House of Refuge for all genuine anti-Bolsheviks. But pray, don't, dear Reader, don't choke with laughter! Nor should you sneer at me when you are given further information about this bulwark against reaction now to come to save the workers!

This Liberal League will strive to create and entertain public opinion against all descriptions of radicalism. The League invites into its membership "all who wish with our American traditions to remain true to its high calling as the builder of free institutions and the guardian of personal liberty."

I do wonder how many workers who form the mass of enslaved humanity on which there has been reared that marvelous structure of steel and profits will be invited to membership in the League in order to preserve their "personal liberty"! We wonder how many of the hounded, evicted striking railway shopmen who were tenting in Utah in the bitterest cold of winter, will be allowed to join this League in order to have "American democracy remain true to its high calling as the builder of free institutions"! We wonder how many bituminous miners, who in the midst of a terrific prosperity and a shortage of labor are given the chance to work a maximum of two days a week, will be permitted to enter this new Klan of pure American Democracy.

Leaders of the Liberal League

The reader should stop wondering. He should rather hold his breath. Here are a few of the new galaxy of American liberals. Here are a few of the national leaders of this Liberal League.

Judge Kenesaw of the Delaware and Hudson Railway Co., one of the leaders, is a sworn enemy of the workers. He was one of the leaders in the lynching offensive against the striking shopmen.

Then comes Bishop Manning—Patron Saint of this new Liberal Church—educated as a minister of God and serving as a menial, sycophantic messenger of Mammon. Bishop Manning is one the most indefatigable of brazen apologists for and defenders of the most heinous crimes of the exploiting class.

The noted "progressive", Nicholas Murray Butler, titular President of Columbia University and errand boy plenipotentiary for J. P. Morgan is another one of the leaders of the Liberal League.

One abreast behind these luminaries of liberalism follow such poor men and servants of humanity as "Silk Stockings" Ogden L. Mills, Walter F. Mannard, R. Fulton Cutting, and John G. Milburn.

Finally, a royal send-off and holy benedictions were given to this Liberal League by that well-known journal of genuine American liberalism—the Financial and Commercial Chronicle published by the Wm. B. Dana Co. in the heart of the sacred environs of Wall Street, the stable of Mammon's Golden Calf.

Let's All Be Liberals Now

Apparently the world is moving forward despite the fact that "Warren Gamaliel" is having an awful time of it in selling us Harding's Permanent Court of International Justice. "Nicky" Butler, Bishop Manning, and L. F. Loree have been annointed liberals by the Heavenly Fathers of Wall Street. Why, let's all be liberals now. Let's have a sense of humor. Let's call this new venture merely a case of monumental gall. But let us not stop here. Let's wake up and tell these guys in the only language they understand that no amount of war paint can hide their poisoned arrows and tomahawks against the workers.

Let's tell them we are on to their game. We are no longer hobbled and hogtied. We are ready for the fray—and ready to take them on, all comers, all weights.

TEN WORKERS SHOULD READ THIS COPY OF THE WORKER; KEEP IT IN CIRCULATION

Battle Terror with Strike Miners' Plan

(Special to "The Worker")

SYDNEY, N. S. (Canada).—Provincial police raided the headquarters of District 26, United Mine Workers of America, at Glace Bay, near here. The raiders, under Lieut. Colwell, MacDonald, smashed up office, the hall, raided it and confiscated documents, files and other material for the purpose of searching for "communist propaganda."

In addition to raiding the hall they searched the home of J. B. Lachlan, secretary of the District organization, and the foreman of the tant leader of this section of the country, confiscating private papers to be turned over to the Crown prosecutor. Boarding houses, where miners' union officials had stopped while in Glace Bay, were also raided.

This attack has been in preparation for a long time; the capitalist press, the pulpit and other means of publicity being turned against the so-called radical miners in this district. The government took a hand when it refused permission for Alexander Howat to enter and deliver a May Day speech, and instead admitted the notorious reactionary henchman of the Lewis machine, Van Bittner, who delivered a scurrilous address against the officers of District 26.

Miners are certain that Van Bittner connived with the Canadian police to raid the offices of the District in order to obtain information for both the government and the reactionary Lewis machine in Indianapolis, Indiana, U. S. A. Undoubtedly Lewis would embrace any ally in his desperate efforts to crush the voice of the rank and file of labor. Like Gompers' repetition of the anti-Bolshevik attacks of William J. Burns, the Lewis gangsters in Canada repeat the illspired propaganda of the Canadian police and stool pigeons of the mine barons.

Both the officials amd the rank and file of the miners in District 26 are determined to vigorously defend their right to organize efficiently for the conquest of capitalism. It is this district that drew fire from Lewis and Co. when they voted to affiliate with the Red International of Labor Unions at Moscow.

As a rebuke to both the government and the Lewis machine the miners are meeting on a three-day general strike throuout the whole district.

Thousands at Finnish Picnic

William Martilla, the business manager, and Elis Sulkanen, the editor of the Finnish daily, "Eteenpain" and Yavi Heino were among the speakers at the Eastern District Picnic of the Finnish Federation of Labor, at Elmhurst, Long Island, Sunday. It was the largest gathering of Finnish Communists and sympathizers yet held.

C. E. Ruthenberg, secretary of Workers Party, was unable to attend because matters incident to his contemplated eviction in Michigan called him to Chicago. J. Louis Engdahl spoke in his place, extending to the great gathering the greetings of the party and its central executive committee and reviewing the problems now confronting the American working class. The collection for the Michigan Defense totalled $121.60.

Detroit Labor Protests Persecution

(Special to "The Worker")

DETROIT, Mich.—The Detroit Federation of Labor, by unanimous vote, has filed its protest against the continued persecution of Communist in this state. The declaration it adopted is as follows:

"The Detroit Federation of Labor has learned with surprise that C. E. Ruthenberg, one of those arrested at Bridgeman, charged with violation of the Criminal Syndicalist Law, has been found guilty.

Despite the protest of the Detroit Federation of Labor and of the Michigan Federation of Labor, the prosecution in Berrien County continues, with the assistance attorney general of the State in charge, aided by a whole crew of Burns' detectives. The act to repeal this infamous law, introduced by labor's representative, Bartlett, was not even reported out of the committee and now the legislature is adjourned.

The Detroit Federation of Labor once more protest the continuance of the prosecution and the flagrant disregard of constitutional law in this connection and instructs its fraternal representative to send copies of this resolution to the officials, having jurisdiction and to the press.

All Labor Must Rally in Fight against Gary's 12-Hour Day Edict

d Steel Workers!" the first step toward winning human con-ions in the steel industry.

PLOT FOR THE 12-HOUR DAY

For the mightiest of Capitalists and Reaction, e Steel Trust, is again roaring defiance at the workers! In the me of "Liberty" and the American plan—"Open Shop"—it is ce more throwing down the gauntlet to Labor!

It was at a meeting of the American Iron and Steel Institute, ay 25th, in the Hotel Commodore, New York City, that the Steel ust decreed notice to the workers that the sanctity of the 8-Hour working day will be reserved at all costs.

Instigated by the "Soup Kit-en Statesman" Herbert Hoo-r, and inspired by the golf-aying President, Harding, ary appointed himself Chair-an of his handpicked Commit-e of this Institute to investi-ate the profit-less strike of the 12-Hour Day in the Steel dustry. On this "impartial" com-ittee were such notorious enemies Labor as Dinkey, of the former vate Steel Corporation, Block, of Inland Steel, Burden, of the Bur-n Iron Co., and the President of Bethlehem Steel Co., E. G. ace, whose dastardly "open shop" ctics were exposed by the New rk Lockwood Legislative Committee on Housing.

This Committee found that the atisment against the 12-Hour Day s "not created or endorsed by the ployers themselves," and that this g day "has not of itself been an ury to the employes physically, ntally and morally." This rubber-amp Committee of Gary also ques-oned, "Whether . . . in the large ma-rity of cases, twelve-hour men de-e less time to their families than the ployes working less hours."

Besides, the Committee went on to d that because of the present "la-r shortage" the Steel Trust could t abolish the 12-Hour Day now, en if it would. The introduction the eight-hour shift would entail e additional employment of 60,000 rkers. Of course, a gentle hint s also given about a 15 percent crease in the price of steel that ould come in the wake of the aboli-on of the 12-Hour Day.

The Steel Trust Lies

To tell the unvarnished truth, the eel Trust's investigators are just lated, mortality rate was 127.1 per thousand. Amongst the fathers earning less than $1,000 a year the children died at the rate of 137.8 to the thousand.

Under these conditions and starvation wages the steel workers are compelled to labor 7-to-the-Day by enemy to save their families and themselves from death. This is the workers' desire for the 12-Hour Day so loudly voiced by Gary, Schwab, Grace, and the other Steel magnates. Inspired by just such a love for the 12-Hour Day, over 300,000 steel workers rose in revolt for the eight-hour-day in 1919.

Shortage of Labor—Another Hoax

Then the now-hackneyed labor shortage is called to the rescue of the 12-Hour Day by Gary's investigators, in order to hide their real opposition to giving up the intolerable working hours. When not even the Steel Lords dared speak of a labor shortage, when six million workers were walking the streets out of work and out of hope, the Steel Trust made no effort to institute the 8-Hour Day in the mills.

In a letter to the reactionary Henry A. Wise-Wood, the United States Department of Labor admitted that there is a substantial surplus of labor in the bituminous fields. If the Steel Corporation would offer only half-decent wages and conditions it could draw, from this source alone, at least 240,000 workers—four times the number needed to put into effect the 8-Hour Day immediately. But the munificent sum of 40 cents an hour and the "restful" 12-Hour Day of labor serve to keep the workers away from the steel mills.

What is more, in the Youngstown, Ohio, district, where the Independents are operating on an 8-hour basis, there is not the slightest sign of a labor shortage. What Gary wants, is an army of millions of candidates for death in the foundries so that he can exploit and crush the workers more ruthlessly than ever.

The Steel Trust's Generosity.

In making this humanitarian report in behalf of the 12-Hour Day Gary prated that "no controversy could be settled fairly without Christian principles." This Biblical inspiration of his he called "simple, plain business sense." Waxing eloquent in defense of his generosity to the steel workers Gary went on to say that "it pays a nation or an individual to follow a Christian course."

The most startling feature in the most outrageous of Gary's lies is that he merely advocating that the workers accept meekly the 12-Hour Day as their Heavenly-ordained fate on earth.

But no one can be fooled by the Steel Shylocks, even when they perspire with love for their workers to the extent of collapsing in the middle of long-winded speeches. No worker will be fooled by Gary's "Christian" talk. As far back as 1912 the stockholders of the U. S. Steel Corporation passed a resolution condemning the 12-Hour Day. Yet the workers are today, more than ever before, condemned to the 12-Hour Day.

The Steel Trust is too poor to afford the 8-Hour Day! This awful poverty has given birth to a surplus of $825,958,160 being piled up in the period of 1916-1920. This poverty-stricken lot of capitalists own 75 per cent of the anthracite and bituminous mines, and are very well represented amongst the twenty-five financiers and industrialists who control 82 per cent, or 211,280 miles, of the steam railroads of the country.

A glaring example of the charitable attitude of the Steel Trust is afforded by the recent wage increase ordered by Gary. With a blare of trumpets there was announced a wage increase of 11 per cent—from 36 to 40 cents an hour! Not a word was said about the fact that workers were receiving a minimum of 55 cents an hour for the same kind of labor in other industries.

On the heels of this act of immeasurable magnanimity came an increase of $1.25 per ton in the cost of steel. The raise in the pay of the 150,000 steel workers entailed an additional expense of $25,000,000 a year. At the rate of the March output of 146,500 tons of steel per day there would be produced 45,000,000 tons of steel in the fiscal year. Applying the rules of plain simple arithmetic one learns that the Steel Corporation will, thru this last raise in price, be making an additional profit of $79,625,000 for the year, or more than three times the expense incurred by the wage increase.

Add to this the sum of $50,000,000 collected annually from the farmers alone thru the infamous Pittsburgh-Plus System and the Steel Trust has more than enough to offset the cost of a reduction in hours of labor without a reduction of wages. We are not mentioning the millions of dollars filched into the pockets of the Trust thru the Fordney-McCumber Tariff Act. But the Steel Barons are suffering from an attack of generosity. They desire to tell the truth. Their spokesman, Gary, must talk on "Christian principles" in order to hide the brutality of the exploiting interests.

Harding Disappointed!

And now our poor "Gamaliel the First" is somewhat disappointed and perhaps disturbed. Harding has expressed himself as being opposed in principle to the 12-Hour Day. It was bad strategy for Gary to make this report public on the Eve of a National Election. Now Harding must be mum. The poor Gamaliel must behave himself and quit kidding the public about his lofty aspirations for an eight hour day in the steel mills. Harding knows his masters. The Steel Trust doesn't believe in prophylactics. The Steel Trust believes in surgery. Harding must come up to the scratch, or his campaign funds will be cut off. This would mean the end of "Gamaliel" for him. And Warren has lived too long in Marion to want to return.

The workers should not burden themselves with any illusions as to Governmental help in abolishing the degrading 12-Hour Day. It was the Government that broke the Steel Strike in 1919 and crushed the most promising campaign of the workers for the 8-Hour Day. Gary's policy of refusing to deal with union labor leaders at any time" was then translated by the Government into the policy of ruthless repression, as declarely expressed by the Sheriff of Clairton, Pa., Sept. 21, 1919, in his order "that there should be no meetings of any kind anywhere." All the workers can expect from the Government is golden promises and lead—performances—police brutality, Black-Cossackism, army terrorism, and myriads of strikebreaking injunctions.

Gompers Blind in Glove with Gary

Yet the workers owe more thanks to Gompers than even to Gary and his Government for the continuation of the 12-Hour Day.

Gompers is asleep at the switch. He is soldiering on the job. Gompers refuses to initiate a campaign of organization amongst the steel workers. The unionization campaign of 1919 was possible only because Gompers found it pleasant to idle his time away in Paris under the excuse of helping to frame the bloody Treaty of Versailles against the workers of the world. On his return Gompers was reluctant to permit the steel workers to strike against Steel Tyranny. Once the strike was on, Gompers and his lieutenants of the type of Teagle did their best to sabotage the strike.

Today Gompers is criminally wasting the workers' money and energy hounding and persecuting the militants of the trade unions instead of organizing the great mass of the unorganized. If Gompers were to use only a fraction of the Federations' resources for the building up, instead, of working hand in glove with William J. Burns and Gary for the destruction of the Labor Movement, the workers of America would long ago have left behind them the Medieval 12-Hour Day. It is Gompers and his ilk who are mainly responsible for the fact that the American Steel Industry—the most highly developed in the world—is the only steel industry working on a 12-Hour basis.

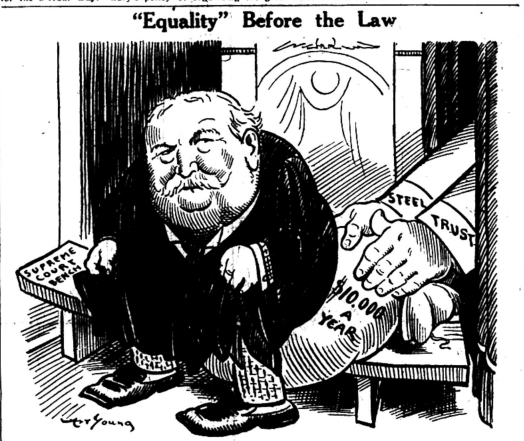
Time to Call a Halt

The 12-Hour Day Report of Gary's Committee is an ominous document to the working class. It must be remembered that Gary was the High Priest of the Open Shop Drive of 1920. This Report is a challenge to the workers. It is a warning of what is coming. This Report is the herald of the new fierce drive being prepared against the workers. Gary is a man of action. When Gary talks he means business. An the only business Gary knows is that of the workers coining more of their blood into profits for their employers.

There is but one language Gary and the capitalists can understand. This is the language of power—organisational power.

Will the workers accept the challenge hurled at them? Or will they bend their backs beneath the yoke of a Dictatorship of Steel and Profits?

"Equality" Before the Law



Dear Readers! Do not laugh as you look at the above cartoon by Art Young, and then read the words of the Memorial Day Address of "Bill the Fat" Taft, at Cincinnati, Ohio, when he said, "The only court in which all stand on an equality * * * is the Supreme Court of the United States."

War Vets in War on KKK n West Va.

By H. E. KEAS

(By Wire to "The Worker")

RICHMOND, WEST VA.—The eld War Veterans, the fighting ganization of ex-service men, hich is organized labor's staunch-t support in this county, have covered a nest of reaction in scholas County, a nest of thugs d plug-uglies who are at all times the beck and call of the "open op" employers in this boss-ridden ate.

Learning of the attempts made by e Klan to run Lawson McMillion, his president of the W. W. V. out the town of Richmond, where the ate organization of the veterans s its headquarters, Emil E. olmes, national secretary of the . W. V., made a special trip from ashington to come to McMillion's aistance. Several meetings were ranged for him among the lumber-en and miners of the vicinity. As on, as Holmes arrived, he held a reet meeting at Richmond, the first e a labor meeting of this nature s ever been held in that vicinity.

Laying special stress upon the ght-hour day, sanitary living con-itions for the workers and better hools, his talk was enthusiastically ceived by the assembled workers. pparently the K. K. K. became alarmed at the enthusiastic reception iven to Holmes and the following ay when the main meeting in Moose all was to be held, the building as found locked up, two blind usicians who were hired to play at e meeting were advised by the lan to leave the vicinity or incur e consequences, logging trains ere stopped from coming into wn to keep the thousands of lum-er jacks from entering the town nd coming to the assistance of the eterans.

Knowing the sympathy of the mbermen for the organization hich they consider to be the fight-g labor vanguard in this little Si-eria of America, the mine and lum-er barons of Eastern West Virginia re apparently determined to vigor-usly oppose all attempts of the orkers to organize their forces for etter living conditions.

But their efforts will be without ail, for the lumbermen in the hills, nd the miners of the valleys are ot only determined to solidly sup-ort this fighting organization of the orkers, but are working with the ut purpose to abolish the vicious yellow dog" system now the rule lmost of the mines and camps in hat vicinity

Car Strikers to Organize Unorganized

(Special to "The Worker")

SCHENECTADY, N. Y.—The street car strike, which has been in progress here for two weeks, has inaugurated a new form of strike, at least for this part of the country, since the address delivered here by H. M. Wicks, labor editor of "The Workers."

Wicks came here on the invitation of the Central Labor Council, to address its regular meeting on the problems of the day. On that same evening the street car strikers were meeting to hear the final offer of the company. The negotiations fell thru and the strikers determined to continue the fight. One of the street car men's delegates brought Wicks to their meeting after he finished speaking before the Central Council.

He told them that since they were on strike they had a fine opportunity to do some organization work that was badly needed in Schenectady in the way of organizing the unorganized workers of the large industries there, especially the General Electric works. Instead of continuing a "folded arms" stripe, the "vacation" should be used for the purpose of strengthening organized labor in Schenectady. A few days of that sort of work and the employing class would begin to bring pressure to bear upon the company to take the strikers back in order to stop the activity of intensive organization.

Many of the leading members of the Central Labor Council are cooperating with the strikers in the work of organizing the unorganized as they are convinced the entire local labor movement will gain thru the application of this tactic.

Cannon Stirs 1,500 in His Chicago Talk

(Special to "The Worker")

CHICAGO, Ill.—Fifteen hundred workers crowded Wicker Park Hall here when James P. Cannon, chairman of the Workers Party, told the story of "The Fifth Year of the Russian Revolution." His brilliant illustrations of the severe difficulties of the Russian workers in the past and the method with which they were overcome, drew volleys of applause from the audience.

Seldom has the story of the Russian Revolution been told in such frank terms. Cannon dealt with the present industrial conditions and showed by facts and figures the tremendous advances made, and how the real wages of the workers would increase in proportion to the improvement of industry. But he also mercilessly pointed to the many shortcomings which still exist.

How the period of war Communism had forced the whole attention of the Workers' Republic upon the building of a strong army to meet the counter-revolutionary bandits and the centralization of all activities in the political state without being able to give due consideration to economic expediency and the upbuilding of industry, was illustrated by Cannon.

"Now peace has come to Russia," he declared and it is now possible to center all efforts on the rehabilitation of economic life.

Whenever the capitalist papers speak of the new Economic Policy as a retreat, remember that the Russian workers are using the available capitalist methods of production in order to create the new methods which have not as yet come into being, and they are making no bones about it, Cannon said.

He made a strong revolutionary note by showing how the Russian workers were using the best of their energies to further the world revolution and establish a Soviet Republic thruout the world. How effective his lecture was can best be judged by the fact that 300 copies of the pamphlet written by Cannon were brought to the hall and sold, with a large demand for more.

The meeting was held under the auspices and for the benefit of "The Voice of Labor." It will mean a lot of new readers and new supporters.

West Frankfort, Ill., Sunday, June 3, 7.30 p. m., Public Theatre.

Kansas City, Mo., Wednesday, June 6, 8 p. m., Fraternity Hall, 1125 Walnut St.

Following the Kansas City meeting, Comrade Cannon will continue his work in the territory surrounding Kansas City and in the Kansas Coal fields from June 7th to June 17th.

SPOILED IN TRANSIT

SAN PEDRO, Cal.—Two hundred strike breakers brought into the harbor on the steamship Dorothy Alexandria were not allowed to land and will be taken back to San Francisco. They were hired to break the waterfront strike in this port of Los Angeles but came into the harbor singing the strike song: "Hold the fort, for we are coming; Union men be strong." The shipping interests are looking for the agitators who spoiled a fine consignment of scabs in transit.

N. Y. T. U. E. L. Has Picnic on June 2nd

Tickets are spreading like wild-fire for the Trade Union Educational League Picnic which will be held Saturday, June 2, at Fuhrer's Elmhurst Park, Elmhurst, Long Island—within easy reach from every point of the city and fare only five cents.

Militants of every trade are coming in daily for more and more tickets. Among those who have taken tickets so far are the Metal Workers, Automobile Workers, Cloak Makers, Waist and Dressmakers, Amalgamated Clothing Workers, Knit Goods Workers, Cap Makers, Building Trades, Food Workers as well as fraternal organizations and friends.

With eagerness the militant forces are lining up behind the first affair of the New York League: 1st, because they feel duty bound to help spread the campaign for Amalgamation and a Labor Party which necessarily implies the raising of finances for the purpose; 3rd, by no means least, they took tife trouble to investigate and found an absolute guarantee for a corking good time in the following basic facts:—an excellent band of music, athletic games, a grand march of all militants carrying banners of their respective trades and a buffet with the best of refreshments served by truly revolutionary food workers.

Tickets, posters, and throwaways can be obtained at office of Trade Union Educational League, 208 East 12th St., Room 8.

Greek Workers in Drive for $10,000 Press Fund

Greek workers in New York City plan to launch a campaign to raise $10,000 for the enlargement of their printing plant. As a result of this improvement, the "Voice of the Worker," official organ of the Greek Federation, Workers Party, will be doubled in size as a weekly, and plans are launched for starting a daily.

Burns and Harding Praise "Friend" Gompers

At no time in all the history of American labor have the bosses and their paid agents been as open as they are now in praising Samuel Gompers, head of the American Federation of Labor. Almost on the same day, this past week, not only President Harding, strikebreaker in the struggle of the coal, railroad and textile workers last year, but "Detektive" William J. Burns, head of the government secret service, and hounder of radicals, joined in fulsome eulogy of labor's misleader.

In approving of Gompers' attacks on the militants in the labor movement, Burns told the 100-percenters of the Shore Kiwanis Club, at Atlantic City, that:

"Sam Gompers and I do not sleep together, but we are going to be for Gompers strong."

"Golf Ball" Harding gave Gompers a boost while attending the First Presbyterian Church in Washington. The pastor, Rev. Dr. John Brittan Clark, had devoted most of the sermon to attacking radicalism in the labor movement. He eulogized Gompers for his attack on the militants in Seattle, Minneapolis and elsewhere.

After the sermon, President Harding went down to the pulpit and, in the words of the Associated Press, "expressed his appreciation of the minister's declarations."

Workers of America! That is the picture presented by the head of your national organization in the hour when Gary calls for the continuation of the 12-hour day and a new "open shop" war on all labor. How do you like it?

Labor United for 1924, the Chicago Plan

(By Federated Press)

CHICAGO.—What may be expected in results from the forthcoming coalition convention of all labor parties and labor and farmer organizations is outlined by Jay G. Brown. Brown is national secretary, Farmer-Labor party, which issued the invitations to all the other groups to assemble in Chicago July 3, to agree, if possible, upon united working class political action independent of the Republican and Democratic parties.

"A federation of organizations, a coalition of parties is possible," says Brown. "The general affiliation of labor, farm and political groups with a central organization committed to such general principles as can be agreed upon should be effected at the coming convention. This should not interfere with the autonomy of any of the affiliated bodies. Each should be free after the convention to continue its work of propaganda and education in its own way and along lines acceptable to itself.

"If this can be done the next logical step may be to arrange for the holding either of joint or simultaneous conventions early in 1924 for the naming of joint national candidates upon a platform to which all will subscribe and a ticket for the success of which each of the affiliated groups will take off its coat and earnestly work.

"Questions of finance, affiliation costs, how to meet the widely differing election laws of the separate states and the problems concerning party names and standing in states where already established will arise. Difficulties in plenty may be imagined."

TOKIO.—Prospects of a Japanese Labor party for independent political action by the organized workers and farmers are becoming somewhat more definite. Japanese organized labor is rapidly abandoning the old time syndicalism and beginning to swing into the freer field of political movement.

An immediate incentive has been the interest felt by the workers as the result of the recent victory in the fight against the socalled dangerous thoughts bill. They are finding that to conduct such struggles more effectively they have to have a political party of their own.

The difficulties are many. The reactionary government of Japan will probably not tolerate such an attempt on the part of its enemy. The Japanese proletariat, with little political education, might lack the support of many of the veteran workers of conservative type. There is a danger of fake labor leaders, petty politicians and the kind creeping in and, there is no money.

Pittsburgh Labor Unites for Defense

(Special to "The Worker")

PITTSBURGH, PA.—The provisional Labor Defense and Free Speech Committee of Western Pennsylvania, which was organized immediately following the raid on the headquarters of the Workers Party of Dist. 5, when 21 workers were arrested, thrown into jail and held there at exorbitant bail for 12 days, but now have been released into a permanent Defense Conference.

Labor in Western Pennsylvania was antagonized by this outrageous raid and arrest of workers who fought side by side with the striking miners. The workers in Western Pennsylvania realize the importance of a united front of all labor on this immediate problem. This defense organization was established to help the workers arrested in this raid and to defend all workers who may fall under the iron heel of the industrial magnates.

There were 73 delegates at the Defense Conference representing organizations of different shades of opinion such as labor unions, educational and fraternal organizations, also the Workers Party and the Socialist Party.

Detroit Says Cannon Talk Aided Party

By EDGAR OWENS

(Special to "The Worker")

DETROIT, Mich.—The James P. Cannon meeting was very gratifying to the local comrades and sympathizers. It is felt here that meetings of this kind are of supreme importance because a subscription to the Party organ was given with each admission. Comrade Cannon's lecture on "Russia Today" was a welcome corrective and relief after the studied propaganda stories now being carried in the capitalist press.

The pity is that more workers do not take advantage of meetings of this sort to get a few of the facts regarding Russia.

Busy at Debs Meeting

The literature agent of the Workers Party was very much in evidence and many copies of the masterful pamphlet "Underground Radicalism —An Open Letter to Debs" were disposed of to people entering and leaving the meeting addressed here by Eugene V. Debs.

City Convention June 17th.

The City Central Committee of Local Detroit has issued a call for a city convention June 17, at which time delegates will be elected for the July 3rd convention, called by the Farmer-Labor Party.

The comrades are enthusiastic about the formation of a Labor Party, and the city convention will inspire an interesting discussion.

Challenge Proletarian Party

At its last meeting the City Central Committee decided to issue a challenge to the Proletarian Party to debate the question of a Labor Party, and certain other points of policy and tactics upon which the two parties differ.

This debate, if the challenge is accepted, should prove of more than passing interest, and should serve to allay much confusion as to the pressing need of bona fide independent working class political action.

International Picnic June 3rd.

Arrangements have been completed for the Grand International Picnic, Sunday, June 3d, at Redford Park. The picnic will be under the joint auspices of the Friends of Soviet Russia, Defense Committee, and the Workers Party.

Hamburg Conference Unites Center and Right Against Working Class Revolution

(Special Cable from to "The Worker")

HAMBURG, GERMANY.—The spiritual unity that has long existed between the Second International and the Center leaders of the Vienna (2½) International has been cemented by organic unity in the course of this week. Since this unity means the "Second International" is a synonym of treachery to the working class, it had to be abandoned.

The Vienna International, under the leadership of the half-witted anarchist Friedrich Adler, ceased to exist. Friedrich Adler was totally discredited among the workers of Europe because of his cynical centrist vacillations covering the entire period of its existence.

So both Internationals agreed to commit suicide and join their forces in the creation of a new one. The new monstrosity is to be known as the "Socialist Workers International".

That its career will be equally as infamous as that of its inglorious predecessor was guaranteed by the adoption of an ambiguous program and the official blessing by Emil Vandervelde, assassin of the Belgium working class and Minister of Justice to the King of the Belgians during the Imperialist Orgy. This blood-streaked monster climbed upon a chair and led the conference in howling "Long Live the International." (Until the next war breaks out.)

It will be remembered that Vandervelde, in his official position as defender of the King of the Belgians and lackey of British Amperialism, signed the covenant of the League of Nations, the Black International of Capitalism. That the newly created Socialist Workers' International will follow closely in the footsteps of the League of Nations was evident when much time was devoted to rabid attacks upon Soviet Russia led by the Menshevik hireling of Allied Imperialism, Abramovitch, who openly avocated that the new International take the lead in organizing guerilla bands for counter-revolutionary puposes in Soviet Russia.

Still Social Patriots

Adoption of a program that left loopholes for a Millerandism, or Socialist participation in capitalist cabinets, in its worst form proved that the participants in the congress are still social patriots and that the only reason they have patched up the so-called International that was wrecked by their own betrayal of the working class in 1914 is because their respective governments have patched up their own differences.

When their governments are at peace, the Social Patriots pay lip service to Internationalism. When war is declared they fly to the defense of their capitalist fatherland and abandon their International pretenses.

American Delegates Present

Four American Delegates were present, but made no impression upon the congress. This delegation included, the Germanophile editor of the Milwaukee Leader, Victor L. Berger, and the pro-German, Morris Hillquit, who wrote articles for the American Metropolitan Magazine praising the treachery of Scheidemann & Co. for supporting the Kaiser during the war. Jacob Panken, a Jewish lawyer and part of the Hillquit machine in New York, gave an interview to the capitalist press that conveyed the general pessimism that pervaded the entire congress. Panken said:

"The congress has shown us what the situation in Europe is and the hopelessness of the delegates, their lack of energy. The spirit of defeatism among the delegates made a big impression on us."

Fear Spectre of Communism

The spectre of Communism haunts the renegades of the Socialist Workers' International, no less than it haunts their capitalist masters in Europe. The deep pessimism of the delegates was due to the fact that they see all around them the growing influence of the Communist International.

While, their twin in infamy, Amsterdam, solemnly declared at its Hague conference it would resist with all its might another capitalist war and then failed to act in the invasion of the Ruhr, the Communists stepped into the breach and are challenging capitalism on all fronts, thereby gaining tremendous influence among the masses of all Europe. This is why we hear the deep and lugubrious wail emanating from the camp of the social patriots at Hamburg.

Communist Member of British Parliament Talks on New Premier

LONDON.—Stanley Baldwin, appointed British premier to succeed Bonar Law, resigned, stands out among the conservative party leaders as of unusual ability, according to the opinion of J. T. Walton Newbold, Communist member of parliament and the best informed man in the house of commons on financial and business ramifications.

"Baldwin belongs," says Newbold, "to a family of Midland and South Wales iron and steel manufacturers who have made a huge fortune in the industry, but who have sold their business concerns to a syndicate of bankers, belonging to the same group of international credit houses as stands behind Krupp, the German ironmaster. The Baldwins are now sleeping partners in the concern, drawing a regular income from bonds and similar holdings when they have not transferred these holdings entirely. They have joined the ranks of the rentier (unearned income) class. They have become members of the class from which are recruited the men particularly versed in the arts of government.

"Mr. Baldwin was formerly a director of the family steel works and of the largest railway company in the country."

Picnic for Buksa Defense

YORKVILLE, O.—Yorkville Roumanian branch, Workers Party, with the assistance of the comrades from the other two Yorkville branches of the party, held a picnic in Dispatch Run, which resulted in a collection for the defense of Comrade John Buksa, recently convicted in a Wheeling, W. Va., court of "distributing seditious literature," which totalled $62.63.

The speakers of the day were Comrade G. Barbat, from the Roumanian branch of Canton, O., and District Organizer H. E. Keas, from Cleveland, O.

Equity Gives The Antigone of Sophocles

A Review by H. M. WICKS

A wit once said, the main theme of all Greek tragedy is: "If you do not kill mother, I will!"

In the "Antigone" of Sophocles, presented by the Equity Players at three special matinees, the matricide had occurred previous to the opening of the drama tragedy.

Oedipus, king of Thebes, according to the Odyssey, married his mother after murdering his father, without knowing the facts in the case. Four children were born to this union, before Oedipus caused the self-inflicted death of his wife and mother.

His two sons, Polynices and Eteokles fight for the throne of Thebes after his death. In mortal combat they mutually slay each other. Then Creon, brother-in-law of Oedipus, succeeding to the throne, forbade the burial of Polynices, as he had stigmatized this brother as the aggressor against the state.

It is at this point that the tragedy of Antigone, as produced by the Equity players, begins.

Antigone, daughter of Oedipus and sister of Polynices, protests to her sister, Ismene, that their brother should have decent burial, instead of lying a prey to carrion fowl. Ismene shrinks from the contemplation of violating the mandate of the King. With her own hands Antigone performs the burial rights, at the sacrifice of her life. Creon, in his mad course, lost his own son, Haemon, and his wife Eurydice, both by suicide, and received their curses on his head.

Edith Wynne Matthison, as Antigone, brought to the part a lofty dignity befitting this imposing character, while the Creon of Charles Rann Kennedy reached dramatic heights that have seldom been surpassed on the American stage the past quarter century. An occasional incoherent rant prevented his making a masterpiece of the character. The Ismene of Margaret Gage was far from convincing, but we forgave her for its defects because the program tells us that it was she who devised and directed the excellent Choral dances.

Nearly all the the cast were amateurs, many of whom had never appeared on the professional stage before. The production is the result of the combined work of the Drama, Music and Art Departments of the Bennett School of Liberal and Applied Arts, Millbrook, New York.

The incompetents, who pose as dramatic critics on the capitalist dailies of New York, imagine Antigone to have been one of the earliest feminists. Being totally ignorant of historical materialism, they are utterly incapable of reviewing the great tragedies of the ancient Greeks.

The reason that these ancient tragedies reek with the matricide and various forms of patricide is because they were all written about the first class-struggle in all the history of the world—the struggle between the dying matriarchy and the rising patriarchy. In the Antigone of Sophocles, we find the patriarchy already established as the dominant system, but the spirit of the matriarchy still persists and has sufficient virility to revolt against the property rights of the patriarchy.

Sophocles departed from the spirit of the old legend to dramatize the misdeeds of Oedipus, but in spite of this the class struggle between man and woman, taking the form of a sex struggle is evident. The tragic poet, Aeschylus, a contemporary of Sophocles, is far more intelligible when we read the myth in the light of Marxism.

We could not avoid the thought that the understanding of historical materialism by the producers and actors in the great tragedies written in this transition period from primitive communism, and the matriarchy, to private property, and the patriarchy is essential to a competent presentation. This was woefully lacking in the Antigone as presented in New York. Instead of reading the lines in the sense of the period in which they were written, the cast tried to impart bourgeois ethics to a situation where such ethics are unknown.

Release New Russian Film Soon

Following the tremendous success of "Russia Through the Shadows" in all parts of the United States, interest is keen in the new F. S. R. release, "The Fifth Year," which is a nine-reel portrayal of a year's life and development in the Workers' Republic.

"THE FIFTH YEAR" will be released July 1st. The proceeds of the picture will be used for the maintenance of orphan homes in Russia. Organizations desiring to get a date should write at once to the Friends of Soviet Russia, Pictorial Department, 201 W. 13th St., New York.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn. — The Minneapolis Trades and Labor Assembly has called a special meeting for June 13, 8 p. m., at Richmond Hall, to discuss the Labor Party Conference to be held in Chicago, July 3, and to select delegates. The call for the meeting is signed by the Assembly's organizers, Dan W. Stevens and George N. Meyers.

BANDITS . . . By H. M. WICKS

"CHINESE AND AMERICAN BANDITS"

[illegible] in China [illegible] Chinese [illegible] opportunities for [illegible] capitalists. The seething millions of potential wage slaves [illegible] not even of raw materials, of every kind are incentives to [illegible] capitalists. [illegible] Chinese [illegible] Americans to [illegible] fortune at the hands of the rapacious hordes of capitalist imperialism. Most of the great powers have their [illegible] spheres of influence in China, and Britain, France, United States and Japan [illegible] that they are being cheated, so they clutter with some Chinaman who agrees to enter upon a career of banditry, as an excuse for our patriots to get hysterical about protecting American lives and property.

No matter what complications may arise, the worker should understand that the whole thing is a carefully rehearsed show for the purpose of preparing the American public for the [illegible] part of the financial and industrial banditry of the United States, and that no matter how hysterical the capitalist press gets over Chinese bandits, our job is to deal a mortal blow at the richest opportunity for [illegible]-grown variety.

The Chinese question means war eventually and now is the time to begin agitation against the working class of this country again being sacrificed in order to make the world safe for imperialism.

One of the most effective blows against capitalism is to refuse to fight its battles.

Force A. F. of L. to Give Aid to Big Organization Campaign

By JOSEPH MANLEY
Organizer, Eastern District, T. U. E. L.

The American Federation of Labor has been asked by the Farmers' National Council to organize two million farmers who have been driven by bankruptcy from the farms to wage earning occupations.

The A. F. of L. it is also announced, will organize women workers, 18,000 or 20,000 of them, in Washington, D. C.

Rumors are also going the rounds about the possibility of the Committee that has charge of the funds some $70,000 left over from the steel campaign, starting a new drive to organize the steel workers.

These three items would indicate that the American Federation of Labor is bestirring itself, and will soon launch a tremendous drive to organize the unorganized.

We are sure that little alarm will be felt in the ranks of the Manufacturers' Association, Ben Hooper, in speaking before this convention, struck the typical official note when he said that Gompers was standing like a lion against the introduction of socialist or bolshevist ideas into the trade union movement.

Gompers is so busy killing bolshevisks in the trade union movement that he has little time to devote to such a minor problem as organizing the unorganized.

The attack upon the Seattle Central Labor Council is an indication of the calibre of leadership of this great "democrat." How much wages and railroad fare did it cost to launch this attack? How many millions of unorganized workers did the agent of Gompers fly by as he rode to Seattle, the latest scene of "scotching the serpent of bolshevism."

This poor old man said on his recovery from his recent illness, that he would "buckle on his armor." The next thing we heard of him was, that he was basking in the sunshine of Atlantic City. Is it any wonder, in view of this, that the workers of America refuse to follow the leadership of this man. He seems to be blind to the fact that the unorganized condition of the workers in America, is a world disgrace.

The rank and file everywhere are moving discontentedly. The present period of prosperity, altho rapidly waning, should result in monster additions to all our unions. However, the rank and file have no confidence in the old outworn and threadbare phrases about "the benefits of organization." How often have they seen these benefits degenerate into organized scabbery, as in the case of the recent railroad strike. The rank and file will have no more of this bunk.

Those that are organized are demanding that their unions everywhere be amalgamated. One after another, the state federations and international unions, are declaring for this policy.

The unorganized are saying "What have you to offer?" They will have nothing less than a program that appeals to their imagination and idealism; that will move them en masse.

The Trade Union Educational League issues: Amalgamation and a Labor Party, are moving the rank and file of the organized. The new slogan of the T. U. E. L., "Organize the Unorganized," by appealing to the militants, to become active on the job that the officials have either neglected, prevented, or fallen down on, will go a long way to organize such a proportion of the unorganized that will result in a militant labor movement with a leadership, that really represents it.

Karl Marx is Quoted in Pollock's "Fool" at Times Square Theatre

By JOHN DALE

"From each according to his ability, to each according to his needs."

Karl Marx wrote that we will be able to inscribe these words upon our banners only in the highest phase of the Communist society.

But Channing Pollock puts these words, even quite casually, into the mouth of his hero in "The Fool", now at the Times Square Theatre, in discussing the goal toward which he is struggling.

The large audiences that crowd this theatre, in spite of the warm weather, flaw not Karl Marx's "Criticism of the Gotha Program", nor Nikolai Lenin's discussion of it in his "State and Revolution", so the words picturing the relation of human beings under Communism fall quite innocently from the lips of Pollock's "Daniel Gilchrist".

Pollock has given us a good play in "The Fool". One may enjoy it the more by not expecting too much from it. It should be accepted as a cross section of, rather than a solution of the problems of life.

Daniel Gilchrist's father dies and leaves him a fortune. Instead of squandering the money in licentious living, young Gilchrist goes into the church and begins giving his money away to the poor. He denounces the rich parishioners, and finally loses his job when he takes "The Garment Strike" as the subject of his Christmas sermon. Not that the church wardens were interested in the garment industry, but they had big holdings in the West Virginia coal mines where trouble threatens. Gilchrist's outlook is not brightened by the fact that his sweetheart breaks her engagement because she, like others, thinks him a fool for "talking Bolshevism."

Gilchrist accepts a job for the coal corporation, but quits, instead of waiting to get fired, when his plan for treating with the miners is rejected. Later we see him in "Overcoat Hall", a little settlement he has established, where he tries to do good as he sees it thru personal contact with unfortunate humans. Even these, like the others, think him crazy for giving his money away, and there is a scene that closely parallels that part of Andreyev's "Anathema", where the mob cries for, "a sign". It is during these days of leisure, with its time for reading, that Gilchrist is supposed to drift toward that working class philosophy that makes it possible for him to slip a quotation from Marx into one of his speeches. But the play ends when it becomes most interesting.

Harry C. Browne makes an impressive and convincing Gilchrist. Too much cannot be said of the excellence of Sarah Solhern's work as "Mary Margaret", the crippled keeper of "Overcoat Hall", who learns to walk again during the excitement incidental to the attack on her friend. Fredrik Vogeding scores big as Umanski, the "foreign agitator" in the coal mines, who shows what even a "foreigner" is capable of when released from enslaving toil underground.

The play hits hard at the frailties of the rich. It is unflinching in its exposure of strike-breaking methods used by the mine owners. It is worthy of the success which seems to be its lot.

(Special to "The Worker")

BOSTON, MASS.—So well o the official machine working at convention of the Internati Longshoremen's Association, closed here, that President Ant Clopek, 12 vice-presidents and secretary-treasurer were re-elec to their respective offices in than fifteen minutes.

The convention was consistent reactionary from the day the fell on its opening session until close. It was opened with all patriotic trappings which disgr American labor conventions. Ma Curley of Boston and the gover of the state attended a banq given for the delegates at the h rious Hotel Westminster. flirting with these capitalist po cians may have had something to with the defeat of the resolution favor of the creation of an Indepe nt Political Party of Labor, wh was ruthlessly steam-rolled by machine.

On Tuesday of convention w the delegates were taken thru government penitentiary on D Island, under the personal direct of the deputy commissioner of pr ons, just like bourgeois tour sight-seeing.

Smashes "Amalgamation"

In his report to the convent President Clopek suggested something be done for closer affil tion in the marine industry. T the radical group, small in numb introduced the Amalgamation re lution. Immediately henchmen the machine began talking ab closer affiliation, and one delega Madson, from Portland, Ore., an ganizer and vice-president, a the delegates that he had recei talked to Andrew Furuseth of Seamen and that the old man s in favor of a Marine Trades Coun similar to the Building Trades D partment of the American Fede tion of Labor.

All the labor fakirs and th henchmen on the floor tried to be the fundamental question of amal gamation with eulogy of the glories a marine federation.

The resolution was defeated, only after the discussion had gro so heated that many impo truths about various craft organi tions in the marine industry h bing on each other had come light. So convincing were the ar ments in favor of amalgamation t the machine was afraid to send report of the debate out to the me bership, so another henchman mo to strike the whole discussion fr the record, which was done.

The crowning infamy of the c vention came with the vote to a liate with the International Tra port Workers, a part of the yell International of Amsterdam, th by making the Longshoremen Union of this country an adjunct the hireling blackguards of League of Nations, who use th organization for the purpose of traying the workers of the wh world. It is a fit affiliation Clopek and his machine.

Clopek is certainly the spirit descendant of T. V. O'Conn former president of the Longsho men's union, who was rewarded his treachery to the working cl by appointment to a job as Uni States Shipping Board Comm sioner at $15,000 per.

The militants in this organizat are rapidly gaining power and fluence and are diligently work toward the destruction of the re tionary Clopek machine in order t a real union can be created amo the marine transport workers, stead of the miserable caricature unionism that now exists.

Ignore Labor at LaFollette Rail "Con"fab

BY THOMAS O'FLAHERTY
Editor of "The Voice of Labor"

CHICAGO—The barrage of eloquence and denunciation directed against the first gathering here of the newly organized National Conference on Valuation of American Railroads, by the representatives of heavy industry would lead a visitor from Mars to believe that what was taking place in Chicago was not a conference of manicured and polished gentlemen, on whose shoulders the inequalities of capitalism rested like a feather, but a convention of determined revolutionists, who felt the time was ripe to put an End to capitalism with all its works and pomps.

The business leaders of Chicago attacked the parley and hurled the names of Lenin and Trotzky at the respectable heads of U. S. Senator Robert Marion La Follette and the "Great Reformer," William Jennings Bryan. This was an insidious attempt, declared John M. Glenn, secretary of the Manufacturers' Association of Illinois and the press agent of big business, "to deprive property owners of their holdings."

The following "labor leaders" graced the conference with their presence: W. G. Lee, of the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen; Timothy Healy, of the Brotherhood of Firemen and Oilers; E. H. Fitzgerald, of the Brotherhood of Railroad and Steamship Clerks; T. C. Cashen, of the Switchmen's Union, and Warren S. Stone, of the Engineers.

The conference does not believe in "open covenants openly arrived at." The important business was transacted in private. The public got its ears tickled at two open sessions.

La Follette was the leader of the conference. Smiling like an insurance agent he introduced the speakers with well selected phrases that pleased the speakers and hurt nobody. One would imagine from hearing the flattering introductions that the comfortable looking functionaries who railed at the railroads were veterans in the class struggle who had spent half their lives in jail. La Follette explained his uncompromising position with regard to the railroads. They must be valued, not at what they could be reproduced for today but at what was actually put into them. Whose money was put into these railroads? Whose sweat and blood was put into them? Was the money that was loaned by the banks to the railroad financiers the savings of the so-called railroad builders? Very likely not. It was the money of the people who deposit their savings in the banks on which they receive three or four per cent and this money is loaned to the railroad builders with which they hire labor power which lays the tracks, builds the rolling stock and then operates it. There was very little consideration shown to the workers during the speech-making. Once or twice he was referred to apologetically by the most daring of the speakers.

The star performer of the conference was "Colonel" William Jennings Bryan. He arrived at the conference with the scalps of several mythical Darwinian monkeys hanging at his belt. After laying the ghost of evolution in the South he felt in good condition for a tilt with the demon of Wall Street. This dragon has furnished the "Colonel" with a meal ticket for many years. So he keeps his silver tongue polished and ready for use in case the La Follette enterprise may develop serious proportions. The "Colonel" should scotch any ambitions he may cherish of trying to get ahead of the Senator. Reformers are dangerous to each other.

The "Colonel" was given a full-some introduction by the Senator. While they were members of different parties that did not mean anything. Both parties were full of good men, and the opposite.

The general opinion here is that La Follette is nursing his presidential boom and that the labor fakers are supplying the funds to nurse the child along. The coming labor party convention is looked on with concern by La Follette and his gang of bourgeois reformers who do not want to abolish the existing system but hope to eliminate the inequalities by passing laws to curb the great monopolies.

La Follette is trying to capture the growing discontent of labor and the farmers with the two capitalist prostitutes, the Democratic and Republican parties, and he hopes with the aid of the labor fakers to hitch this tremendous force to his political chariot and ride into the White House victoriously in the next presidential election. These men have no solution for the problems that affect the workers today. A Labor Party representing the interests of the workers and working farmers is the need of the hour.

UPI YOUNG WORKERS!

Hungry Germany Fights

By LUDWIG LORE

The situation in Germany is daily assuming a more catastrophal aspect. The disturbances in the Ruhr district are rapidly developing into a general strike. Already trouble is brewing in Central Germany. In Dresden, the capital of Saxony, there have been bloody clashes between the unemployed and the police. In other Saxon industrial towns similar disturbances have been reported. In Berlin, too—according to the Associated Press dispatches—uprisings are feared, and everywhere these disturbances are laid at the door of the communist movement of Germany.

And yet it is quite obvious that—in the Ruhr valley as well as in Dresden—the upheaval is purely economic in its nature. The misery of the people has reached such dimensions, that it has become so desperate, so unbearable, their want is so terrible and the impossibility of solving the situation that even by the most normal means so remote and so hopeless, that these starving masses are forced to seek—and find—some outlet for their desperation.

In the Ruhr district there is work to be had. Workingmen can find employment in its mines and steel mills if their tired, starved bodies could stand the strain of the double-shift system. But why labor, when the pay is so miserable that it permits only the satisfaction of one's most primitive wants?! In the past years even the quickest and most skilled worker has not been able to earn enough to feed his family and to restore his own exhausted labor power. Then came, in the last few weeks, the epochal decline in the value of the Mark, reducing its purchasing power, almost over night, by 100 percent. Four weeks ago a million Mark was worth $50.00. Today a million paper Mark equals $16.25. This sudden devaluation means enormous profits into the pockets of capital, on account of the resulting sky-rocketing prices. The worker as usual is footing the bill.

Not only the capitalist, the authorities and the capitalist press are at raved against the workers. Their own leaders, their labor union officials and the social-democratic press are preaching submission to the long suffering proletariat, are demanding that it make no difficulties—in this time of "public need"! The national united front, the after-war civil peace, must be upheld under all circumstances. If the capitalist refuses to increase wages, there is nothing left for the despised wage slave but to starve—to the everlasting honor of the noble harmony between the labor union bureaucracy and the bosses.

And the strike came, nevertheless, for in the Ruhr district the Communists are strong, and the cringing servility demanded by the well-fed labor union leaders is foreign to their nature. Communist and syndicalist workingmen supported the strike and began it. Fifty-five percent increase in wages was the first effect of this spontaneous example of real mass-action, that was dictated neither by the Communist Party nor by "Moscow." But Stinnes, Thyssen & Co. will have to pay more before they calm the storm that they have raised by their bold starvation policy. In the meantime the revolutionary elements have taken the preservation of order into their own hands. From the various labor unions—miners received their representatives—patrols and local security committees have been organized to prevent plunder, to police the localities in question. If these uprisings were really communistic in their nature, our comrades would, of course, never have thought of giving up important political functions into the hands of their bitterest opponents when there was not the slightest necessity for it.

In Saxony, too, purely economic causes precipitated the present difficulties. During the last month unemployment there increased in leaps and bounds. In March 220,808 persons drew unemployment benefit, in April their number had increased to 670,350, and at the beginning of May this number had risen to 900,000. For every 100 proffered positions there were 340 men looking for work. On the 12th of April there were 860,000 requests for work that could not be filled, as compared to 590,403 on the 15th of March. The statistics of Sick Benefit Funds show that on the 1st of March 13,123,682 persons were recorded as employed, but on the 1st of April only 12,470,159. In March every 17th worker in Germany was unemployed, in the beginning of April every 4th worker was working parttime, usually three or four days a week. One half of all of these partimers work for one half the usual pay.

Saxony, the German industrial state par excellence, was most critically affected by this crisis. There for it is only natural that the inherently radical Saxon labor movement should first rebel against this impossible situation, when prices soar dizzily on the one hand and unemployment became general on the other. Surely, the Communists have no cause to protect the holy alliance between capital and its socialdemocratic underlings. But there is no intention on their part, so much seems absolute certain, to exploit the present situation for the purpose of a general proletarian revolution—revolution in the sense of an ultimate overthrow of capitalism. It would be utter madness to provoke the final struggle at a time when the French and the Belgians are in the country with several hundred thousand troops, when the railroads and all other means of transportation are in the hands of the foreign enemy, when German and French capitalism stand ready to drown the revolution in blood.

A VISIT FROM JACOB TASK

"The Worker" office had a visit this week from Jacob Task, of Allston, Mass., an ardent booster. Comrade Task will soon celebrate his 80th birthday, and is proud of the fact that he has been a Communist for the last fifty years. He wants us to extend his greetings to all readers of "The Worker", and to urge them all to increase the circulation of our weekly thru ordering and distributing weekly bundles. What do you say?

America's White Terror

Is vividly depicted by Don Brown and H. M. Wicks in the June LIBERATOR. Both write from first-hand experiences bad in Pittsburgh and Ohio.
HOWAT, the Coaldigger, and his growing strength in the United Mine Workers' Union is told of by J. Louis Engdahl.
THE LAP OF LUXURY gets a keen analysis from the pen of Scott Nearing.
BON VOYAGE, HILLQUIT, is the title of an analytical article by Comrade John Pepper on the marriage of the Second and Second-and-a-half Internationale at Hamburg.
RUTHENBERG CONVICTED, is the title of Jay Lovestone's story of the trial of C. E. Ruthenberg at St. Joseph, Mich.
Frank Walts draws the cover, Don Brown, the frontispiece, while Bob Minor gives a splendid double-page cartoon on the exodus of the Negro from the South. There are also timely editorials, reviews, poetry and other drawings.

Convention of Youth Is Spur for Real Work

By JAY LOVESTONE
(Special to "The Worker")

CHICAGO—The Second Annual Convention of the Young Workers League stands out as one of the most practical and successful of all the Communist gatherings I have attended.

The delegation knew and felt that there was work to be done and that it had to be done in the immediate present. It was this spirit and approach that characterized the proceedings.

Get Right Down to Business

"What are our pressing problems? How can we meet them best?" These were the questions dealt with and answered by the Convention.

As members of a revolutionary organization of the youth the delegates realised that they had no problems other than those of the young workers. It was most encouraging to see the 28 delegates give themselves over to a consideration of such living issues as Child Labor, Education of the Youth, an immediate campaign against the numerous militarist bodies and a re-organization of the League on industrial lines.

The Child Labor Question

The Convention was presented with a most comprehensive survey of the conditions of the millions of minors in industry. A realistic program to alleviate the terrible conditions imposed upon employed children was adopted. This program was a thorough going Communist document aiming to draw in the greatest number of workers into the struggle against the organized power of the employing class.

First of all, the incoming National Committee was instructed to address Gompers and the Presidents of the International Unions involved in a resolution calling for an intensive nation-wide campaign of organization amongst the young wage workers. Then the various unions in question a campaign for equal organizational right and privileges to minors will be waged. Of course the dynamic force of this whole movement for opposing the use of children as a source of cheaper labor-power will be the members of the Young Workers League.

The delegates also accepted a plan whereby country-wide agitation will be carried on annually in the face of the sanctity of State rights as an excuse for the Federal Government's aiding and abetting the exploitation of children. It was pointed out that this high regard for "State rights" and the inviolability of State integrity did not matter a straw when the Federal Government rushed troops into strike zones to crush the workers and maintain the uninterrupted flow of dividends.

Concrete, positive demands on the Government for alleviating the degrading conditions of the young workers were also formulated.

Anti-Militarism and Education

Another indication of the practical, revolutionary character of the Convention was afforded by the action of the delegates on the questions of anti-militarism and education.

Plans were laid for counteracting the militarist campaign waged by the official and unofficial patriotic societies such as the various Daughters and Grand-Daughters of the Revolution, National Defense Society, Boy Scouts ad nauseum.

So far the program for education, the delegates did not cater to dogma. Simplicity characterized the plan. The delegates freed themselves from the old pseudo-Marxist notions advertized as the incarnation and essence of Scientific Socialism. The educational program adopted aims to train the Young Workers into organizers of the Youth rather than into self-satisfied apostles of knowledge for the sake of knowledge.

A Source of Strength

This Convention has clearly established the fact that the Young Workers League can and will play in the immediate present a most important role in the revolutionizing of the American working class and the building of a virile Communist movement in the United States. The Second Convention has laid a sound foundation for a year of intense activity. The achievements of the Workers Party will, to a no small extent, be determined by the success of the Young Workers League.

Shoe Factories Tied Up by Strike at Brockton

By WILLIAM SIMONS
(Special by Wire to "The Worker")

BOSTON, MASS.—Just returned from Brockton, center of the big shoe strike. The attempt of the manufacturers to open their factories big failure. This was acknowledged by them in their press, stating that the opening was intended for next Monday. The Brockton shoe industry is practically tied up. The movement is extending rapidly thruout the lake shore district. The rank and file spirit is splendid.

Pave the Way for the Better Day

By ALEXANDER HOWAT

[illegible] for a [illegible] Chicago, September July 3, [illegible] to assert [illegible] these days.

The importance of this convention can not be overlooked. It is a call to the voters of the entire country [illegible] to the other millions of labor [illegible] urgently requested to participate in this great gathering of the wealth producers of America.

Let us no longer be hoodwinked and deceived by the professional politicians. Let us no longer depend on the promises of the corrupt tools who have kept the working class in subjection and poverty and destitution for these many years. Let us unite our own power, our own strength, and our own intelligence to right the wrongs that we have lived and suffered under for many years past.

Every section of the nation should be represented at this convention, so that the lawmakers of the country and the large employers of labor may understand once and for all that we mean business.

This is a working class country and we should make of it a real working class government. Let those who perform the labor of the nation rule the nation. This can be brought about if the workers will rally to the cause. If they will take the proper interest in their own welfare. The way to do this is for the workers of the entire country to be represented at the Chicago Convention. Let us have a real Labor Party. Let our forces be solidified. Let us all join hands in the fight for a better day. Let us all do our share to make this convention a glorious success, so that July 3, 1923, may mark the beginning of a new day in the history of the labor movement. Let us unite on the political field as well as on the industrial field, and in this way let the workers become their own rulers and make of this a nation of free men and free women, where there shall be neither millionaires nor paupers; where we can all enjoy a share of the good things of life.

We should at this convention issue a new Declaration of Independence for the toiling masses of the country and proceed with a policy that will forever free the workers from the grasp of the greedy corporations. Let us unite and elect from the ranks of the workers men and women to represent us in the legislative halls of the nation. When we do this, we shall at last have started on the journey that leads to the final emancipation of the toilers of the country.

Again, I say, let us all do our part to make this convention of the most far reaching importance in the interest of the workers. Don't wait to see if it is going to be a success; join with us now, and help to make it a success. Let us have a real working class government; then we shall have the kind of a government that Lincoln spoke about, when he said, "A government of, for and by the people"—that is the kind of a government we are fighting for today—and with the loyal support of the working class, with each of us doing our full share and putting forth our best efforts, this kind of a government is going to be a reality.

Everywhere that I have been I find a splendid sentiment for a real live labor party. I feel sure that the Chicago Convention will be representative of the workers from all parts of the country and that it will pave the way for a brighter and a better day for the toilers of the nation.

Braddock, Pa., Steel Toilers Oppose Raids

(Special to "The Worker")

BRADDOCK, PA.—The outrageous conduct of the political agents of the Steel Corporation in the recent raids in Pittsburgh has produced an unprecedented reaction. One of the most notable results was the successful staging of a mass protest meeting in Braddock in the very heart of the steel industry.

Under the auspices of Father A. Kasincry, a Roman Catholic priest of Braddock, arrangements were made to hold the meeting in St. Mary's A. School Hall. A large audience gathered. Father Kasincry having been called out of the city was unable to be present but sent a letter which was read to the audience registering his vigorous protest against the outrages perpetrated in the recent raids. This announcement brought rounds of applause from the audience.

A number of well known speakers addressed the audience in various languages. Delegates of the Pittsburgh LABOR DEFENSE AND FREE SPEECH COUNCIL OF WESTERN PENNSYLVANIA, who dealt with the fundamental questions of free speech and assemblage. In addition to this discussion, declarations on the United Front of Labor of the Pittsburgh District were greeted with tremendous applause which was especially significant in view of the present offensive in this section for Amalgamation and the Labor Party.

Workers from the steel slave camps of Rankin, Homestead, McKeesport and elsewhere came in large and determined numbers. A picturesque group that also came was a truck load of Negroes who drove 40 miles from Russellton, Pa., to be present and participate in the first public meeting held here in protest against the White Terror.

This was the first labor meeting held in Braddock for many years and has left a deep impression upon the minds of the oppressed workers.

Mass Meeting, June 3rd

The LABOR DEFENSE AND FREE SPEECH COUNCIL OF WESTERN PENNSYLVANIA has arranged for a great mass protest meeting Sunday, June 3rd, at one of the largest theatres in Pittsburgh at which Professor Harry Ward of the American Civil Liberties Union and Alexander Howat will be the principal speakers. Enthusiasm is running high among the workers at the splendid organization that the labor unions not previously identified with the progressive elements in Pittsburgh are daily joining hands in this work.

Women Organize for Defense

(Special to "The Worker")

BRADDOCK, PA.—As the result of the raid and infringement on human rights in Western Pennsylvania, the women are realizing that it is their fight as well as that of the victims in the raid, because it takes away bread from their children and milk from their babies.

Therefore the women have organized the Women's Defense Committee of Turtle Creek Valley.

Hindu Labor Leader on Way to Britain to Present Union Demands

D. D. Khanna of Lahore, India, president of the Northwestern Railway Union, numbering over a million workers, is in the United States on his way to England to present the demands of his Union before the British government and to enlist the support of the parliamentary leaders of labor in the struggles of the native workmen of his country.

"The labor movement in India is the one force that will wipe out the caste system in India" declared Khanna, himself born as one of the despised high caste Hindus.

Khanna has been speaking before various labor organizations in New York and other cities and when interviewed by a representative of "The Worker", described the history of the railway union which grew out of the 1919 strike. Before 1919 the railway staff, composed of native track-walkers, repair workers, train couplers, etc., received a wage of $2.50 per month for thirteen hours work a day and three hundred sixty five days in the year. The cost of living rose so high that the workers quit spontaneously and en-masse, declaring that wage as well starve idle as working. Immediately the walkout took organizational form, with the result that today there is an industrial union embracing most of the workers in the industry.

J. B. Miller, an Irishman who had been in India 28 years, was the moving spirit in organizational work and became the first president of the union, but the government would not employ him or have anything to do with him. But refusing to deal with Miller did not prevent the organization of the union. There are now 800,000 members, Buddhists, Europeans, Eurasians, and every other creed and color in all India n the ranks of the union.

Workers Abjure Gandhi

Asked about the influence of the apostle of Christ, Gandhi, who preached non-cooperation against Britain, Khanna declared such teachings made no appeal to the mass of workers. "It is a beautiful doctrine, but very impractical in our situation."

Khanna expects to get assistance from the British government in his endeavors to improve the conditions of labor in his country. When asked about his attitude toward the British government he declared that he was loyal to the government, "but we do insist that they consider the condition of labor in India."

"The Worker" representative informed him that his loyalty to the British government would get him nothing and that he and others must engaged in organizing the working class of India and other colonial countries should endeavor to direct the discontent into revolutionary channels under the leadership of the Communist International.

The one inspiring piece of information brought to the country by Khanna is the fact that the seething masses of India are at last awakening from their age-long slumber and organizing unions. The facts of life will force them into decisive action as they learn the real nature of the imperialistic government of Britain and all other capitalist countries.

Labor Getting Up Speed in Tractor Drive

The drive for tractors for Soviet Russia is gathering speed as it goes along. Every day things are happening which emphasize the need for immediate help in the country's giant effort to rebuild its agriculture. With the British lion sharpening its claws for an attack on Russia, with Comrade Vasilav Vorovsky murdered by a Swiss reactionary, with a new anti-Russian campaign of lies, well launched, it behooves all friends of the Workers' Republic to rally to its defense.

A Russia which is independent of the rest of the world for its supply of bread can withstand all its enemies. Even more—it can become the storehouse and food center for oppressed workers in other lands. That independence can be attained with tractors.

The slogan "Cannons or Tractors" is therefore not a mere phrase. The warlike attitude of the rest of the world towards Russia makes it a reality which calls for action. We call upon the friends of Russia to exert themselves to their utmost in the tractor campaign. The Voting Contest in connection with it is an additional stimulus. The tractors will be a message to the workers and the peasants of Russia which will hearten them in their fight. "The "living message" will make it even more impressive, more actual.

For the rebuilding of Russia, and the solidarity of labor thruout the world, let us make the tractor drive successful!

John T. Taylor, president of the Detroit Federation of Labor, has been put up as a candidate in the Free Trip to Russia contest by those working in the tractor drive in that city. Detroit has given so many tangible signs of its energy and effectiveness in all undertakings that there can be no doubt Brother Taylor will win one of the trips. Good luck to Taylor—and to all his competitors.

"Soviet Russia Pictorial" for June
Reviewed by NANCY MARKOFF

There is no other person in America who can speak with greater authority on the methods employed by Motion Picture producers, to give the American public what is safe for capitalism, than the author of "The Brass Check" and "Upton Sinclair Presents William Fox." The Soviet Russia Pictorial for June contains an extremely interesting letter by Sinclair to Lebedev, head of production of labor film enterprise in Moscow. This letter is an enlightening account of Sinclair's experiences with American motion picture producers who have offered to put his novels into motion picture plays. As a result of these experiences he makes the following offer to Proletkino: "You make pictures of any of my books that you wish, or you may use all my books without compensation to me; some day in the future. . . . if the Russians have money, they may pay me some of it, and I will use it to make a picture for the American workers."

What Russia is accomplishing in the way of reconstruction and education for her youth always arouses our enthusiastic interest. There are two articles treating these important subjects. One tells us that Russia is to have an agricultural exhibition this summer. The purpose of this exhibition is to acquaint the peasant peasant with the up-to-date farming machinery and implements of the western world, and to acquaint the western world with the tremendous possibilities of Russia's unlimited agricultural and mineral wealth. The other, an article by Robert W. Dunn, tells us what Russia is doing to educate her five million children in the Public Schools of Russia today.

There are many other valuable accounts of Russian activities which space does not permit us to dwell upon.

Augusta, Ga., Central Labor Council for Labor Party Convention

AUGUSTA, Ga.—Voicing its approval in response to a communication from the Farmer-Labor Party inviting attendance to its national convention to be held in Chicago on July 3, Augusta's Central Labor Union has heartily endorsed the objects of the proposed convention and while not to be actively represented at this gathering is in complete accord with the avowed objects of the proposed national conference.

Under instructions from the local Central Labor Union, Secretary L. B. Furtick will convey to the officers of the Farmer Labor Party, the best wishes for the success of the convention.

We Greet the Militant Miners!

The militants of the coal mines will gather in Pittsburgh, June 2-3, fully aware of the tremendous duty that devolves upon them as a mighty factor in the American labor movement. They will not discuss the question of amalgamation. They have an industrial union. They will have up before them the greater problems of the nationalization of the coal industry, and of securing co-operative action between the workers of the great affiliated basic industries—mining, steel, transportation.

President John L. Lewis, of the Coal Miners' Union, like Samuel Gompers, head of the American Federation of Labor, may be depended upon these days, thru their repeated reactionary attacks, to show the militants the necessity of a disciplined left wing within the Miners' Union, inspired by the principles of the Trade Union Educational League.

Mr. Lewis has just been basking once more in the warm and inviting atmosphere of the United States Coal Commission at Washington, D. C. The correspondents of the nation's kept press hover about, with little to do since congress is not in session. They gladly seize upon the anti-radical propaganda of the reactionary head of the Miners' Union as first page "news".

Thus the campaign in Districts No. 1 and 2 in the Pennsylvania anthracite fields, takes on a national significance. The militants must be defeated or Pres. Lewis will not be able to put over an agreement in August, satisfactory to the profit-hungry anthracite coal barons. The militant, Rinaldo Cappellini, who is a candidate for president of District No. 1, against Mr. Lewis' henchman, "Billy" Brennan, becomes a figure of country-wide importance.

Militancy in the miners' union must be prepared to stand its ground. It must be ready to see the president of the union call to his aid, not only the kept press, but also the Daugherty-Burns Department of Justice, even as it is charged Mr. Lewis did, thru his agent, Van Bitner, in the king's raids on the Nova Scotia, Canada, coal miners at Glace Bay.

But we do not fear for the militancy of the coal miners. It has stood the test in the past. It has survived in many a hard fought battle against the coal barons. It will grow, instead of succumb, before the joint attacks of Lewis, Gompers, Burns, Daugherty & Co. The conference of the miner militants at Pittsburgh, Pa., this week end, will be an inspiration to the militants in all industries, in whose name we greet them.

$1,000,000 per Year

There is tragedy in this joke on the working class. Larry Semon, movie slapstick comedian, has signed up a three-year contract for $1,000,000. Judge Elbert H. Gary, doddering 76-year-old head of the profit-fat Steel Trust, has won the unanimous vote of the American Iron and Steel Institute for the continuance of the 12-hour day in the steel mills.

Thus Larry Semon gets his high price for tickling the ribs of the workers, who make up the cinema audiences, while Gary and his gold hunters, thru their kept propagandists persuade them that it is "not necessarily injurious, physically, mentally or morally," to toil the long day in the steel mills.

Every investigation made has shown that the 12-hour day throws human wreckage upon the scrap heap along with the slag from the steel furnaces. The 12-hour day breaks men physically, gives their minds no opportunity to develop, destroys all moral fibre, thus debasing these serfs of the steel mills to the level of brute animals. Of course, that is all that "Steel King" Gary, and his money lusting crew, ask for, brute men to keep running the molten flow that solidifies into the finished steel products needed by modern civilization.

Gary fell exhausted before finishing his plea with the steel magnates. If we believed in omens, we might venture the declaration that that spell of weakness that came over Gary, was a prophecy heralding the crumbling, not only of Gary 12-hour day rule, but of all private ownership in the steel industry.

The social system is doomed that gives $1,000,000 a year to a dispenser of cheap comedy, and ony a few hundred dollars for the same period to men who do the world's useful labor, toiling the long day at life-sapping toil.

Gary declares the 12-hour day is necessary because of the shortage of labor. And on the same day John Moore, of the Ohio miners, speaks of the hundreds of thousands of idle coal diggers, with others working only one and three days per week. These jobless miners, under any sane social system, could easily be diverted to the steel industry, making not only a 10-hour, or an 8-hour, but even a 6-hour day possible, the six-hour day that the coal miners are fighting for, even under capitalism, as the next goal of their mighty organization.

Under the lash of Gary's whips, discontent is again organizing in the steel industry. The inspiring appeal of "Amalgamation, a Labor Party, a Workers' Government," is reaching down into the steel hells of Pittsburgh, Bethlehem, South Chicago, Gary, Hammond, Birmingham and other great industrial centers where pig iron and human muscle unite to produce great riches for the few.

Steel labor will some day forget to laugh at the jokes of the million-dollar Larry Semons. It will realize the tragedy of its own condition—and unite, as it will be forced to, in the rapid progress toward its goal—its emancipation. That will be the day for turning the joke on Gary and his fellow-steel magnates. This labor tragedy will then become in turn the tragedy of capitalism. Gary has tried to crush labor in the steel industry. But all labor will succeed in crushing all profit-rule in all industries.

These Christian Gentlemen

John D. Rockefeller has been wrapping himself in the cloak of religion all these years, while John D., Jr., has been teaching a Baptist Sunday School Class on Fifth Ave., New York City. They must have something to appease their conscience, driving wage slaves under the profiteers' knout for seven days each week, and twelve hours each day.

There evidently have been some among our great capitalists, however, who have not needed this resort to religion. The mine barons, the steel czars and the railroad kaisers have waged their murderous anti-labor wars, in two-fisted manner to be sure, but with gun and club, not a hand to spare to carry a Bible.

But Judge Elbert H. Gary, head of the Steel Trust, has returned home from his tour on the other side of the Atlantic, during which he visited the Holy Land. In addressing the meeting of the American Iron and Steel Institute, the other day, he declared:

"Gentlemen, it is in accordance with our instincts and judgment, as frequently proclaimed, to say that it pays a nation or an individual to follow a Christian course."

That goes for our industrial overlords. Gary has decided that he likes religion. It pays. Then there is Joseph Tumulty, an overseer of the democratic party, the man behind Woodrow Wilson, when he was president, and before. This modern Joseph proclaims, in reply to "Bill" Burns, before the Shore Kiwanis Club, at Atlantic City:

"The real antidote for Bolshevism is a recognition of the ills of mankind. There must be a return to the principles of Jesus Christ and a renewal of faith in the Ten Commandments—'Love thy neighbor as thyself'—if the world is to be lifted up from the slough of despond that gives rise to misunderstanding and radicalism."

These are not so much the vaporings of conscience-stricken industrialists and politicians. It is rather a dying social order seeking the cloak of religion. This is the same religion that failed to save the masters of all previous social eras. The human slave and the feudal serf, in spite of the appeals of the masters, have been freed. In this day the wage workers will win their emancipation in spite of hypocritical master class appeals "to the principles of Jesus Christ." These are merely efforts to blind the issue. They will fail.

These 20th century rich men can no more stay the coming of the new social order than a "camel can climb thru the eye of a needle," to borrow a phrase from the book for which Gary and Tumulty and other "Christian Gentlemen" suddenly profess their love and admiration.

The Black Days Ahead

The United States is rapidly plunging into another industrial crisis. The present so-called "prosperity" will soon end. A new army of jobless will again form out of the millions thrown out of employment.

This is the meaning of the news that the trade balance has turned against the United States. The nation imported during March $60,000,000 worth of goods more than it exported. This is the first time the trade balance had gone against the United States since the end of the war. Our exports had been declining for six months. Now they have been outstripped by the imports. In the largest and worst trade balance ever shown by any month in America's commercial history.

That means that foreign countries cannot buy our goods. They owe the United States government at Washington, and the international bankers in Wall Street, too much. They have no more gold. So we cannot sell abroad. Therefore the great American industrial machine inevitably slows up.

If the countries of Europe do try, as in the case of England, even to pay interest on the war debts now totalling $20,000,000,000, then they must send their goods to this country. That means that foreign goods take the place of American products in the local markets. Thus the machinery of production stops completely, for having no one to buy our goods, and with the goods of foreign lands glutting our markets, there is no work for the American toiler to perform.

That should be a good thing. It ought to give the millions of workers an opportunity to enjoy a long summer vacation. But that doesn't happen under capitalism.

The millions will walk the streets, fighting each other for jobs, making it possible for the bosses to cut wages, lengthen the work-day, destroy hard-won conditions if labor does not stand together. The bosses will demand "cheap goods," thru low wages, to compete with the "cheap goods" of the sweated toilers of crushed Europe, whose bosses also want to sell to South America and to the "market" in Asia.

This swing in the foreign trade balance is only one development showing that there are dark days ahead for American labor. The workers of the United States must prepare for this time of crisis. They must develop their solidarity with the workers of other countries thru the Communist International and the Red International of Labor Unions. They must strengthen their position at home thru amalgamation of their craft unions, thru a Labor Party to fight their political battles. The time to prepare is now. Demand amalgamation in all the gatherings of your city central bodies, and in the conventions of your state and international organizations. Send your delegates to the July Labor Party Conference in Chicago. Prepare now against the black days ahead.

Do you agree with us? Then join the Workers Party!

Lloyd George Wants Us

Lloyd George, former British premier, makes a speech in which he says the war has "shaken Christianity and made the world a pagan affair." He offers, of course, no solution for the mess. We, of course, do not expect him to. He caught that workers of Soviet Russia a better deal. The workers of other countries in large measure have suffered and still suffer likewise. That must be the thing that is troubling Lloyd George.

The Ku Klux Klan Revealed

The jingo, anti-labor character of the Ku Klux Klan has been well revealed in West Virginia, where these hooded and gowned champions of capitalism have ordered the World War Veterans "to vacate West Virginia or take the consequences." This ultimatum was delivered to Lawson McMillion, state president of these rank and file veterans, who replies that the W. W. V. will stay right in West Virginia, "alive and kicking." Which means, if we guess right, that the Koo Koo ghosts will have to take to the woods.

They Are Disappointed

Mildred Morris, the Washington correspondent of the Federated Press, writes that, "The Progressives are disappointed over the appointment of Alva Adams as successor of the late Senator Nicholson of Colorado." Disappointment, however, will never do the La Follette-Borah outfit any good. The only way to teach them that the world is progressing is to elect real, red workers in their places. Then they can carry their disappointment into retirement, along with their betraying "progressivism." There it can do no harm.

No "Justice" for the Poor

John S. Bradway, secretary, National Alliance of Legal Aid Societies, told the National Conference of Social Work, at Washington, D. C., that more than a half million workers in the United States each year are unable to obtain legal justice because of poverty. We think his figures are very conservative. Bradway urges his legal aid societies as a remedy, and points out that they handle 200,000 cases annually. He does not say what becomes of the other 300,000 cases, according to this own figures. There will be no real change until the social order that provides one kind of "justice" for the rich and another for the poor has been abolished. That means an end to the capitalist system that Mr. Bradway is trying to patch up with his aid societies. And, of course, Mr. Bradway will not urge that the system that gives him a job be swept away.

The Graveyard of Action

During the big strikes last summer the American Federation of Labor did not think it necessary to help bring about concerted action on the part of the workers. As a result these great struggles plunged into chaos, especially those of the railroad and textile workers. Now the A. F. of L. announces that the present activities in this country of the Fascisti are not important enough to be noticed. It, therefore, refuses to act on the request of the New York Central Labor Union, asking an investigation of the American branch of Mussolini's labor baiting movement.

To be sure, Sam Gompers appeared on the program of the last New Orleans convention of the American Legion, which conducts the most harmonious relations with the American Fascisti. An investigation of these White Terrorists might, therefore, reveal the head of the A. F. of L. in a very bad light, in fact as an ally of this anti-labor organization that has already broken up numerous workers' meetings in various sections of the country. Then, again, the A. F. of L. executive council is the graveyard of action, with the result that any war on the Fascisti must be carried on, if at all, by the state and local central bodies. This is another job for the rank and file.

Human Progress Is Always Misunderstood and Criticised by Those Who Are Satisfied With Things as They Are

The Omnipresent Bolshevik

Out on the broad Pacific Ocean, in the stokehold of the United States Army Transport "Merritt," there has been a new outbreak of Bolshevism, and the kept press is much troubled.

The "Merritt" started from Olongapo, the Philippine Islands, with the 529 White Guard refugees from Red Vladivostok, of whom we have said much. Their numbers had been lessened by desertions. One officer of high rank had committed suicide, conscience-stricken over the terrorist crimes committed against Soviet Rule in Siberia.

But the cream of the anti-Communist refugees were supposed to be on the Transport "Merritt" bound for San Francisco. They were forced to work their way across by performing the various ship's tasks. But the trip was not destined to be a peaceful one.

It would seem that many of these anti-Sovietists are being forced into exile, since it is reported that many were immediately thrown into "the hole" as mutineers. The voyage was terminated with the strike of the refugee stokers, with a cable to the Chicago Tribune charging that, "One Russian officer is reported to be a Bolshevist agent." Latest bulletins are that the "Merritt" has been forced to put in at Iba, Zambales, less than 50 miles from the port of its departure, thus innocently touched by the waves of the world social revolution.

American reaction tried to war on Soviet Rule by sending troops into Siberia. These were quickly withdrawn, however, as the United States soldiers became "tainted with Bolshevism." The rank-and-file soldiers of Japan were returned home for the same reason.

Mutinies and strikes among the first consignment of refugee immigrants on the Transport "Merritt" would indicate that the befriending of unthankful counter-revolutionaries, who got homesick for the motherland, even if it is under Soviet Rule, is not going to be a paying business. President Harding, Secretary of War Weeks and Secretary of Commerce Hoover, who sponsored this venture, are no doubt holding hurry-up conferences at Washington, to decide what they are going to do in the face of the threat of the omnipresent Bolshevik, who spoils their best laid plans.

The Cry of the Oppressed

I am in the hearts of harlots walking the streets
In quest of a guest for the day,
And I stand in the line where charity gives a crust,
I am with the sailors swinging on yardarms
In the gale, in the cold of cape Horn;
And with the stokers bathed in sweat,
Deep down in the hold of steamers.
I am in the bowels of Mother Earth with miners
Digging necessities, luxuries for others;
And I am with the objectors dragged into wars
To kill, to pillage, and rape,
To satiate the greed of parasites
Bedecked with tinsels and gold;
And fatten the belly of Mars.
To-day I am scorned, rejected by cultured, the famed,
Who in turn, are gloried by kings and prelates.
I am starved of the thought, torn apart,
Dragged thru dirt and slandered in the press,
Trampled by fools, and jested by clowns,
Who live only for present day.
But I shall survive! The dead and the wars,
The Pyramids and Sphinxes in the desert;
The crooked pens of false historians
And their dreary volumns of lies,
For, I was born when might first crushed just into dust,
And was nursed by sorrow and tears.
I carry the ideals of the sufferers, the despised,
The conceptions of their thoughts for love and truth.
And thru me they shall cause
The change of the tide for common good,
And thru me they shall see the dawn—
The resurrection day for the low—
For, I am the onrushing, foaming crest of a mighty wave,
And in the distance you can hear my cry of the oppressed.

Capitalists Are Chagrined Because Soviet Locomotive Has Been Shunted Away from Capitalism

D. IVON JONES
(Special to "The Worker")

MOSCOW. — Just at the time when the Archbishop of Canterbury and the capitalists are raising a fury about the persecution of the church in Russia, the All Russian Synod of the Russian Church meets and declares that, Tikhon is no longer Patriarch, derobes him of his priestly cassock for allying the church with counter-revolution, and says that he shall henceforth be known as plain "Mr" Bellavina"!

The Synod further declares the office of Patriarch abolished, as a relic of czardom.

I saw a church on May Day flying the red flag!

The Church in Russia is grouping itself on the side of the Soviet Power as its only hope of survival.

Just as the Protestants of England sought salvation from defeat by seeking to reconcile "religion and science", so the All Russian Synod declares the task of the church to be "reconciliation of religion with revolution", preserving the dogmas of the orthodox Russian Church and at the same time sincerely accepting the great Russian revolution with its world consequences."

What about religious persecution in Soviet Russia? Here is the Synod's declaration:

"According to the Soviet Constitution freedom of thought in religion is the right of all citizens. The decree on the separation of church and state guarantees this right. Freedom for religious propaganda (side by side with the right to propagate anti-religious ideas), gives a possibility to believers to defend their religious conviction. For that reason it is not possible for the church to regard the Soviet Power as anti-Christian; on the contrary, the Synod draws attention to the fact that the Soviet Power by its methods is the only State power in the world which is able to realize on earth the ideal rule of God."

The Synod was attended by 350 delegates and in its varied composition reflected the enormous change that has come over the Russian Church precisely because of the freedom of religious discussion. Under the czar there was no such thing as freedom of religious thought. Now the church is moving away from orthodoxy, in fact there is far more freedom of discussion now than would please the Archbishop of Canterbury;—he will soon be excommunicating the Russian Church for heresy.

The Church is dividing into various groups of thought. Of these 350 delegates composing the Synod, there were 150 from the group which calls itself the "Living Church", and about an equal number from the "Union of Communities of the Early Apostolic Church"; six representing the group "Resurrection" of which the Metropolitan Antonin, honorary president of the Synod, is member. The question now is: can the old bottles hold the new wine?

The Synod traced the history of Tikhon's counter-revolutionary activities for the past five years. It accuses him of deceiving the faithful in the interests of the White Guards. "Tikhon is not the leader of the Church, but a leader of the counter-revolution" says the resolution. "The Patriarchate was established for counter - revolutionary purposes. The primitive Church had no Patriarch but administered the church by Synods. It is therefore abolished." And so the Pope is a thing of the past. Patriarch Tikhon committed a crime against the Russian church in making the church an ally of the counter-revolution, and therefore should stand trial before the revolutionary tribunal. At this moment the Russian Church must declare, before the Revolutionary Tribunal on which side it is: in the dock with Tikhon or with the accusation on the seal of judgement. We say—on the seat of judgement."

So say the group "Resurrection" in their meeting held before the Synod.

And what is the attitude of the Synod towards the proletarian revolution? Here is the resolution: What does "my lord of Canterbury" say to it?

"The All - Russian delegated Synod bears witness before the whole church and humanity that the world is divided into two classes, capitalists, exploiters and the proletariat, on whose blood the capitalist world builds its well being. In all the world only the Soviet Power of Russia has entered upon a struggle with this great social evil. Christians cannot be indifferent in this struggle. The Synod denounces capitalism as a deadly sin, and the struggle against it as a holy duty for Christians. In the Soviet Power the Synod perceives a world leader for fraternity, equality and peace among the nations. The Synod denounces the international and national counter-revolution with all its religious and moral authority.

The Synod calls upon every true Christian citizen of Russia to a united front under the leadership of the Soviet Government, to enter into the struggle against the world evil of social injustice."

Bishop Blake, representing the American Methodist Episcopal Church, was a specially invited guest at the Synod and greeted it in language that would make Rockefeller strike him off his subscription list.

Does all this mean that the attacks of the Communists upon religious superstition are going to cease? The "Pravda" points out that the church, like other social groups, is arranging itself on the side of the proletariat in order to save its existence. In the arena of full freedom of religious discussion the sale of the "anti-religious" papers of the Party is being pushed with greater vigor than ever. The Church has capitulated to the Revolution. The proletarian revolution has forced it to declare for some of the early ideas of social justice for which the Christian Church was supposed to be founded. It has followed; it has not led.

The "Pravda" concludes an article on the "Regrouping of Social Forces" thus:

"It goes without saying that our Party will not give its blessing to religion even when it tries to bless the Party.—But the inevitable conflict is carried up into a higher plane and changes its form. For with it there is a fundamentally new social equilibrium, under the direction and hegemony of the victorious proletariat."

The fury in England at the execution of a counter-revolutionary priest has left Russia quite cold. Trotsky in a speech said that the Capitalists have seized this incident to give vent to their chagrin at the cardinal fact of the present situation in Russia: which is, that Lenin and the Communist Party have definitely shunted the Soviet locomotive away from capitalism and are driving it straight head toward socialism. That is why they are frothing about the priests.

Militant Miners Organize

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL
(Written Especially for "The Worker")

LABOR LYCEUM, PITTSBURGH, Pa.—The big job has been accomplished. The militants of America's greatest union, the United Mine Workers, with its half million members, have been organized here, in the capitol city of the Gary Empire of Steel, Coal and Coke.

Thus militancy gets a foothold in the solid granite sub-structure of American organized labor, for the 500,000 union coal miners constitute the foundation upon which the trade union edifice in the United States and Canada is built.

It was of great value to have the militants working together on the railroads, in the needle and textile trades, in the marine industry, and in the building and metal trades. But it was absolutely necessary to get the miner militants into a solidified, disciplined unit. This has now been done.

The tremendous obstacles that were thrown in the way of the International Progressive Miners' Conference, in its efforts to accomplish this task, will take up a chapter of its own in labor's historic struggle.

"Well, we never knew that we would build so well," said one of the members of the Pittsburgh Miners' Relief Committee, organized for the purpose of raising funds and securing food and clothes for the Fayette County, Pa., coal miners, deserted by the Cleveland, Ohio, agreement and betrayed by the international officials.

It was around this "Relief Committee" that militant sentiment crystalized, not only in Western Pennsylvania, but throughout the entire miners' union jurisdiction. The machine of President John L. Lewis, head of the United Mine Workers, got busy, and started a campaign of slander, intimidation and threatened death to the relief workers on their mission of mercy among the coal miners. But every attack only served to give added strength to the "Relief Committee," and soon the temporary "International Progressive Miners' Relief Conference" was organized, a program agreed on and sent out to the coal miners over the land.

Alex Howat came out of jail in Kansas, and went on tour for the "Relief Committee." The meetings that have been held under difficulties, the gatherings broken up, his being stopped at the Canadian border while Lewis' henchman, Van A. Bittner, former reactionary president of the Pittsburgh District miners, was allowed to go thru, are a history, just as more history will be made by Howat's forthcoming tour to the Pacific Coast.

Alex Howat was at the gathering of the miner militants at Pittsburgh So was August Dorcic, vice-president of the expelled Kansas District The last effort of the standpatters in the miners' union to interfere with the Pittsburg Conference, held over the week end, was to threaten all coal miners attending a meeting held at Franklin, Kansas, with expulsion. The purpose of this meeting was to discuss the Pittsburgh Conference and raise funds to send a delegate. In spite of the Lewis administration threat, several thousand miners attended the meeting, raised funds for a delegate, and sent Dorchy on his way to Pittsburgh.

Two delegates came from Nova Scotia. Another traveled 3,500 miles from the coal fields of Alberta, in Western Canada. There were 20 delegates from Illinois, West Virginia was represented. Delegates came whose expenses were paid by the pennies, nickels and dimes of striking and jobless miners.

These militants know not what

Grant Appeal to Ruthenberg in Michigan

By MORITZ J. LOEB
(Special Wire to "The Worker")

ST. JOSEPH, MICH. — Judge Charles O. White has granted the motion by Attorney [illegible] for C. E. Ruthenberg for permission to appeal to the Michigan Supreme Court on a bill of exceptions.

The sentencing of the secretary of the Workers Party, recently convicted here, was thereupon stayed until the highest court could pass on the case. Ruthenberg remains at liberty under $10,000 bond.

It was rumored about the court that Assistant Attorney General O. L. Smith had opposed the granting of the motion, but Judge White stated the exceptions were fundamental and involved the validity of the whole proceedings.

The Berrien County prosecuting officials have stated that there will be no more trials until the validity of the criminal syndicalist law, as interpreted in the Ruthenberg case, is passed upon by the highest court. This kills the rumor that Robert Minor, editor of "The Liberator", would be brought to trial immediately and that Foster might be brought up for a second trial.

Railroaders for "Amalgamation"
(Special to "The Worker")

SUPERIOR, WISC.—That Amalgamation is our only hope was demonstrated when the Joint Protective Board consisting of the "Soo Line", Duluth South Shore & Atlantic Ry. and Mineral Range R. R. Co. at its convention endorsed the action of Grand Lodge and adopted the Chicago conference program on amalgamation as a practical method. This unit is the largest of the Maintenance of Way to adopt the program. The resolution adopted was sponsored by Delegate H. Dantes representing Local 59, Calumet, Mich.

It is hoped that the Locals affected will do their share as called for by this resolution.

Free Speech Drive Planned for July 1-8

A joint committee of the National Defense Committee and the Labor Defense Council has just announced its plan for a city-wide street collection and Free Speech Drive during the week of July 1-8.

Labor unions, Workmen's Circles and Workers Party branches will be asked to co-operate by organizing collection groups. Many organizations have arranged mass meetings and picnics during the week in order to raise money for the defense of those arrested under the vicious Criminal Syndicalist Laws of Michigan and New York.

Collections will be made in shops, cars, trains and residential districts during the week, while Saturday, Sunday and July 4th will be reserved for summer resorts, bathing beaches, parks, etc. Further information can be secured at the office of the Labor Defense Council, Room 434, 80 E. 11th St., Phone Stuyvesant 6616. Stations are needed in various sections of the city, at Coney Island, Brighton Beach, Rockaway Beach, and at other crowded points.

Fight 12-Hour Day

The campaign of "The Worker" against the 12-Hour Day will extend thru at least six more issues, taking up every phase of the black reaction in the steel industry.

The subject matter that will be treated in each succeeding issue is tentatively announced as follows:

June 23. Does the 12-Hour Day give the steel worker an opportunity to develop his social and family life?

June 30. Does the steel industry demand two 12-hour shifts because of a labor shortage?

July 7. Can the steel trust afford an 8-hour, 3-shift working day?

July 14. Do the steel workers want the 8-hour day?

July 21. Why does the United States government, federal, state and local, support the Steel Trust in its war upon the steel workers?

July 28. Why does Gompers oppose the organization of the workers in the steel industry?

Cannon Stirs Audiences on Illinois Tour

(Special to "The Worker")

ST. LOUIS, MO.—James P. Cannon's tour for the Workers Party has been a series of successful and enthusiastic meetings thruout Southern Illinois. Everywhere workers assemble and listen attentively to his stirring message of "Five Years of Revolution in Russia".

In Zeigler, Ill., 400 miners crowded the skating rink and listened for two hours to his talk. After the lecture a number of Socialist Labor Party members started to heckle the speaker. Comrade Cannon scored them for their reactionary position and drew shouts of approval from the audience. At the conclusion of his meeting a number of the most prominent leaders in the local labor movement volunteered to assist in the work of building the Workers Party in this section.

Leaving the Southern Illinois territory for a lecture in St. Louis, Comrade Cannon talked to an attentive audience and the local members declared it the most successful and worthwhile meeting that has been held in this city so far.

GETTING QUICK RESULTS

Among the first results of the nation-wide campaign, launched by "The Worker" against Gary's 12-Hour Day in the steel mills, are the following:

FIRST:—The International Progressive Miners' Conference, which includes the militants in the great United Mine Workers' Union, with its 500,000 members, unanimously endorsed the campaign and pledged it their support.

SECOND:—Prominent spokesmen of labor in the vanguard of the American working class movement, like Foster, Howat, Manley, Hardy, applauded the anti-12-Hour Day Campaign as the need of the hour.

THIRD:—A score of labor papers, in as many foreign languages, pledged their aid to the campaign, offering the columns of their publications for the purpose of reaching the workers in their respective languages.

The co-operation of the militant miners, in conference over the week-end at Pittsburgh, Pa., was probably the biggest result achieved. The miners mean business. They [illegible] 12-Hour Day, in all their local, sub-district and district organizations. The matter will be pressed before the International Executive Board of the United Mine Workers' Union, and if satisfactory results are not achieved, it will be taken up at the next Miners' International Convention.

J. Louis Engdahl, editor of "The Worker," who attended the Pittsburgh Conference, declares, "The coal miners can be depended upon to do their best to help abolish the inhuman, brutalizing 12-Hour Day in the steel industry."

In this week's issue of "The Worker" we answer the question, "Is the 12-Hour Day injurious, physically, mentally and morally, to the steel workers?" Gary claims it is not. "The Worker" claims it is, and asks all steel workers to write up and send in their views, for publication.

Perhaps the most ghastly fact brought to light in this article is the fact that during a ten-year period, 1909-1919, nearly half a million workers in the steel mills were either killed or injured.

The case of "The Worker" has been prepared by Jay Lovestone, author of "The Government—STRIKEBREAKER," and one of the best informed students of industrial conditions in the United States. He writes as follows:

Expose of American Coolie System of Labor Shows How 12-Hour Day Degrades Workers

By JAY LOVESTONE
Author of "The Government—STRIKEBREAKER"

In the production of steel American capitalism has shown its ugliest brutality. This industry epitomizes the depths of degradation to which workers can be forced under the rule of the employing class.

Coal Miners Endorse Campaign Waged by "The Worker" Against 12-Hour Day

(Special to "The Worker")

PITTSBURG, Pa.—The widespread publicity campaign of "The Worker" against Gary's 12-Hour Day in the steel mills was enthusiastically and unanimously endorsed by the International Progressive Miners' Conference here. The resolutions adopted on this subject were as follows:

RESOLUTION AGAINST THE 12-HOUR DAY

WHEREAS, Our brothers, the steel workers, are being driven in their labor at the inhuman rate of twelve hours a day, and

WHEREAS, The U. S. Steel Corporation has definitely decided not to abolish the twelve-hour day at a time when workers in all other industries are receiving concessions from their employers, and

WHEREAS, The coal mining industry has become an important adjunct to the steel industry, many thousands of miners being employed by subsidiaries of the big steel companies,

Therefore, Be it resolved by the Progressive Miners' Conference, assembled in Pittsburgh, that all delegates be instructed to bring to the attention of their respective units of the U. M. W. of A. the pressing importance of securing the abolition of the twelve-hour day in the steel industry and that an organization campaign of the steel industry, which has just been endorsed by the State Convention of the Pennsylvania Federation of Labor, be immediately launched by the American Federation of Labor, and be it further

RESOLVED, THAT THE PRESENT CAMPAIGN OF PUBLICITY BEING CARRIED ON BY "THE WORKER", OF NEW YORK CITY, THE MILITANT WEEKLY ORGAN OF THE WORKING CLASS, BE SUPPORTED IN EVERY POSSIBLE MANNER.

Historic Gathering of Coal Diggers Is Held in Capitol City of Gary's Steel Empire

"Fear" means: To be sure, their Pittsburgh Headquarters had been raided a few weeks ago, with the offices of the Workers Party, and 23 militants arrested, and kept in jail for a long time before bail could be raised; $50,000 for Fred H. Merrick, one of those active on the "Relief Committee." Records and literature had been seized. Threats of new raids and more arrests, not merely rumora, flew thick and fast about Pittsburgh when the gathering assembled.

There were approximately 200 of these miner militant delegates from a dozen districts of the miners' jurisdiction, speaking directly for 100,000 coal miners, and voicing the sentiments of the great majority of the international union, when the gathering was called to order by Secretary Thomas Myerscough.

All the delegates wore little red flowers, the badge of the Conference, which maintained the traditions of "Red Hill." For that is what the crest of "Hillside," a working class district of Pittsburgh, where the Labor Lyceum is located, has come to be called—"Red Hill."

Unanimous and enthusiastic endorsement was given the plan to build a permanent "left bloc" within the United Mine Workers of America.

Under this plan not only a national committee, meeting every three months, but district, sub-district and local organizations will be created thruout the whole jurisdiction of the Miners' Union.

The vote was taken following an interesting discussion during which delegate after delegate voiced his conviction that a new day has dawned for the 500,000 members of the rank and file of the United Mine Workers' organization, hitherto held in leash by the reactionary officialdom.

Before the report of the reorganization committee, recommending the permanency of the temporary conference, built by the miners of the Pittsburgh district, the delegates were addressed by William Z. Foster, secretary of the Trade Union Educational League, and Alexander Howat, deposed president of the Kansas miners.

Alex McKay, of Nova Scotia, Canada, coal miners, was chosen chairman of the conference. He declared that the 14,000 Nova Scotia coal miners were 100 percent for the militant miners' program.

During the report of the Secretary-Treasurer Thomas Myerscough one delegate interrupted to ask whether the conference had been called to build an organization in opposition to the United Mine Workers.

"Absolutely not," replied Myerscough.

The discussion among the delegates showed that the program of the Trade Union Educational League for developing "left blocs" in the organizations of labor in all industries is being grasped better today than ever before.

"This is the first meeting of this character the miners of the United States have ever held," Foster told the delegates. "It makes one of the landmarks in the history of American labor. You are not alone. What is being accomplished here is being done in every great industry in the country. The rank and file, everywhere, is determined to have something to say about running their labor unions."

Foster urged the delegates to develop their organizations and to popularize their program. He charged that the great masses of the miners' union were in favor of nationalization and the Labor Party, but that their desires were being blocked by a well-organized officialdom that had hitherto managed to divide and conquer the militant membership. Foster also stressed the necessity of co-operation between the coal miners, steel workers and railroad men.

Make the United Mine Workers' Union what it ought to be," urged Foster, "the biggest and most powerful labor union in the world."

Howat came out in an earnest endorsement of all that Foster had said, declaring that the kept press was fighting Foster because he was on the right track.

"If Foster were misleading you," said Howat, "all of the kept press would be for him, the politicians would be supporting him, the bosses praising him.

"I am glad to be here with the real progressives of the labor movement," continued Howat. "This is an indication that the workers are beginning to wake up."

Howat urged intensive organization work in anticipation of the next miners' international convention, when, in his own words, "We must tear down the Lewis machine."

In picturing the official tyranny over the rank and file, Howat charged that the time would come when the Lewis officialdom, if continued in power, would be telling the miners where to eat and sleep, what movies to attend, what churches to go to.

"I am sure that there isn't a single man here," he concluded, who would stand for a dual organization. Stay on the inside and fight it out there."

Whole-hearted support was given resolutions denouncing all forms of dual unions and supporting the demand for a Labor Party.

Delegate Louis McDonald, Alberta, Western Canada, told of the disaster that had followed the adherence given the so-called "One Big Union" in Canada.

As a result of the passage of Labor Party resolutions all delegates will go back to their unions and work for representation at the Labor Party Conference in Chicago, July 3rd.

Eastern Organizer Joseph Manley, of the Trade Union Educational League, arrived at the second day's sessions from the anthracite fields.

He told of the election campaign in District One. There he charged that the mine owners were willing to put up $50,000 to secure the re-election there of the Lewis machine president, Brennan, that the mine bosses were forcing the miners to vote the Lewis-Brennan ticket on penalty of losing their jobs. The election takes place June 14. Rindale Cappeline is the district presidential candidate of the progressives.

Manley told of the breaking up of he Howat meeting at Dunmore, near Scranton, showing that the miners were taking the position, "If the mine bosses do not want Howat to speak to us, that is all the more reason, why we ought to hear him."

An ovation greeted August Dorchy, vice-president of the deposed Kansas district, when he spoke. He told of the militancy of the miners of this state.

The Friends of Soviet Russia and its campaign for a 20-Tractor Unit to be sent to Russia was enthusiastically endorsed. All possible support was voted the strike in Somerset County. The international union was criticized for not giving aid to this struggle. The release of all class war prisoners was demanded in an all-inclusive amnesty resolution. The opening of trade relations with and recognition of the Russian Soviet Republic was demanded, and the organization of the United Mine Workers was called upon to push this fight. In this connection Manley told about the new Russian film, "The Fifth Year." He urged all the delegates to secure a showing for this film in their districts, explaining its great educational value.

Resolutions were adopted demanding a special trial for the murderers of Fannie Sellins, steel strike organizer brutally slain on the eve of the 1919 steel strike at West Natrona by Pennsylvania State Cossacks. The story of this hideous crime was told by Foster, William Guiler and other delegates. Direct charges were made that the murderers had not been brought to trial during the past four years, not only because of the inactivity of the district union officials in Pittsburgh and at Indianapolis, but also because of direct collusion between the Pittsburgh prosecutors and the miners' reactionary heads to prevent the murderers from facing justice. It was claimed that the $2500 bail demanded of the murderer freed after being arrested had never been offered. This was compared with the $5,000 bail demanded of free speech victims during the steel strike, and the $50,000 demanded of Merrick.

During the discussion of conditions in District Two it was charged that the Lewis international officialdom had sent a flock of organizers into this Pennsylvania bituminous field to poison the minds of the miners against their radical president, John Brophy.

Plans were perfected for financing the organization and for issuing a "bulletin" for publicity purposes. Demands were approved for an international wage scale, for bringing up the fight for the reinstatement of Howat at the next miners' convention, and for the organization of the Connellsville, Pa., coal fields.

Resolutions were adopted attacking the 12-hour day in the steel industry, demanding nationalization of the coal mines, and for amalgamation, the last being the resolution already adopted by 14 state federations of labor, and seven international unions. The conference also denounced the Pittsburgh raids.

In closing the conference with a short speech, Foster urged the delegates to secure as large a representation as possible at the next miners' international gathering at Indianapolis, Indiana, in January, when the conference will hold its second meeting. William Guiler was elected chairman, Thomas Ray, vice-chairman, and Thomas Myerscough, secretary-treasurer. The international committee will be made up of a representative from each district.

Miners for Unity, Against Dualism

(Special to "The Worker")

PITTSBURGH, Pa.—The definite stand of the militant coal miners for unity under the standards of the United Mine Workers, and against all forms of dualism, was set forth in resolutions adopted as follows:

WHEREAS, The preservation of unity in the ranks of all coal miners is the first essential to the success of our movement, and

WHEREAS, Dual-Unionism and Secession are fatal to this necessary unity, there, be it

RESOLVED, That the Progressive Miners' Conference condemns all union attempts, whether these are brought about by the Lewis administration, striving to drive progressive elements out of the union, or whether they come from mistaken zealots who believe that the way to strengthen the labor movement is by destroying the old trade unions and starting the whole movement over again on a new basis, and be it further

RESOLVED, That the Progressive Miners pledge anew our loyalty to the United Mine Workers of America and reaffirm our determination to build up and regenerate our organization and make it a great and effective instrument to defend our interests.

Fight the Fascisti

Anti - White Terror Campaign Launched by Italian Workers

We approve the Workers' Anti-Fascisti Campaign and urge the Workers Party members to form local councils in all cities so as to build a strong united national organization.

2. To mobilize the full forces of the American workers against fascism, we call upon all workers and especially the German, Hungarian, Jewish, and Negro workers to follow the example of the Italian workers and form similar United Fronts of the workers of the respective nationalities and to amalgamate with the Italian Labor Alliance into one International United Front Alliance.

3. To defeat Fascism, we recognize the necessity of organizing not only nationally, but also internationally—we must therefore work for the affiliation of the Italian united front against fascism with the International Committee against fascism formed at the Frankfort International Workers Conference, of which the valiant fighter, Clara Zetkin, is the provisional head.

4. The main slogans against the Fascisti shall be a) Free all political prisoners in Italy!

b) Down with the Mussolini Government!

c) Prevent the establishment of Fascist rule and Fascist organizations in America.

5. The Workers Party recommends the following measures for adoption by the Anti-Fascisti Alliance for the campaign to combat Fascism:

a) Compilation of facts on the Fascist movement in Italy and America.

b) Systematic enlightenment of the working class regarding the hostile character of the Fascisti movement by means of newspaper articles, mass meetings, pamphlets, etc.

c) Material and moral support for the persecuted workers in Italy —by collecting money—the Labor Unions must be especially appealed to for help.

d) To consider ways and means of a material and moral boycott of the Italian government: Italian goods—thru demonstrations before Italian consulates and banks—thru deputations to Washington to demand the return of the Mussolini representatives, etc.

At all times the speakers and writers of the 40 Workers Party must hammer away to the Italian workers that the liberation of the workers of Italy from Mussolini rule can come only thru the establishment of a government of the working class. That only thru energetic class organization and class struggle in America and thru the building up of a powerful revolutionary movement and powerful Labor Party containing a strong Communist organization can the establishment of Fascisti rule be prevented in America.

Williamson and Salzman on Tour

The organization tours of John Williamson and Max Salzman, members of the National Executive Committee of the Young Workers League are meeting with great success. New branches are being organized in hitherto untouched parts of the country, and old branches are being considerably strengthened.

The itinerary of John Williamson is as follows:

June 10, St. Paul, Minn.; 12, Superior, Wis.; 13, Duluth, Minn, and 16, Butte, Mont.

Besides the above, meetings are to be arranged in Portland, Astoria, Aberdeen, Tacoma, Spokane, Everett, and Seattle.

Salzman's route takes him thru the following cities and dates:

June 10, at 2.30, Westworth, Minn. (Pleasant); 11, at 8.30, Superior, Wis.; 11, Two Harbors, Minn.; 12-13, Duluth, Minn.

From there he will proceed to the Mesaba Range district.

All comrades, young workers, and Workers Party branches are urged to communicate with the National Office of the Young Workers League, 2517 Fullerton Avenue, Chicago, Ill., for further information and for additional dates for either Williamson or Salzman.

Show Growth in Convention of Italians

By ABRAM JAKIRA

It was the First National Convention of the Italian Federation that was held last Saturday and Sunday, June 2-3. Delegates of 33 branches representing about 600 members were present, thus showing a considerable growth of the federation for the year.

Three fraternal delegates representing the Italian Chamber of Labor, the Anti-Fascisti Alliance, and Local Rochester of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers were seated with the unanimous approval of the convention. One had to look thru a magnifying glass of high power to find among the delegation one who was not closely connected with the labor movement and who was not actively engaged in the class struggle in this "Land of the Free."

Many of the delegates hold important positions in Trade Unions and various other Italian labor organizations. About a half dozen of the delegates were coal diggers representing about a dozen Miners' Branches of the Workers Party in various parts of the country.

The report on the Labor Party campaign ably made by Comrade Camarda was the cause of a heated battle. This question necessitated an extension of time for discussion to more than twice that originally decided upon by the convention. While it was understood that the question was already settled by the Party and that every unit and member of the Party was bound to follow the party decision, the convention considered it necessary to have the matter thoroly discussed for the purpose of clarifying the issue.

The opponents of the Labor Party idea showed a lack of understanding of the question due to the unfortunate fact that they were unable to follow the party press and literature in the English language, while the Italian press failed to sufficiently clarify the issue.

In the discussion every phase of the question was brought to the surface. The resolution in favor of active participation in the campaign for the formation of a Labor Party at the July 3rd Conference was then accepted by practically unanimous vote.

Considerable time was devoted to the struggle against the menace of fascism both here and in Europe. This question was combined with the question of Protection of the Foreign Born Workers. A heated discussion followed the report made on the subject by Comrade Caprara. The representative of the Anti-Fascisti Alliance reported on the progress already made by that organization and on the plans contemplated. The reports were unanimously accepted together with the adoption of the resolution appearing in an adjoining column.

The question of the establishment of an Italian Daily was the cause of a skirmish between the delegates. All agreed that an Italian Labor Daily is urgently needed at the present time. The only divergence of opinion arose as to the best way of bringing such a Daily into life.

The industrial problem attracted special attention of the convention. H. M. Wicks made a lengthy report for the Industrial Department of the party and Comrade Frisina reported for the Federation Bureau. The importance of paying special attention to the distribution of the Labor Herald, rendering all possible assistance to the TUEL and of enlisting the Italian workers into the Trade Unions was well emphasized both in the reports and during the discussion.

During the discussion some of the delegates waged a bitter attack against some of the members of the federation for their insufficient loyalty to the Party. Most of the delegates expressed their hearty approval of this, rather severe criticism. Some of the delegates, however, took exception to the accusations and pointed out a number of reasons why the comrades at issue could not give more attention to the Party activities.

The Convention adjourned with the delegates united and determined to redouble their efforts in the work for Communism in this country.

Greetings to America

By JIM LARKIN

LIBERTY HALL, Dublin.—I would thank The Federated Press and "The Worker" to distribute a word of greetings to all my comrades thruout the Americas for their many kindnesses while I was associated with them in service in the cause that knows no failure.

They will take this greeting as a brief acknowledgment of their many kind wishes and as some apology for my delay in expressing thanks which was due to my hurried departure.

I will be glad to hear from them and will be deeply interested in the success of their work and active in the furtherance of the purpose to which we have pledged our fortunes and our lives.

In grateful remembrance, I hope to be permitted to sign myself, Comrade, JIM LARKIN.

Militancy Grows Among Miners

LABOR LYCEUM, PITTSBURGH, Pa.—One of the delegates from District No. 2, Pennsylvania bituminous field, to the Progressive Miners' Conference spoke with a decided Italian accent. Yet he was easily understood. He was explaining his hatred of the paid official who betrays the rank and file.

"They sold us during the strike that the officials would not accept any pay. But one day I was in the union offices and they were passing out the checks. It was told the checks were for 'expenses'. Just think of it, $400 and $500 per month, for expenses.

"These union officials walk around the streets just like the bosses. You can't tell them from men like Secretary of the Treasury Mellon, at Washington, or Mr. Harding. They all look alike, in their silk shirts.

"They buy 25-cent cigars, take a few puffs and throw them away, when we poor miners can't even get a nickel for chewing tobacco."

One can visualize in those words at least part of strength that goes into the "left bloc" in the United Mine Workers' Union, being organized by the International Progressive Miners' Conference. Because the protest that is being harnessed into intelligent action at this first gathering of miners' militants isn't all rooted in well-defined principles. That will come. That is the work of the organization that will grow out of the efforts exerted here.

There has been plenty of "opposition" in the miners' union, in its international, district, sub-district and local organizations. There is plenty of "opposition" today. But it has never been organized and properly directed.

In the balcony of the convention hall, thruout the first day, sat Francis Feehan, former president of the Pittsburgh District of the coal miners. In days past he was one of the chief "oppositionists" in the international union, fighting former President John L. Lewis, president before he was ousted and accepted a job as agent of the New River, West Va., coal barons. Feehan himself has since held a state political job, and is now on the outside of the union. But even Feehan, altho long ago a member of the Socialist Labor Party, never seemed to have conceived, or carried out the idea of uniting with such "oppositionists" as Duncan MacDonald, from Illinois, Howat, from Kansas; Holt, from Oklahoma, and others who fought administrations in days gone by.

The significant thing about the present conference of militants is that none of the recognized "oppositionists" in the international union with the exception of Alexander Howat and August Dorchy, of the Kansas district, are here. All the delegates are strictly rank and file spokesmen, many of them, but not all, young miners, "from the picks," as the coal miners say, in spite of the fact that most coal mining is now done by machinery.

Some of the delegates are advanced in years, showing that militancy has gripped the old as well as the young. One delegate announced he was 73 years old and still in the ring. Another delegate, who looked under 50 years, said he was 71 years of age. Which means that the militant movement among the miners is shaking the whole of the union, from top to bottom, in spite of nationality, in spite of race (there are two Negro delegates), in spite of age, in spite of all the differences that usually weigh heavy upon the efforts to build up a real working class effort.

For the first time in the history of the United Mine Workers' Union, there is a solidified "left bloc" united upon a common program. It is developing into a "left bloc," that the reactionary officialdom will not be able to divide, and being unable to divide will therefore be unable to defeat. Victory is not very far ahead for militancy in the miners' union.

"The Kink in French Law"

In France things are different than in the state of Michigan, where Communists are convicted of "assembling with" those charged with "advocating" force and violence, without any one first having been convicted of such advocacy! In France the law requires the actual commission of an "overt act" before a plot becomes a plot. The American capitalist press, with remarkable international solidarity, mourns that the French government cannot succeed in its prosecution against French Communists who objected to the Ruhr invasion, because of this "kink in the French law." In America, as Labor leaders are pointing out at each new instance of labor cases on trial, an opinion or "state of mind" is sufficient to warrant imprisonment under our laws."

"Red" Miners of District 26 to Stand Pa

(Special to "The Worker")

NEW GLASGOW, N. S. (Canada).—In spite of the Van A. Bittner visit to inaugurate a campaign of terrorism against the militant Nova Scotia miners, District 26 of the United Mine Workers of America stands today stronger than ever in favor of the principles and tactics of the Red International of Labor Unions.

The convention of this district is to be held in this city beginning June 19, and elections of delegates showed a humiliating defeat for the henchmen of the Lewis machine. Ex-President Baxter, of this district, was defeated in his own local, Caledonia, 2 to 1. The ex-vice president, Delaney, was also defeated. This pair was the strong card of the Lewis machine.

Militapt unionists, who oppose the Lewis machine and support the campaign of Howat against Lewis, will be the vast majority.

In defiance of the recent "mandate" of Lewis to the executive board that it repudiate Moscow and the Red International, the convention will surely reaffirm its allegiance to the International.

The miners in this section have also won a distinct victory over the government by forcing the disbanding of the gang of burglars, wearing policemen's badges, that raided the offices of the District organization recently and confiscated documents.

Clothes of Steel Workers Catch Fire as They Toil before Blast Furnaces

English and American government statistics shows that the average American wage earner produces from two to three times more output in money value than the English wage earner, and uses from two to three times more horse power."

According to a study of the three-shift system in the production of steel made by the International Labor Office of the League of Nations the United States is the only great steel producing country in the world where the 12-Hour Working Day prevails. Not only Europe, but even Canada, South Africa, Japan and India run most of their steel mills on a three-shift basis. The great Tata mills in India have adopted the Eight-Hour Day. Only in China where there isn't much steel produced do we find the two-shift system.

And the sub-committee of the Federated American Engineering Societies, whom Harding called "our foremost organization of America in industrial skill," after an intensive study has found that: "The principle of the 12-hour shift is a survival of the time when it was the custom to work men long hours, and when the mechanical side of the iron and steel industry was less perfectly developed, so that periods of an enforced idleness of the mill and the men occurred much more frequently than at present."

—In the diary of a furnace worker, Charles Rumford Walker, who was a first lieutenant in the American Army, we find this condition vividly described.

Said a Scotch melter to Walker:

"Now in the old country, a man can have a bit of fun. Picnics, a little singin' and rinkin', and the like. What can a man do here? We work eight hours in Scotland. They do work eight hours in France, in Italy and Germany—all the steel mills work eight hours, except in this bloody free country. . . . I'll tell you there will come a time when Gary and all the other big fellers will have to work it themselves—no one else will."

How Steel Trust Reduces Hours

As early as 1912 the stockholders of the Steel Corporation voted against the 12-Hour Day in principle. One of the principal demands of the strikers in 1919 was the abolition of the two-shift system. So great has been the demand for the introduction of an Eight-Hour Day in steel mills that even Czar Gary has repeatedly promised to look into the matter.

On May 18, 1922, President Harding wined and entertained 40 or 50 of the leading steel barons at a White House Dinner. It was at this royal dinner that Gary, the Chief Executive of the United States Steel Corporation yielded to Harding, the Chief Executive of the United States Government, and appointed a committee of the American Iron and Steel Institute to investigate the practicability of running the whole industry on a three-shift basis.

As many expected, this Committee found it impracticable to introduce the Eight-Hour Day at present. This Committee was simply pursuing the same tactics and manoeuvres that Gary has been for over a decade.

Testifying before the Senate Committee on Education and Labor, investigating the 1919 Steel Strike, Gary had the brazen effrontery to say that the Steel Corporation was "reducing these hours from year to year."

As a matter of fact the hours of labor in the steel industry have been increasing and increasing steadily. In 1910 the Blast Furnace men worked 78.7 hours per week and the Open Hearth Men 75.3 hours. In 1919 they worked 82.1 hours and 76.4 hours per week respectively on an average.

And in its investigation of the Great Steel Strike the Commission of Inquiry of the Interchurch World Movement proved beyond the faintest shadow of a doubt that, "In the past decade the United States Steel Corporation has increased the percentage of its employes subject to the 12-Hour Day.

This Report shows that the United States Bureau of Labor Statistics has found that in 57 of the 79 occupations of the steel industry the weekly hours of labor increased from a few minutes up to 14 hours in 1919 as compared to 1914.

Show Great Extent of 12-Door Day

In a report of the U. S. Department of Labor, published May 24, 1922, we are given the latest facts and figures about the extent to which the steel workers are enslaved 12 hours. These figures, indicating the proportion of the following classes of men working on the two-shift system, are for the year 1920:

Blast Furnace men	63%
Bessemer Mills	75%
Open Hearth Mills	50%
Puddling Mills	20%
Blooming Mills	60%
Rail Mills	60%
Bar Mills	50% over
Sheet and Tin Plate Under	10%

Less than 25 per cent of the steel workers are allowed to work under 60 hours a week "altho in most industries 60 hours was regarded as the maximum working week" over a decade ago. About half of those working 12 hours a day work seven days a week.

It has been pointed out in Bulletin No. 265, of the U. S. Bureau of Labor Statistics, that the per cent of men averaging 12 hours a day in the steel industry is over twice that of those in the chemical, nearly five times of those in the anthracite fields, eight times those in the rubber industry and almost 25 times those working 12 hours a day in the bituminous coal mines.

Even according to Mr. Gary's own testimony, before the Senate Committee, that 69,000 men are employed 12 hours a day, it would follow that the daily lives of over 350,000 men and women are affected by the 12-Hour Day. But Mr. Gary gave us a rather low estimate as to the per cent of his employees working 12 hours a day. On the basis of a minimum of 50 per cent being subject to the 12-Hour Working Day, it would be far more accurate to say that over 500,000 men, women and children are suffering from all the miseries and degradations inherent in this brutalizing working day.

What 12-Hour Day Means to Worker

What is the 12-Hour Day really like? What does it mean to the worker?

In his diary as a furnace worker, Lieut. Walker gives us the following picture: "It's hot—temperature, 150 or 160 when you throw your shovel full in—and lively work for back and legs. Everybody douches his face and hands with water to cool off, and sits down for 20 minutes. Making back-wall has affinities with stoking only it's hotter while it lasts. The day is made up of jobs like these: Shovelling manganese at tap-time making bottom', bringing up mud and dolomite in wheelbarrows following the spout hauling fallen brick out of the furnace.

"They vary in arduousness all would be marked 'heavy work' in job specifications. They are all hard-handed jobs, and some of them done in huge heat. Between run intervals from a few minutes to two or three hours. From some of the jobs it is imperative to catch your breath to a spell. Sledging a hard spout, making hot back-wall, knocks a gang out temporarily—for 15 or 20 minutes. no man could do these things steadily without interruption.

"And none of the spells, it should be noticed, are your own time!! You are under strain for 12 hours. Leave and will are the Company's; the whole shift—whether the muscles in your hands and feet move or are still. And the existence of the long day makes possible unrelieved labor, hard and hot, the whole turn of 14 hours, if need be for it."

Similar pictures are given in the diaries written by American Carnegie Steel workers. We submit the following comments extracted from these diaries by the Inter-Church Commission:

"Hours on night-shift begin at 5:30; work for 12 hours during the night except Saturday, when it is 17 hours, until Sunday noon, with one hour out for breakfast; the following Monday ten hours; total from 5:30 Monday to 5:30 Monday, 87 hours, the normal week.

"The Carnegie steel worker works 87 hours out of 168 hours in the week. Of the remaining 81 he sleeps seven hours per day; total 49 hours. He eats in another 14; walks or travels in 'going to' and 'coming from'; dresses, shaves, tends furnace, undresses, etc., seven hours. His one reaction is—'What the Hell!'—the profane grunt accompanying the 12-hour day."

Job of the Third Helper: "The third helper fills large bags with coal to throw into the hods at tap time; easy to burn your face off. Helps drill a 'bad' hole at tap time, work of the most exhausting kind, also must shovel dolomite into hole molten steel. This is the hottest job and certainly the most exposed to minor burns. Temperatures around 180 degrees, but it takes only four or five minutes. Nearly every tap-time leaves three or four burns on the neck, face, hands or legs. It is usually necessary to extinguish little fires in your clothing. Altogether not so bad as heavier lifting parts of the furnace job which are more hateful, together with the monotonous exposures."

A Stove Gang Worker: "Hardest job is 'pooling out,' ramming out the flue dust in checker work at top of stove. Large pieces of canvas tied over feet and legs to keep heat from coming up the legs; two pairs of gloves needed, handkerchiefs over all head except the eyes. Three minutes to 10 minutes at a turn are the limit for work in the chamber at top of stove; very hard to breathe."

Job of Stove Helper: "Learner's tender job following stove tender; manipulates large, clumsy valves, operations if performed in wrong order, stove tender will break his stove and kill himself. Unless tremendous pressure is first 'blown off' the opening of another valve will blow the opener into bits. Hours: day shift, 10 hours; night, 14 hours."

This is the way Gary translates his Christianity into the every day lives of the workers. This is Gary's GOLDEN RULE for the Steel Workers.

Many Casualties of the 12-Hour Day

Not all Workers are able to stand Gary's RULE OF GOLD AND RUIN. Says the Federated American Engineering Societies report: "In some departments of the iron and steel industry 12 hours work has been found too long for the men, and it was customary to have spell hands to relieve them at intervals."

And Lieut. Walker further shows that: "Even the strongest of the Czecho-Slovak Serbs and Croats, who work in the American Steel Furnaces, cannot keep it up, (the 84-hour week) year after year, without substantial breakdown or injury."

Mr. Walker went on to say: "Another feature that impresses when you actually work under the system is the sleep you get is troubled, at best. You are compelled to go to bed one week by day, the next by night. By about Friday, I found my body getting itself adjusted to day sleep; but the change, of course, was due again Monday . . . The body will adjust itself to continued day-sleeping, I know—but apparently not to the weekly shifts, from day sleep to night sleep customary in steel."

The investigations made for the United States Public Health Service by such experts as Josephine Goldmark and Mary V. Hopkins prove conclusively that fatigue caused by overwork is greatly responsible for accidents among workers. In their investigation of the accident records of an 8- and 10-hour day plant these experts found that in the 8-hour factory there were considerably fewer accidents.

And in his address delivered May 17, 1912 at the annual banquet of the American Iron and Steel Institute, Dr. Thomas Darlington, then the secretary of the Welfare Committee of the Institute, said: "Taking if the principal (steel) towns visited by the Institute, excluding the large cities, the death rates averaged 19 per 1000—easily double of what it should be and at least one-third more than the rate of some cities of larger size."

The death rate for the entire registration area was 14.1 per 1000. For the same year B. S. Warren, Surgeon, and Edgar Sydenstricker, of the U. S. Public Health Service, found the following death rates in typical steel towns:

Johnstown, Pa.	16.3
Shenandoah, Pa.	18.9
McKee's Rocks, Pa.	16.9
Braddock, Pa.	23.2

Their report, Public Health Bulletin No. 76, goes on to say that: "As it is generally recognized that mortality returns in localities of this type are more or less incomplete, it is safe to say that the rates cited are about than more thoro and complete vital statistics would show."

In the year 1916-1917, while the U. S. Steel Corporation was making a net profit of $888,931,511, the workers paid in killed and wounded 80,427.

For the period 1913-1919, the steel workers earned, in total undivided surplus alone, $2,239,986,569.84 for Gary's corporation at the expense of 198,383 disabled, crippled and killed.

In the decade 1910-1919, according to Bulletin No. 298, of the U. S. Bureau of Labor Statistics, the steel workers suffered the following casualties: Killed, 3255; permanently disabled, 9,549; temporarily disabled, 412,837. Thus there were a total of 425,686 workers disabled, crippled and killed in ten years while piling up billions of dollars in dividends and undivided surpluses.

Foster, Manley and Others Urge Support of "The Worker" Fight Against 12-Hour Day

The campaign of "The Worker" is receiving the support of all militants throout the entire labor movement, no matter in what industry. Some of the views expressed and the endorsements given are as follows:

FOSTER HITS INCOMPETENCE OF GOMPERS' BUREAUCRACY

WILLIAM Z. FOSTER, Secretary, Organization Committee, 1919 Steel Strike, and Secretary, Trade Union Educational League.—"The 12-hour day is a monument, not particularly to the heartlessness of Judge E. H. Gary, but to the stupidity and incompetence of the Gompers bureaucracy, which has confusedly stood in the way of the organization of the steel workers. The unanimous vote of the Iron and Steel Institute in New York City, declaring for the continuance of the 12-hour day in the steel mills, should be a challenge to all those who want to help the labor movement. All possible support should be given "The Worker" in its campaign, not only to unmask the evils in the steel industry and reply to the false arguments for the long day, but to help build up a militant movement among these most oppressed of American workers. The "right to organize" and the shorter workday were the two big demands of the four-months' strike of the steel workers in 1919. These will be living demands until they have been won.

STEEL INDUSTRY RICHEST IN THE WORLD.

ALEXANDER HOWAT, Former President, Kansas Coal Miners.—The fight against the 12-Hour Day ought to be carried on thruout the whole labor movement. The steel industry is the richest in the world, but Gary and his fellow-profiteers hypocritically claim they are not able to wipe out the long day. No worker, more than the steel workers, are entitled to the shorter workday. All coal miners should support the campaign of "THE WORKER" against the 12-Hour Day. If for no other reason than that it will be much harder to establish the six-hour day in the coal mines, if the 12-Hour Day prevails in the steel mills.

LET ALL WORKERS HELP.

THOMAS MYERSCOUGH, Secretary-Treasurer, International Progressive Miners' Conference.—Surely all coal miners, as well as workers in all other industries, should get behind "THE WORKER" in its campaign for the abolition of the 12-Hour Day in the steel industry.

WORKERS MUST DEPEND ON THEIR OWN PRESS

JOSEPH MANLEY, Organizer, 1919 Steel Strike, now Eastern Organizer, Trade Union Educational League.—Not only every steel worker, but every man, woman and child who labors, should support the attack of "The Worker" on the 12-Hour Day. If for no other reason than that it will be much harder to establish the six-hour day in the coal mines, if the 12-Hour Day prevails in the steel mills.

MUSSOLINI AMBASSADOR HERE APPLAUDS GARY.

ANTONIO PRESI, Editor, "Alba Nuova," Italian Weekly.—Our Italian weekly, "Alba Nuova" (The New Dawn), is glad to cooperate with "The Worker" in its attack on Gary's 12-Hour Day. Workers of other nationalities will be interested in knowing that the Italian Fascisti ambassador to this country, Prince Gelasio Caetani, was not only present at the gathering of the Steel and Iron Institute, at the Hotel Commodore, where Gary proclaimed the continuance of the 12-Hour Day, but that his applauded Gary's remarks and made a speech of his own, denouncing the Communists of the United States, and the American Communist press in the Italian language. We have an anti-12-Hour Day broadside in the current issue of our paper, containing an open letter addressed to Prince Caetani. A copy of this "open letter" has been mailed to him at Washington, and Italian workers in this country will be very much interested in what kind of a reply he will make.

HARDY SAYS GARY'S STATEMENTS ARE LIES.

GEORGE HARDY, Veteran of the International Labor Movement.—Let the truth be told about "The Worker" in its fight on the 12-Hour Day, because the long-day in the steel industry brings increased competition in the whole labor market. It reduces wages even for the 12-Hour Day. It is the growing menace for organization, under the slogan of "Organize the Unorganized" that Gary and his fellow-steel magnates are chiefly concerned in combatting. Gary's statement that the workers themselves are in favor of facing the heat of the steel trust blast furnaces more than once each day is a lie in the face of the demands made in past struggles. The right to organize and the shorter workday is the first step toward workers' emancipation.

Steel workers! This is your fight! Get into it!

The Overworked Suffer Most

It is especially interesting to note the correlation between the accident frequency rates and the length of working hours. Bulletin No. 289 shows that 29 per cent of the blast furnace men, 17 per cent of the open hearth men and 42 per cent of those employed in the Bessemer Mills were working 84 hours per week in 1920. The number of accidents is directly dependent on the length of the working hours and the exposures. Those who suffer the most from the 12-Hour Working Day are those who pay the highest price in physical injuries. This truth is thus forcefully brought home by Mr. Lucian W. Chaney who directed this investigation:

"No common labor occupies in these mills the same position in respect to frequency of accidents that has been noted before. The frequency rate is 120.5 cases per 1,000,000 hours' exposure as against 57.6 cases for miscellaneous occupations. This unfortunate preeminence of the common laborer is found in each of the cause groups in which it was possible to isolate such workers."

The Steel Trust has been working overtime boasting of safety devices and welfare work. The emptiness of these boasts and the fraud of this propaganda is made plain by the 1918 report of Compensable Accidents for the State of Pennsylvania which shows that of the total number of accidents in the metals and metal-products industries constituted 31.78 per cent. Thus the accident rate among these workers was exceeded only by that of the mine and quarries which were 33.12 per cent of the quota.

On the hearings of the Senate Committee, a worker put this situation in the following light:

THE CHAIRMAN "What mill were you in?"

MR. COLSON: "The bloom mill at the steel works at Donora, Pa., and so far as safety conditions up there are concerned, a man has no chance, because if he ever slips, his hands are greasy, and there is no help, and there is no chance for your life, unless you jump out of the window and kill yourself."

Yet, Gary had the gall to tell the Senate Committee that there was little hazard and difficulty in the occupations of the Steel Industry. Before this Committee Gary spoke of pushing buttons to open doors as an example of the ease characterizing the labor of a steelworker, but Gary's own practice of refusing to hire workers after they have reached the age of forty gives the lie to such advertising on his part. "Old age at forty," that's what it is to the steelworkers coming hurtling down fabulous dividends for the handful financial lords and industrial tyrants of Wall Street.

The 12-Hour Day Chains The Worker To Ignorance

The effect of fatigue on the intellect of the worker is most detrimental. In "Fatigue and Efficiency" Josephine Goldmark quotes the following from the Report of the N. Y. State Factory Inspector:

"Long hours of hard manual labor destroy the mental appetite in almost every instance. The man is unfitted for reading or study—he is physically tired and his intellect is inactive. The drain upon his vitality has been continuous and heavy, and he must need sleep in order to recuperate. This continues indefinitely—each succeeding day being but a repetition of the former."

And in his diary, Lieut. Walker showed:

"That the complaint was not so much of overwork wasn't some bit of an evening before you, but that there was no untired time when you were good for anything—work or play. When you had sat about for perhaps an hour after supper, you recovered enough to crave recreation. A movie was the very peak to which you could give yourself. There were men who went further. I know a young Croat in Pittsburgh who attended night school after the 12-Hour Day. But he is the only one of all the steel-workers I met who attempted such heroism. And he had to stop after a few weeks."

Testifying before the Senate Committee, Father Kazinski very ably exposed the damaging effect of the two-shift system on the intellectual life of the worker. Said the Father:

"We have an Americanizing course in project working place, and they have been instructed to go and attend these night schools. They are not a very great success; for the simple reason that the men are overworked, working from ten to thirteen hours a day; and they do not feel like going to the schools and depriving their families of their own company and society even after these hours, these long hours. Sundays,— they have none, for most of them go off to work."

Finally, the Inter-Church investigators, analyzing the report on workers' education made by A. H. Wyman of the Carnegie Steel Company of Pittsburgh at the 1919 session of the National Association of Corporation Schools have shown that:

"Nearly fifty per cent of the startlingly small group of 341 enrolled out of the tens of thousands in the district dropped out for reasons connected with hours."

Degradation of Steel Workers

One of the best studies of the injurious effects of overwork on the intellectual and physical life of the worker was made in 1917 by the British Ministry of Munitions. In its report: "Industrial Efficiency and Fatigue" dealing with the health of munition workers, the investors plainly say: "The shorter the time for which they, the workers, are shut up in the factories the better their chances of health and happiness."

In conclusion, let us again turn to the eloquent plea of Father Kazinski before the Senate Committee investigating the Steel Strike:

"The men are overworked from 10 to 13 hours a day. The conditions under which they are living are bad for America. The housing conditions are terrible. The work conditions, the hours of work, are absolutely impossible, and I think that it tends to make the men become disgusted with the country, and they will say, 'Well, let us go back to the old country; perhaps it is going to be better than it is for us here!' There is no hope for them bettering their conditions for they work from the time the whistle begins to blow in the morning until they are whistled out at six o'clock in the evening."

Koo-Koos Defy New State Law

That aggregation of bigots and degenerates calling itself the Ku Klux Klan, trying to enforce the insane criminality upon the United States, has openly come out in defiance of the law of the state of New York. Thru some method of reasoning, comprehensible only to their perverted minds, this crew, while professing to uphold the traditional and sacred institutions of "Americanism" openly advocates law-breaking and the right to organize a secret, conspiratory society for the purpose of imposing their will by force on the rest of the population.

A new state law requires all oath-bound organizations to file their membership lists with the secretary of state. The grand chief Hell-Cat of the Koo-Koos hurls defiance at the state and loudly proclaims his lawlessness.

The question that arises in the minds of Communists is: Will the State of New York tolerate this defiance or will it throw the Koo-Koos in jail wholesale?

It will be interesting to observe the action of the state authorities when the next night-gown parade of these half-bakes is staged.

Tyranny in the Labor Movement

From the Contra Costa County (Calif.) Labor Journal, of Richmond, Calif.

We feel ourselves obliged to come out flatly against the position taken by Samuel Gompers with reference to the Soviet Central Labor Council. We oppose all dual union movements and believe that thru the American Federation of Labor alone will the workers be led out of economic bondage. We would do all that we can to promote harmony within the ranks of the A. F. of L.

But when Brother Gompers orders a central labor body to renounce its opinions on such vital questions as the recognition of Russia and independent political action for labor—simply because these opinions do not co-pers and the Executive Council—it is high time to object, and we believe that the readers of this paper will join us in protest.

We agree with Wallace Watson, editor of the Bakersfield Labor Journal:

"Brother Gompers is so proud of his non-partisan alliance, which has produced 'a sack of spuds to the acre' that he will not tolerate that which the progressive labor unions of other countries have adopted with success. With central labor councils all over the country and several international unions, there is nothing for a labor party, it looks as though Sam were inviting trouble and disruption . . ."

To all of which we give a hearty amen. Freedom of speech within the American Federation of Labor is as essential as freedom of speech in the country at large. If the Seattle laborites want Russia recognized, just as the International Association of Machinists wants that government recognized, then they should have the privilege of convincing the remainder of the 'labor movement of the wisdom of their policy. If they think that our only salvation is thru a labor party it should be no crime for them to advocate it. Only by free interplay of opinion within our ranks can the American Federation of Labor be kept a flexible body—steadily moving forward. To excommunicate large sections that hold heterodox opinions means disruption. It means more adherents for the I. W. W. and other dual union movements. It means a weakened Federation. And in these times when the open-shoppers are preparing a terrific offensive against the labor movement we can ill afford a campaign of heresy-hunting.

It is far better to let the radicals and conservatives clash in controversy, and out of the welter of conflicting opinion will come that residuum of truth which all honest men are seeking.

YOUR REPLY TO GARY!

Tens of thousands of steel toilers read "The Worker" last week, who had never seen a copy of the paper before. The free distribution of these "Workers" was absolutely necessary to interest those who labor in the steel mills, to let them know of the fight "The Worker" was making in their behalf.

But it is impossible for "The Worker" to continue sending out this great number of copies free each week. The financial burden is too great. We want the steel toilers to be regular readers of "The Worker," and we want those who are now our readers to help us get them into the rapidly increasing "Worker" family.

For this reason we are making a special offer. THIS WEEK, of "The Worker"—15 WEEKS FOR 50 CENTS—and we will include the workers in all industries, every one of whom, as we have pointed out, is threatened by the continued rule of the 12-Hour Day in the Steel Industry. Here is a Sub-Blank all ready to be cut out and circulated among your fellow-workers.

Winter War in the Building Trades Looms

BY SELMAR SCHOCKEN

Workers in all industries are taking up the cudgels to demand their portion of the wealth of the world. The building workers have won their fight for a $10 scale for all trades, except the bricklayers and plasterers, who are receiving $12.

However, the "extra compensation" above the scale of 1920 was granted by the employers without a serious struggle, because every available building worker is sorely needed at the present time. The struggle will come, when the building boom, now at its peak, has dwindled.

The Building Trades Employers' Association, presided over by Christian G. Norman, has taken proper care to face the situation when it arises. All wage terms will have to be renewed by Jan. 1, conferences to begin not before Oct. 1. In other words, the issue will be settled or fought, as the case may be, not in spring, when the situation is favorable to the workers, but in winter, when the bosses have the whiphand.

Had the building workers during the present busy season been organized into one solid union of the building industry, instead of into more than 30 different autonomous unions, each conferring and negotiating separately with the contractors of the different trades, all of whom are well organized and a competent part of the B. T. E. A., there can be no doubt but that Building Workers' Unions could have forced a regular agreement with $10 as the basis for all wages of mechanics and not less than $8 for helpers, a wage which would not only apply when the bosses need "labor," but as the basis for the next year as well.

Hotel Workers Win 3,000

Great activity is at present noticeable among the Hotel Workers of New York City. The campaign inaugurated by the Hotel Workers' Branch of the Amalgamated Food Workers, has netted 3,000 members within a period of three months, and the result of this drive is making itself felt in the sporadic revolts against the petty tyranny still in use in the hotel industry. The strike at the Hotel Plaza was followed by stoppages at some of the "best" houses, such as Henry's Restaurant, 40 W. 46th St., St. James Restaurant, W. 44th St., and several other Dining Halls.

Very remarkable is the victory the newly organized workers, waiters as well as cooks and kitchen employes, won over the management of the fashionable Woodmansterne Inn, on Pelham Road. After experiencing the neglect of a series of complaints, cooks and waiters presented to the boss an ultimatum, which included a raise of $5 per week to the cooks, and a guarantee of $12 per week for waiters. Within a few hours, on Saturday, the conditions were granted, and all workers returned to work victoriously.

These are only some of the achievements to be credited to the activity of the Amalgamated Food Workers, an industrial organization, including all the branches of the hotel business, baking, as well as the other trades, employed in the production of food. The rapid growth of the Hotel Workers' Branch is phenomenal.

Organization Meeting June 14

Already demands have been worked out which include a weekly minimum of $20 for dishwashers and other unskilled kitchen workers, at present paid a mere pittance, which very often does not exceed $10. The cooks demand a basic rate of $45 and $40, with an approximate scale for the other kitchen workers. Waiters demand a flat rate of $3 per day.

Successful mass meetings are held by the Hotel Workers Thursday night at Bryant Hall, 725 6th Ave. near 42nd St. The next meeting will be held at this hall on June 14. The greatly exploited slaves of hotel and restaurant show great enthusiasm at these meetings, and the Hotel Men's Association has evidently sensed the situation when they promised the Plaza management their full support. In the last analysis the fight will be fought between this Association of bosses and the industrial union of the workers.

Molders' Union, on Verge of Collapse, to Hold Convention

By "ENOCH"

(Written Especially for "The Worker)

At last the officials of the International Molders' Union, in the face of disaster confronting the organization, have decided to call a national convention. This decision is a wonder, indeed, for never do officials go out on record for a thing it goes against the grain, but that is the logic of the official machine.

Not since the 1917 convention at Rochester, N. Y., has there been a convention of the Molders' Union. Certainly the membership has been anxious to have an opportunity to express its indignation at the criminal acts of Valentine, Frey & Co.

The Molders Union the past few years has become almost all as far as effectiveness in industry is concerned. This condition is due to the craft basis of organization and to the reactionary officialdom that controls its destinies. At the time the union was dwindling in membership the officialdom constantly printed veiled attacks on amalgamation, a Labor Party and all other progressive measures the American labor movement is sadly in need of adopting. The editorial columns of the official organ fairly reek with reaction. Articles by the millionaire parrott, William English Walling, Matt Woll, head of the Photo-Engravers and crown prince of the Gompers dynasty and the astute John P. Frey, the editor of the Journal, contain the most rabid propaganda to the rank and file in order to keep them from understanding the fundamental changes that are necessary before we can have an effective unionism in this country.

With the approach of the convention, which is to be held in Cleveland in September, the official family is busy trying to make secure their reelection. The machine is under their control and a spurious "organizing campaign" has been launched under the "direction" of Brother Frey. That means numerous henchmen of the machine will rove the country repairing the political fences of the fakers in control of the organization. If the machine wins at Cleveland the old regime will feel secure for some years to come, as the constitution says the next convention must be held NOT LESS than three years hence. But then it has been much more than three years since the last one; the constitution is a joke among "friends". Meanwhile the reaction hopes to rout the radicals and cement their own control.

Militants On the Job

Not to be outdone by the machine, the progressives in the union refuse to wait until the officers get ready to act, but are now preparing to wage a spirited battle for amalgamation and a Labor Party at the coming convention. There is considerable militant sentiment and the record of the officialdom has not been of the kind that creates supporters from the rank and file. It will be a question of the rank and file against the old bureaucracy.

Many changes have taken place since the last convention in 1917. The war has come and gone and the entire face of the world labor movement has changed. Tho small in numbers, the membership today is not the meek and mild creature of a few years back. After the war the question of wage reductions, followed by the "open shop" drive, found the employers strongly organized and waging a bitter campaign against unionism. This, in face of the fact that the officials of the union had done all in their power thruout the war to make secure the fortunes of the "open shoppers" by helping conscript workers from the union into the bloody trenches and into the industries under the "work or fight" order. During the course of the war, the president, Joseph Valentine, true to his capitalist matsers, used his power to terrorize workers every time they threatened to strike for decent conditions. Strikes were discouraged when they could have been won and then when the depression came after the war, the officials calmly stood before the membership and urged them to strike, knowing they were defeated before the strikes were called.

For three months this strike fiasco was carried on and then came the culmination of the treachery of the officials. The store molders, in conference with the Stove Founders National Defense Association, an employers' association, held a joint conference in New York City and agreed that all strikes should be called off among the machinery and jobbing molders in the International Molders Union of North America. It is significant that the bosses in certain centers were so well-informed regarding the outcome of this conference that they were able to inform their men two weeks before the conference that the strikes were to be called off. And

Notice to Readers!

Because of the great avalanche of new subscriptions received thru the Caucus meetings we have not been able to keep entirely up to the minute in placing all the new subscribers on the list. If your first paper reached you a week or two later than you expected please know that this is the reason. Every effort is being made to bring the list up to date.

"THE WORKER".

and anti-climax the men were ordered back to work and told to "take anything you can get." This savage blow to teh rank and file from their own reactionary officials so disgusted the men that thousands of them who had held cards twenty years or more decided to drop their cards and "take anything they coul get" without the encumbrance of supporting the officialdom.

Only the clear headed militants in the ranks saved the organization from complete wreckage. And these progressives will go to the convention in Cleveland determined to put up a good fight. But according to "official" information, they are not strong enough to overthrow the machine, which is under the leadership of John P. Frey. This specimen is one of the most astute birds in the American labor movement and is slippery as an eel in distorting radical resolutions. Witness his time-serving on the resolutions committee at convention after convention of the A. F. of L.! Being somewhat of an "educator" and recognized by the capitalist class as a safe and sane "good man" he has been rewarded for his "services" with free trips to Europe and to South American republics.

With the Tom Mooney case Frey, Valentine & Co. have done nothing. Altho there is a molders committee on this case and altho Mooney is a member of this union, the officialdom has sabotaged every real effort in behalf of this frame-up victim. Undoubtedly they consider themselves safety with Mooney in jail than in a Molders convention. Furthermore, in spite of the fact that only thru political action can men like Mooney ch freed, we are sure that the machine combination will try to defeat the proposal of a Labor Party.

Only in the foundries in the hell hole foundries of this continent are ever to advance the cause of trades unionism they will have to gird their loins and prepare NOW for the coming convention. With an almost superhuman effort between now and convention time the rank and file may organize enough force to defeat the machine. It only they can do that at this convention and discredit Frey, is mtas that on of th formost henchmen of the Gompers regime will be eliminated, and that our union can proceed to the support of amalgamation and a Labor Party.

Local New York Plans Picnic and Excursion for Hot Weather Months

The summer Festival and Picnic of Local Greater New York will be held Sunday, June 24, at Forstner's Park, 3530 Eastchester Rd.

It is hardly necessary to tell you, Comrades, that the Local is in great need of funds for carrying on the work of the organization. The receipts in the summer months are much smaller, for the Local has practically no regular income except from meetings and affairs.

We depend on the two affairs, the Picnic and the Excursion, to carry us thru the summer period, also for preparing our work in the election campaign and for all other activities of our Party.

So let us all try and make this Picnic a Grand Success. Only a little work on the part of each Comrade is required.

Remember our MOONLIGHT EXCURSION, Steamer "Grand Republic" to Bear Mountains, on July 14th (Bastille Day). Make no other arrangements for that day.

A. B. B. Dance Merry Affair

The June Dance of Post Menelek, No. 105, African Blood Brotherhood, held last Saturday night at Fraternal Hall, 75 W. 13th St., West Side Harlem, proved a merry affair and a huge financial success.

The Dance, purposely held in the very center of the Negro Workers' district, brought a splendid response from the Harlem proletariat and by ten o'clock the hall was packed, in spite of the fact that it was Saturday night and a busy night for housewives.

Rail Rebels on Coast to Meet June 7

(By Federated Press)

TACOMA, Wash.—The Northwest Conference of railroad workers on rail-road unionism has issued a call for a conference to be held here June 7 and 8 to consider the work for which the committee was formed. The Northwest District taken in comprises Oregon, Idaho and Montana.

"This committee," says the call, "is now arranging district conferences for the purpose of organizing the sentiment in our ranks for industrial unionism. The thing that must be done is to organize this sentiment behind our plan of amalgamation, so that the complete consolidation of all railroad unions may be brought about as soon as possible. Another essential duty is to combat the dual union tendency that has overcome some of our members, who, after suffering bitter defeats for the past two years have allowed their impatience to drive them out of craft unions."

Each local affiliated with the 16 standard unions within the boundaries of this district, is entitled to two delegates. Each local federation is also entitled to two delegates. All delegates must bear credentials from their union organizations. No dual unionist or secessionist will be allowed a seat in this conference.

Rose Pastor Stokes Has Good Meeting at Norfolk

NORFOLK, VA.—Rose Pastor Stokes had a large gathering here to listen to the story of "The Communist Defense in Michigan", in spite of the hot weather. The chairman was the attorney for the local Central Labor Union. During the period allotted for questions a $21-per-week laundry worker made a patriotic speech that was applauded by one of the "dicks" present.

Compers' Clayton Act - By H. M. WICKS

[illegible]

[illegible] Gompers [illegible] Federation [illegible] Supreme Court [illegible] Justice Sutherland [illegible] Samuel Gompers.

[illegible] labor [illegible] child, [illegible] the labor movement.

[illegible] Gompers [illegible] every other commodity [illegible] and [illegible] the law of supply and demand, but so is the price of every other commodity. This was a scientific fact before the adoption by congress of the Clayton Act and will remain a fact after the Clayton Act has, in spite, been thumped by the recent Supreme Court decision.

Just as long as the present system of wage production by wage labor exists, the labor power of human beings will remain in the category of commodities.

To declare by a legislative act that this is not so is the same variety of [illegible] as that which inspired a certain Pope of Rome to issue a Papal Bull against the appearance of Halley's comet, after astronomers had provided with mathematical accuracy the date of its appearance. Neither legislative acts, Papal Bulls, nor the ukase of Czar Gompers can change a fundamental economic law of capitalist production.

Labor-power will cease to be a commodity only after the Word Revolution has destroyed capitalism. So if Mr. Gompers' desire to lift labor above the level of "shin bones" is sincere he should become a revolutionist and advocate the overthrow of capitalism and the establishment of the Dictatorship of the Proletariat for the purpose of destroying the very soil from which capitalism springs.

But Gompers is Gompers—and a valet of capitalism in its most reactionary form.

So instead of Gompers siding in upsetting capitalism, the revolutionary proletariat will accomplish the task and throw Gompers into the discard along with the master class whose servant he has always been.

Smith's Hat Is in "The Ring"

Governor Smith has signed the Repeal of the Mullan-Gage Dry Law. Now many a New York "cooper" will have to desert the pleasant, refreshing surroundings of the best restaurants and cafes in the Empire City of the Empire State of the Empire Nation. Many a policeman will, with drooping head, have to go back to his beat on the gloomy street. The Federal Government will have to rush in more of its own marshals and detectives to protect New York's gigantic bootlegging industry and keep the prohibition amendment alive.

In signing the repeal of the state's special dry law, Smith has neither hurt nor helped prohibition by an iota in the State or country. In the Empire State, as in every other state in the Union, what one drinks down depends only on what he can put down—in cold cash. The size of the glass of gin one can get, everywhere, depends solely on what he can pay for it.

But by signing the repeal of the Mullan-Gage Law, Governor Smith has thrown his hat into the political ring of 1924. For a while Smith will be on the tip of every tongue—dry or wet. The Governor himself may get drunk with the wildest kinds of hopes as to his own political future.

The facts are these: The Republican Party, being the party in power, is committed to a declaration for the enforcement of prohibition. The Democrats, according to the plainest and simplest rules of political arithmetic, must then counter with a statement in opposition. In view of the unanimous acceptance of opinion as to prohibition, it would be foolhardy for the challenging Democratic Party seeking power to prattle in the same prohibition statements that the Republicans do. The Democrats must rally about them all those who are opposed to paying high-grade prices for low-grade drinks. Thus only can the Democrats have an issue. Without an issue they will be no campaign.

Governor Smith is no slouch politically. Nor is he surrounded by second-raters. Smith's advisers know politics, and know when and how to play it. By signing the Repeal Act, Smith has drawn more closely to the Democratic fold all those entertaining anti-prohibition sentiments. He has incidentally, to say the least, put himself in a formidable place in the forests supplying the Democrats with presidential timber.

Smith is now the white hope of the Democrats who, thru sheer force of Communists in Landta of Prussia Evicted b Police of the Socialist

By LOUIS P. LOCHNER
European Director, Federated Pres

BERLIN, Germany.—The ejection of the Socialist assemblymen of New York two years ago has been more than matched in the Prussian house of representatives, or Landtag. There the Communist members have not only been excluded for a period of eight days, with threats that they will be excluded for a longer period, but they have been taken by the scruff of their necks and thrown out bodily by the police under the command of a Socialist chief of police.

A touch of the ironical is added to the whole affair by the fact that the presiding officer, under whose regime the wholesale ejection of Communists took place, is none other than Leinert, who in 1912 had himself to be carried out of the Prussian Landtag because of his refusal to leave peaceably when excluded by the presiding officer.

The president, Leinert, decided to make use of his powers as chairman and first arbitrarily ordered the Communist leader, Katz, to be suspended for 15 days.

As pretext for his order the "Socialist" president took the behavior of the Communist Katz, who in fact had but offended the president. Katz had thrown to the bourgeois and "socialist" deputies a few unpleasant but true remarks and was physically attacked by the "socialist" pretorian gang, headed by Heileman, and was dragged down by them from the platform, his Communist friends wishing to protect him receiving similar treatment from the "Socialists," who outnumbered them.

The next day Katz tried to force his way into the chamber but was restrained by the police. Thereupon his colleagues in the chamber entered such vigorous protest that it was impossible to proceed with business. More Communists were excluded. They refused to go. The police was finally ordered in to remove them. The police appear to have handled them none too gently.

The following day the half dozen remaining Communists denounced the proceedings of the previous days, declaring that the forcible exclusion of the people's representatives is in violation of the law. The answer from the vice-chairman was that the remaining Communists, too, were ordered to leave. They declined to do so. The police did the job.

Demonstrations are being held thruout the city, staged by the Communists. Deputations of workers' councils, in many cases with a majority of social democrats, keep flocking to the assembly chamber to demand the reinstatement of the Communists. The old town is astir.

The Socialists deny that there is any parallel between Leinert's exclusion and that of Katz & Co., because Leinert was no democratic parliamentary system then.

"THE AMERICAN FOREIGN-BORN WORKERS"

By C. S. WARE

Who are the Americans? From what countries have they come? What percentage take an active part in American politics? What relation do they hold to the native-born American workers? What part have they played in the development of American industries and the enrichment of their owners? These questions and many others are answered in this pamphlet. Facts are interestingly supplemented with statistics and colored charts.

25,000 Shoe Workers Out at Brockton

(Special to "The Worker")

BROCKTON, MASS.—The general strike of shoe workers in this section, of the country, embracing 25,000 men and women, is now in its third week and the rank and file of the strikers are determined to win, in spite of the combined opposition of the officials of the United Boot and Shoe Workers' Union and the millionaire manufacturers.

The whole struggle is the result of a long series of crimes perpetrated against the Brockton shoe workers by the reactionary officialdom of the old union.

Manufacturers and the officials of the Boot and Shoe Workers' Union are working together against the strikers, both proclaiming that this is an "outlaw" strike. It is but the spontaneous revolt of the rank and file, against intolerable oppression. The years of treachery of the officials had disgusted the majority of the Brockton workers with unionism in general, and many of them dropped out of the union, declaring it was of no advantage to them to continue paying salaries to a gang of hirelings of the employers, posing as labor leaders.

But the terrific oppression and steady efforts toward brutalizing the workers forced them to go out spontaneously.

The drive of the manufacturers against the workers here was preceded by a drive by the Boot and Shoe Workers' general officers against the membership. Without any cause, except that the workers resented to resist the wage reductions of the employers, the general officers revoked the charters of four local unions, including the dressers and packers, the treers, the heelers and the cutters.

The compulsory arbitration clause agreed to by the general officers of the Boot and Shoe Workers Union and the manufacturers practically outlawed strikes and placed the workers under the jurisdiction of the corporation controlled state arbitration board, whose chairman, one Fisher, publicly announced that there should be a ten per cent reduction thruout New England. This objectionable practice by the general officers, of forcing the rank and file to accept arbitration awards that are favorable to the manufacturers has been the subject of controversy in the organization for a long time, but all efforts to eliminate it and destroy official domination in favor of control by the rank and file, have been blocked by the reactionary officials. Every convention of the Boot and Shoe Workers Union is packed with a gang of small henchmen who sell their vote to the union for the privilege of having their expenses paid to the convention. There are numerous cobbling shops thruout the United States whose proprietors are not members of the union. Seven of these members can be represented by one delegate and the union pays his convention expenses. On the other hand, in the real shoe industry, such as the Massachusetts district, the basis of representation is one delegate to 100 members or major fraction thereof. Thus a delegate representing seven petty cobblers can outvote the delegate representing 100 industrial workers. In addition to this there are thousands of abuses to which the rank and file have been subjected by the domineering officialdom.

Now that the 25,000 workers in this section including Brockton, Holbrook, Rockland, Braintree, Avon, Whitman and Abingdon are on strike independently of the Boot and Shoe Workers' Union, the officials of the union have combined with the manufacturers against the strikers, and are publishing newspaper advertisements in the interests of the manufacturers in order to help crush the strike.

Many of the smaller concerns would capitulate to the strikers, were it not for the pressure brought to bear upon them by the George E. Keith concern, manufacturing "Walk-Over" Shoes and the W. L. Douglas concern, who control the district financially and who can dictate to the smaller fry. Since the Boot and Shoe Workers officials always favor these concerns in imposing rotten conditions upon the workers, these manufacturers will naturally support their "labor lieutenants."

About 100,000 men, women and children are affected by the 25,000 idle men and since they are cut off from funds and strike benefits by the union officialdom the local committee representing the rank and file are endeavoring to appeal to other labor organizations to assist the strike financially. Headquarters have been established at Eagle Hall, Brockton, under the name Brockton District Shoe Workers' Union, where contributions are being received and measures taken to relieve the suffering of the families affected.

Censor Board Lauds "Fifth Year" Movie

(By F. S. R. Press Service)

The new nine-reel motion picture prepared by the Friends of Soviet Russia was not only passed by the National Board of Review of Motion Pictures, but highly commended in a special report. It says at one point:

"The motion picture, in this instance, makes another fine contribution to the pictorial ledger of history and human struggle upward. To everyone interested in world affairs, 'The Fifth Year' should appeal as a vivid document in terms of the screen."

The "entertainment value" which is defined as "all that which is entertaining or interest-holding" is declared "good" and the "educational value" as "excellent." The photography and coherence of the narrative are commended, the "historical value" is cited as "unusual" and the "moral effect either consciously or unconsciously produced" is considered "high."

The Secretary of the Board, Mr. W. A. Barrett, who personally reviewed the picture, declared that the new film was immeasurably better in technique than the first picture, "Russia Thru the Shadow," also put out by the F. S. R. Crystal-clear photography, art titles, and animated maps and charts dress up the picture in latest film style.

The Motion Picture Commissioners of the State of New York censored the picture and approved it with only one elimination, involving about 10 feet out of a total of almost 9,000

The National Committee for Better Films in its weekly bulletin recommended the picture for "the family group" and described it as a historical news film dealing largely with overcoming the after-effects of famine by the development of agriculture.

Only a few showings of the film will be made during the Summer, but any organization or theatre manager desiring to book the film for early Fall should communicate at once with the Friends of Soviet Russia, 201 W. 13th Street, New York, N. Y.

Priest in America Helps Russia

(By F. S. R. Press Service)

BRADDOCK, PA.—This is a steel town, typical of many in the State. The announcement that a Russian film—"Russia Thru the Shadows"—was coming to town became an Event, as only a dreary, hard-working town can understand the word. The big turnout when the picture was shown, on May 26, was consequently no surprise.

Among those present was a Roman Catholic Priest, Father Kraszinsky. It may be some indication of the effect of the picture that this priest gave the following statement to Karl Reeve, representing the Friends of Soviet Russia:

"You have a very beautiful picture there. Yesterday I urged my parish to attend in a body. I noticed a good many of them there. I believe if Russia executes her traitors, it is the business of Russia and no one else. Let Russia take care of her own affairs, and let us help her construct the nation, instead of indulging in useless criticism. Your picture is doing a big work and all the American workers must aid their brother Russians to help make the world a better place to live in."

Father Kraszinsky contributed to the collection for Russian relief and in a speech to the audience urged upon them to support Russia.

"S. L. P." Defies the Field in Drive for the Labor Party

By H. M. WICKS

The Executive Committee of the Farmer-Labor Party, striving to bring about a conference as a step in the direction of unity of labor's forces on the political field, addressed an invitation to the Socialist Labor Party.

Altho the Farmer-Labor Party did not endeavor to anticipate any actions of the Conference, the invitation furnished the "S. L. P." an excuse to indulge in one of its customary brain storms wherein it reminded the working class of the United States that, altho the "S. L. P." was rather hazy on the precise form and tempo of the proletarian revolution in this country, it was firmly convinced that "somehow, somewhere, and soon, something will break, which will cause the working class to perceive in the Socialist Labor Party the only party of labor in this country."

Someone said that hope springs eternal in the human breast, and the "S. L. P." has been expressing the vain hope for a number of years that the working class would flock to its standard. Today it is a rather forlorn hope. Since the Bolshevik revolution in Russia the leaders of the "S. L. P." and leaders are all that is left of it) have been rapidly drifting away from reality. Professing to be Marxists they denied the fundamental tactic of the dictatorship of the proletariat, proving that they were mere novices in the realm of historical materialism.

But even their enemies conceded that Daniel De Leon, who was and is their prophet, really did know considerable about Marxian economics, tho a poor tactician. So long as they merely repeated the various formulae of De Leon in the realm of economics they were on solid ground. But this reply to the Farmer-Labor Party threw economics overboard with the same abandon that De Leon and his followers have always vitiated historical materialism.

The Executive committee of the S. L. P., in a communication dated May 7, and published in the May 19 issue of the "Weekly People" gently but firmly chides the Farmer Labor Party for presuming to speak for labor in this country. For altho labor does not yet know it, the "S. L. P." was and is and ever will be the one and only, the true and unfaltering champion of the working class in this country. Because forsooth it bases its tactics upon science. Then we proceed to investigate what sort of "science" the Executive Committee of the "S. L. P." has in mind, and we read the startling declaration:

"A commodity itself, labor has no interest in 'lower prices' or 'lower rent', or the cheapening of this, that or the other ingredient which enters into the prodduction of labor-power."

At last the final word, the ne plus ultra of the science of economics, according to the erudite intellectual giants of the "S. L. P."

Never before, anywhere, have we encountered such untrammeled drivel emanating from those who befoul the memory of Marx by professing to disseminate his teachings. Anyone who knows the rudiments of economics knows that labor is not a commodity, that it has absolutely no value whatever. It is not labor that the worker sells, but his labor-power, which is a quite different thing. To speak of labor as a commodity is to fall into the errors of bourgeois economists and displays an intellectual poverty comparable only to the childish twaddle of Sam Gompers and the authors of the Clayton Act.

In order that we may not be accused of perverting Marxism by the mental misfits at the head of the "S. L. P.", we will quote the words of Marx himself on this point. On page 588, of the first volume of "Capital" (Kerr edition) we read:

"That which comes directly face to face with the possessor of money on the market, is in fact not labor, but the laborer. What the latter sells is his labor-power. As soon as his labor actually begins, it has already ceased to belong to him; it can therefore no longer be sold by him. Labor is the substance and the imminent measure of value, but HAS ITSELF NO VALUE." (Marx's own emphasis).

On the following page, 589, we again read:

"What economists (of the vulgar variety) call value of labor, is in fact the value of labor-power, as it exists in the personality of the laborer, which is as different from its function, labor, as a machine is from the work it performs."

This distinction is one of the points that placed Marx in a category by himself in the realm of economics. It was upon precisely this question that the elaborate system of the old economists always crashed. According to them the worker sold his LABOR to the employer. The value of labor was determined by labor. Therefore they could say that a day's labor is equal to one day's labor. Not only a vicious circle, but the most brainless tautology! Then came Marx with proof that what the worker sells is his labor-power, and that the value of labor-power, like every other commodity is determined by the amount of socially necessary labor-time necessary to reproduce it. Thus we see the vast difference between the commodity labor-power and that which determines the value of that commodity, labor-time.

The present Executive Committee of the "S. L. P." is so ignorant of the fundamentals of Marxism that it does not even read the literature published in its own establishment in its edition of Marx's "Wage, Labor and Capital" there is an introduction by Frederick Engels, wherein he deals with precisely this question. Engels points to the fact that the worker cannot sell his labor to the employer, but only his labor-power.

"At the most he could sell his future labor, i. e., assume the obligation of executing a certain piece of work at a certain time. But in this way he does not sell labor (which would first have to be performed), but for a stipulated payment he places his labor-power at the disposal of the capitalist for a certain time (in case of time wages), or for the performance of a certain task (in the case of piece wages). He hires out or sells his labor-power. (P. 14, S. L. P. edition, Wage, Labor and Capital).

That the position of the Executive Committee of the S. L. P. is not a mere accident is proved by the fact that again and again in the communication it returns to the fact that "labor commands a price" that it is a commodity. Then the whole misconception of Marxism is reduced to the utmost of absurdity when it triumphantly asks:

"Why, in logic, should one commodity more than any other require representatives in a political congress?"

Naturally, if labor is a commodity, (which it is not) and if the S. L. P. is right then it is just as logical for a political party representing sugar or mutton to be created.

When the "S. L. P." claims that it has nothing in common with other parties it is correct. It is alone, undefiled and unique in its arrogant stupidity.

The reply to the invitation of the Farmer-Labor Party was expected to be a declination, but no one, by the most phantastic stretch of the imagination, could visualize the nature of the reply, as no one but the ossified S. L. P. could sink to such depths, of idiocy in dealing with wealth production in this society.

Labor will create its own political Party and will enter the arena against the capitalist class totally oblivious to the existence of the forlorn remnant of sectarian muddleheads, known as the Socialist-Labor Party.

Rank and File Workers Lead Tractor Race

(By F.S.R. Press Service)

Those in the lead in the Free-trip-to-Russia contest in connection with the Friends of Soviet Russia tractor drive, it appears from a study of returns to date, are rank and file union workers. The names of persons prominent in the labor movement appear in the tally, but they are not at the head of the list.

The "Jimmy Higgenes" of the labor world, the men and women who work hardest and get comparatively little gratitude, are coming into their own in this contest. The voting arrangement is such that the tally is almost an exact measure of the amount of work done by the participants. Those who have made it their business to canvass the labor organizations of their vicinity have piled up votes which put them definitely in the race, with a round trip to the Workers' Republic as a prize.

To cite a few instances from among those at the top of the list in the voting contest: I. Greenberg, a fur worker in Chicago, Lena Cherwenko, a clerk, Celia Samarodin, a dress operator in New York, and a member of the International Ladies Garment Workers of America.

Rank and file workers all of them! Which of them will go to Russia as the "living message" with the tractors donated by the American workers thru the F. S. R.? Or will there be others who will get ahead of them in the race?

"The Liberator" for June

From the first cover page illustration by Frank Walts to the advertisement of the Friends of Soviet Russia on the back cover, the June "Liberator" will hold the undivided attention of the reader.

Printed editorials deal with the assassination of Vorovsky at Lausanne, the coming Labor Party conference in Chicago and other current issues.

Don Brown has a full page sketch of C. E. Ruthenberg and an interesting and amusing description of the "White Terror in Pittsburgh," with cartoons of the principals in the action, including prisoners, prosecutors and detectives. The depraved physiognomy of the detective thug is in striking contrast to the well-poised determination expressed in the countenance of the "dangerous red." An interesting article by H. M. Wicks, describing his own experiences in Ohio, deals with the spread of the White Terror in that district.

John Pepper bids Hillquit "bon voyage" as he starts his pilgrimage to the marriage of the Second and Two-and-a-Half Internationals at Hamburg. Jay Lovestone writes about the conviction of Ruthenberg at St. Joseph. J. Louis Engdahl has an interesting review of the activities of Alexander Howat. There are other contributions by Scott Nearing, Floyd Dell and the customary poems.

Cartoons by Hugo Gellert, William Gropper, John Decker and a double page cartoon of the negro "Exodus From Dixie," by Robert Minor complete one of the best numbers of The Liberator ever published.

Wicks Speaks at New Haven, Conn.

"Unite Labor's Forces in the Labor Party" will be the subject of the address by E. M. Wicks, labor editor of "The Worker," at Pardee Council Hall, 215 Meadow St., New Haven, Conn, June 19, 8 p. m.

Don't Throw This Paper Away Pass It on to Your Neighbor

Militants Among Anthracite Coal Miners Face Big Crisis at June 14th Elections

By ALFRED WAGENKNECHT
(Special to "The Worker")

WILKESBARRE, Pa.—A gut of that favorite administration slow known as "let's talk it over" is blowing, and all who have their hearts, or their labor leaders or industrial leaders gather, about it peculiarly sensitive.

"Let's talk it over" leaders fear a new strike in the anthracite coal region." Still we ask, what right have labor leaders to fear strikes? The answer is that they are not the labor leaders. For when a labor leader begins to fear the one thing that the mine owners fear, then "normalcy" has got him, which means that the mine owners have got him, which means that the rank and file have got their throat by the throat. Normalcy and strikes, as you may understand, are not all on speaking terms.

"It all happened in the month of May." The first week the mine operators celebrated May Day in Philadelphia. A statement was issued. The next week John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers, returned from his European travels. The week following John L. Lewis traveled to Washington. And now all connections have been made, the chorus is complete. The song they sing is—beat the radicals, they're bolsheviks, they're communists, join us for fear of strikes.

The tune is not taking with the rank and file. The statement issued by the general committee of the anthracite operators above referred to, assures us of this. Profits upon five and a half million tons of hard coal have been lost to the mine owners because of outlaw strikes, the statement claims. Where miners object or complain, there the language of protest is the language of the strike. When men are laid off, temporarily or otherwise, for injuring property, failing to report, loading dirty coal, failing to load cars with the prescribed topping, insubordination, defiance, then strikes are called to compel their reinstatement. Two hundred and thirty thousand miners were involved in these outlaw strikes. This is the complaint of the mine owners. Washington has heard it. The national coal commission crooked its finger at Lewis. Lewis came and listened. Now then, what to do, that's the problem.

The anthracite agreement expires in August. It is reported that Lewis cried tears and spoke feelingly about not having seen his blue-eyed baby boy for weeks at the convention at which the present agreement was put over and when the vote was about to be taken. Lewis subsequently promised the mine owners that the present agreement would be continued for another year after its expiration. Both Lewis and the mine operators are now wondering how this can be done, with mine workers "guilty of insubordination," actually defying both Lewis and the operators, so far as the present agreement is concerned, and all they can do while the getting is good. With the loss of profits on five and a half million tons of coal during the last six months, with the threatened loss of all profits should an anthracite strike occur, all this does play hell for those who aspire to pasture in the field of normalcy in the field of uninterrupted profits and contented unions. Uninterrupted profits and contented unions are boom friends of ours.

What is Lewis promising in Washington? It is claimed that only two mine workers officials in the entire anthracite region know. Did Lewis first come to the anthracite miners to consult them as to their wishes regarding the new agreement? He did not. Will he see to it that the new anthracite agreement and the coming new bituminous agreement to be entered into, will expire upon the same date? Nobody knows, but he probably will not. The tri-district anthracite miners' convention will be held June 24th. By that date the district elections will have been held in district one (June 14th) and that will tell whether the progressive or conservative mine workers will win June 24th. If the progressives win there will be fireworks at the tri-district convention, and the things miners are now defiant about stand a chance of being written into the new agreement.

Radicals and progressives thruout districts 1, 7 and 9 of the United Mine Workers dare not sleep a wink these few weeks to come. They must assume leadership in their local unions. They must act as tellers to assure an honest count of ballots. They must capture the local offices in the local elections about to occur. They must champion the progressive slate for district officers. They must elect progressives to the tri-district convention.

Lewis hopes that the conservatives will win. In dollars this means that he joins the mine owners who, at pits controlled by conservative locals, pay as low as $4.10 for six cars. At pits controlled by radical unions the miners get from $10 to $12 for four cars. It means that Lewis is helping a Scranton operator build his $137,000 mansion. It means that he will continue to close an eye when operators present United Mine Workers organizers with a humble domicile for services performed. It means that Lewis' "observers" will join operators and government "observers" in tagging radicals and running them out of this territory. It means that he approves of mine owners' priests whipping their congregations into line for the conservatives' slate in also the mine owners' slate.

It means that Lewis will be a party to the attempt to steal the elections, for the conservatives brag that the progressives will win the rank and file but the conservatives will win the elections. It means that he joins he operators in fulminating against he mine workers because a couple f dozen of them own autos and silk shirts. It means that he approves of the act of the Dunmore mayor, and to be a relative of a candidate upon the conservative slate, when he ordered Howat addressing the miners gathered to hear him "because Howat s not a member of the United Mine Workers and had been arrested once!" It means that he also does not think it at all a bad idea for the conservatives to import Socialists in an effort to give the conservative slate a bit of standing among unsuspecting progressives. It means that he agrees with the report of the general committee of operators, is against miners striking to recover a job for a fellow worker, to compel miners to join the union; to make meek and lowly miners out of the present defiant and "uncontrolable" sort.

But it's a long way back to the old days when the miners, talking with each other, were considered a crowd, were enjoined and blackjacked—a long way back in reality, if not in time. Miners who are courageous enough to strike 64 times in 60 days in the mines of one company are also tough enough to lick Lewis plus the operators.

Anthracite burns with a very small amount of flame, producing intense heat and no smoke. That tells what's what in this region. There are no signs of smoke and flame, and yet the heat and fervor and spirit of revolt permeates the workers. Direction and understanding are needed. The radicals will supply this.

Capturing the Leaders

There can be no doubt that the biggest news that broke in the American labor world, Sunday, June 3, was the organization at Pittsburgh, Pa., of the International Progressive Miners' Conference, the "left bloc" within the United Mine Workers of America.

Yet one is compelled to look in vain thru the columns of the "Socialist" daily, The New York Call, Monday, June 4, for any mention of this historic event. The same is no doubt true of the entire "Socialist" press.

This can be easily explained. The whole history of the industrial activities of the Socialist Party shows a continued effort, not to reach the rank and file of America's militant workers, but to "Capture the leaders!" This policy has been emphasized more than ever in recent years, until now the Socialist Party and its press, as has often been shown in these columns, is exerting its wiles even upon Mr. Samuel Gompers, the little "white terror" at the head of the American Federation of Labor.

Thus the very important accomplishments of the delegates of the radical miners gathered at Pittsburgh were completely ignored, but considerable space was given instead to a lengthy signed article by Gompers himself, trying to justify the continuance of his reactionary rule over America's organized workers. This is the same propaganda that every kept sheet of capitalism hungrily seized upon to help their friend, Gompers, who has also been lauded so much of late by both "Bill" Burns and President Harding.

Perhaps some of the limelight-hunting "Socialists" feel comfortable hobnobbing, on equal terms, with the $10,000, the $15,000 and even the $25,000 per year "labor leaders." They look askance at "Grand Chief" Stone, of the Locomotive Engineers, running an "open shop" coal mine in West Virginia. The "Socialist" Call puts Gompers' henchmen upon its board of managers.

But the growing militancy in the ranks of labor will gradually slough off all these reactionary human barnacles, from Gompers and Stone down to the lowest and meanest. Then the "Socialists," blind to the real nature of the class struggle, will wake up to learn that they haven't a friend left in the entire labor movement.

The backward-looking "leaders" of American labor are but as the stars of the night that pass with the coming of the new day. The new day for American labor is dawning with the growing militancy, the organized militancy of the workers in the mines and steel mills, on the railroads, in the needle, building and metal trades, on the ships that plough the seas, thruout all industry. On that day the masses will take account of those who have tried to "capture the leaders" in the past; among them the "Socialists" who are trying to clamber aboard Gompers' "One-Hoss Shay," even on the very eve of its collapse.

Russian Soviet Diplomacy

The replies of the Russian Soviet Government to the British ultimatum, Lord Curzon, prove conclusively that there is in existence one government that is genuinely desirous of peace between nations. They said as much to Great Britain: "We are for peace, but not at any price. Altho you may humiliate other and smaller nations, you cannot humiliate us. In our desire for peace we will make concessions, but those concessions do not go the absurd lengths of permitting you to clutch our throats with your greedy fists."

While the reptile press of the United States solemnly editorializes on the diplomatic retreat of the Soviet government before the bombast of Curzon, the revolutionary proletariat understands the masterly diplomacy of the Bolsheviks. Altho obsessing the consumption of the foreign diplomats of Britain, it goes over the heads of these pigmies to the masses of toiling workers thruout the world. If Curzon were not the blundering tool of a stupid ruling class he would drop the correspondence with Soviet Russia instead of trying to force Russia into a humiliating position before the world. He has not learned any lessons from the past history of Soviet diplomacy, otherwise he would quake before the spectre of Brest-Litovsk.

Soviet Russia has granted Curzon concessions and may grant more, but there is a point beyond which it will not budge. Everywhere there is evidence of increasing hostility among the capitalist nations against Soviet Russia. This attitude may presage another imperialistic venture against the Workers' Government. In such an eventuality the jackal pack of capitalism will find itself confronted with two foes—the invincible Red Army of Soviet Russia, and the awakening proletariat of every country in the world. Not only will the mass of the working class of Europe refuse to fight against Russia, but in this country the revolutionists in the trade union movement will exert every ounce of energy to close the ports and prevent shipment of supplies for such a venture.

While Curzon can only rely upon the imperialistic mercenaries in case of a show-down, the Soviet Government can rely upon millions of class-conscious workers thruout the entire world.

The Soviet diplomacy can be described as adopting the slogan of Theodore Roosevelt: "Speak softly, and carry a Big Stick."

The Fight for World Peace

Day by day the fight for world peace is growing more bitter. The Federal Council of Churches of Christ has joined the fray and has joined it seriously. It will circulate 125,000 congregations with a petition urging that the United States accept Harding's Permanent Court of International Justice. It will bring pressure on the Senators. The Council is even threatening to pray for peace via the God-blessed Gatling gun route.

All of which may be of first-class interest to students, observers and investigators of politics. But it is only of third-rate importance politically to workers. The existing efforts for peace made by this great American church body will succeed with the same degree of success accompanying similar previous efforts on the part of churches.

But behind all these threatening clouds of peace talk there lurks a severe difference of opinion now agitating the Best Minds of the Party in power.

In the fold of the upper crust of the Republican Party bureaucracy there are two dominant schools of World Peace Panacea Salesmen. One school, with Hoover, Hughes, and Harding as spokesmen, vehemently proposes the Permanent Court of International Justice. This group believes that the Administration stands a better chance of not being repudiated in the coming elections if it talks of a "peaceful" settlement of international disputes."

Another group, represented by Mr. Adams, who is still Chairman of the Republican National Committee, is opposed to all this talk of World Courts, permanent or otherwise. This school clings to the idea that all such talk will turn Republican failure into disaster in 1924 because the electorate will look upon this plan as a mere effort to have the United States sneak into the League of Nations thru some back, side or cellar door. Adams believes that even underground connection with the League will hurt his Party's chances of success.

But the workers needn't be fooled. There is no issue of world peace involved here. It is merely a dispute over the best ways and means of selling the Republican Party to the voters in 1924. When the next war comes, the Hardings and the Adamses will force the American masses into it. And when the next war comes, that unquiet body of quarrelsome aforementioned, will set aside at least one Sunday on which the American people will be asked to pray to God and Christ that our soldiers kill more men of the other side than the other side can kill of ours.

The Oldest Daily Passes

The New York Globe and Commercial Advertiser, the oldest daily paper published in this country, has been gobbled up by Frank A. Munsey and consolidated with his Evening "Sun."

The Globe was one of the few remaining "liberal" daily papers in the United States. The highest achievement in journalism was reached during a period of thirty years under the management of Charles A. Dana. Of late it has been simply one of those spineless, vascillating organs of sentimental liberalism. Endeavoring to represent the ideology of the small bourgeoisie who still labor under the delusion of liberty and equality, as proclaimed in the Declaration of Independence, the Globe became soon as emasculated as the hopeless class whose spokesman it tried to be. Just as the element it spoke for is fast disappearing, so the paper itself was doomed to the fate of its kind. It had to adjust itself to the demands of capitalist imperialism or perish.

Mr. Munsey, who in 1916, as the agent of the House of Morgan and the British Government, obtained control of the "Sun," among other publications, for the purpose of propagandizing the interests of Allied Imperialism, recently bought out the property of the Globe. For all practical purposes the Globe is now extinct and the victory goes to Wall Street. No longer will the imperialists be pestered by the yawp of the backward elements of the capitalist class, who found expression in the columns of this venerable sheet.

To the revolutionists the demise of this paper is significant only to the extent that it is evidence of the rapid devitalizing of a middle class that never at any time in its career, had vitality enough to stand forth politically as an independent class. This element is ground between the proletariat and the bourgeoisie and its individual members either sink into the ranks of the working class or climb to the seats of the capitalist overlords. The only organ in the daily newspaper field in New York that speaks for the former element is the recently born half-baked Evening Post, that flounders between the world court proposal of Harding and the anti-Bolshevik poison of Sam Gompers' pen valet, William English Walling. Its fate will eventually be that of the Globe and it will have few mourners.

A Millionaire Mormon's Will

In a New Jersey Court the $30,000,000 will of George Jay Gould has recently been filed, and now his offspring, legitimate and illegitimate, are squabbling over the spoils. Gould was the personification of that corruption so characteristic of his kind.

Descendant of the original plunderer, Jay Gould, who obtained his start in life by stealing from his partner in business and driving to suicide the man that came to his rescue to keep him from jail, the present Gould maintained the traditions of his ignoble race. With the fortune obtained from thievery, corruption and bribery of state legislatures and every other form of venality, the late George Jay Gould, like other debauchees among the "400" of our best society, had his legal wife and also kept women, one of the latter bearing him three children. He also had seven legal offspring by his wife. How many others he had that have been provided for in other ways, the record does not say.

At any rate, without doing a lick of work in all his sixty years, this specimen was able to live in idleness, luxury and debauchery off the surplus produced by the wage slaves of this country. He finally died of one of those mysterious, lingering diseases peculiar to the money masters of America. Now his seven legitimate offspring are trying to prevent the three illegitimate ones from sharing the fortune of their degenerate father.

Meanwhile the slaves in the vast industries controlled by the Gould fortune, especially on the railroads, continue producing wealth for the spawn of this family and firmly believing the illusion that capitalists are necessary in the process of wealth production.

"America Marrying Bonifaces Are Told" reads a headline in the News of this week. Which only goes to show that the Germans aren't the only people who have taken to "profiteering" since the war. And the Germans, even more than Americans, have had good reason for doing so. Among the countless post-war German fortunes resulting from figures on paper, was that of Julius Brandt. And yet the present capitalist government in Austria cannot give them.

After the War is Over

Now that the war has been over for nearly four years, the United States Supreme Court, in black robes assembled, has declared unconstitutional the laws in 21 states preventing the teaching of foreign languages to pupils below the eighth grade in public, parochial and private schools.

This effort to put a premium on ignorance grew out of the 100 per cent pay-triotism that ravaged the country during and after the war and that still continues in numerous violent forms. The time for the high judges to have acted was during the war, when men were being lynched for their ideas, others sent to prison, others out of the country. But a capitalist court never acts while the iron is hot. It waits until the war is over, when its decisions are useless and harmless.

Wholesale Democracy

The New York Times recently had a wireless from London announcing that the whooping cough was running thru Mayfair and attacking persons of all ranks. It was reported that even the Duchess of York was suffering from an attack. That was certainly very inconsiderate not to say disloyal, of the epidemic. It might have been content to attack the children of the working class and spare royalty. At any rate, the Times registers surprise that the germ should have so little discrimination. It certainly had democratic ideas but war, wholesale democracy should be checked.—S. K. A.

Dodging the Taxes

The big profiteers have been so successful dodging taxes during the past year that only 21 of them have declared they have incomes over 1,000,000 compared to 206 in 1916. The "millionaire class" are investing its monies in "tax free" securities, thus leaving the workers to shoulder the financial burdens of the government. Japan Feels Red Wave

Evidently Japan feels the red wave of labor's struggle for power creeping closer and closer. Following a murder given to Adolph Joffe, Soviet Ambassador to China and Japan, at Tokio, the Mikado's government, in true Pittsburgh style, conducted "red raids" all over the wholesale arrests. The kept press makes the usual comical blunders claiming that those arrested were "guilty of a Socialist plot to stir up Communism in this country." We shall await eagerly all orthcoming news from the Orient.

"Americanizing" Slaves Wholesale in Detroit, Mich., to Stop "Red" Inroads

By WILLIAM REYNOLDS
(Special to "The Worker")

DETROIT, Mich.—A new departure in the methods of molding the "Hardy Dubbs" and "Babbits" from the raw material of our immigrant has been inaugurated by our "100 per cent" Chamber of Commerce.

Their first attempt at this new brand of "Americanization" was made the other day when the so-called Americanization Committee of Detroit entertained a group of Czecho-Slovaks in the auditorium of the Chamber of Commerce Building. The Free Press, reporting the affair, declared, "this is the first official attention that has ever been paid these people."

The Free Press adds that in the afternoon the meeting was addressed by "prominent public men," who explained the beauties of "American institutions and ideals." Following the meeting the visitors were treated to a banquet and dance in the main dining hall of the building.

Long ago the Detroit Chamber of Commerce played a prominent part in teaching subservience to the foreign-born workers thru mobilizing the teachers in night schools, spellbinders in the factories and the clergy. They have always been ready to lend their magnificent auditorium to any organization of soldiers or other misled workers who might be used to further their greedy aims.

Revelations at the Berrien County trials must have impressed them with the methods of "mass action," for now they are supplementing their plodding methods with spectacular mass meetings of various nationalities in Detroit, who may be considered potential Soviet supporters.

The superintendent of schools, addressing the "mass," said "The church and school have marched together from the beginning of our history, and as long as they continue to do so there is no possible chance for anarchy raising its head. In the school we learn to respect the laws of the country and revere its institutions."

We are at a loss to understand what he means by the church and the school marching together. There is certainly no historical evidence to support such a statement, especially in relation to the public schools. Perhaps he means they both march to the "goosestep" of capitalist domination, to which both are subject.

Those patriotic terms "damned foreigners" and "scum of the earth," which usually color the remarks of the 100 per centers, were conspicuous by their absence. The chairman, Louis Kahne, beliefied the "American" ism" of the native-born as an accident of birth, while he eulogized those who voluntarily chose to embrace the glories of this sublime nation.

Here, in the name of patriotism, we see these Red Pipers of capitalism, using the prejudices they themselves have instilled between the American-born and foreign-born workers, trying to prove that the foreign-born workers are more patriotic than those who were born here. Evidently some of the recent acts of American-born slaves in strikes are not to the liking of the overlords, so they want to make the real 100 per centers out of the foreign-born slaves. Presumably they imagine this a clever move to make these exploited and brow-beaten workers contented with their lot by filling them full of patriotic bunk.

Needless to say, the representatives of the Church were there to lend the halo of sanctity to the proceeding and impress those attending with the idea that God and his earthly hirelings were regularly enrolled on the side of the 100 per centers.

This propaganda is so plainly an effort on the part of the patriotic employers to make scabs and rats of the foreign-born workers that it behooves members of the Workers' Party and those in the labor movement generally to do everything they can to organize these workers in their respective unions and bring them in contact with the radicals in the movement through the medium of our language press and various other mediums. The plutes learn some theoretical lessons from us, let us learn thoroness of practical application from them.

Jim Larkin Returns to Dublin, Ireland, and Is Received by Thousands after Eight Years' Absence

By FINTAN LALOR
Written Especially for "The Worker"

DUBLIN, IRELAND.—If there was any doubt in the minds of any Irishman or Irishwoman as to who was the dominating figure in the industrial and political life of the Irish working-class, that doubt was removed at the celebration of the anniversary of the execution of the late James Connolly, held here. Altho away from Ireland for over eight years, 20,000 men and women, amidst the pouring rain, roared their approval of the return of Jim Larkin. At the same time roaring their disapproval of the cowardly silence of the Irish Labor Party in allowing Connolly and his fellow executionists of the last few months to pass without protest on their part.

Jim Larkin addressed his remarks chiefly to those who favor the Republicans. He spoke to them of the necessity of revising their tactics and exhibiting a clearer understanding, and coming to grips with the realities of the situation. He urged them to lay down their arms and enter the Dail (Irish Parliament). "They were going to be a free nation," he said. "Because they had got a setback, was that any reason why they should not go forward to the dawn," he asked.

Many Republicans feared that the appeal of Jim Larkin, asking them to lay down their arms, was an appeal based upon the idea that they should be left helpless and conduct their fight in a pacifist manner; but Jim removed their fears when he declared, "Give up arms—yes!" "Ireland's sacrificed dead," he went on to declare, "gave up their arms many a time and waited until the hour arrived and seized these arms again, and went out and died that the nation might live." The crowd sensed the point that Jim was making, and tumultuous cheers greeted his remarks. Many saw that Jim was asking them to be sane men and women, as sane as they had been brave. They were being asked only to revise their methods and not to change their principles.

"It is no disgrace to give up your arms," declared Larkin, "when the forces opposed to you are overwhelming. If Connolly were here he would say to them to have peace by understanding, and then reform the line and march forward to victory."

Referring to the many who were dying upon the hillsides and those who had gone before, victims of the brutal conduct of the Government and the cowardly silence of the alleged representatives of the people, Jim Larkin asked the assembled thousands, "Were they going to waste the seed of the nation, and were they going to sacrifice the men in the jails for one personality or a dozen personalities?" The crowd answered, "No!"

Coming to the vexed question of the oath to the King of England, Jim declared that no man living could make them pay allegiance to a king. He urged the crowd, whether they were Free Staters or Republicans, to join together and make an appeal to the men on the hillsides to come into the nation. "Let them not mind words about giving up guns," he said, "so long as they do not give up the principle of a united Ireland, one and indivisible."

He urged the crowd to seriously study the question of peace. Let them come out into the open and fight for their principles, was the advice tendered by Larkin. "Let the Free State Government declare a vacancy," he said, "and he would fight the best man they could produce on the question of peace by understanding."

In one of the most dramatic appeals ever uttered in the streets of Dublin, he asked those assembled who were in favor of peace to raise their arms. There was a unanimous response. It was significant to note that men in uniform expressed their approval of Larkin's appeal for peace.

So ended the first meeting since the Free State Government came into power again in the men and women of Ireland had the pleasure of hearing a speaker stand up, irregardless of the blatant display of power, and boldly declare that the Workers' Republic would win. Dublin turned out in its thousands and felt itself more than rewarded for standing in the downpour again in the tremendous appeal uttered by Jim Larkin.

Ireland is going to have peace, let there be no mistake as to that. It will not be for the peace of the lamb lying down before the brute strength of the lion. It will be that of men and women realizing the futility of continuing in the struggle, at present against overwhelming odds. It will be a peace that will allow the militant workers in Ireland to reform themselves and pursue new tactics.

Dublin today clearly demonstrates, as much as we regret it, that the forces of reaction stand temporarily triumphant. The populace looks kindly, for the time being, on the forces of the Free State. Free State soldiers march up and down the streets, with loaded rifles, reinforced by armored cars. Free State officers boldly swagger forth, reminding one of the pre-war days in Prussia. But it is all of temporary duration. We mention it in order to counteract the criminally foolish statements of fanatical Irish Republican speakers in America.

Irish labor in parliament due to its silence on the executions and other matters, has fallen into disrepute. When its representative Cathal O'Shannon rose to address the crowd, prior to the speech of Jim Larkin, he was met with howlings and derisive cries. Finally, realizing that it was useless to continue, O'Shannon had to sit down and allow Jim Larkin to take charge of the meeting. Down among the crowd, afraid to be seen, was Thomas Johnson, the chairman of the Irish Labor Party. Irish labor has failed miserably in the political arena. It even lacked the ordinary courtesy of attending the welcome accorded to Jim Larkin by the Dublin masses. It now finds itself in a position where it cannot obtain a public hearing without the aid of Jim Larkin. Upon the industrial field the workers have, due to the union established by Jim Larkin—the Irish Transport and General Workers Union—maintained higher standards of living than that obtaining in Britain. It now prepares to cement its forces and forge ahead not resting until it has secured a republic, the only republic that counts—a WORKERS' REPUBLIC.

Ohio Miners for Program of Militants

(Special to "The Worker")

BELLAIRE, OHIO.—A Provisional Committee has been organized here to carry on the work of the Progressive Miners Movement in this District, until such time as Sub-District and District Conferences can be held, and Permanent Progressive Committees elected.

This is the response of the militants of District 6, U. M. W. of A., to the cowardly and panic-stricken attempt of the District Executive Board to ward off the oncoming progressive wave by an outrageous circular letter.

This circular as usual does not refute any of the false statements it claims are being circulated, nor refer to the Progressive Miners' Movement by name. But it is so composed as to give the reader, especially the one who does not examine the exact meaning too closely, a very strong impression that all criticism of the officers and policies of the organization is the work of the I. W. W.—Communists, or other avowed enemies of the American Government.

It also threatens to enforce the autocratic provision of the Constitution providing for suspension of any member who even reads to a Local Union a circular containing a strong condemnation of any decision rendered by an officer of the Union, and warns the membership against heeding a call to any meeting unless the call bears the official seal.

But the miners of the state of Ohio, the birthplace of the United SYDNEY, N. Bruce was arrested on the evidence submitted by detectives who claimed that in a public speech he declared that he hoped to see the Red Flag substituted for the Union Jack.

The prosecution failed to prove its contention, based upon this charge, which would have been a plain violation of the sedition law.

The Red Flag will be substituted for the Union Jack, not by talking about it, but by action on the part of the masses of the workers of Canada.

Young Workers League Urges Gompers Fight Child Labor

(Special to "The Worker")

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Samuel Gompers, President of the American Federation of Labor, has just received a letter from the National Executive Committee of the Young Workers League of America, for transmission to the Executive Council of the Federation urging that body to organize into unions the many millions of young workers in the United States now used to reduce the wages and lower the conditions of the adult workers, as well as to prevent them from acting as scabs.

The appalling condition of the 2,000,000 child laborers in the United States is pointed out in the letter sent to Gompers, and the A. F. of L., as well as all other working class organizations, is called upon to join the fight against the destruction of the workers' children in the mines, mills and on the farms.

The appeal to the A. F. of L. is but the beginning of a spirited campaign to be carried on by the Young Workers' League to bring to the

Anti-Fascisti Mass Protest on June 22nd

The bloody hands of the Fascisti must be kept off the American labor movement. That will be the gist of the emphatic demand which will be made by representative speakers at a mass meeting in Webster Hall, 119 E. 11th St., Friday evening, June 22, under the auspices of the Anti-Fascisti Alliance of North America.

The Anti-Fascisti Alliance has the endorsement of the entire organized labor movement in New York and vicinity, having been endorsed by the Central Trades and Labor Council, the United Hebrew Trades, the Italian Chamber of Labor, the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, the International Ladies Garment Workers, and the Workmen's Circle. The meeting will consequently be in the truest sense an expression of labor's sentiments.

The list of speakers will contain names familiar in all branches of the movement, there being complete harmony on at least one point—that the wearers of the Black Shirts, who have destroyed labor's power in Italy and have become the henchmen of the reaction everywhere, must be kept from obtaining a foothold in America.

The meeting will be international in character, as a symbol of the international determination to stamp out the black plague of Fascism. A number of the speakers will use languages other than English, but only for a few minutes each.

The gathering must be well attended as an effective protest against the acts of terrorism already committed by the Fascisti here, especially the murder of DiMaio, a member of the hod carriers' union, by a Fascist.

Come to the meeting, and spread the news among others!

An Open Letter

To All Branch Organizers, Workers Party, and Workers Party Members

Comrades: The National Defense Committee and the Labor Defense Council have arranged a Free Speech Week from July 1 to 8. The special feature of this Free Speech Week will be a monster collection of funds for the defense of the New York and Michigan Criminal Syndicalist cases. Every shop, every residential section, every park and summer resort must be covered at this time.

To make careful plans toward this end, kindly see that your defense delegate attends the next delegates' meeting on Tuesday, June 19, at 8:30, at 208 E. 12th St., and every Tuesday evening thereafter until the beginning of the drive.

With the pending hearing of Ben Gitlow in the Supreme Court and the the appeal in the Ruthenberg case, as well as the numerous deportation cases, you can appreciate the urgent need of funds for defense at this time.

Our drive has been endorsed by the Executive Committee of the Workers Party, Local New York. We therefore ask every branch to get behind this drive with all enthusiasm. This is a chance to show what your branch can do. We count on your active cooperation.

Fraternally yours,
Nerma Berman, Drive Secretary.

Laundry Strike Is for Increase in Wages and Recognition of Union

Laundry employes who are members of the International Laundry Workers' Union No. 280 went on strike Tuesday for recognition of the union and a small increase in wages.

Shirt ironers are the only workers directly affected by the strike, and it is confined to Manhattan and the Bronx. The responses to the strike call was 100 per cent of the members in this branch of the union, and during the first day over 100 unorganized ironers called at the union offices and joined the union.

Many laundry owners also rushed to the union offices to sign agreements with the union granting full recognition and the wage increase demanded. Union officials state that they are confident of winning and that the strike will greatly strengthen the organization.

Bosses Press Aids Gompers War on Labor

BY HARVEY O'CONNOR
(Federated Press Correspondent)

SEATTLE.—Despite the surface excitement attendant upon the delivery of the American Federation of Labor ultimatum, Seattle labor is calm about the threatened revocation of the charter of its central labor council. Men in labor ranks are positive that the council will not retreat from its progressive stand on national and international questions when it formulates its answer on June 8. They are also certain that the local council can not be permanently disrupted by the action of the federation's executive.

If the charter is withdrawn, another local central body must be created to take its place. In this new council the same unions which now send delegates to the present council will be represented by men of the same views.

The only damage which the federation's executive has done, they believe, is to play into the hands of the local Associated Industries. The tory dailies of this city have consistently given page one to the A. F. of L. ultimatum. Papers which have fought the A. F. of L. tooth and nail both nationally and through its local unions, have not missed this rare opportunity to quote Samuel Gompers and the executive council to the fullest length. One paper, subsidized by the Associated Industries and the Ku Klux Klan, has repeatedly given boxcar type to the charges against Seattle's labor body.

Charges that the Central Labor Council has endorsed both the I. W. W. and the Communist International are mutually contradictory, in view of the hostility between these two radical groups, James A. Duncan, secretary of the Seattle council, declares.

Unions here have receded from many of the advanced positions they occupied during the war. Union Labor is now fully represented on all civil projects, and its support sought in matters of public policies. In the recent city elections, the three candidates it indorsed out of a field of six were elected to the city council. One of these, Robert Hesketh, is first vice president of the International Culinary Alliance, comprising cooks, waiters, waitresses and soft drink dispensers.

12-Hour Day in the Steel Empire Takes Ghastly Toll of Life Among the Children

Deliberate and carefully planned murder!

That is the crime the steel barons are guilty of in continuing the enforcement of the 12-Hour Day in the steel mills.

"The Worker," this week, shows that the big steel capitalists, who voted unanimously at the New York meeting of the American Steel and Iron Institute to continue the long day, are not alone guilty of murdering the fathers in the mills,—3,255 killed outright during the 10 years—1909 to 1919.

They are also directly responsible for the early death in the "homes" of the steel workers of untold numbers of little children and helpless babes—victims of the Steel Moloch.

In Brookline, Mass., are the homes of the rich, the holders of stock in steel, copper and coal. There the deaths of children under five years of age constitute but one-tenth of all deaths.

But what do we find in the steel towns, Braddock, Pa., and Gary, Ind., in Carnegie, Pa., and Loraine, Ohio? In these centers of the 12-Hour Day, one-half of all who die are children under five years.

[illegible] every day [illegible] funeral processions with their white hearses, carrying the white coffins that contain the lifeless bodies of 20th Century infant sacrifices to the God of Steel, whose apostles are Gary, Schwab, Grace and their capitalist company.

THE BABIES, THE CHILDREN OF THE STEEL WORKERS DIE FIVE, SIX, EVEN SEVEN TIMES AS FAST AS THE CHILDREN OF THE RICH.

Down in Johnstown, Pa., a worker, grown to middle age, told his story to a member of the Investigating Committee of the Interchurch World Movement. He had quit the mills, the only protest he knew, when his little girl had died, the daughter he had never learned to know, because he was always away, during all her waking hours, away in the wills, working.

This week's article in our anti-12-hour day campaign shows that the long day in the steel industry gives the worker no time or opportunity to develop his social and family life. It shows how profiteering in steel not only "Breaks up the home," but cuts short the life of the men, women and children of the working class in the steel empires of Pennsylvania, Ohio, Indiana, Illinois and other states.

Our facts show, for instance, that:

It was impossible for a 12-Hour Day steel worker, during eight years working at Homestead, Pa., even to find time to take out his citizenship papers.

A Catholic priest testified before a Senate committee that some steel workers at Braddock did get Sunday off, once in six months, to go to church.

Men complained that they didn't see their wives, or get to know their children.

In Braddock, suburb of Pittsburgh, 200 families living in 61 shacks; 25 boarders in one house where three different persons occupied each bed in the 24 hours of each day, sleeping eight-hour shifts.

This week's article follows:—

The Wholesale Murder of Children

By JAY LOVESTONE

The ravages of the rapacious Steel Barons are not limited to the fathers and mothers. Profits take a terrific toll amongst the children of the steel workers. In the steel areas the infant mortality rate is appalling. Ac-

BABIES DIE! GARY'S PROFITS $101,529,310.00!

By CLARISSA S. WARE
Investigator for "The Worker"

Production of steel, during the month of May, was at the rate of over 50,000,000 tons per year. The steel mills are running nine-tenths capacity. This is the largest monthly output on record.

The price of steel is now 32 per cent above last year, and at the same time labor costs only 10 per cent higher than a year ago, and bituminous coal 28 per cent less. The bank account of the United States Steel Corporation fattens at a rate which throws some doubt into Mr. Gary's plea of poverty and the need for the 12-hour day and slave conditions in the steel industry.

"To abandon the 12-Hour day," said Judge Gary, "would require at least 60,000 additional employes and raise the price of steel 15 per cent."

Of the total steel ingot capacity in the industry of 55,800,000 the United States Steel Corporation owns 40 per cent. Its share of the increased number of employes needed to run the industry on an 8-hour day would be 24,000. In 1922 the U. S. Steel employed 214,931 workers. With the high salaries of directors, vice-presidents, and other ornaments, added to the wages of the workers, still the average of wages and salaries was only $1,500 per year. Taking this padded figure as a basis, the 24,000 workers would only cost the steel corporation about $36,000,000. And last year the net earnings of the United States Steel Corporation were $101,529,310.

Let the added costs come out of the millions of profits. There will still remain about $65,000,000 net profit for Gary and his gang to divide up between themselves.

The cry is a shortage of labor, a plea for the 12-hour day!

And the steel corporation profits are $101,000,000 a year.

With the steel workers organized, Judge Gary would soon sing a different song.

Producing 40 per cent of all steel, the U. S. Steel Corporation employs 214,931 workers, the Bethlehem Steel 33,816, the Republic Iron and Steel 8,326. There are approximately 300,000 workers in the steel industry today.

The workers in this basic industry must organize into a powerful industrial union. They must prepare to take their places side by side with the workers on the railroads and in the mines, if they, and their wives and children and their class, are to survive the 12-hour days, the gruesome pogrom and the slave conditions imposed upon them, and especially upon Gary's wife and children.

Until then Gary will continue to plead for "aid and understanding," and the steel corporation will continue to sweep enormous profits on, of the workers, and the babies and children of the steel workers will continue to die three times as fast as the children of the rich.

Big Meetings Planned for Labor Party

Branches of the Workers Party are swinging into the campaign for the organization of the Labor Party at the July 3d conference in Chicago. Mass meetings have been arranged by many of the Party branches, which are also distributing literature urging support of the July 3d convention.

Branches which have arranged meetings and speakers are as follows:

June 15—Elizabeth, N. J., Labor Lyceum, 344 Court St., at 8 p. m. Speaker, J. Louis Engdahl, Editor of "The Worker."

June 16—West Frankford, Ill., at Reed Stand, at 7 p. m. Speaker, Rita Reeve Elser.

June 17—Daleytown, Pa., Moose Hall, at 7 p. m. Speaker, J. Louis Engdahl, Editor of "The Worker."

June 17—Granby, Mass., Flanick Hall, at 7:30 p. m. Speaker, Karl Reeves.

June 18—New Haven, Conn., Trades Council Hall, 212 Meadow St., at 8 p. m. Speaker, N. M. Wicks.

June 20—Bridgeport, Conn., Metal Trades Hall, Park Theatre, Main St., at 8 p. m. Speaker, Ludwig Lore, Editor of "Volkszeitung."

June 21 and 22—Maine, dates and addresses to be announced later.

The subject of the lecture for these mass meetings is, "United Labor's Forces in a Labor Party."

Hear Foster Attack Gary 12-Hour Day

(Special to "The Worker")

WARREN, Ohio.—William Z. Foster will speak in the heart of the Ohio steel district, Sunday afternoon, July 1, at a picnic at Avon Park, between Niles and Warren, Ohio.

This picnic has been arranged by the Mahoning County Branch of the Trades Union Educational League, in order to give Foster the opportunity to answer Judge Gary's pronunciamento in regard to the 12-hour day, in the heart of the steel territory.

The picnic is being widely advertised among the steel workers of Youngstown, Girard, Niles, Warren, and many other smaller steel cities in this territory.

It is expected that Foster will address one of the largest audiences of steel workers congregated in this district.

Local New York, Workers Party, will hold

Big Problems Facing Party in Russia Met

BY ISRAEL AMTER

(Our European Staff Correspondent)

MOSCOW—The Congress of the Russian Communist Party took place for the twelfth time under the most unusual conditions: the great leader of the party was missing. But the missing, his spirit guided the proceedings. Everything was conducted in the Light of Leninism—which has a distinct meaning at the present time.

The Twelfth Congress faced great difficult and complicated problems. War-time Communism is over and the introduction of the New Economic Policy, as a temporary adaption to capitalism, demands greater elasticity. In the face of the ruin that rules Europe today, one can state without fear of contradiction that only the Communists have a policy. Social-Democracy and Laborism are floundering, while the Communists of Soviet Russia are guiding the government and state economy over the shoals to a constantly rising level of prosperity.

The Congress had to deal with four big problems: the organization and raising of industrial production; the bringing of the country close to the city; the national question; and the controlled the government.

The question of industrial production was treated by Trotsky in an elaborate thesis, which is regarded as the most comprehensive essay in this field ever attempted. It was treated in a brilliant manner. Proletarian governments suffer from lack of talent to carry on the economic life of the country. It must be developed from the ranks of the workers themselves. This development can take a place only in the actual work. The bourgeois engineer and technician deal with men trained in capitalist production, all of them conversant with the methods of such production. The proletarian engineer has first to be created, he has to evolve his own method of production with forces unacquainted with the problems confronting them. The task is a tremendous one; many mistakes are made and many obstacles must be overcome. Only a rigid organization and careful selection of those placed in charge of production will ensure success.

Opposition to this position was led by Krassin, Commissioner of Foreign Trade, who maintained that this process was so slow that it cannot be utilized as a basis for the re-establishment of Russian industry. He declared that the only acceptable basis was one that would secure international loans and credits. Consequently, production in Soviet Russia would have to be adapted to capitalist industry. This position was completely repudiated by the Congress. Soviet Russia will greet whatever international credit and loans are granted her; her production, however, is being put on a self-sustaining basis. Soviet Russia cannot and will not wait till such time as the capitalist governments consent to grant credits. This is the demonstration of the growing power of the Soviet State.

The question of nationalities has become an imminent one since the Union of Soviet States was effected last year. There are nearly one hundred different nationalities assembled under the Red Flag of the Union of Soviet Republics, all of which have their peculiar problems. Most of them are petty nationalities, yet a few of them, such as the Great Russians, have a large population. In all cases, it is a petty-bourgeois chauvinist instinct that has to be combatted. There are also the problems of language, of education, and literature. They are mainly the problems of peasant life, and range from those of the nomads of the Circassian hills to the population of the broad Russian plains.

Soviet Russia is the only government that has given self-determination to the nationalities composing its Union, even tho that was one of the great slogans with which the Allies won the war. Only the Communists can guarantee such rights, since the proletarian State depends on the self-development of nations.

The Communists, as the initiators of the revolutionary movement that took the workers and peasants into power, have been responsible for the welfare of the State ever since. Moreover, the workers and the masses of peasants have looked to the Communist party for their guidance. True to their mission as leaders of the revolution, the Party has assumed this responsibility. And yet hitherto this assumption has been an indirect one. Today the responsibility is direct.

The Party has a Control Commission for controlling the activities and leading organs of the Party. This Commission holds the individuals and official bodies to their tasks and makes them account for their actions and decisions. It has been decided to give this Commission the further duty of controlling the Soviet government. It has been endowed to fifty members and will have the task and responsibility of the good functioning of the government.

Close Mines and Rob 200,000 Miners of Work, Advice of Officials to Coal Mine Barons

Official Organ of Union Misleaders Tells Operators How to Starve Miners Back to Work

Appeal to Public Is Made in Name of Miners Who Have Been Made Victims of Starvation Drive—Union Officials Are Willing Tools of Coal Barons

Under the guise of a statement purporting to be a reply to the charge of the non-union coal operators that the miners are responsible for the over-production of coal, officials of the union declare "the union would not have grown and attained its present size and proportions if the operators had not hired 200,000 more men than coal was needed." . . . "These 200,000 surplus men on their pay rolls and refuse to turn them loose. . . . The United Mine Workers of America cannot close down these mines, because it has no such right, power or authority. For the same reason, put 200,000 miners out of the industry. But the operators can do it if they will. We challenge them to make a start."

Here, in plain words, is the brass suggestion of leaders of the miners' union to drive 200,000 of the 500,000 union members out of that organization with the connivance of the mine barons themselves.

Without a doubt this is one of the vilest pieces of labor flunkeyism that is recorded in the long history of treachery to the working class on the part of its misleaders, paid officials. This is the work of the unspeakable John L. Lewis machine and the three members of the committee who signed the appeal—Green, the union government-board are Ellis Searles, pen prostitute, who edits the United Mine Workers' Journal, John Moore and Thomas Kennedy, both Lewis satellites. Let the membership of the United Mine Workers of America burn the names of these scoundrels into their minds and drive them all from the United Mine Workers of America and the trade union movement of this country.

Evading the Struggle

The principal characteristics of the reactionary union official when dealing with the employers or with the executive committee of the capitalist class, the United States government, is his desire to evade the class struggle.

With the United Mine Workers, organized over half a million strong, under militant leadership, the miners would have a powerful weapon in the six-hour day and the five-day week, at the same rate of pay now prevailing at eight hours a day for six days. Statistical reports, even though perverted by the mining interests, show conclusively that the industry can well afford such hours and wages. If Searles, Moore and Kennedy were real leaders of labor, instead of the hirelings of the mine owners, they would tell John Hays Hammond and the members of the United States Coal Commission that the miners would settle their quarrel with the coal barons in their own way, and that either the coal barons would come to the terms of the miners or every mine in America would be tied up until the issue of nationalization of the coal mines was forced.

But instead of even advocating the nationalization of the mines, Searles, as editor of the Mine Workers' Journal, attacks John Brophy and the committee that recommended nationalization.

Those workers active in the recent Progressive Miners' Conference in Pittsburgh should take advantage of this communication and this brazen effort on the part of the officials of the union to cripple the organization they are sworn to defend. Possibly Searles and his pals would like the opportunity of designating the 200,000 miners that should be permanently deprived of their livelihood. In that case the Lewis machine could be assured a majority in the next election for officials of the union.

If the Lewis machine was composed of real-labor leaders, instead of vassals of the master class, there would be some effort made to break the power of the operators in the gunmaas ridden states of West Virginia, Kentucky and in many other sections, instead of trying to evict men from the union mines and consequently from the union who have experience in mining so they will be compelled to enter the non-union fields to compete against the union men.

If union men are thus conspired against by their own officials and once enter the scab coal fields it is hardly likely that they will be easily induced to re-enter the union ranks during the next general strike in the coal mines in this country. In spite of the treachery of the union officialdom this must not be permitted. The rank and file must act and act quickly and inform [illegible] and Co. that the union will have nothing to do with assisting the operators drive 200,000 members out of the union to become raw material for strike-breaking the next time the coal barons set out to destroy the miners' union.

United Front of Transport Workers Won

By GEORGE HARDY

At last the persistency of the Red International of Labor Unions has brought unity. The Russian transport workers unions concluded an agreement with the International Transport Workers' Federation (Amsterdam).

Each agreed to a joint Council of Action, which is to be composed of representatives from the I. T. F. and the Red International, with its headquarters in Berlin. This cannot be viewed as a purely Russian move, for the policy of the R. I. L. U. has been one of constant endeavor to establish this United Front.

It will be remembered, that the Executive Council of the Red International tried to have the International Federation of Trade Unions (Amsterdam), intercede in the split that was about to take place last year in the Confederation of Labor in France. Unfortunately, the Executive of the I. F. T. U. refused to curb the hand of Jouhaux of the C. G. T. which culminated in dividing the organization into two equal parts; one half, the United Confederation of Labor (C. G. T. U.) affiliating with Moscow, and the other staying with Amsterdam. Considering that the last congress of the C. G. T. held a few months ago, turned down the request for a joint conference of the two organizations submitted by the C. G. T. U., all revolutionary workers and progressives everywhere will welcome this unity, and thank the Red International for this achievement.

The Socialist Party of America, we hope, will have learned something of the tactics of the revolutionary trade unionists in Europe, and will put the attack of Morris Hillquit, against the Communists who sought the floor of the Hamburg conference, to do exactly the same as the Transport Workers have accomplished, into the category of all things sectarian and reactionary, to say the least. This is no time for petty bickerings and division. The European organizations are rapidly learning this, with tears and blood, the evidence of their folly in prolonging the day of unity, which the R. I. L. U. called for immediately it adjourned its first congress. Instead of trying to understand why the Communist Parties become stronger during a crisis, Hillquit hopes against hope they will become weaker, when capitalism, as he admits, is bound to bring more crises which will sharpen further the division of classes and drive them into two extreme camps, the one of extreme nationalism and the other communist. And there is no middle ground in this class struggle.

Edo Fimmen's statement as international secretary of both the I. T. F. and the I. F. T. U., that the organizations are well nigh helpless in the face of fascism, is a serious warning to the American workers and they must immediately get together or suffer all the agonies capitalism can inflict for our disunity. Robert Williams, of the British Transport Workers' Union, states that there is to be an agreement not to expel Communists from the transport unions for their revolutionary activities, and war against Soviet Russia is to be met by a common front of all transport unions. A common fighting fund is to be created which will be used for resisting fascism, and helping those unions that have suffered severely in the struggle with reactionary terrorism. Viewed in the light of the past, when transport workers took coal to England and America while in both cases the miners were in desperate struggle with the mine owners, we may now prepare to keep vigilant watch and refuse to do any more international scabbing. The Council of Action will be entrusted to call the workers into conference if the first move made by the bosses detrimental to the international working class. Nor will munitions of war, and the transport of troops encase any control commissions which are being established on the European railways, "No more capitalist wars," must be the rallying cry.

Let the Fellow Workers of the I. W. W. take note of the coming decision not to expel communists. This is a splendid example of how misled by them as being too reactionary, have now gone further in tolerance than the I. W. W., for they still refuse to reinstate those whom they expelled for their activities for affiliation to the Red International.

The recently formed International Marine Workers' Amalgamation Committee is calling upon the transport workers and seamen to make a united front. We ask that all those who take into consideration this one thing separated as we are, to immediately start an agitation in the longshoremen, seamen and harbor workers' union for complete amalgamation. We need a union without divisions. It is necessary to eliminate all the craft unions in favor of consolidation into an Industrial Union of Marine Workers. This is what the Red International advocates and this joint council of transport workers will lead to an international understanding and international solidarity.

Hail the Red International for its persistency in Unity.

ONWARD AGAINST THE CENTRAL POSITION OF THE ENEMY

"Ohio Robotnik" (The Voice of the Workers), Polish Daily, Mt. Sterling, Ohio, declares that United States Steel Trust Empire with its 12-hour slavery is the strongest position of the enemy in the whole United States. It is this citadel of human misery that the workers must storm. It is this citadel of human misery where slaves for the labor masters in every branch of industries are incessantly forging the chains of their own slavery. All efforts for cutting wages, prolonging hours and restoring the cruel 7-day slavery for the workers in America, must be concentrated to absolutely defeat the United States Steel Trust. All Labor forces should be concentrated against this center of the world industrial slavery of the world.

"Turn its cannons against Kaiser Gary's Iron Hell Empire, "The Workers' Voice" urges. Strong position in the mass struggle of the working class of America, and it must and will have in this fight the whole-hearted support of every true fellow worker of this country.

THE STEEL WORKERS MUST SPEAK

"Laisve", Lithuanian Daily, Editorial, June 7—We whole-heartedly support the campaign of the organ of the Workers Party, to find out what the steel workers themselves think about the 12-hour day and we promise to fully cooperate in this campaign.

Let all of the working class in America hear what the steel slaves think about the 12-hour day. When the whole working class hears your voice they will come to your assistance to organize and to carry on the struggle against the powerful steel trust.

CZECHO-SLOVAK DAILY JOINS CAMPAIGN

CHARLES KOLARIK, Secretary, Czecho-Slovak Federation, Workers Party, and editor, Spravedlnost, Czecho-Slovakian Daily, Chicago—Our heartiest appreciation of the fight of "Labor Herald Workers" against the 12-Hour Day. This struggle will meet with a great response from the foreign-born workers in the steel mills. You may count on our full co-operation!

ently recurred in the studies made by the Childrens' Bureau."

Steel Workers' Homes Ruined

In the report made public May 25, 1923, such profiteers in steel as Dinkey and Block and Gary and Grace said: "Whether or not, in the large majority of cases, twelve-hour men devote less time to their families than the employes working less than is perhaps questionable."

That this contention is an outrageous sample of brazen effrontery run amuck is obvious to every worker. It is painfully obvious to the many thousands of steel workers who are veritable galley-slaves chained to the rapacious desires of the greedy Gary and their fellow-profiteers.

The very family and social life of the steel workers gives the lie, in no uncertain terms, to this false propaganda manufactured by the Steel Trust. Because of the starvation wages forced on them, the steel workers are compelled to slave inhuman hours of labor to eke out the barest existence for their families and themselves.

It may, therefore, be put down as a copy-book axiom that in the Barony of Steel starvation wages and unspeakable working hours are inseparable. Ruined homes, overworked mothers, wretched, unsanitary living conditions, a miserable, monotonous machine existence and mass murder of their children—these are the blessings visited on workers by Garyism and its Twelve-Hour Hell Shift System.

Indescribable Social Conditions

Said Lieutenant Charles Rumford Walker describing his life as a furnace worker:

"The community of workers taken on a special character, where men work one day is twelve hours long 'We haven't any Sundays,' the men said; and 'There isn't time enough at home.' This is the most far-reaching effect of 'hours' in steel, I think, and easily transcends the others.

"'What do you do when you leave the mill?' people ask. 'On my night week,' I answer, 'I wash up, go home eat, and go to bed.' Anything that happens in your home or city that week is blotted out, as if it occurred upon a different continent; for every hour of the twenty-four is accountable, in sleep, work, or food, for seven days; unless a man prefers, as he often does, to cheat his sleeptime and have his shoes tapped or take a drink with a friend."

And the Commision on Inquiry of the Interchurch World Movement found that:

"The Twelve-Hour Day made any attempt at 'Americanization' or other civic or individual development for one-half of all immigrant steel workers arithmetically impossible."

But the full meaning and the widespread extent of such ravages of the long working day can be understood only when one keeps in mind the fact that 58 percent of those employed in the manufacture of iron and steel are foreign-born.

Investigating the grievances of the steel workers' this Commission cites the following typical case:

"M. U., a Czech (Homestead), in this country eight years and is married, but he never could find time to take out his citizenship papers since he would have to go on a week-day to Pittsburgh, which would mean that he would have to pay the wages of his two witnesses and lose his own.' While he was out on strike he would have taken out his citizenship papers, but he underatood from the newspapers that the strikers were not granted citizenship."

Not Allowed to Go To Church

From the testimony presented to the Senate Committee it is seen that the intolerable hours do not permit the steel workers the opportunity to rest even by going to Church. In reply to the Committee Chairman's questions about the number of times that persons omitted to go to church a Roman Catholic priest answered:

"Father Kazinski: Well, these are from the furnaces in the Braddock mills. There are nine furnaces there, and furnaces H and A allow the men to go to Church every second Sunday. The balance of the nine furnaces do not allow their men at all to go to church. Some get a Sunday off, perhaps, once in six months; but it is not taking care of their souls.

"The Chairman: Do many members of your church congregation work on Sunday?

"Father Kazinski: Most of them work on Sunday; and they do not see the inside of a church more than once in six months, because they are forced to work on Sunday."

Apparently, Gary and his High Priests of the God Mammon are bent upon preying on the workers even on the Holy Day of the Lord!

"Normalcy"—How Workers Live It

In these great days of Republican "peace and prosperity," the following picture painted by Lieutenant Walker of the "normalcy" existence the steel workers is particularly enlightening to the working class of America.

"The Twelve-Hour Day, I believe, tends to discourage a man from marrying and settling into a regular home life. Men complained that they didn't see their wives, or get to know their children, since the schedule of hours shrunk matters at home to food, sleep, and 'he never comes to make wife is always after me to leave this game,' Jock used to say, the first-helper on Seven. Mathematically, it figures something like this: twelve hours of work, an hour going to and from the mill, an hour for eating, eight hours of sleep—which leaves two hours for all the rest, shaving, mowing the lawn, and the 'civilizing influence of children.'

"I have no brief to offer for the Eight-Hour Day as a general panacea for evils in industry. I merely bear witness to the fact that the Twelve-Hour Day, as I observed it, tended either to destroy, or to make unreasonably difficult, that normal recreating and participation in the doings of the family group, the church or the community, which we ordinarily suppose is reasonable and part of the American inheritance."

Family Life Is Destroyed

In their campaign of vile calumny against the militants in the labor movement, the champions of the interests of the steel and other capitalist magnates pose as the friends of the heavenly annointed defenders of the "hearth and home." The unbridled hypocrisy of these apostles of the profit system is brought into sharp relief by the following example of the wretched family life amongst the steel workers as found by the Interchurch World Movement investigators:

"None can dispute the demoralizing effects on family life and community life of the inhuman Twelve-Hour Day. As a matter of arithmetic Twelve-Hour Day workers, even if the jobs were as leisurely as Mr. Gary says they are, have absolutely no time for family, for town, for church, or for self-schooling, for any of the duties that go to make full citizenship; they have not the time, let alone the energy, even for recreation.

"At Johnstown a member of the Commission was approached by a man of middle age who said that he was determined never to go back to work until the question of hours was settled. He gave as his reason the fact that his little daughter had died within the last few months; he said he had never known the child because he was at work whenever she was awake, or else she was asleep during the day time. He was determined that he would know the other children and get to know them, and that he should never lose sight of them."—(Interchurch Steel Report, p. 43.)

"Nothing good would be attained, according to outside agitators, for by the fusion of his life at last he found them."

What Steel Workers Call "Home"

Margaret F. Byington of the Russell Sage Foundation thus described a typical mill-town household in Homestead:

"One morning I entered a two-room tenement. The kitchen, perhaps fifteen by twelve feet, was steaming with vapor from a big washtub set on a chair in the middle of the room. The mother was trying to wash and at the same time to keep the older of her two babies from tumbling into the tub full of scalding water that was standing on the floor. On one side of the room was a huge puffy bed, with one feather tick to sleep on and another for covering; near the window stood a sewing machine; in the corner an organ,—all these besides the inevitable, cook stove upon which in the place of honor was simmering the evening's soup. Upstairs in the second room were one border and the man of the house asleep. Two more boarders were at work, but at night would be home to sleep in the bed from which the others would get up. Picture if you will what a week or a season means to a mother in such a home: the overwork, the brief respite from toil—to be increased afterward—when the babies come."

The disastrous effects of such home life are even more unbearable than the description would tend to indicate, because of the big families of the immigrant steel workers. According to the Interchurch investigators 15 percent of the immigrant steel workers have families of ten or over. Of the Croatians 37 percent have families of ten or over. Of the Magyars, 21 percent."

And Dean Mortimer E. Cooley of the Engineering School of the University of Michigan and successor to Herbert Hoover as President of the American Federated Engineering Societies thus answered Gary's tirade in behalf of the 12-Hour Hell Shift:

"The workingman must have more leisure—his right as a civilized being. Industry must be so organized that he must be able to work his eight hours a day. He must have more time to spend with his family, so that opportunity for the improvement of domestic relations may be afforded. He must have greater opportunity for companionship with his children and his friends. He must have time for healthy recreation so that a sound mind may be developed in a healthy body."

Starvation Wages Paid

The starvation wage goes hand in hand with the Twelve-Hour Day. That is dependent on the other. Gary Steel Barons pay the workers miserable wages so as to compel them to accept the two shift system. Thus the evils of the low wages paid to the workers are part and parcel of the Twelve-Hour Day and can properly be charged to it. For the steel workers the longer day means lower pay. He will never realize the shorter day without at the same time winning higher pay.

Receiving the glorious wage of less than forty cents an hour, after all the boosts given his pay by the generous Gary, the average steel worker is driven to further degradation.

According to the findings of the Interchurch Movement based on the official compilations of the U. S. Bureau of Labor Statistics. "The annual earnings of 72 percent of all workers were, and had been for years, below the level set by Government experts as the MINIMUM OF COMFORT level for families of five.

"The annual earnings of over one-third of all producers of iron and steel workers were, and had been for years below the level set by Government experts as the MINIMUM OF SUBSISTENCE standard for families of five.

"This second standard being the lowest which scientists are willing to term an 'American standard of living,' it follows that nearly three quarters of the steel workers could not earn enough for an American standard of living.

"The bulk of unskilled labor earned less than enough for the average family's minimum subsistence; the bulk of semi-skilled labor earned less than enough for the average family's minimum comfort." . . .

The minimum of subsistence level is the lowest level for mere animal well-being," with little or no attention to the comforts or social demands of human beings." The minimum of comfort level allows for a "modest amount of recreation."

This Commission also found that:

"A comparison of common labor earnings in steel with common labor earnings in five other major industries in the Pittsburgh district for the latter part of 1919 on the basis of a common standard week showed steel labor the lowest of the six."

Today the same condition prevails. The average wage per hour of common labor is fifteen cents above or almost 40 percent higher than the hourly pay of common labor in the steel industry.

It is under such long hours and low pay—the Twelve-Hour Hell Shift System—that the powerful Trust magnates would have us believe the steel workers can have any but wretched living conditions and miserable family and social life.

Shocking Housing Conditions

Thus the Interchurch investigators found that:

"Extensive congestion and unsanitary living conditions, prevalent in most Pennsylvania steel communities, were largely due to underpayment of semi-skilled and common labor."

This degradation of the steel workers was brought home to the Senate when it investigated the Steel Strike of 1919.

"Senator Sterling: Now, about the housing conditions, will you describe those?

"Father Kazinski: Well, two rooms as a rule, are the headquarters of the workers. The lower part is a kitchen and upstairs is the living room, if you can call it such, and the sleeping room for the family, and they have to sleep there. Sometimes they have boarders and sometimes there are four or five sleeping in a room.

"Senator Sterling: As a matter of fact, do many of them have less than four rooms?

"Father Kazinski: Yes; most of them have only two rooms."

And the Interchurch Report goes on to say:

"A dozen years ago the Pittsburgh Survey revealed conditions of housing which shocked public opinion and which Pittsburgh authorities state, have been improved practically not at all in the interim. It was impossible to conduct another such exhaustive housing survey in this investigation but sufficient observation and inquiry bear out the local statement, that housing was as bad as ever. . . . The census takers found in Braddock, for example, that in this steel suburb of Pittsburgh 2,000 families were living in 61 houses; 35 boarders were in one house where three different persons occupied each bed in the twenty four hours of each day, sleeping in eight hour shifts."

Senator Kenyon, Chairman of the committee, speaking of Braddock, said:

"This is the worst place I have ever seen and I have watched housing conditions of many immigrants."

The Senator further reported that:

"The first thing which strikes the attention of one who visits the homes of the strikers is the shocking overcrowding. The majority of families which I have seen live in only two rooms, and only few of them have more than three rooms. As the families are composed of from four to eight people, this means that the air space necessary for hygienic living is wholly lacking and the right kind of home life is made impossible. It means that frequently a bed must stand in the kitchen all the time, taking up space greatly needed for other things. In a few cases the crowding is due to the presence of lodgers, but usually it is not. In one case I was told that the family had tried to find an apartment with three rooms instead of two, but had been unable to, as many landlords objected to having such a large family of children in their houses. Such policy, of course means, that the largest families may be forced into the smallest accommodations. In general, however, the burden of paying rent for an adequate home seemed too great for the family to undertake. In many cases the apartments have no water in them and several families are forced to use a single pump in the court yard. In still a larger number of cases there are no toilet arrangements except dilapidated water closet sheds in the yard."

Supplementing this description of the abominable housing conditions the Interchurch investigators showed that:

"Many of the strikers live in alleys which are very dirty and cluttered with rubbish collected by the authorities at infrequent intervals. In one place in Homestead I found what appeared to be drainage water flowing down in the middle of the alley. In a good many cases families live in rear houses which can only be reached by narrow dark passage-ways or rambshackle wooden staircases leading in from the street."

Finally, let us turn to the conditions in Gary itself to bring our horrible picture up to date. Said Elizabeth Hughes of the Children's Bureau of the U. S. Department of Labor in Bulletin No. 112, published in 1923 as a "Filed Study in Gary, Indiana":

"A number of long, one story frame buildings, cheaply constructed and designed to bring in a maximum in rental, which were built on the South Side, perhaps epitomize the worst ills of uncontrolled housing. They were planned for lodging house, and divided into two rooms, or more rarely three room apartments. These small apartments were occupied by families, however, with consequent overcrowding. When two such long buildings occupy adjoining 'shoe-string' lots with only a narrow passage between, used in common by the tenants in both buildings, the congestion is great and but little relief is afforded by the small yards left at the end of each lot. Two adjoining houses of this type supplied but a single water faucet and four privies for the use of twelve families. In another instance a single flush toilet was provided to accommodate nine families. Inadequate at all times, during cold weather it was rendered useless, due to its location at the end of the last apartment where it was not protected against freezing.

"Apartments in such houses were found occupied by both colored and white families of different nationalities, as well as by groups of lodgers. From the point of view both of morals and of sanitation such buildings are not in accordance with decent housing standards, and their continued existence should not be tolerated."

Terrible Suffering by Mothers

What these working and living conditions of the steel workers spell for the mothers is thus portrayed by investigator Elizabeth Hughes making a study of the conditions in Gary for the Children's Bureau:

"All conditions of family and individual life are likely to be less favorable when both husband and wife are inferior, ignorance of sanitation and hygiene greater, and power to satisfy physical wants reduced."

Miss Hughes did not sugar-coat her findings. She showed that:

1. "Mothers employed during pregnancy—29.4 percent of the total births."

2. "The mothers of 279 infants (68 percent of the total whose mothers were gainfully employed) did not cease work even within two weeks of confinement, and the mothers of 256 infants continued gainful work up to the very day or hour of confinement."

3. "Seven-tenths of the mothers had no prenatal care whatever."

4. "A minimum of ten days rest in bed after a normal delivery is commonly recommended by obstetricians and resumption of household duties is discouraged under a fortnight. Seven hundred and forty-six mothers (45 percent) were in bed less than two weeks after delivery. The income was $1850 or over. 36 per cent got up before the tenth day and only about one mother in six (15 per cent) had household help less than a fortnight."

5. "The proportion of families in which the chief breadwinner's earnings were not supplemented varied according to the amount of the breadwinner's contribution. When his earnings were below $1050, 56 per cent of the babies were found in families which had no supplementary earnings; in the next higher income group, 67 per cent; in the highest 72 per cent. In short, the more adequate the chief breadwinners earnings, the smaller the tendency, the less need to add to them by the earnings of other members of the family. Mothers were less likely to be gainfully employed if the chief breadwinner's earnings were high, tho even in the highest group 29 per cent of the mothers were employed. In the lowest income group the percentage was 41."

The Summary of This Horror

The Twelve-Hour Hell Shift System denies the steel worker even the slimmest opportunity for family and social life. The Twelve-Hour Day and its destructive twin brother, low wages, are responsible for the wretched housing conditions, intolerable living conditions of the workingmen, and an appalling infant mortality.

Applying the rules of arithmetic to the everyday life of the steel workers, the Twelve-Hour Day annually adds hundreds of millions of dollars to the fabulous dividends of the capitalists, subtracts years of life from the children and wives of the workingmen, divides the laborers' time until it is reduced to an insignificant fraction of a day for social and family life, and multiplies the workers' woes and troubles by the score.

"Protect Foreign Born"

The Party in Detroit, Mich., is awake to the menace inherent in the present governmental attitude towards the foreign born. Native class propaganda calling for the installation of the Bertillon system of identification with its measurements, finger prints, photography, etc., will not be allowed to go unnoticed. The local has elected a committee shaiged with the duty of carrying out the Party's policies in behalf of the foreign born. This committee will be made up of the most capable comrades from each branch, and will hold its initial meeting June 24th.

Young Workers Will Picnic

The Young Workers League of Detroit will hold a picnic July 4th, at Redford Park. A gathering under the auspices of this group of young enthusiasts promises a maximum of enjoyment. There will be games galore, contests of all sorts, dancing, singing, eats and drinks.

"UNDERGROUND RADICALISM"

AN OPEN LETTER TO EUGENE V. DEBS

By JOHN PEPPER

Debs has been an opponent of the Workers Party upon some tactical problems. Yet he is nearer to an agreement with its revolutionary principles than he is with the policies and tactics of the Socialist Party in which he holds membership and for which he is now speaking and writing. The whole question of underground parties, tactics, and the putting into effect of revolutionary principles is discussed in this little pamphlet which is addressed in a friendly spirit to Debs, the great warrior.

"It reduces the physical sleep needed for the restoration, regenerative refreshment of the bodily powers to just so many hours of torpor as the revival of an organism exhausted by labor absolutely requires. It is not the normal maintenance of the labourer's vital force that sets the limits of the working-day; it is the greatest possible daily expenditure of labour-power, be it more or less healthful or more or less degrading, by means of which it may be, which is by determining the limits of the labourer's time of repose.

"Capital cares nothing for the length of life of labor-power. All that concerns it is simply and solely the maximum of labour-power, that can be rendered fluent in a working day. It attains this end by shortening the extent of the labourer's life, as a greedy farmer snatches increased production from the soil by robbing it of its fertility."—(Capital, Vol. I, "The Working Day," Page 291-292.)

YOUR REPLY TO GARY!

Tens of thousands of steel toilers read "The Worker" last week, who had never seen a copy of the paper before. The free distribution of these "Workers" was absolutely necessary to interest those who labor in the steel mills, to let them know of the fight "The Worker" was making in their behalf.

But it is impossible for "The Worker" to continue sending out this great number of copies free each week. The financial burden is too great. We want the steel toilers to be regular readers of "The Worker," and we want those who are now our readers to help us get them into the rapidly increasing "Worker" family.

For this reason we are making a special offer, THIS WEEK, of "The Worker"—15 WEEKS FOR 50 CENTS—and we will include the workers in all industries, every one of whom, as we have pointed out, is threatened by the continued rule of the 12-Hour Day in the Steel Industry. Here is a Sub-Blank all ready to be cut out and circulated among your fellow-workers.

Fight Child Labor, Young Toilers Urge

attention of the organized as well as the unorganized workers the danger to them in a vast mass of unorganized youth exploited by capitalism.

Particularly the many barriers now preventing the youth from entering the unions are pointed out in the letter and an endeavor to reach the workers in the unions everywhere will be made to enlist their aid in opening the way for the entrance into the unions of the millions of exploited youth.

The complete text of the letter received by Gompers from the Young Workers League is as follows:

Samuel Gompers, President,
American Federation of Labor,
Washington, D. C.

Dear Sir and Brother:—

After investigating the economic conditions of the young workers in this country, and after a thoro discussion of ways and means of improving these conditions, the Second National Convention of the Young Workers League of America (the organization of the young workers in the United States) instructed its National Executive Committee to submit the following statement thru you to the American Federation of Labor:

Our own investigation as well as official statistics of the Children's Bureau of the United States Department of Labor show that the young workers in this country—in many instances mere children—are compelled to work longer hours and for less wages than the adult workers.

In most industries (if not in all), and even in such where the eight hour day has been established by the unions, young workers are still compelled to work nine, ten and more hours a day. Need we tell you, Mr. Gompers, that the conditions in the steel mills where the twelve hour day is still in vogue are simply appalling and that large numbers of young workers suffer under these horrible conditions?. You must be acquainted with the conditions of the young workers in the mines where they labor inhumanly long hours at the most hazardous work.

Surely you have not forgotten the statement you made in 1909 after you returned from Europe—"America is at least two decades behind many European countries in the protection of life, health and limb of the workers." And you must realize that since then this country has made shamefully little progress, particularly in the matter of protecting the life and limb of the working youth. We specifically refer to the action of the United States Supreme Court in throwing out two national child labor laws. Your statement made in 1909 is particularly true today as far as the young workers are concerned.

You have spoken of child labor quite often, Mr. Gompers. Certainly you are aware of the abominable fact that over 2,000,000 children fifteen years of age and under work for their livelihood. We need not elaborate on this disgusting state of affairs. We just want to point out here, however, that the official statistics of the United States Department of Labor show that children of six years of age and under are being worked as much as fourteen hours a day.

These are the reasons why the Second National Convention of the Young Workers League of America, on behalf of the millions of young and child workers of this country turns to the organized labor movement to find the means to remedy the conditions that now exist. Our organization cannot carry on the struggle alone and isolated from the unions. Moreover, we emphatically reject the idea of special youth organizations on the economic field.

That the young workers, as part of the entire working class, can only better its conditions fighting shoulder to shoulder with the adult workers, was the unanimous decision of the convention. The convention furthermore expressed its willingness to lend every possible aid to the unions for the purpose of organizing the young workers. Particular emphasis was laid upon the necessity of a united labor movement and the combating of all dualism in the industrial field.

We need not point out to you that it is not only in the interest of the young workers that we urge them to organize, but it is above all in the interest of the working class, in the interest of the adult workers as well. The fact is too well known for us to need to stress it that the young workers are very often used as strikebreakers to scab on the adult workers on strike. In this manner the young workers are used to reduce the standard of living of the adult workers.

It is therefore, the imperative task of the organized labor movement to pay the greatest attention to the young workers and to enlist them in the ranks of the labor unions. The young workers want to join the unions. So far, however, they have been prevented from joining them by many barriers, such as age limits, etc. A concerted effort must be made by the American Federation of Labor to bring within itself the great mass of unorganized young workers.

We ask you to consider these questions and to devise ways and means for making it easier for the young workers to join the unions. We deem it necessary that all barriers be abolished and that the gates be thrown open to all young workers willing to join the unions. All youthful toilers irrespective of their age should be admitted with full rights.

Our convention also set up an economic program and a series of demands for the young workers based on the conditions now existing. Considering the importance of this question, we call upon you, fellow workers and brothers, duly to examine our demands and to let us know at an early date what decision your committee has arrived at regarding the organization of the young workers in the unions.

We are particularly interested to hear from you what immediate steps you intend to undertake to assist the working youth in their fight against child labor, long hours in the steel and other industries, bad sanitary conditions in the chemical and like industries, abolition of night work in industries dangerous to the health of the young workers, and for the protection of life, health and limb of the young workers. The American labor movement cannot let the cry of the suffering millions of children and young workers pass unheard and unheeded. We sincerely hope that the organized adult workers will lend a helping hand to the young workers and assist them in organizing into the unions and fight with them for better conditions. Unity is strength.

The young workers are waiting for you to act.

On behalf and by authority of the SECOND NATIONAL CONVENTION OF THE YOUNG WORKERS LEAGUE OF AMERICA,
National Executive Committee,

(Signed) Martin Abern, Sec.

IMPORTANT! NEW YORK!

To the delegates of the City Central Committee, New York City:

Comrades:—The next meeting of the City Central Committee will be held Saturday, June 16, 8 P. M., 208 E. 12th St. Matters of great importance to the organization will be taken up at this meeting. You are urgently requested to put all other engagements aside on that date, and be present at this meeting without fail.

Executive Committee, Local Greater New York.

Brandes Points at America

Perhaps the greatest and most respected publicist of Europe is Georg Brandes, and those who pretend to an interest in the quality as well as the quantity of our patriotic pretensions as "the land of the free" would do well to consider that this man, whose intellectual integrity is acknowledged the world around, recently said that, in view of continued persecution of radicals in America as shown by the Michigan Syndicalist cases, "nowhere is civil liberty less in evidence than in the United States."

Develop Workers' Drama

All comrades interested in the drama and willing to assist in the dramatic section of the Workers' Party, and all comrades who are authors of radical or revolutionary plays are earnestly requested to attend a meeting of the drama group June 25, at 8 o'clock, at 208 E. 12th St.—Sadi K. Amter, Dramatic Director, Educational Committee.

"THE AMERICAN FOREIGN-BORN WORKERS"

By C. S. WARE

Who are the Americans? From what countries have they come? What part have they taken as an active part in American politics? What relation do they hold to the native-born American workers? What part have they played in the development of American industries and the resistance of their employers? These questions and many others are answered in this pamphlet. Facts are interestingly supplemented with statistics and colored charts.

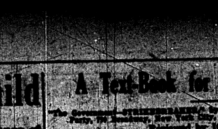
A Text-Book for the Class-struggle



Gompers' New York Machine Aids Military

BY BERT MILLER

The Central Trades and Labor Council of New York City, at its last meeting, approved the plan of the officers of the Citizens' Military Training Camps, to approach the various labor unions of the city in order to recruit young men for military training.

Thus the Gompers machine, which is in absolute control of this labor body, that had previously given a hearing on the Kuzbas Colony, to Mrs. Doyle, wife of a former stab labor agent, and tool of the Manufacturers' Association, that had refused to hear Mr. Reeso, the official representative of the Kuzbas Colony in reply, now descended to the very lowest depths of treachery to the workers of New York City.

Without the previous consent of the delegates, the Executive Committee invited Mayor Ross, of the U. S. Army, representing the Citizens' Military Training Camps to speak and granted him official credentials to appear before the local unions of this city.

Totally forgetting the "war-to-end-war," the millions of lives lost uselessly and the millions who were maimed and disabled in the last orgy of destruction, the body voted 70 to 28 to grant his request in order that our young men could be trained to "defend our country against attack" —the same old bunk that had been handed to us during the World War. Those boys, the Major said, would receive the greatest physical development and benefit, all at the Government's expense. No doubt this development and training will include exercises in machine gun practice and the use of the bayonet, so that our own boys can be used against us during strikes, or so that they may be shipped to foreign lands to defend the interests of American capitalists.

It is exceedingly regrettable that the militant trade unionists do not attend these important meetings of the Central Labor Council. There was only a small minority of 28 who stood up bravely against the resolution. They included Frechthold, of the Painters; Maud Schwartz, of the Womens' Trade Union League; Mandel and Colby, of the Teachers. When a demand was made for a roll call that each delegate's vote might be recorded, the chairman refused to grant it. It is hoped that at the next meeting of the Council, a strenuous effort will be made to secure the repeal of this attempt to annex the local labor movement to the Preparedness Campaign of the War Department.

Soviet Hymn of Revolution Russian Funeral March

Dying as soldiers fighting for Labor
so did you fall;
An offering of your love for those who share the strife;
Gladly you gave us talent and treasure; yielding your youth to strife
The honor of the world, your freedom and your life.
Deeply you suffered nor shrunk from the grave—
Judges and hangmen, the fate of the fray;
Starved in dark dungeons, beaten and tortured, cheerful and brave—
Defying chains and jails, you marched upon your way.
Mad with their blood lust, rich from your labor exploiters dwell
In luxury and splendor; scornful of our power,
Sweeping to triumph trusting no power—Heaven or Hell.
This song of sorrow sounds to them their fatal hour.
Rise now we workers rebellious and bold;
Tyrants shall rule no longer from above;
We are the builders—no one shall suffer hunger and cold—
We bring a world of beauty, liberty and love.
Farewell true comrades, death now enfolds you—rest in the tomb;
As sleeping there in peace you know no more of pain.
Farewell true comrades, we rise to fight;
O'er-sweeping all 'neath the banner we bore,
Slaving and sorrow vanish before us.
Toilers unite!
To break your bonds and rule the world for evermore.

Holmes Hits Raiders

The wanton violation of the basic American right of free speech by the United States government in recent years constitutes one of the blackest scandals in American history, says the Rev. John Haynes Holmes, pastor of the Community church, in a letter to the New York branch of the Labor Defense council, which is collecting funds for the defense of William Z. Foster and the other trade unionists who were arrested after the Michigan raid of Aug. 21.

"If such violation is to be ended," the letter says, "it must be by the concerted action of the people and more especially of labor, which is the chief sufferer, in protest against the action of government officials and in defense of all victims who suffer from lawless oppression."

To Save Civilization, Honor Silver Jubilee and Punish Gompers' Enemies

Following dispatches have caused us to cut our vacation short, leave Palm Beach and resume our old work again:

"IN THE NAME OF GOD, HAVE PITY UPON US. RESUME THE PUBLICATION OF THE BOLCOMS AND STOP THE RUHR REVOLT. STRIKERS WON'T GIVE IN UNLESS YOU COMPLY WITH THIS REQUEST. PLEASE, SAVE OUR CIVILIZATION."—Poincaré.

"IN HONOR OF OUR SILVER JUBILEE, MAY I REQUEST OF YOU AS A PERSONAL FAVOR TO CONTINUE THE PUBLICATION OF THE BOLCOMS."—Hylan.

"YOU MUST HELP ME PUNISH THESE SCOUNDRELS WHO DARED TO DEFY MY STAND TOWARDS SOVIET RUSSIA. GET OUT YOUR BOLCOMS AT ONCE!"—Gompers.

And that's that.

The Confessions of Luke McLuke

(All revolutionary rights preserved. Unlicensed reproduction in full or in part expressly prohibited by the Third Celum alst International.)

We take much pleasure, folks, in introducing to you our new contributor, Mr. Luke McLuke, the foremost expert on Socialism, Anarchism, Syndicalism and Rheumatism of the Barat Detective Agency. Mr. McLuke is well-esteemed among the men of his profession and is undoubtedly the most educated sleuth in the country. Although the only thing he ever caught was a cold, nonetheless his intelligence and knowledge of economics have made him the second Sherlock Holmes. It is for this reason that we consider ourselves fortunate in securing the confessions of this distinguished person. His sensational exposures of the activities of the Reds in this country and his logical interpretations of economic phenomena will make these series the greatest achievement of American journalism. At our left is an intimate photo of our hero AT WORK. His intelligence can be unmistakably judged from his appearance. If you don't say any more about him, we'll let Mr. McLuke from now on speak for himself. The first instalment follows.—Editor.

THE TRUE STORY OF THE WALL STREET EXPLOSION

Relates His Autobiography—Discusses Gary—Names Perpetrator of Explosion.

How do you do, folks? I'm very pleased to meet you. Before presenting to you the first authentic revelation of the Wall Street Blast, I deem it necessary to acquaint you with my biography and give you a better understanding of my philosophy of life. I was born very young, a son of my parents. From early childhood I showed signs of super-intelligence. My inventive propensity—so essential to detectives—is incomprehensible; while only at the age of twelve I already discovered myself to be a great man. I've power, knowledge of surgery and experience among cannibals, I soon became a leading figure in the Burnt Defective Agency. My knowledge of Socialism, Syndicalism, etc., I received from such authoritative sources as the Boston Transcript, the New York Herald and the Police Gazette. I am a firm BULLiever in Law and Order; laws for others and orders from me. Being a true friend of Labor my views are identical with Judge Gary's. I believe that the American Federation of Labor should call out a general strike demanding a 12-hour day and a half day's pay. Those poor labor exploiters dwell would be ideal moral and economic conditions for the working class. It might have surprised you that such a wonderful thing as a 12-hour day should be supported by a capitalist like Gary. The reason is very simple. When Gary's father died he came to St. Peter and asked to be admitted to Heaven. "No millionaires are admitted here; only those who have slaved in factories and mines long hours, and suffered starvation, are permitted to enter these gates," replied the holy doorkeeper. That set the old man thinking, and he wrote to his son: "Dear Elbert, if you love your employes, and want them to go to Heaven, let them starve and work 12 hours a day . . ."

See, I almost forgot, I suppose you're all anxious to hear the only true story, and find out the guilty one of the Wall Street blast. Well, here it is: ON SEPTEMBER 16, 1920, MORGAN'S BUILDING WAS BLOWN UP BY . . . . dynamite!!

Respectfully submitted, Prof. Luke McLuke.

Halt Effort to Deport 5 Party Heads

(By Federated Press)

CHICAGO.—Testimony of two department of justice undercover men has failed to accomplish the deportation of five foreign-born defendants in the Michigan red raid cases. The hearings of T. J. O'Flaherty, Norman Tallentire, Philip Aronberg, Alex Bail and Joseph Zaak before the U. S. immigration service commissioner have been postponed until after the men have been tried in the Michigan courts. They are all defendants with C. E. Ruthenberg and Wm. Z. Foster on the criminal syndicalism cases brought in Berrien county circuit court, St. Joseph, Mich. The trials have been held up until the Michigan supreme court passes in September on Ruthenberg's appeal, following his conviction early in May.

The immigration commissioner inquired of each of the five men whether he belonged to any party formed to overthrow the U. S. government by force of violence. Each denied that he did and then refused to answer further questions relating to his part in the Communist convention of August, 1922, which was raided by the department of justice and Michigan authorities. They refused because they have not yet been tried and were sustained in their refusal by the commissioner.

Francis A. Morrow, Alan Wolfsworth, and Maurice Wolff, two department of justice stool pigeons, testified that the men had attended the Communist convention and had been arrested in consequence.

Deportation seems to be postponed at least five or six months.

Campaign of Militant Coal Diggers Begins to Sweep Ohio Mine Fields

Mine Workers, are too intelligent to stand for the autocracy displayed in this circular, and its issuance without doubt be one of the best things for the Progressive Movement that could have happened.

Progressives Demand Pay for Slat

One of the chief grievances in Eastern Ohio has long been the slate or stone question. Most of the coal is overlain by a thick vein of slate or soapstone, which must usually be dug down by the miner without pay.

Various strong rebellions against this situation have sprung up in the past, only to be quieted by the officials by statements such as the one by President Ledyuka, of Sub-District 5, in the 1922 Sub-District Convention: "No contract will be signed by me unless the mine workers of Eastern Ohio instruct me to, that does not carry with it some kind of compensation for the draw slate overlaying our seam." Since the both the Cleveland and New York Agreements have gone into effect with no change in the slate conditions.

Organization Work Demanded

Ohio, and especially the Central and Southern fields, are suffering from the non-union conditions in the nearby West Virginia and Kentucky non-union fields. In 1921, the Hocking District in Central Ohio, suffered from the shortest working time in all mining districts, the average being only 21 per cent of full working operation. The coal from the non-union sections of West Virginia passes right thru the Hocking district on its way to the lakes and has actually hauled more miles for less per ton than the Hocking coal.

Denied New Trials

The need of a Labor Party in Ohio was demonstrated last week when Venturato and Agosta, under life sentences for alleged complicity in the killing of John Majors at a trouble last summer at the strip mine near New Lafferty, were denied new trials by the Ohio Court of Appeals. No direct evidence is offered against these men, but they had been active in the miners' un-

The Truce in Michigan

With the granting of the motion of the defense for leave to appeal to the Supreme Court and for a stay of sentence pending the decision in the case of C. E. Ruthenberg, recently convicted of Criminal Syndicalism in Michigan, comes the news that the prosecution will not try the cases of any of the other defendants until the issues raised in the Ruthenberg appeal have been decided. Another indication that the enemies of labor will for the time being rest on the "Moral Victory" they have secured in the conviction of Ruthenberg, is the action of the Federal Immigration Service which has postponed action in the deportation proceedings instituted against T. J. O'Flaherty, Norman Tallentire, Alex Ball, Phillip Aronberg and Joseph Zack until after the fate of these men has been decided in the Michigan courts.

It is in effect a period of armed truce. In the Gitlow case which is in the United States Supreme Court and in the Ruthenberg case the labor baiters are testing out their own laws to see if they can be given continued use in the stifling of opinion odious to the minions of wealth and privilege. This period is one of supreme importance in defense of all men and women who have been made victims of the criminal syndicalism laws, particularly the Michigan defendants. It is a time in which every effort must be exerted to gain for the defendants all possible protection.

For the Michigan defendants, the Ruthenberg appeal is of tremendous import. If the higher courts reverse the decision in the case of Ruthenberg, there is little likelihood of any further trial either for Ruthenberg himself, or William Z. Foster, or any of their 30 co-defendants now scheduled for trial.

The trial Judge in the Ruthenberg case, in considering the motion for leave to go up on appeal, stated that the exceptions taken by the defense were fundamental and far-reaching. That is perfectly true.

The Ruthenberg case is in splendid shape for a hot fight and a chance for victory in the higher courts. What is needed more than anything else is the continued hearty support which the American Labor Movement has so far given to the defense thru the Labor Defense Council. To those who have helped to carry the fight thru the Foster victory, thru the Ruthenberg Trial and up to the present point it will be apparent that the fight is as the Labor Defense Council has stated, "Only begun."

The defense has until Sept. 10 to perfect its appeal. Long before that time the money necessary to do this job must be raised.

Gary, Gompers and the Government

In the innermost chambers of Herbert Hoover's sumptuous home in Washington, D. C., Labor's Sam Gompers, Julius Barnes, president of the U. S. Chamber of Commerce, and several other leading lights of the Federal Government's bureaucracy gathered recently to devise ways and means of perpetuating an industrial truce in the country.

Thus Harding and Hoover are aping the strikebreaking activities of their democratic predecessor, Wilson, in calling conferences to stave off working-class discontent against capitalist exploitation and tyranny.

It appears that prosperity will soon take French leave. On the eve of another national election a renewed depression can spell only disaster for the republican chances of victory. Therefore, Hoover, reputed to be the best head of the republican flock, is ceaselessly at work trying to have prosperity stick around just a little longer—that is until after Nov. 4, 1924.

Pursuing this policy, the heroic Herbert fixed things up in advance and arranged everything at the secret, underground private gathering held at his house to call a conference to insure industrial peace. Hoover knows that one of the most effective ways of maintaining capitalist prosperity, big profits, is to have the workers supinely accept low wages and degrading working conditions. And as an agent of an employing-class government, Hoover knows that the best way to break the ranks of the workers' army is to win over and tie up their generals and lieutenants.

But some naive, sincere, honest-to-goodness, well-poised workers may say: "Ah, this is a republican conference. Gompers will not join this one." Well, the sooner such mental cobwebs are cleared away the better off the workers will be. Let the workingmen have no fears or illusions. As a dyed-in-the-wool adherent and tried and true friend of the time-honored suicidal political policy of "reward your friends and punish your enemies," Sam Gompers will continue to be a good non-partisan in politics. Sam will not hesitate because the conference will, this time, be held under republican auspices. Gompers has no use for labels in politics.

Gompers always wants to be with the best men—against the workers. And who can deny, in the face of the growing friendship and serious flirtation between William J. Burns and Gompers, that Gary, Barnes, and Hoover are not the best men for "Old Sam" and his dangerous quack remedies.

Just Drifting

National and world developments play havoc with the fluctuating policies of the American Socialists. The "united front" movement, which during the past few days, as The Call, the "Socialist" daily in New York joins the most reactionary elements in the United Mine Workers' Union, in their attacks on the "progressives" and then hails the "united front" of Communists and Socialists in Europe.

We pointed out last week that the "Socialist" press completely ignored the history-making gathering of the Progressive Miners' Conference at Pittsburg. Not until the "white guard" officialdom, tyrannizing over the rank and file of the miners, had spoken, did "The Call" utter a word. Reaction spoke thru the executive board of the Ohio coal miners, and this attack was given space by the New York Call, the "Socialists" thus establishing their "united front" with the disrupting Lewis machine in the miners' union.

But at the same hour real unity of labor was being effected at Berlin, Germany, thru joint action of the Communists and Socialists in the Russian Transport Union (including railwaymen and seamen), affiliated with the Red International of Labor Unions (Communist), and the International Transport Workers' Federation, affiliated with the International Federation of Trade Unions (Socialist). This "united front" was also ardently proclaimed by the "Socialist" Call.

Is it possible that the "Socialists" are deluding themselves into believing that they can fool workers by this drifting policy of confusion. But they will fool no one but themselves. Unity of action of all workers in Europe is being made possible because the workers are driving more and more toward the Communist position. The attack of the "Socialists," in this country, on Soviet Russia, against the Workers Party, the attempts to isolate Communists in the labor unions and other working class organizations, efforts to bar the Workers Party from the organization of a Labor Party, all this will only serve to drive the masses of workers into the Communist ranks.

All the delegates at Pittsburgh were not Communists. Perhaps even a majority of them were not members of the Workers Party. But the attacks of Gompers, of Lewis, and their allies, the "Socialists," will quickly persuade all these militants that their place is in the Workers Party, the organized expression of the American Communist movement. There they know that they will have a definite, militant working class policy and program to work for. The Socialists are just drifting, ready to be pulled down by the first whirlpool. That perilous position does not attract support. It repels.

Lunching and Learning

A Western senator is said to have remarked that the 68th Congress, which is to be convoked and blessed in December, will be a collection of the confused, worse confounded. This senator thinks Big Business need have no fear from the Progressives in the House or Senate.

Yet, the employers are not going to take the slightest chances even with the most gentle annoyance.

There are in Washington at least 250 lobbyists. The heat, the humidity and the futility may bother the overworked trade union bureaucrat and incapacitate him from service. But not so with the agents of the gigantic corporations. They are already on the job. Thru the system of the "luncheon-with-a-purpose" the spokesmen of the most ruthless exploiters of Labor are getting together at the City Club in Washington and talking things over. Here history is really being made over a cup of coffee. There they themselves with such concrete problems as the immigration question, taxation and the Open Shop. They are working overtime hatching bills against the workers and farmers and "saving our great and glorious Republic" from enemies within now that we have mopped up the enemy from without.

According to the New York Times, "Hints are heard that the club is the beginning of a super-government which will ultimately dictate to Congress." These agents of the capitalist class may take themselves too seriously. But the workers and farmers cannot take them TOO seriously. The city and rural classes should for once take a lesson from their masters and oppressors and fall on the job now and today to clean house and clean it thoroly of every parasite working under cover or above board against the producers.

An Arsenal of Facts

An indication of the tremendous interest displayed in the creation of a "Labor Party" in the United States is seen in the fact that the Workers Party has been compelled to issue a second edition of John Pepper's excellent pamphlet, "For a Labor Party: Recent Revolutionary Changes in American Politics."

This little booklet contains more information about working class political action, in its 68 pages, than has ever been put between two covers in any publication issued in this country. In this Second Edition there are 20 additional pages, Chapter VII dealing with the "Cleveland Conference for Progressive Political Action" and carrying the developments up to the Labor Party Conference to be held in Chicago, in July.

One of the valuable qualities possessed by this booklet is that it does not confine itself to surface information about the "Labor Party" movement. It goes back to the period immediately following the 1917 revolution and traces political developments during the last half century, putting special emphasis on the conditions that led to the organization of "third parties." It shows how the political struggles are tied up with the economic activities of the working class. It gives the facts that every worker must have at his disposal in order to be an effective part of an aggressive, intelligent labor movement. No man or woman who labors should be without this information.

Those who have a copy of the First Edition should keep up-to-date by securing a copy of the Second Edition. The price is 15 cents. Address: Workers Party, 799 Broadway, N. Y. City.

The Worst Boss

A BOSS IN UNIFORM

Editor, Worst Boss Stories:—The meanest or worst boss, I ever knew, was Sergeant Hanchette of Fort Snelling. I came to know him during May and June of 1918. Uncle Sam found it necessary or desirable to entertain me in the Guard House there. Sergeant Hanchette was at large, raw-boned, coarse looking man, of about 45 years of age. He had evidently served many years in the Army. His hardness was no veneer but it permeated his entire being.

Hanchette was the provost sergeant and as such it was his duty to assign the work for each prisoner. Every morning after breakfast, the prisoners marched out of their cell rooms and fell up in two rows in front of the Guard House. The Provost Sergeant then assigned the work at the same time recording the assignment in a huge book. This was done in this fashion. The names of two prisoners were read off, then the name of the sentry who was to have charge of them and then the task or work was named. This morning, before we were called out, one of the prisoners tried to have himself placed on the sick list, but he was unable to have this done. He had the toothache and wanted to go to the hospital for treatment. His cheek was much swollen. His name was Weller. He was a man of slight build and of German descent. He was a likable inoffensive fellow. Why he was in the guard house I do not know.

We marched out and lined up. Hanchette began to assign the work. Finally he called, "Adams and Weller". Weller at once spoke up, "Sir, I would like to go to the hospital". He was going to continue, but Hanchette interrupted, "Want to get off the hospital, eh? What do you fellows think this is anyway. You bunch of God damned evaders and slackers. Too lazy to work and want to go to the hospital. God damn it, I will give you cause to go to the hospital." At that he threw down his book and walked rapidly up to Weller and with a smashing blow from the shoulder hit Weller squarely on the mouth. Weller fell back, the blood spurting. The Sergeant stepped back and in a loud voice called, "Sentry, take that man to the hospital". Picking up his book, he continued to assign the work as if nothing had happened.—Ingmar M. Iverson, Madison, S. D.

U. S. Swords "Made in Germany"

Our sword-swinging militarists are very indignant over the discovery that army and navy swords are being "Made in Germany." Lately the American Legionnaires discovered the artificial poppies they were selling on the streets were also "Made in Germany." This is insult heaped on injury, and more. But, why worry? Somebody is making money out of it.

Distributing the Vacations

"Factory" vacations for society debutantes, and holidays in the country for working girls, are recommendations made by the U. S. Health Service. But it offers no plan to put these propositions into effect. That will only come when the workers begin running things, politically and industrially.

Farm Statistics—Read 'em and Weep!

BY HAL WARE

Coasting "Prosperity" to stay with us seems to be the most popular indoor sport of the Financial Editors of the New York papers. This polyanna habit is especially noticeable in their interpretations of Farm Reports and Statistics. Of course they expect only commuters or Greenwich Village farmers to read what they write, but even a real "Honest to God" John Farmer might have picked up the issues of June 10th, for instance.

After struggling thru several contradictory statements it's even conceivable that John would have remarked: "There are three kinds of liars—Statistical liars; Damn liars; and Statistical liars." But judge for yourself.

"The N. Y. Evening Post says: "Corn has advanced in price, being only 1½ cents below the year's highest." Very encouraging—but wait—it goes on to say: "Corn is being fed heavily to finish hogs." A little item tucked away in the N. Y. Times reports: "Hogs lowest in eight years—Price drops to $6.75 per 100 lbs. ..." That is $4.00 under the corresponding 1922 price. Also remember that corn is fed heavily to hogs.

One might next take up the N. Y. Herald. "Increased prices of farm products predicted by the Dept. of Agriculture." Would raise hopes only to be dashed by "... As a result of increased costs of production." Still later the article states, "Slightly higher prices for some products is shown by the sales of two of the leading mail order houses. During the first five months of this year they increased 45 per cent over the same period last year."—Right on top of that comes the Magazine of Wall Street. (This by the way, is not controlled by Moscow.) Wall St. says: "The farm situation still remains one of the most unfavorable in the entire situation. In answer to this one might point to the increased volume of mail order sales, supposed to be such a good barometer of farm conditions. Let it be noted however that most of this volume consists of low-priced articles such as shoes, clothes and household articles. The amounts involved are therefore small and, no matter how low the purchasing power is, he can find some way of getting together a few dollars with which to buy these necessary household articles."

At this point John is apt to turn to more familiar things—Wheat for instance. He notes an item, "Wheat sells for less than a dollar on the Chicago Board of Trade" and is fundamental pessimism poisoning. And no wonder! In a circular on "Orderly Marketing" they aim to refute all charges of market manipulation. To prove that they are a well disguised blessing to John they take a period of 20 years to show that they hammer the price of wheat down on an average, only 6 cents between May and September. The significance of May to September is that John, having mortgaged everything but his soul is always forced by those gentle pirates, the Banks, to begin selling immediately after threshing, i. e., during September, October and November he is forced to sell 60 per cent of his crop. That is the low priced period. Later when the Grain Gamblers begin to sell the same wheat to the millers and for export you have a high price period. They call this "Orderly Marketing." Some day when the farmers and workers get together they will call it "Disorderly Conduct"—and act accordingly.

Just to check up that "average" 6 cents drop between the "lows" and "high" periods claimed by the Minneapolis gang, turn to a recent issue of "The Crop Reporter," U. S. Dept of Agriculture. It reports a drop in wheat price from May $1.70 to September $1.20. A difference of 50c Do you blame John if he wonders whether Figures lie or Liars figure?

Whether it means it or not the Post said something:—"If the price of grain and cattle and other farm products were in line with the prices of manufactured articles it would be possible for the producer to pay out. But as agricultural products are not on that basis then it becomes necessary to charge off a substantial portion of the amounts paid for the farms when the post war boom was on. If it, don't mean it I'll tell the Post and the Times and the Herald and the world for that matter; to quit kidding themselves.

John Farmer is a land animal. He works the LAND and he WANTS it! The world has gone thru a number of historic periods, but the farmer and peasant are still on the land. The American farmer will be no exception to the rule. But Capitalism must make concessions to the rule. It must as "The Post" suggests, cancel farm debts, grant moritoriums, or starve.

"WHO KILLED COCK ROBIN?"

A person with a taste for humor might well insert the above heading over the comment upon the Michigan "Criminal Syndicalism" cases against the Communists as written by a New York editor who says, "A curious feature of the Michigan trials is that none of the defendants is charged with advocating criminal syndicalism as defined in the law. Each is charged with 'assembling with' persons who did advocate criminal syndicalism. The identity of the persons or persons who did the advocating at the Michigan assembly remains a mystery."

Don't Throw This Paper Away "Pass It on to Your Neighbor.

CURZON LIED!

British Foreign Minister Curzon's ultimatum to the Russian workers he said that the skipper of the trawler "James Johnson" was forced to do hard labor in Murmansk. The skipper, Nelson, has returned to Hull, England, and says that this is completely untrue; he and the crew went about freely in theatres and played football. So the first of Curzon's charges is shown to be a plain lie; the rest are made of the same material.

The Great Historical Significance of March 8th, International Women's Day

By JEANNETTE D. PEARL

As a mark of respect to mothers for past services rendered the State and as further encouragement to future service, the Bourgeoisie of the United States commemorate Mothers' Day. Different is the ideal motive being the Communist International in the commemoration of woman. The Communist International calls upon the proletariat of the world to observe March 8th, International Women's Day, not for what woman has done, not for what woman is to do, but rather for what the International proposes to do for women in effecting their emancipation from capitalist exploitation.

March 8th, International Women's Day, the same as May Day, has become for the working class of the world a day of unification in solidifying the ranks of labor against capitalist exploitation, while at the same time marshalling the forces of labor in the struggle for emancipation from capitalist rule.

On March 8th, I. W. D., the world proletariat represented by its vanguard—the Communist Parties—presents the demand for complete political and economic emancipation of peasant and working women of all countries. March the 8th is a day for the unification of the wide masses of working women with their vanguard—the Communist Parties—as only a Communist Order can completely effect the emancipation of women. Therefore, it is on International Women's Day that revolutionary women emphasize our Communist teachings while stressing the immediate demands of all working women in all countries.

The observers of I. W. D. on an international scale was resolved upon in 1910 at the Second International Women's Conference. Germany and Austria were the first countries to observe that day, widely agitating for Women's Franchise, protective labor for women and children, etc., by means of wide distribution of literature, public meetings and street demonstrations.

In 1912, I. W. D. began to be observed by the working women of many European countries and thus was created a link for international solidarity of Socialist women of the various countries. In 1913, I. W. D. was extended to a whole week in all great industrial centers of Germany, Austria, Great Britain, Bulgaria, Holland and America. In that same year, under Russian auspices, an I. W. D. was organized in Petersburg semi-legally. A second attempt in 1914 to organize an I. W. D. was frustrated by the arrest of all participants.

During the world slaughter 1914-1917, I. W. D. was not observed. All attempts to organize demonstrations of protest on that day were suppressed by the police. The one exception was in Norway, in 1915, where the women organized to war against war.

I. W. D. on March 8th, 1917, in Petersburg, working women and soldiers' wives marched upon the city streets demanding Bread and Peace. On that historic day began the Russian Revolution. The news of it had to women's demonstrations against war in many of the European countries.

Since 1918, after the victory of the Russian Revolution, I. W. D. is observed thruout Soviet Russia with great solemnity and enthusiasm. In the western countries still under capitalist yokes, I. W. D. has again become a day for the demonstration of international solidarity among working women of all countries who rally around the Communist Parties in the struggle against the exploitation of working women by the master class.

In our Soviet World, March 8th is truly a day of international solidarity of the free peasant and working women of the Soviet Republics with the oppressed and disfranchised women of the Bourgeois States. It is only a Communist State with its system of national economy, its public dining halls, laundries, etc., that can completely emancipate women, not only politically and economically, but also from the drudgery of the household.

Therefore, I. W. D., March 8th, is observed in the Soviet Republics in order to rally the wide masses of women for active participation in social, constructive work. That day is celebrated with the inauguration of many measures on behalf of working women.

In 1918-1919 the slogan of I. W. D. in Soviet Rusia was the consolidation of the Red Front, resistance to Bourgeois offensives and assistance for the Red Army. In 1920, the clarion call for all countries was for the unification of all working women of the world to stand by the Third International for the overthrow of bourgeois rule.

In the Soviet Republics in 1920, the banners of I. W. D. called for the re-establishment of transport, the struggle for bread and coal. In 1921 the slogan was for self discipline, active participation of peasant and working women in the economic renaissance of the Soviet Republics.

I. W. D. in 1922 called upon the Communist Parties of all countries to aid in the protection of working women—the struggle against unemployment—relief for the famine stricken of Russia—that working women support the Communist Parties and the Third International.

This year in Soviet Russia, 1923, I. W. D. was celebrated with the urgent call to all women for active participation in production, for cultural advancement of the workers, for perfecting collective housekeeping, relief for unemployed women and to combat the evil of prostitution reappearing under the "NEP."

After the world slaughter, women of the Western capitalist countries again resumed the obsequance of I. W. D. The Bourgeoisie in fear of Revolution granted women the franchise together with some other minor reforms. These concessions did not alleviate the misery of exploited womanhood. The slogans for political rights were turned into slogans for the Dictatorship of the Proletariat, and in the struggle against the capitalist offensive was formulated the United Front of Workers, better working conditions for women, the struggle against the high cost of living, unemployment, the new taxations, protection for the labor of women and children, motherhood, the eight hour day, relief for Soviet Russia and franchise for women wherever women are still disfranchised.

Great enthusiasm has marked the celebrations of I. W. D., March 8th. There were demonstrations, meetings and wide distribution of Communist literature in all countries. March 8th, International Women's Day, calls upon the proletarian women of the world to join ranks with the proletarian male workers in the struggle for the emancipation of the working class from capitalist domination. I. W. D. calls for the recognition of Soviet Russia, United Front of Labor, the struggle against Fascism, release of all political and class war prisoners, and for emancipation thru the Dictatorship of the Proletariat.

I. W. D. insists no flags, it does not prattle complimentary phrases, it does not plead for gifts to mothers. The I. W. D. celebrates in honor of the new day dawning, and calls upon all working women to rally around and strengthen the Communist International, the shock troops of the world revolution, the leaders, directors and engineers fashioning the future Workers' Republic, in the interests of the working class thru the Dictatorship of the Proletariat.

Cannon's Talk Rejuvenates Party in K. C.

(Special to "The Worker")

KANSAS CITY, Mo.—In spite of the fact that one of the comrades were was arrested and threats made and insolence with the meeting, James P. Cannon addressed an audience of approximately 350 people.

An interview was given Comrade Cannon by the "kept press," and the result was a big article on the front page of "The Post." This boosted our meeting immensely and also gave us the honor of the presence, and the privilege to entertain, that evening, three "D. of J." and two American Legion men.

The presence of these door mats stimulated Comrade Cannon's enthusiasm. The lecture was excellently delivered and raised the morale of the audience concerning the situation in Russia. During his talk, Comrade Cannon made a few references to the United States which caused the bootlickers to occupy an uneasy seat.

Kansas City takes great pride in Jim (as he is familiarly known here), for he comes from their midst. After the meeting, a supper was given Comrade Cannon and everyone felt that the Revolution was peeping around the corner.

Await Cannon on the Coast

An indication of the great gatherings being planned for James P. Cannon, on the Pacific Coast, is seen in the orders for subscription cards and advertising material being received at "The Worker" office from James H. Dolsen, district organizer, Workers Party, at San Francisco.

Dolsen wires in, "Rush 500 extra sub cards for Cannon's Oakland meeting, and 700 extra for San Francisco by special delivery. Rush additional advertising material."

The Cannon meetings are being held on a subscription basis. Every admission ticket is good for a sub to "The Worker." This should make every reader of "The Worker" anxious to get out great throngs to the Cannon meetings.

MOSCOW.—The Presidium of the Central Exhibition Committee has passed a resolution to the effect that the participation of Poland in the All-Russian Agricultural Exhibition in August is impossible until Poland will stop her campaign being carried on against Russia. The resolution states that Poland tries to use intrigues to turn even the question of the Exhibition into a political affair.

Bakers Fight Bread Trust in Pittsburgh

BY MARGARET COWL

(Special to "The Worker.")

PITTSBURGH, Pa.—During the world war, when labor was scarce, the Ward Baking Trust, with its bread and cake factories in a large number of cities, including Pittsburgh, compelled all its workers to join the Bakers' Union.

The idea of the Ward Trust was that the organization would compel the workers to stay in its plants.

In 1919 the wage of the bakery workers was raised 15 per cent. On May 1, of this year, the agreement of the Bakery Workers' Union with the Ward Trust terminated. The workers were receiving too small a wage to decently feed and clothe their families, therefore they demanded of the Ward Trust to renew the agreement and increase the 15 per cent on their wages. Now that the bakery workers are beginning to wake up and realize the importance of their organization, and as an organized group are making demands on the Ward Trust for better wages, the Ward Trust in its reply to the bakery workers not only refused the renew the agreement but made the bakery workers understand that hereafter (beginning May 1) the Ward Trust will not recognize their union, that the Ward Trust will operate its plants on the open shop system. The bakery workers refused the open shop conditions, therefore the Ward Trust locked them out.

Women Rally to Support Fight

The women workers in Pittsburgh realize that they can help the bakery workers win their fight. A committee of bakery workers' wives, sisters and mothers was organized. They are conducting a campaign among the women workers to buy only union bread while the locked-out bakery workers are compelled to wage the battle with the boss class. Several mass meetings for women have been arranged. Three of these meetings have already been held. The meetings were well attended and the women there pledged themselves to buy only bakery products baked in union shops. They pledged themselves to get their women friends to buy only bread with the union label. The resolution adopted states that the workers can hope to win their battles only by solidifying their ranks.

The cooperation of the women has increased the spirit of the locked-out bakery workers and they are determined to carry the fight to a final victory.

Warning to Our Readers! Where ever the struggle against the Ward Bread Trust is carried on, all readers of "The Worker" are called upon to buy none but Union-made Bread.

Don't Throw This Paper Away Pass It on to Your Neighbor

The Bulgarian Muddle. By H. M. Wicks

Interest in the aftermath of the counter-revolution of the Bulgarian peasantry may be lessened by the publication of the fact that another is at hand. Interest in the Bulgarian peasantry may be lessened by the publication of the fact that another is at hand. Interest in the Bulgarian peasantry may be lessened by the publication of the fact that another is at hand. In spite of the fact that the counter-revolution is "complete," events in Sofia, it is evident, are not at an end. What happened in June, 1923, is only a chapter from some longer history. Stamboulisky "pacified" the peasantry, but the agreements of Allied imperialism. Great Britain, France and Italy needed a loan to establish themselves in the Near East. Bulgaria was to be the first to receive it. Stamboulisky was to be the means to impose the conditions of the loan upon the Bulgarian peasantry and workers. This strategic position, however, in an endeavor to consolidate his power, democratically played the peasants against the town proletariat. All the ills of the peasantry were laid at the door of the bourgeoisie and the town.

The pro-German clique that had previously controlled the government and that led it into the war on the side of the Central Powers was treated by Stamboulisky with kid gloves. In order to combat the power of Stamboulisky this group had to appeal to the population of the towns. Just as the government played the peasants against the town proletariat, so the opposition carefully prepared its coup d'etat, seized the officials of the government and arrogated to themselves the power of government unto themselves.

The attempt of Stamboulisky to collect the Allied indemnity imposed frightful hardships upon both workers and peasants, but the burden fell upon the latter, who were already on the verge of desperation.

It is not unlikely that the present government of Bulgaria is trying to follow the footsteps of Mustapha Kemal Pasha, who has been able to get more concessions for the Turks thru smashing the Treaty of Sevres, than the Allied tool, the Sultan in Constantinople, was able to get from the victors in the World War.

But by a counter-stroke, the Allies, thru their agents in Bulgaria, immediately threw enormous resources in money and credits behind the deposed premier for the purpose of financing peasant uprisings, with the result that the new government has become terrorized at the spectre of the firing squad in case it falls, and has issued a proclamation reassuring the Allies, and promising to carry out the reparations agreement.

The despicable feature of the Bulgarian mixup is the impunity with which first one set of adventurers after another makes dupes of the workers and peasants. But this shall not continue indefinitely, for even in backward Bulgaria the masses of workers, in town and country alike, cannot escape the influence of the world-wide sweep of the proletarian revolution, which will unite them in a common bond to shatter the power of their own exploiters.

KOO KOO BOMBAST

"If the hordes of Bolsheviks, Communists and other insane radicals who have caught their inspiration from the devil in hell don't like the way things are run in this land of the free and the home of the brave can pack up and go back to where they came."

This is the bombastic ultimatum of one J. B. Hawkins, who calls himself the imperial representative for the invisible kingdom of the Ku Klux Klan for Maryland and Delaware. The occasion for this burst of patriotism and ignorance—the two are synonomous—was an initiation session of this moron organization held near Chesapeake Junction, a few miles from Washington. This pow-pow was also attended by Imperial Wizard Evans of Atlanta, and other dignitaries of the Invisible Empire, who were in Washington attending the Shriners' Convention.

As to the parasitic handmaidens who took a respite from hurling their venom at Catholics, Jews and Negroes, to verbally attack the "Bolsheviks. Convinced that Mr. Hawkins does not possess that fine discrimination that enables one to separate the "Bolsheviks" from other people holding ideas opposed to the alleged principles of the Koo-Koos, we do not know whether he includes among "Bolsheviks" such servants of capitalism as LaFollette, Samuel Gompers or Hiram Johnson, or the gentle Wizard Evans of Atlanta and other dignitaries of the Invisible Empire, who were in Washington attending the Shriners' Convention.

But for a masked marauders took a respite from hurling their venom at Catholics, Jews and Negroes, to verbally attack the "Bolsheviks. Convinced that Mr. Hawkins does not possess that fine discrimination that enables one to separate the "Bolsheviks" from other people holding ideas opposed to the alleged principles of the Koo-Koos, we do not know whether he includes among "Bolsheviks" such servants of capitalism as LaFollette, Samuel Gompers or Hiram Johnson, or the gentle Wizard Evans of Atlanta and other dignitaries of the Invisible Empire, who were in Washington attending the Shriners' Convention.

Masked Koo Koos deserve no more respect from decent workers than ratsmasked anarchists should be treated as such in case they ever attack us.

As to the Bolsheviks leaving the country because we "don't like it," we propose to stay for that very reason and change it so that we will like it. Before we get through we will establish sanitariums and asylums for the special scientific treatment of the defectives who parade in nightgowns, talk about Christianity and its hell and burn fiery crosses from hilltops dark night to inspire awe in the undeveloped minds of their fellow "100 per cent Americans."

BABSON HELPS UNMASK GRABLE

Roger W. Babson, adviser to America's money kings, in his comment upon the appointment of E. F. Grable, deposed head of the Trackmen's Union, to the Railroad Labor Board, tells his clients that this appointment in no way changes the conservative character of the Board, that the Board is perfectly safe from every angle "if it is allowed to function." That this expert advisor of capitalism understands the character of creatures of the Grable type is seen from the following quotation from Babson's confidential reports to his clients:

"The only change in the makeup of the Rail Labor Board is the new labor member, Mr. E. F. Grable. We think that his coming to the Board does not indicate any more radicalism than the Board has thus far showed. It was Mr. Grable who, at the head of the trackmen's union, persuaded the trackmen not to join the shopmen's strike. By so doing he lost his place as head of the trackmen's union. Probably his attitude on the strike had a good deal to do with his being chosen as a member of the Board."

"In general the elevation of any labor man to a position of trust and power like this one of Mr. Grable has gone into, means greater sobriety and conservatism. The man who was chosen to succeed Mr. Grable, as head of the trackmen's union, was chosen as a radical. Now that he has been in office, he develops a great amount of Grable's conservatism."

Babson, being a spokesman and statistical scullion for capitalism, cannot be expected to possess a degree of logical reasoning. For instance, he first declares that Grable persuaded the trackmen not to join the strike and that for this he lost his place as head of the union. As a matter of fact Grable did not persuade the rank and file not to strike, but used his power as president, with the connivance of an executive council as corrupt and venal as himself, to coerce the membership into accepting his mandate against striking after they had decided by referendum vote to strike. It was for this treachery that Grable was eliminated as head of the Maintenance of Waymen. Other heads of railway unions, especially the heads of the Brotherhoods, Lee, Stone, Shepherd and Robertson, also betrayed their membership by refusing to sanction strikes against the decisions of the Rail Labor Board, but in their cases there had been no referendum vote to indicate the desires of the membership, only widespread spontaneous disturbances against meekly accepting the role of union scab while the shop men were striking.

The one observation of Babson that deserves special attention is that the successor of Grable is fast adopting his conservatism. From the day of his election many militants have known that Fjlozdel was a reactionary and that he was simply used as a wedge to unseat Grable. The militant workers who supported the present incumbent against Grable should prepare to unseat this weakling before he has an opportunity to serve the master class in the same vile way that enabled his inglorious predecessor to use his treachery to labor as a spring-board into a $10,000 a year job with a scab-herding and strike-breaking government.

AMALGAMATING FOR CAPITALISM

The yellow Socialists at the head of the International Fur Workers' Union are opposed to amalgamation of the various unions in the needle trades industry. Likewise the leaders of the almost defunct Journeymen Tailors' Union oppose every effort to strengthen the workers in the needle trades industry thru following the program of the Trade Union Educational League for a departmentalized union.

Recently the organ of the Journeymen Tailors' Union published an attack upon the Needle Trades Department of the League, using the customary misrepresentation to the effect that amalgamation simply means "One Big Union," and that that idea is a flat failure in Canada. In spite of the opposition of the T. U. E. L. to the policy of dual unionism, these pretty Mike Fakirs, in order to create trouble and to head off futile cradle, repeat the Gompers' lie that the militants in the trade union movement are destructionists. In the attack upon the League, the Journeymen Tailors' Union quotes from the action of a convention of the Cloth, Hat and Cap Makers' Union. Other heads of railway unions, especially the heads of the Brotherhoods, Lee, Stone, Shepherd and Robertson, also betrayed their membership by refusing to sanction strikes against the decisions of the Rail Labor Board, but in their cases there had been no referendum vote to indicate the desires of the membership, only widespread spontaneous disturbances against meekly accepting the role of union scab while the shop men were striking.

The one observation of Babson that deserves special attention is that the successor of Grable is fast adopting his conservatism. "Young Worker" Adopts New Policy

Containing a detailed report of the Second National Convention of the Young Workers League, recently concluded in Chicago, the June issue of the Young Worker shows a step forward in carrying out the new policies decided at the national gathering.

Besides a very interesting and informative article on Child Labor by David Arnold there is contained a wealth of news of the struggles of the working class youth, national and international. A start is made in the June issue on the workers' sports question, and some pictures are given of some of the athletic standard-bearers of the League. Gropper's cartoon, the Cake Eaters will make the young people laugh.

A letter from the Young Communist International encourages the League to continue its good work and offers the support of the International.

To appreciate the value of a revolutionary youth paper, fighting the battles of the American young workers, we urge you to write for a copy of the Young Worker, or subscribe at a dollar a year. Address: The Young Worker, 2517 Fullerton Ave., Chicago, Ill.

Big Party Festival and Picnic, June 24, to Give Joy to Thousands

Forstner's Park, 3350 Eastchester Road, will ring with the gaiety of thousands of comrades and friends Sunday, June 24, at the Festival and Picnic arranged by Local Greater New York Workers Party.

Besides the picnic, which is to be unequalled in size, Local Greater New York has chartered the steamer "Grand Republic" for July 14 (Bastille Day) for a Moonlight Excursion to Bear Mountain.

Everybody is invited to both these affairs and a good time is promised to participants. The purpose of the mammouth picnic and excursion is to raise funds for Local Greater New York to carry on the more important activities during the summer months, when returns for dues, literature and other supplies are low. Every comrade is expected to exert all possible effort to make both affairs successful. Nothing is wanting in the matter of arrangements, as a good time is promised all. What is necessary is the assurance of the members of Local Greater New York that they will do their share in assuring a large attendance.

Keep both dates in mind. June 24 for the big picnic, and June 14th, for the Moonlight Excursion.

Washington, D. C., Police Back Water

(By the Federated Press.)

WASHINGTON.—Damage suits filed as a result of the raid on draft hall which Robert Minor was scheduled to speak appear to have cured Washington police of enthusiasm for suppressing free speech meetings for the department of justice.

Rose Pastor Stokes came here, spoke and went away unmolested. Helen Hoy Greeley, New York attorney, who presided at her meeting, had an advance interview with the police. She asked whether they intended to interfere. They hastened to assure her they had no such intention and were extraordinarily polite.

A large crowd heard Mrs. Stokes and a substantial sum was collected for the defense of the Michigan communist cases. If William J. Burns' operatives were in the audience they heard Mrs. Stokes denounce the department of justice as "the greatest conspirative organization in the country."

The Knights of Pythias permitted the use of their hall for the meeting. The Robert Minor meeting was scheduled for Typographical hall and was called off when the typographical union cancelled permission for its use.

"Icebound," "Zander," "Sweet Nell" Get the Warm Weather Crowds

BY JOHN DALE

There are crowds that keep the playhouses filled, even during these warm days. Not only those places that offer musical shows, but some, not all, that give straight drama. Preeminent among these are "Icebound," at the Sam H. Harris Theatre; "Zander, the Great," with Alice Brady, at the Empire, and the Equity Players' offering of "Sweet Nell of Old Drury," at the actors' own theatre, The 48th St.

"Icebound" is in a class by itself among these dramas of domestic adversity. It deals with that life in the north New England States, where people are frozen in for the winter six months of the year, and icebound in their family relations all of the twelve. In this "The Jordans" are only typical, two daughters and two sons, waiting for the mother to die so they may divide what she leaves behind her. But the mother has her own way of distributing the estate and that makes the story. Phyllis Povah, as Jane Crosby, who is not even a relation, and Robert Ames, as Ben Jordan the erring son, stand out well, even in an excellent cast. "Icebound" will no doubt be running all summer.

Alice Brady in "Zander."

"Who is this guy, Warren G. Harding?"

Laughter sweeps the Empire when "Good News," who does all the work on a bootlegging cow ranch out in Arizona, asks that question in "Zander, the Great." It was the result of reading a six months' old newspaper.

But the laughter increases when "Texas" responds

"Never heard of him."

Which might go to prove that even the hoakum plays that delight during the warm weather have their mission in attacking established institutions. Attorney General Daugherty and "Detektiv" Burns will have to devise some new method of abolishing this kind of humor.

But that is the only spot where Salsbury Field's comedy transcends the conventionalities. Alice Brady provides wonderful entertainment as "Mamie," seeking young Zander's father in a stolen flivver, all the way from Weweredon, N. J., to the Mexican border country.

"Sweet Nell of Old Drury"

Francis Wilson, head of the Equity Players, says the actors find great joy in producing Paul Kester's comedy, "Sweet Nell of Old Drury," a mood that is shared by 48th St. audiences. Laurette Taylor helps tremendously as the orange girl in the streets of London, when Charles II was king of England. This production no doubt ends the season of the Equity Players that has been an artistic, altho perhaps, not a financial success. There will no doubt be greater triumphs with the coming of the new season's efforts.

About the Kapek Brothers

Charles Kolarik, secretary of the Crecho-Slovak Federation of the Workers' Party, writes us about Karel Kapek, author of "R. U. R." He calls the Czech dramatist a very clever, but not a "deep" writer. He says the Communist papers back in Prague refer to Karel and his brother as a "factory for the manufacture of sensations." "Politically Kapek is a "national Democrat," he claims, and not a Communist as charged, altho the Kapeks give little time to politics.

The Truce in Michigan

With the granting of the motion of the defense for leave to appeal to the Supreme Court and for a stay of sentence pending the decision in the case of C. E. Ruthenberg, recently convicted of Criminal Syndicalism in Michigan, comes the news that the prosecution will not try the cases of any of the other defendants until the issues raised in the Ruthenberg appeal have been decided. Another indication that the enemies of labor will for the time being rest on the "Moral Victory" they have secured in the conviction of Ruthenberg, is the action of the Federal Immigration Service which has postponed action in the deportation proceedings instituted against T. J. O'Flaherty, Norman Tallentire, Alex Bail, Phillip Aronberg and Joseph Zack until after the fate of these men has been decided in the Michigan courts.

It is in effect a period of armed truce. In the Gitlow case which is in the United States Supreme Court and in the Ruthenberg case the labor baiters are testing out their own laws to see if they can be given continued use in the stifling of opinion odious to the minions of wealth and privilege. This period is one of supreme importance in defense of all men and women who have been made victims of the criminal syndicalism laws, particularly the Michigan defendants. It is a time in which every effort must be exerted to gain for the defendants all possible protection.

For the Michigan defendants, the Ruthenberg appeal is of tremendous importance. If the higher courts reverse the decision in the case of Ruthenberg, there is little likelihood of any further trial either for Ruthenberg himself, or William Z. Foster, or any of their 30 co-defendants now scheduled for trial.

The trial Judge in the Ruthenberg case, in considering the motion for leave to go up on appeal, stated that the exceptions taken by the defense were fundamental and far-reaching. That is perfectly true.

The Ruthenberg case is in splendid shape for a hot fight and a chance for victory in the higher courts. What is needed more than anything else is the continued hearty support which the American Labor Movement has so far given to the defense thru the Labor Defense Council. To those who have helped to carry the fight thru the Foster victory, thru the Ruthenberg Trial and up to the present point it will be apparent that the fight is as the Labor Defense Council has stated, "Only begun."

The defense has until Sept. 10 to perfect its appeal. Long before that time the money necessary to do this job must be raised.

Gary, Gompers and the Government

Behind the secret chambers of Herbert Hoover's sumptuous home in Washington, D. C., Labor's Sam Gompers, Julius Barnes, president of the U. S. Chamber of Commerce, and several other leading lights of the Federal Government's bureaucracy gathered recently to devise ways and means of perpetuating an industrial truce in the country.

Thus Harding and Hoover are aping the strikebreaking activities of their democratic predecessor, Wilson, in calling conferences to stave off working-class discontent against capitalist exploitation and tyranny.

It appears that prosperity will soon take French leave. On the eve of another national election a renewed depression can spell only disaster for the Republican party. Therefore Hoover, reputed to be the best head of the republican flock, is ceaselessly at work trying to have prosperity stick around just a little longer—that is until after Nov. 4, 1924.

Pursuing this policy, the heroic Herbert fixed things up in advance and arranged everything at the secret, underground private gathering held at his house to call a conference to insure industrial peace. Hoover knows that one of the most effective ways of maintaining capitalist prosperity, big profits, is to have the workers supinely accept low wages and degrading working conditions. And as an agent of an employing-class government, Hoover knows that the best way to break the ranks of the workers' army is to turn over and tie up their generals and lieutenants.

But some naive, sincere, honest-to-goodness, well-poised workers may say: "Ah, this is a republican conference. Gompers will not join this one." Well, the sooner such mental cobwebs are cleared away the better off the workers will be. Let the workingmen have no fears or illusions. As a dyed-in-the-wool adherent and tried and true friend of the time-honored suicidal political policy of "reward your friends and punish your enemies," Sam Gompers will continue to be a good non-partisan in politics. Sam will not hesitate because the conference will, this time, be held under republican auspices. Gompers has no use for labels in politics.

Gompers always wants to be with the best men—against the workers. And who can deny, in the face of the growing friendship and serious flirtation between William J. Burns and Gompers, that Gary, Barnes, and Hoover are not the best men for "Old Sam" and his dangerous quack remedies.

Just Drifting

National and world developments are in favor with the fluctuating policies of the American Federation of Labor. This has been shown quite clearly during these past few days as "The Call," the "Socialist" daily in New York, joins the most reactionary elements in the United Mine Workers' Union, in their attacks on the "progressives," and then hails the "united front" of Communists and Socialists in Europe.

We pointed out that the "Socialist" press completely ignored the history-making gathering of the Progressive Miners' Conference at Pittsburg. Not until the "white guard" officialdom, tyrannizing over the rank and file of the miners, had spoken, did "The Call" utter a word. Reaction spoke thru the executive board of the Ohio coal miners, and this attack was given space by the "New York Call," the "Socialists" thus establishing their "united front" with the disrupting Lewis machine in the miners' union.

But at the same hour real unity of labor was being effected at Berlin, Germany, thru joint action of the Communists and Socialists in the Russian Transport Union (including railwaymen and seamen) affiliated with the Red International of Labor Unions (Communist), and the International Transport Workers' Federation, affiliated with the International Federation of Trade Unions (Socialist). This "united front" was also ardently proclaimed by the "Socialist" Call.

It is possible that the "Socialists" are deluding themselves into believing that they can fool workers by this drifting policy of confusion. But they will fool no one but themselves. Unity of action of all workers in Europe is being made possible because the workers are driving more and more toward the Communist position. The attack of the "Socialists," in this country, on Soviet Russia, against the Workers Party, the attempts to isolate Communists in the labor unions and other working class organizations, efforts to bar the Workers Party from the organization of a Labor Party, all this will only serve to drive the masses of workers into the Communist ranks.

All the delegates in Pittsburgh were not Communists. Perhaps, even a majority of them were not members of the Workers Party. But the attacks of Gompers, of Lewis, and their allies, the "Socialists," will quickly persuade all these militants that their place is in the Workers Party, the organized expression of the American Communist movement. There they know that they will have a definite, militant working class policy and program to work for. The Socialists are just drifting, ready to be pulled down by the first whirlpool. That perilous position does not attract support. It repels.

Lunching and Learning

A Western senator is said to have remarked that the 68th Congress, which is to be convoked and blessed in December, will be a collection of the confused, worse confounded. This senator thinks Big Business need have no fear from the Progressives in the House of Senate.

Yet, the employers are not going to take the slightest chances even with the most gentle annoyance.

There are in Washington at least 250 lobbies. The heat, the humidity and the futility may bother the overworked trade union bureaucrat and incapacitate him from service. But not so with the agents of the gigantic corporations. They are already on the job. Thru the system of the "luncheon-with-a-purpose" the spokesmen of the most ruthless exploiters of Labor are getting together at the City Club in Washington and talking things over. Here history is really being made over a cup of coffee. They busy themselves with such concrete problems as the immigration question, taxation and the Open Shop. They are working overtime hatching bills against the workers and farmers and "saving our great and glorious Republic" from enemies within now that we have mopped up the enemy from without.

According to the New York Times, "Hints are heard that the club is the beginning of a super-government which will ultimately dictate to Congress." These agents of the capitalist class may take themselves too seriously. But the workers and farmers cannot take them TOO seriously. Let the toilers and rural masses unite for once take a cue from their exploiters and oppressors and get on the job now and today to clean house and clean it thoroly of every parasite working under cover or above board against the producers.

An Arsenal of Facts

An indication of the tremendous interest displayed in the creation of a "Labor Party" in the United States is seen in the fact that the Workers Party has been compelled to issue a second edition of John Pepper's excellent pamphlet, "For a Labor Party: Recent Revolutionary Changes in American Politics."

This little booklet contains more information about working class political action, in its 68 pages, than has ever been put between two covers in any publication issued in this country. In this Second Edition there are 20 additional pages, Chapter VII, dealing with the "Cleveland Conference for Progressive Political Action" and carrying the developments up to the Labor Party Conference to be held in Chicago, in July.

One of the valuable qualities possessed by this booklet is that it does not confine itself to surface information about the "Labor Party" movement. It goes back to the period immediately following the Civil War, and traces political developments during the last half century, putting special emphasis on the conditions that led to the organization of "third parties." It shows how the political struggles are tied up with the economic activities of the working class. It gives the facts that every worker must have at his disposal in order to be an effective part of an aggressive, intelligent labor movement. No man or woman who labors should be without this information.

Those who have a copy of the First Edition should keep up-to-date by securing a copy of the Second Edition. The price is 15 cents. Address: Workers Party, 799 Broadway, N. Y. City.

The Worst Boss

A BOSS IN UNIFORM

Editor, Worst Boss Stories:—The meanest or worst boss, I ever knew, was Sergeant Hanchette of Fort Snelling. I came to know him during May and June of 1918. Uncle Sam found it necessary or desirable to entertain me in the Guard House there. Sergeant Hanchette was a large, raw-boned, coarse looking man, of about 45 years of age. He had evidently served many years in the Army. His hardness was no veneer but it permeated his entire being.

Hanchette was the provost sergeant and as such it was his duty to assign the work for each prisoner. Every morning after breakfast, the prisoners marched out of their cell rooms and lined up in two rows in front of the Guard House. The Provost Sergeant then assigned the work in the same time recording the assignment in a huge book. This was done in this fashion. The names of two prisoners were read off, then the name of the sentry who was to have charge of them and then the task or work was named. This morning, before we were called out, I noticed Hanchette tried to have himself placed on the sick list, but he was unable to have this done. He had the toothache and wanted to go to the hospital for treatment. His cheek was much swollen. His name was Weller. He was a man of slight build and of German descent. He was a likable inoffensive fellow. Why he was in the guard house I do not know.

We marched out and lined up. Hanchette began to assign the work. Finally he called, "Adams and Weller". Weller at once spoke up, "Sir, I would like to go to the hospital". He was going to continue, but Hanchette interrupted, "Want to go to the hospital, eh? What do you follows think this is anyway. You bunch of God damned evaders and slackers. Too lazy to work and want to go to the hospital. God damn it, I will give you cause to go to the hospital." At that he threw down his book and walked rapidly up to Weller and with a smashing blow from the shoulder hit Weller squarely in the mouth. Weller fell back, the blood spurting. The Sergeant stepped back and in a loud voice, "Sentry, take this man to the hospital". Picking up his book, he continued to assign the work as if nothing had happened.—Ingmar M. Iverson, Madison, S. D.

U. S. Swords "Made in Germany"

Our sword-swinging militarists are very insignant over the discovery that army and navy swords are being "Made in Germany." Lately the American Legionnaires discovered the artificial poppies they were selling on the streets were also "Made in Germany." This is insult heaped on injury, and more. But, why worry? Somebody is making money out of it.

Distributing the Vacations

"Factory" vacations for society debutantes, and holidays in the country for working girls, are recommendations made by the U. S. Health Service. But it offers no plan to put these propositions into effect. That will only come when the workers begin running things, politically and industrially.

Farm Statistics—Read 'em and Weep

By HAL WARE

Coaxing "Prosperity" to stay with us seems to be the most popular indoor sport of the Financial Editors of the New York papers. This polysyllabic habit is especially noticeable in their interpretations of Farm Reports and Statistics. Of course they expect only consumers or Greenwich Village farmers to read 'em. Nevertheless a real "Honest to God" John Farmer might have picked up the issues of June 10th, for instance.

After struggling thru several contradictory statements it's even money that John would have remarked: "There are three kinds of liars—Plain liars; Damn liars; and Statistical liars." But judge for yourself.

The N. Y. Evening Post says: "Corn has advanced in price, being only 1½ cents below the year's highest." Very encouraging—but wait—it goes on to say: "Corn is being fed heavily to finish hogs." A little item tucked away in the N. Y. Times reports: "Hogs lowest in eight years—Price drops to $6.75 per 100 lbs. ." That is $4.00 under the corresponding 1922 price. Also remember that corn is fed heavily to hogs.

One might next take up the N. Y. Herald. "Increased prices of farm products predicted by the Dept. of Agriculture" and then read "hopes only to be dashed by " . . As a result of increased costs of production." Still later the article states: "Slightly higher prices for some products is shown but most of these products have left the farm." The little nigger in this woodpile begins with the "but" and John Farmer is the goat.

Turn back to the Post. It commits another polyanna by smugly announcing: "Business in the agricultural districts has been good, as shown by the sales of two of the leading mail order houses. During the first five months of this year they increased 45 per cent over the same period last year."—Right on top of that comes the Magazine of Wall Street. (This by the way, is not common reading of Moscow.) Wall St. says: "The farm situation still remains one of the most unfavorable in the entire situation. In answer to this one might point to the increased volume of mail order sales, supposed to be such a good barometer of farm conditions. Let it be noted however that most of this volume consists of low-priced articles such as shoes, clothes and household articles. The amounts involved are therefore small and no matter how low the purchasing power is, he can find some way of getting together a few dollars with which to buy these necessary household articles."

At this point John is apt to turn to more familiar things—Wheat for instance. He notes an item, "Wheat sells for less than a dollar on the Farm." That isn't anything new to millions of farmers. He got mental indigestion over that item last fall. But when he comes to New York and picks up the Financial Bulletin of the National City Bank boosting his traditional enemies: the Minneapolis Grain Gamblers, John Farmer gets mental ptomains poisoning. And no wonder! In a circular on "Orderly Marketing" they aim to refute all charges of market manipulation. To prove that they are a well disguised blessing to John they take a period of 7 years to show that they hammer the price of Wheat down on an average, only 6 cents between May and September. The significance of May to September is that John, having mortgaged everything but his soul is always forced by those gentle pirates, the Banks, to begin selling immediately after threshing, i. e., during September, October and November he is forced to sell 60 per cent of his crop. That is the low priced period. Later when the Grain Gamblers begin to sell the same wheat to the millers and for export you have a high price period. They call this "Orderly Marketing." Some day when the farmers and workers get together they will call it "Disorderly Conduct"—and act accordingly.

Just to check up that "average" of cents drop between the "low" and "high" periods claimed by the Minneapolis gang, turn to a recent issue of "The Crop Reporter," U. S. Dept of Agriculture. It reports a drop in wheat price from May $1.70 to September $1.20. A difference of 50c. Do you blame John if he wonders whether Figures lie or Liars figure?

Whether it means it or not the Post said something.—"If the price of grain and cattle and other farm products were in line with the prices of manufactured articles it would be possible for the producer to pay out." But as agricultural products are not on that basis then it becomes necessary to charge off a substantial portion of the amounts paid for the farms when the post war boom was on. If it, doesn't mean it I'll tell the Post and the Times and the Herald and the world for that matter; to quit kidding themselves.

John Farmer is a land animal. He works the LAND and he KNOWS it. The world has gone thru a number of historic periods, but the farmer and peasant are still on the land. The American farmer will be no exception to the rule. But Capitalism must make exceptions to its rules. It must as "The Post" suggests, cancel farm debts, grant moritoriums, or starve.

"WHO KILLED COCK ROBIN?"

A person with a taste for humor might well insert the above heading over the comment upon the Michigan "Criminal Syndicalism" cases against the Communists as written by a New York editor who says, "A curious feature of the Michigan trials is that none of the defendants is charged with advocating criminal syndicalism as defined in the law, but is charged with "assembling with" persons who did advocate criminal syndicalism. The identity of the person or persons who did the advocating at the Michigan assembly remains a mystery."

CURZON LIED!

In British Foreign Minister Curzon's ultimatum to the Russian workers he said that the skipper of the trawler "James Johnson" was forced to do hard labor in Murmansk. The skipper, Nelson, has returned to Hull, England, and says that this is completely untrue; he and the crew went about freely in theatres and played football. So the first of Curzon's charges is shown to be a plain lie; the rest are made of the same material.

The Great Historical Significance of March 8th, International Women's Day

By JEANNETTE D. PEARL

As a mark of respect to mothers for past services rendered the State and as initial encouragement to future service, the Bourgeoisie of the United States commemorate Mothers' Day. Different is the ideal motivating the annual International observance of the commemoration of woman. The Communist International calls upon the proletariat of the world to observe March 8th, International Women's Day, not for what woman has done, not for what woman is to do, but rather for what the International proposes to do for women in effecting their emancipation from capitalist exploitation.

March 8th, International Women's Day, the same as May Day, has become for the working class of the world a day of unification in solidifying the ranks of labor against capitalist exploitation, while at the same time marshalling the forces of labor in the struggle for emancipation from capitalist strife.

On March 8th, I. W. D., the world proletariat represented by its vanguard—the Communist Parties—proclaim the demand for complete political and economic emancipation of peasant and working women of all countries. March the 8th is a day for the unification of the wide masses of working women with their vanguard—the Communist Parties—as only a Communist Order can completely effect the emancipation of women. Therefore, it is on International Women's Day that revolutionary women emphasize our Communist teachings while stressing the immediate demands of all working women in all countries.

The observers of I. W. D. on an international scale was resolved upon in 1910 at the Second International Women's Conference. Germany and Austria were the first countries to observe that day, widely agitating for Women's Franchise, protective labor for women and children, etc., by means of wide distribution of literature, public meetings and street demonstrations.

In 1912, I. W. D. began to be observed by the working women of many European countries and thus was created a link for international solidarity of Socialist women of the various countries. In 1913, I. W. D. was extended to a whole week in all industrial centers of Germany, Austria, Great Britain, Bulgaria, Holland and America. In that same year, under Russian auspices, an I. W. D. was organized in Petersburg semi-legally. A second attempt in 1914 to organize an I. W. D. was frustrated by the arrest of all participants.

During the world slaughter 1914-1917, I. W. D. was not observed. All attempts to organize demonstrations of protest on that day were suppressed by the police. The one exception was in Norway, in 1915, where the women organized to war against war.

I. W. D. on March 8th, 1917, in Petersburg, working women and soldiers wives marched upon the city streets demanding Bread and Peace. On that historic day began the Russian Revolution. The news of it lead to women's demonstrations against war in many of the European countries.

Since 1918, after the victory of the Russian Revolution, I. W. D. is observed thruout Soviet Russia with great solemnity and enthusiasm. In the western countries still under capitalist yokes, I. W. D. has again become a day for the demonstration of international solidarity among working women of all countries who rally around the Communist Parties in the struggle against the exploitation of working women by the master class.

In our Soviet World, March 8th is truly a day of international solidarity of the free peasant and working women of the Soviet Republics with the oppressed and disfranchised women of the Bourgeois States. It is only a Communist State with its system of national economy, its public dining halls, laundries, etc., that can completely emancipate women, not only politically and economically, but also from the drudgery of the household.

Therefore, I. W. D., March 8th, is observed in the Soviet Republics in order to rally the wide masses of women for active participation in social constructive work. That day is celebrated with the inauguration of many measures on behalf of working women.

In 1918-1919 the slogan of I. W. D. in Soviet Rusia was the consolidation of the Red Front, resistance to Bourgeois offensives and assistance for the Red Army. In 1920, the clarion call for all countries was for the unification of all working women of the world to stand by the Third International for the overthrow of bourgeois rule.

In the Soviet Republics in 1920, the banners of I. W. D. called for the re-establishment of transport, the struggle for bread and coal. In 1921 the slogan was for self discipline, active participation of peasant and working women in the economic renaissance of the Soviet Republics.

I. W. D. in 1922 called upon the Communist Parties of all countries to aid in the protection of working women—the struggle against unemployment—relief for the famine stricken of Russia—that working women support the Communist Parties and the Third International.

This year in Soviet Russia, 1923, I. W. D. was celebrated with the urgent call to all women for active participation in production, for cultural advancement of the workers, for perfecting collective housekeeping, relief for unemployed women and to combat the evil of prostitution reappearing under the "NEP."

After the world slaughter, women of all Western capitalist countries again resumed the observance of I. W. D. The Bourgeoisie in fear of Revolution granted women the franchise together with some other minor reforms. These concessions did not alleviate the misery of exploited womanhood. The slogans for political rights were turned into slogans for the Dictatorship of the Proletariat, and in the struggle against the capitalistic offensive was formulated the United Front of Workers, better working conditions for women, the struggle against the high cost of living, unemployment, the new taxations, protection for the labor of women and children, motherhood, the eight hour day, relief for Soviet Russia and franchise for women wherever women are still disfranchised.

Great enthusiasm has marked the celebrations of I. W. D., March 8th. There were demonstrations, meetings and wide distribution of Communist literature in all countries. March 8th, International Women's Day, calls upon the proletarian women of the world to join ranks with the proletarian male workers in the struggle for the emancipation of the world's class from capitalist domination. I. W. D. calls for the recognition of the Soviet Republics, the defense of the working class, thru the Dictatorship of the Proletariat.

I. W. D. hoists no flags, it does not prattle complimentary phrases, it does not plead for gifts to mother. The I. W. D. celebrates in honor of the new day dawning, and calls upon all working women to rally around and strengthen the Communist International, the shock troops of the world revolution, the leaders, directors and engineers fashioning the future Workers' Republic, in the interest of the working class, thru the Dictatorship of the Proletariat.

Militant Coal Miners Win

New Attack on Miners at Pittsburgh

By FRED H. MERRICK
(Special to "The Worker")

PITTSBURGH, Pa.—Because he dared to present a petition for a writ to compel the district attorney to return the card index files seized in the recent raids on the Labor Lyceum here, the property of the International Progressive Miners' Committee, Thomas Myerscough, secretary-treasurer of the committee, was arrested at the court house as a member of the Workers Party charged with sedition. Bail was fixed at $10,000. The coal miners as usual are supporting the fight.

Civil Liberties' Union Statement

Thomas Myerscough, Secretary of the Progressive Miners' Committee, was arrested in Pittsburgh, Pa., by Department of Justice Agent, Henry J. Lennon, according to information received by the American Civil Liberties Union today. Myerscough is being held under $10.000 bail, charged with violating the Flynn anti-sedition act.

"This is the latest development of the campaign of terrorization being carried on in Pittsburgh by the Department of Justice against radical organizers," Robert W. Dunn, associate director of the Civil Liberties Union stated today. "The Grand Jury has brought indictments against nine of the ten men arrested in the notorious pre-May Day raid on the Pittsburgh Labor Lyceum. Their trial will come up in September. Alexander Howat is under a preposterous indictment in an attempt to still his reputation among the workers.

"The reactionary powers in western Pennsylvania seem determined to railroad all progressive labor men to the penitentiary. Our civil liberties group in Pittsburgh are taking steps to prevent further arrests of this sort."

For a Labor Party!

Economic and political developments in the United States during the past four years have forced the question of the formation of a Labor Party, to fight the political battles of the industrial workers and farmers, into the forefront as an issue before the labor movement.

The Workers Party a year ago issued a call for the formation of a Labor Party would be the first great step forward by the workers in this country. Since that time the Workers Party has consistently carried on a campaign of agitation and education for the formation of a Labor Party. Thru its activities in favor of the Labor Party, the Workers Party has won a position of leadership as the exponent of the idea of a Labor Party.

Now the opportunity is at hand to turn the agitation and educational work into the actual work of organization. The July 3d Convention called by the Farmer-Labor Party has already won sufficient support so that the formation of a Federated Farmer-Labor Party seems a certainty. Representatives of probably over a half million workers will sit in that convention, sent there to make a reality of the aspiration of the industrial workers and farmers for a political party that will carry on a consistent struggle for the industrial worker and farmer and against the capitalists.

During the two weeks before the convention much can still be done to [illegible] even a greater expression of the determination of industrial workers and farmers to have a political party of their own. The Workers Party is exerting all its strength along this line. It has mobilized its whole organization

We Greet the Miners' Victory!

In a telegram sent to Rinaldo Cappellini, president-elect of District One, United Mine Workers of America, "The Worker" has sent its congratulations to the militant miners of this great Pennsylvania anthracite coal field, greeting them on their tremendous victory. The telegram reads as follows:

Rinaldo Cappellini, 14 Chamberlain St., Plainville, Pa.

Our heartiest congratulations to you and all the militant coal diggers of District One on the brilliant victory achieved thru the election of the progressive miners' ticket over all the forces of reaction. Upon your administration rest great responsibilities. We are sure you will live up to all expectations.—Engdahl, Editor, "The Worker."

Next Important Task of Workers Party

By C. E. RUTHENBERG

During the year and a half that the Workers Party has been in existence it has made great strides forward in educational work in favor of its policies. This has been particularly true during the last nine months of Party work.

In carrying on the work for our trade union policy of amalgamation we have won numerous ideological victories thru securing the endorsement of these policies by great masses of workers. In the work of defense of our comrades subjected to persecution we have also been able to win the support of wide masses of workers for our right to advocate publicly our principles and ideas.

Thru the organizations for special kinds of propaganda—united front organizations—in which we have participated, we have built up a wide following for the particular policies which each of these organizations is supporting.

As we survey the work of the past nine months, we find that the development along this line, that is, the support gained by our ideas, our policies, has been wider than ever before in the history of our movement. We have actually rallied to the support of our policies large groups of organized workers.

The fact that we have thus been

Plan Foster Defense Tour to the Coast

Following his recently finished successful tour of the principal eastern cities, arrangements have been made whereby William Z. Foster will make a tour of the West and Northwest for the Labor Defense Council.

While details of the tour have not yet been completed, the Labor Defense Council national office has announced that 17 defense meetings are proposed.

Cities in which mass meetings are being arranged are: Belleville, Ill.; St. Louis, Mo.; Kansas City, Mo.; Omaha; Denver; Hanna, Wyo.; Salt Lake City; Los Angeles; San Francisco; Oakland; Tacoma; Seattle; Astoria, Ore.; Portland, Ore.; Spokane; Butte; St. Paul; Minneapolis, and Milwaukee. The tour will begin early in September.

If the eastern tour is any criterion of the continuing interest of the labor movement in the Michigan defense and the popularity of Foster with the Workers of this country, the western tour will be a tremendous success. In his meetings in the East, Foster was greeted by great and enthusiastic crowds, which added considerably to the financial support of the Michigan defense.

Elect Cappellini over Lewis Tool in Big Anthracite Field by Vote of 27,000 to 14,500

By ALFRED WAGENKNECHT
(Special to "The Worker")

Wilkes-Barre, Pa.—The hope of John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers, as expressed in the capitalist press, that the radicals would be snowed under in the District One elections; the steady bombardment of the Scranton and Wilkes-Barre papers in which the words "Communist," "bolshevik," "red," were hurled as so much shrapnel at the progressive slate; the slogan of the conservatives that "no dago shall rule us," peddled in large gulps to the gullible; the scare that immediately the progressives were elected a big strike would be called that would have no end; manipulation, bribery—all this had no other result except to roll up a vote, unofficially estimated as 27,000 to 14,500, in favor of the progressive Cappellini slate in the District One elections of the United Mine Workers.

It is the first sweeping victory of the left bloc, the "insurgents" as they are here called, in the mine workers' union in the United States. The entire Cappellini slate will go into office within a month, with the possible exception of two district executive board members—Rinaldo Cappellini as president, George Isaacs as vice-president, Enoch Williams as secretary-treasurer and Frank Shiffka as member of the international executive board.

The election was the hottest ever held by the miners here. The conservative districts, controlled by the mine owners thru their burgess (mayor) and priests, could not be impregnated with progressive propaganda. On the other hand, Brennan and his army of organizers did not dare enter the "insurgent" territory for fear of a sound beating. The coal companies were for Brennan, and that settled Brennan among the progressives.

Much credit for the victory is due to the inexhaustible energy of the militants in District One. The campaigning of Cappellini, who made three to four speeches every night was augmented by the four progressive miners' conferences held, at which counsel and instructions were given as to campaign and election tactics, and, just as important—how to assure a full and honest count of the vote.

The militants were on the job on election day. Let us cite two instances. A six foot Russian miner, scoffing at the excuse that he could not speak English, usually given by the less courageous, answered that it was not necessary to speak English in order to count votes, that anybody could count. And he did. He took charge of six miners' locals in the conservatives' territory, and secured an honest count, a majority for the Cappellini slate.

A Polish miner, after attempts to bribe him had failed, reinforced by fifteen progressives of his local union, besieged the tellers all night, challenged the police to evict them, gave the tellers to understand that their lives were at stake if the vote was manipulated, and secured a two to one vote for Cappellini as a result. However, in many local unions, where we as yet have no militants, the vote of the entire union, sometimes 1,500 strong, was thrown to Brennan, despite the fact that in instances the majority sentiment and vote was for the progressive slate.

And now comes the second battle—the fight to keep what has been won. Here the militants must again do double duty. Already the reactionary forces are making charges, such as are intended to challenge the vote of those locals which voted solidly for the progressive slate. The Lewis-Brennan forces assert that the vote cast by various locals will be "scrutinized."

It may be depended upon that no tricks of the reactionary trade will be left untried, in order to declare the election illegal. We do not not doubt but what at this very minute, while the district tellers are officially tabulating the vote, Lewis and Brennan have their heads together figuring out some crooked move.

The final decision rests with the district convention to be held July 16. To all progressives this can mean but one thing—that an overwhelming majority of progressives must be elected delegates to the district convention. Only by winning the district convention can the victory be made permanent.

And the victory must be made permanent, for therein lies our best opportunity to propagate the progressive miners' program, to educate the rank and file (tho this is a herculean job, considering the dozen languages the miners speak) and to give the "insurgent" movement in this territory a basis in principle. Leaders may come and go, but a well grounded rank and file will hold the fort forever.

Even Cappellini understands this, for at a recent meeting he said: "If I ever go wrong, brothers, I hope you'll kick me out so quick, I'll be burned to a crisp in flying thru the air."

Let this then be a call to every American, German, Hungarian, Italian, Lithuanian, Ukrainian, Polish, Russian, Welsh and Irish militant in District One of the United Mine Workers, for another month of intense activity. The victory scored must not be turned into defeat. The district convention of July 16 must be progressive by a safe majority.

Shortage of Steel Labor Is Gary Fake

This week we annihilate the frantic plea of Judge Elbert H. Gary and his fellow steel bandits that they must continue the 12-Hour Day because of the shortage of labor. It is shown that this Gary-manufactured fake is merely a lame lie, seeking to draw attention away from the brutalizing two-shift, 12-Hour Day system in the steel industry. Here are the facts:

* * *

By JAY LOVESTONE.
Author "The Government—Strike-breaker"

With blaring bands the Barons of the Satrapy of Steel have advertised the so-called "labor shortage" far and wide to thwart the growing opposition to the 12-Hour Hell Shift System.

Said the May 25, 1923, Report of Gary's American Iron and Steel Institute:

"But it would be impossible, under existing conditions, to obtain sufficient number of men to operate the plants on a three-shift basis up to a capacity which would supply the present necessities of the purchasing public. There are not now, under a two-shift practice at the furnaces, enough men to meet the demand for iron and steel."

Here we have the fraudulent game of the Steel Trust in a nutshell. When there is depression, there is a shortage of money, and the poor Steel magnates can't afford to pay for the 8-Hour Day. When there is prosperity, big profits, then there is a shortage of labor, and the 8-Hour Day is again impossible.

The proof of the pudding is in the eating. Likewise, the proof that the Steel Trust is waging a campaign of lies and misrepresentation to perpetuate the 12-Hour Day is found in its words and deeds. In 1912 the stockholders of the U. S. Steel Corporation indorsed, in principle, the abolition of the 12-Hour Day. Since then, the Lords of Steel have swung from one excuse to another to stop the movement for the 8-Hour Day.

But what are the facts? Is there today a great labor-shortage to war-

All Labor Is Threatened

By CLARISSA S. WARE
Investigator for "The Worker"

The "Twelve-Hour Day" slogan of the United States Steel Corporation is a challenge to all Workers. The miners and railroad workers cannot ignore the stand of the Steel Corporation against the workers in the steel industry.

An Employer of Rail Labor

Today the steel trust is not merely the operator of steel mills and the employer of steel workers.

Today the U. S. Steel Corporation is OPERATING 1,484 locomotives and 64,144 cars over a road bed of 3,761 miles, a distance greater than from New York City to Los Angeles, Calif. Can the railroad workers ignore the challenge?

It Digs Coal and Iron

Who is digging the 21,278,179 tons of iron ore which the United States Steel Corporation mines annually, or the 23,293,471 tons of coal which comes from the mines owned by the steel trust? The labor policy of the Steel octopus is behind the mine operators in their vicious anti-union attacks upon the miners. The Twelve-Hour Day for the steel workers is a challenge to labor of the mines, railroads, and mills, to all labor—organized and unorganized.

Workers Give $68,691,127

The policy of the Steel Corporation to sell stock to its employes has succeeded to the tune of $68,691,127 in the last five years. Over 750,000 shares of stock have been purchased by employes. The workers who have fallen for the big dollar dividend are today facing the ugly fact that THEY are financing the twelve-hour day anti-labor policy of the steel trust. They have been made the tools of the octopus. It should be a lesson to the workers in the other industries that are offering stock to the employes, that there can be no partnership between capital and labor. Labor must organize along the same industrial lines as the steel corporation. When the workers on the railroads, in the mines and in the mills are organized industrially and politically they can give the final answer to the steel trust—until then the octopus of steel will stretch out its tentacles farther and farther, tightening its grip on the throats of the entire working class.

Workers Must Themselves Win 8-Hour Day

Extracts from an editorial in Novy Mir, Russian Daily, June 7th

It is mistake to speak of a twelve-hour day in the steel industry. We must speak of DAILY TWELVE HOURS OF HARD LABOR AND SLAVERY.

To do hard labor the people are sentenced for committing certain crimes—but what crimes did the steel workers commit? Who sentenced them to life slavery in their industry?

They did NOT commit any crime. The crime was committed against them.

The workers' press of all languages is trying to make it possible for the steel workers to express their protest against the impudence of the steel trust which declares that the workers themselves want to work twelve hours a day. Since the last steel strike the conditions have changed; the war is over and the masses are sober again.

They understand now that they were fooled. The new free and happy life which they were promised for their sacrifices during the war has not been realized.

Now the demands of the steel workers for an eight-hour day will find support among the broad masses of the people. Even the bourgeois press condemns the declarations of the steel trust. It is clear, however, that the agitation of the bourgeois press for an eight-hour day in the steel industry is not being conducted because of their love for the steel workers. Everybody remembers that the same press turned against the steel workers in 1919 when they fought for an eight-hour day.

But the steel workers are not interested in the sincerity of the yellow press. For them the important fact is that the steel trust has not the support it had in 1919.

President Harding is ready to use his influence in order to bring about some compromise — the Federal Church Council has declared it is against the eight-hour day.

But the steel workers themselves have not responded as yet. Everybody can see their opinion, but this opinion has not yet found expression. Not to speak now would mean to commit a crime against the workers' interests. The steel workers MUST respond to the call of their newspapers and express themselves, not only about the eight-hour day but also about other labor conditions in the steel industry in general.

The workers cannot and must not believe that the bourgeois press and the promises of the bourgeois church will get for them the eight-hour day. THE WORKERS THEMSELVES MUST GET IT.

But how this should be done—the discussion of this question in the workers' press will show how. Write to us about your opinion—whether you want an eight-hour day and how you think it can be realized.

Balk at Uncle Sam's Role of "Big Brother"

By BERTRAM D. WOLFE
(Special to "The Worker")

MEXICO CITY.—Even the most pro-Yankee papers here are quoting with evident approval the attacks made in foreign papers, especially those of France, upon the "big-brotherly" ambitions of the United States at the Pan-American conference at Santiago, Chile.

The absence of Peruvian, Bolivian and Mexican delegates, the refusal of the United States to recognize Mexico, the dented Monroe Doctrine, the iron heel of the American troops grinding and oppressing the "sovereign" nations of Nicaragua, Haiti, Guatemala and San Domingo, attempted interference into the public and private affairs of Argentina, Brazil, Chile, Peru and Bolivia, interference with Columbia in the matter of the fake revolution of Panama—all these delightful incidents and evidences of Yankee friendliness toward Latin-America are subjects for caustic comment, quoted or original.

Certainly the history of the "Big Brother" activities of the United States in reference to Mexico is one long record of imperialist schemes and designs. The United States aided the Curate Hidalgo in his revolution in 1810 against Spanish authority because Spanish domination blocked the onward march of U. S. expansive land-imperialism.

When General Santana made huge concessions of the entire Northern mining regions of Mexico to French capital, the United States fostered a revolution in Texas, recognized the American colony there as the ruling power, then picked a quarrel over the Texas boundary line and in the war of 1848 took away the entire mining region of the North including the gold of California, the iron, coal, silver and lead of Colorado, Arizona, New Mexico, etc.

History will never decide the possible value to Mexico of a firmly entrenched British Imperialism as an ally against American, for Diaz's government toppled immediately in a new revolution in which the United States aided the petty bourgeoisie to throw off the yoke of Diaz, till then praised by the American press for his enlightened rule, and now an object of execration as a "tyrannical autocrat."

The rest is recent history and familiar to the readers of The Worker, so it is not necessary to recount the part played by the "Big Brother," in the revolutions that followed, the recognitions and refusals to recognize, the financing of insurrections, embargoes on arms and the lifting of embargoes, troops in Juarez and troops in El Paso and troops in Vera Cruz and all the rest of it. Suffice it to say that the end is not yet, although for the moment ministers plenipotentiary are negotiating agreements with the persons of Minister of the Treasury De La Huerta and Minister of Invisible Government Thomas W. Lamont. De La Huerta has already promised Lamont to recognize the bonds of the defunct Mexican governments, which testify to loans many of which were used to put down the very revolutions that have brought the present government into power.

The only pan-Americanism that really means anything is the rival pan-Americanism that is slowly growing up in the labor movements of the two Americas, as a conscious and determined enemy of finance imperialism. And those liberals who are working for pan-Americanism may rest assured that they can only serve the objects at which they aim by hastening the day in which a workers' government in the United States will supplant the invisible government of which Thomas W. Lamont is a minister plenipotentiary, or rather super-potentiary.

Special "Labor Party Edition"

Next week's issue of The Worker will be a Special Labor Party Edition. This is the issue that will be distributed at all the conventions and picnics. It will be a splendid issue for the purpose. It intends to remain in the front rank of militant labor papers. It needs the help of its readers. Send in an order for a bundle of this special issue. Three cents per copy to "The Worker," 799 Broadway, New York City.

Every new reader of this issue will thank you for the opportunity to go through the many excellent articles and see the cartoons and pictures that it will contain. Act now!

AFTER THE CONVENTION!

"The Worker" is planning to have the best report of the convention. This will appear in the issue of the week following. Our issue will help supplement the pre-convention issue. Our advice—send in a double order for both these issues, Nos. 282 and 283, dated July 7, and July 14.

Putting Gompers Right on the Struggle in the Shoe Industry

By JOSEPH MANLEY
Eastern Organizer, Trade Union Educational League.

Samuel Gompers, speaking recently at Boston, must have gotten his drinks mixed. After setting forth that "the American Federation, after mature deliberation has declared that every textile worker should come under the jurisdiction of the United Textile Workers of America," he is credited with delivering himself of the following:

"Instead of abiding by that mature judgment, small groups maintaining small separate independent units talked about amalgamation and organized a new concern called the Amalgamated Textile Workers. Amalgamation! There has never been a more abused word coined and used to cover up a dark tragedy disguised as in the interests of labor. It is a cloak behind which to hide the real purpose —the destruction of the American trade union movement."

For good measure he is reported to have said that a similar situation existed in Brockton in the boot and shoe industry.

As a sample of pre-Volstead utterances this would be hard to beat. While we possess a sense of humor and respect for old age, both are stretched to the breaking point by the above statement.

The rank and file of the textile and shoe industries will not be overcome by this oratorical flight.

The complete answer to the statement about the textile industry is contained in the program of the General Amalgamation Committee of the Textile Industry which sets forth at its purpose: "to combine every textile organization, radical and conservative, A. F. of L., and Independent." This plan of amalgamation points out that of the 1,600,000 employed in the textile industry only 100,000 are at present organized and these are split up in a score of unions among others the Amalgamated Textile Workers—the plan says that the formation of the Federated Textile Unions of America was a step toward progress, but nothing short of complete amalgamation can meet the present situation in the industry. Thousands of these plans have been spread broadcast thruout the textile industry.

At the recent convention of the Amalgamated Textile Workers the writer and William Z. Foster were both bitterly denounced for carrying on this agitation for amalgamation. We were accused of ignoring the "leaders" and going to the rank and file, etc., etc. This convention defeated a resolution calling for amalgamation of all the unions in the textile industry and another which called for the formation of a Labor Party based upon the trade unions and including all working class political organizations. Curiously enough this same convention accused us of pulling the men in Brockton out of the A. F. of L.

Gompers is probably not informed of the action of the executive board of the Federated Textile Unions of America, that appeared in the principal newspapers of a recent date:

"Whereas, Henry J. O'Connell, the secretary of the Federated Textile Unions of America, states that the independent textile unions are determined now to have one union within the industry governed by a constitution, which will remove old land-bed features and preserve the unity so necessary for the textile workers' future welfare, and

"Whereas, he further states that if some one can force a round table conference or convention of the opposing forces, the day will be won for unity, and

"Whereas, Brother Thomas F. McMahon, president of the United Textile Workers of America, also expresses a strong desire to unify among the organized workers in the textile industry; therefore it is hereby

"Resolved, that we fully and heartily endorse the sentiment expressed by both Brother O'Connell and Brother McMahon in the desire for unity among the organized workers in the textile industry, and be it resolved, that we stand ready to attend a conference with representatives of the United Textile Workers of America for the purpose of bringing about the desired unity in the textile industry."

These few facts in relation to the situation in the textile industry are known to the rank and file militants and they will pay no attention to Gompers flamboyant oratory. The militants want the real program of the T. U. E. L. are the force that will bring unity in the textile industry.

In Brockton has for many years been the New England stronghold of the A. F. of L. Boot and Shoe Workers' Union. It had a membership there of about 25,000 while the entire membership is not over 45,000.

Gompers might get a faint idea of the situation in the shoe industry, should he take the time to read the plan put out by the International Amalgamation Committee of the Shoe and Leather Industry. It advocates that all the competing separate unions be amalgamated into one industrial organization to cover the entire shoe and leather industry." This plan warns of splits, secession and dual unions.

At Brockton the present condition whereby 18,000 are on strike is caused by the uncontrollable rebellion of the rank and file against the intolerable system of the Boot and Shoe Workers' Union, which forbids strikes and fastens a system of arbitration upon the workers that destroys their power, and is perpetuated by an agreement between the officials and the shoe companies that in return for this arbitration clause the company will agree to use the "union label" that in this particular instance was carried to the point of a fetish and used to ruthlessly exploit the worker.

The present strike is for a wage increase and against the State Board of Arbitration. The T. U. E. L. has played no part in the present fight. It is simply a wild rebellion of the rank and file led by seasoned members of the organization. The conditions which brought it about should have the widest publicity.

Gompers and his denunciatory speech made against those who may differ with him in the smallest degree, is the real issue that, with the employers' open shop campaign, has brought our organizations to their present condition.

Opposed to this open shop drive is the growing power of the militants. This power is based upon an understanding of economic realities, and does not concern itself with mouthing empty phrases. This movement finds its best expression in the Trade Union Educational League that is teaching the rank and file, their real interests and consolidates their scattered forces. The present wave of amalgamation sentiment will engulf all those who spend their time fighting, on the one hand Volstead, and progress on the other.

Enthusiastic Meetings for Labor Party

In spite of the hot weather the mass meetings for a Labor Party addressed by Workers Party speakers are proving very successful. The campaign for organization of a Labor Party in Chicago, Ill., is now in its final stages and the Workers Party will be on the job up until the last moment before the opening of the conference, endeavoring to secure support from the organized workers. Much Labor Party literature is being distributed everywhere there are branches of the Party.

Buffalo Labor Endorses Conference
(Special to "The Worker")

BUFFALO, N. Y.—The Central Labor Council of Buffalo has elected James C. Campbell, chairman of the organization committee, to be its official representative at the July 3 conference called to meet in Chicago by the Farmer-Labor Party. Many local unions will also send delegates to this conference.

The widespread interest in independent political action of labor created in this section of the country by the decision of the Buffalo Central Labor Council to launch a local labor party to participate in the coming municipal elections is the most encouraging event of the decade according to the leaders of labor here.

Campbell said when questioned regarding the attitude of Buffalo Labor toward the Chicago conference "Buffalo is 100 per cent for the conference and we hope that out of this conference will come the creation of a genuine Labor Party, and not a hodge-podge of petty reformistic trappings that would certainly shatter the hopes of the hundreds of thousands of workers in the United States who are sick and tired of the treachery of the Gompers policy of "reward your friends and punish your enemies." We hope there will be a straight Labor conference, embracing local unions, central labor bodies and the various political organizations of labor in this country.

Local unions are electing delegates to accompany Campbell to Chicago and this section of New York State will have a representative delegation coming directly from the rank and file of labor.

The Finns Get Together
(Special to "The Worker")

MAYNARD, Mass.—The eyes of the Finnish comrades in District 1 are on Maynard. From Worcester and Norwood, Gardner and Fitchburg they came to the celebration in honor of the opening of the new hall built by the comrades of the Finnish Branch of the Workers Party.

There was an Entertainment and Dance on Saturday night, and the program was continued on Sunday. A declamation, songs, and speeches —in Finnish. On Saturday, H. Puro, of the Finnish paper, Eteenpain, and on Sunday, William Marttila, of the same paper—stressing the latest developments in the Communist movement of the world in general, and of the United States in particular. The Norwood Band and the Maynard Orchestra performed right merrily.

The link that tied the celebration up with the American movement was a brief speech in English by the District Organizer for New England, William Simons, who showed the advance in militancy of the American worker during the last year, and who expressed the hope that the new hall would soon be the recognized center for all working class activity in Maynard.

Abolish Kansas Court

It is announced that steps are on foot to abolish the Kansas Industrial Court Act, under which Alexander Howat and other Kansas coal miners were sent to jail. It remains to be seen whether President Lewis, of the United Mine Workers, will reinstate Howat and the Kansas miners ousted with him. Or will Lewis be swept aside like the late Governor Allen?

Establish United Front of All Transport Workers' Unions in All Countries, of All Views

"The Worker" has just received copies of the declarations adopted by the United Front Conference of the Transport Workers recently held at Berlin, Germany. The resolution on United Action adopted by the conference follows:

For United Action of All Transport Workers!

The position of the World Proletariat is deteriorating at an ever increasing rate. The continually extended occupation of German territory by the French and Belgian troops, the catastrophic effects of the Versailles Peace Treaty, the dependence of the countries of the Little Entente upon the West European capitalist governments, in consequence of which Poland, Roumania, Czecho-Slovakia are nothing else than the serviceable tools of the great imperialist states, the steadily growing reaction, the destruction of the Workers' organizations by Fascism in Italy, the persecution of the working class in Yugoslavia, Roumania, Pilsudski Spain and other countries, and before all the conspiracy of the reactionary governments to overthrow Soviet Russia, threaten the Proletariat with enslavement and misery.

The Bureau and General Council of the International Transport Workers' Federation, empowered by the congress of the I. T. F., as well as the All-Russian Unions of the Transport Workers, Railway Workers and Seamen, empowered on their side by the All-Russian Trade Union Federation and by the Transport Workers' Unions holding the view-point of the Red International of Labor Unions, consider it as their first task to bring about the unity of the Transport Workers in all countries, especially in those countries where the movement is split, and to prevent future expulsions as well as the creation of new parallel organizations.

For the purpose of carrying out this task, the representatives of the I. T. F. have conferred with the representatives of the Russian Transport Workers Unions, authorized by all the Transport Workers' organizations holding the view-point of the R. I. L. U. on the 23rd and 24th of May in Berlin in order to realize this common aim.

The conference, at which the I. T. F. was represented by Robert Williams—Chairman, John Döring—Vice Chairman, M. Bidegaray, Edo Fimmen—General Secretary, and K. Natans—Assistant Secretary, and the Russian Railway Workers, Transport Workers' and Seamen's Unions by A. Andreyew, A. Sadovsky, G. Atchkanov as well as the All-Russian Trade Union Federation by A. Losovsky, adopted a series of resolutions, the carrying out of which, the organizations concerned on both sides are most expressly charged.

It was decided:

1. To form an equally represented International Committee of Action whose task it will be to propagate, organize and carry thru the struggle of the Transport Workers, Railway Workers and Seamen of all countries and tendencies against militarism, Danger of War and Fascism.

2. To organize a constant control of all transport of munitions, in the first place by the creation of Control Committees at the factories, the important docks, Railway Junctions and Frontier Stations.

3. To convene a world congress of the Transport Workers of all countries and tendencies for creating a united fighting front and for the setting up of the united national and international organization.

To adopt the necessary measures for the common support of Transport Workers of all countries persecuted by Fascism, especially thru the creation of a common fund.

The conference expressed the hope that it would not only succeed in the next future in realizing the unity of all Transport Workers and effectively carrying on their common struggle against Militarism, Danger of War and Fascism, but that the international secretariats of other industries will create the unity necessary in the interests of all the workers.

Next Workers Party Task

able to increase the support for our ideas shows that the policies which we are supporting are the correct policies; that they are those policies which must be followed by the working masses of this country in order to punish your enemies." We hope there will be a straight Labor conference, embracing local unions, central labor bodies and the various political organizations of labor in this country.

Local unions are electing delegates to accompany Campbell to Chicago and this section of New York State will have a representative delegation coming directly from the rank and file of labor.

After all, the test of our work is the increase in the Party. The Party is strengthened as an organization. Our Party, as it stands today, is yet too small to influence the tens of millions of workers in this country who must influence in order to mobilize them for the struggle against capitalism. Therefore, it is one of our main tasks to increase the Party membership. This work must be carried on simultaneously with the work of agitation and education in favor of our policies.

It is not enough that we are able to secure the endorsement of hundreds of thousands of workers for the idea of amalgamation. It is not enough that we should be able to influence other tens of thousands of workers in favor of the idea of a Labor Party. It is not even enough that we should be able to organize these workers in organizations supporting amalgamation and the Labor Party.

We have a task which goes beyond these things. At the same time that we carry on our campaign in favor of our policies among the wide masses of the workers and organize them in special organizations for the support of certain definite policies, we must increase our Party membership.

We must bring into the Workers Party the most advanced and most militant among the workers whom we win for our ideas. Unless we are able to do that, we are not fulfilling our mission. We cannot say that we have made actual progress unless at the same time we create mass organizations supporting certain ideas which we promulgate, we build a communist party which is the leader of these masses.

Unless we are able to build our Party at the same time that we build mass organizations supporting some of our policies, we may find in the future that these organizations which we have created thru our work will cut themselves loose from us and be no longer under our influence. We may find ourselves with a number of organizations which, in place of developing closer and closer to our Party, at a certain stage will break away and become our enemies.

In view of what has been written above, it appears that our next and most important task is to coin into organizational strength the progress we have made ideologically in winning support of our ideas. We must bring the best workers who have come close to us thru our campaign in favor of certain policies into the Party. We must bind them still closer to us thru making them members of our Party.

It is this phase of our work in which we have failed during the past nine months. While there has been an increase in the membership of our Party, the increase is not proportionate to the increased influence which we have won. We have not put enough stress upon the strengthening of our organization.

This has been due, to some extent, to the fact that in many of the actions in which the Party has been the moving force, it has not appeared openly. The work has been done thru various subsidiary organizations created to carry on the struggle for certain policies. Those workers who became interested and supported the policies which actually were being promulgated by the Party did not see the Party in these actions. They joined whatever organization seemingly was carrying on the work and considered that in doing so they were aiding themselves with the promulgators of the policies they endorsed.

The face of the Party has been hidden too much in carrying on the propaganda for its ideas. Altho the Workers Party is an open organization so far as its campaigns are concerned, it might as well have been underground, for it has not appeared as the active militant organization which was taking the lead. This has been true in practically everything the Party has done except its work for the Labor Party.

This situation has also led to a desire on the part of many Party members. They have seen certain organizations working in favor of policies and they have come to believe that work in these organizations is all sufficient. It seemed be enough for them that they supported and worked in those subsidiary organizations, these organizations which the Party created for its work and forgot that the fundamental organization, the only permanent organization, the force behind all this work, was the Party itself.

These conditions must be changed. The Party must grow as an organization in proportion to the growth in the support of its policies. We must find ways and means of turning these victories we gained ideologically into greater strength and a more powerful Party organization. The way to achieve this end is by letting the Party appear more openly in all its activities. We must no longer completely hide the face of the Party. We must let the workers, who support our policies know that these are the policies of the Workers Party and that the driving force behind these policies is that group of militant, disciplined workers who compose the Workers Party. We must make them feel that so long as they are outside of this organization, they are not, by giving their full support and participating in the organization which is really conducting the work.

We must also make more direct efforts to strengthen the organization. Every Party member must keep in the forefront in his work the idea of increasing the strength of the organization by bringing new members into the Party. We must systematically canvass the workers who are associated with us in our campaigns and pick from among them those who are fit for membership in our Party and then work systematically to bring them into the Party.

This organizational strengthening of the Party is the next important task before us. Every Party unit, every Party member, every Party worker, every Party organizer should study his opportunities in this respect and direct his efforts toward the end of building a more powerful Workers Party organization.

Moulders Elect Tom Mooney

SAN FRANCISCO.—By an almost unanimous vote, Local 164 of the International Moulders Union of North America elected Tom Mooney, now serving a life sentence, in San Quentin Prison, Cal., as one of its delegates to the forthcoming moulders' international convention in Cleveland.

While Tom Mooney is not, of course, able to attend the convention to which he is elected, the moulders' union hopes by this means to express its appreciation of his long years of active service in the labor movement, and to call the attention of the American people to the gross injustice involved in the continued imprisonment of one proven the victim of a frame-up.

Upton Sinclair's Latest and Greatest Work. What One Critic Says:

H. L. MENCKEN on "The Goose-Step":

"The Goose-Step" came in yesterday afternoon, and I fell on it last night. My sincere congratulations. I have read on and on with constant joy in the adept marshaling of facts, the shrewd presentation of personalities, the lively and incessant humor. It is not only a fine piece of writing; it is also a sound piece of research. It presents a devastating, but, I believe, thoroly fair and accurate picture of the American universities today. The faults of "The Brass Check" and "The Profits of Religion" are not in it. It is enormously more judicial and convincing than either of those books. You are here complaining of nothing. You simply offer the bald and horrible facts—but with liveliness, shrewdness, good humor. An appalling picture of moral and mental debasement. Let every American read it and ponder it!

For a Labor Party

to make the July 3d convention a great labor congress which will make labor's declaration of independence of the capitalist political parties.

To carry on this work during the crucial days ahead the Workers Party needs funds. It asks its members and those in sympathy with its work to contribute to a $10,000 "For a Labor Party Fund."

This fund will be expended for organization work, to send delegates to the July 3d Convention and for the great organization drive to create local units of the Federated Farmer-Labor Party after the National Convention.

The Workers Party asks every friend of the idea of a Federated Farmer-Labor Party, to include the trade unions, the farm organizations and all labor political groups, to contribute to this fund.

PROMPT ACTION IS REQUIRED. MONEY IS NEEDED AT ONCE.

The party asks every reader of this paper to send in a contribution and to secure contributions from their friends and shops to this fund.

Comrades! American labor, industrial workers and farmers stand before a great opportunity. The Workers Party asks you to help to do its part toward turning the opportunity into the reality of a great Federated Farmer-Labor Party. Your contribution, sent quickly, will help it make a success of this work.

"We Want the 8-Hour Day!" Steel Slaves Write on Walls in Chalk at Girard, Ohio, Gary Plant

Editor, "THE WORKER".—You see me for a letter on the 12-Hour Day. I do not work for the U. S. Steel Trust, altho two of their large plants are close to this town. Some few months ago I worked for them for about six weeks in their McDonald Plant, which is a monstrous open hearth mill. They fired me as soon as they found out who I was. THE PLANT AT McDONALD IS SEETHING WITH DISCONTENT AGAINST THE 12-HOUR DAY. AND ALL OVER THE PLANT THE SLAVES HAVE WRITTEN IN CHALK—"WE WANT THE EIGHT-HOUR DAY!"—W. J., Girard, Ohio.

Fake Plea of "Labor Shortage" Is Only Brazen Lie to Hide Brutal, Dehumanizing Two-Shift System in Gary's Steel Industry ant the contention of the Steel Committee? Does the history of the Steel Trust afford even a single instance of the slightest effort at the bolition of the 12-Hour Day? Why s the so-called labor-shortage a particularly aggravated problem to the teel Corporation? Finally, would he extent of the need for an increased number of workers be great nough to warrant the Steel Committee's contention that the new orkers cannot be found?

Analyzing So-called Labor Shortage

The existence of a great number f unemployed, constituting an industrial reserve army, is an inherent pture of the capitalist system of roduction and exchange.

Even in the best times, in the heyays of prosperity, there are hunreds of thousands of men able and nxious to work but unable to do so, ecause the owners of the mills and hines and factories will not give em a chance to. Today, with the reat Depression of 1921 over, the rmy of the unemployed is far maller than the six millions out of ork eighteen months ago. The exct number of unemployed today has ot been ascertained by any Governent Bureau. Perhaps there are, oday, even less workers out of jobs han in the average days of ordinary apitalist normalcy. That is why the mployers are howling so much bout a labor-shortage. The big ases today do not have a sufficiently big reserve army to enable them o lower or to keep stagnant the livng and working standards as much s they would like to.

For instance, the last Annual Reort of the Secretary of Labor, Davis, showed that in 240 cities of a ombined population of 35,410,910 here were 2,301,584 unemployed age earners. Mr. Davis admitted hat his estimate of the number of mployed was very incomplete and hat the number out of work in the hole country was much greater. ince then, at least 250,000 were dded to the total number of enployable workers thru immigration.

Thus even the most sanguine capalist optimist cannot reasonably ontend that all of the million workrs, still unemployed on June 30, 922, have been absorbed in the ecent industrial revival.

The huge standing industrial reerve army has not been reduced as uch as the employing class would ave us believe. An analysis of the gures presented by the Illinois Deartment of Labor in its Employent Bulletin of April, 1923, shows hat on the average, for the period anuary-April, 1923, inclusive, there ere 104.47 persons registered as apicants for every hundred jobs open a common labor. Furthermore, the ew York State Industrial Commisioner in his Report, ending May, 923, showed that factory employnent is only 15 per cent higher than was a year ago.

Besides, whatever "labor-shortage" here may have existed for a few onths, is now steadily disappearing. he same New York Report, speakng of the extent of employment, oints out that "decreases were reorted in nearly two-thirds of the anufacturing industries of the State, ost of the increases were very slight, or were due to seasonal influences."

Commenting on this Report the New York Times of June 15, 1923, said: "Unless the signs of the times are misleading, the industries of the country as a whole will not long be suffering from a labor-shortage." It is especially enlightening to note that, according to a report of June 2d on the steel industry in the Pittsburgh District, the only important existing shortage of help is manifested in the need of skilled hands, engaged in the cutting and threading departments of the pipe and wire lines. A New York Times Pittsburgh dispatch, discussing this condition, said on June 3, 1923: "In most cases there is ample supply of help."

Further proof of the fact that the size of the Unemployed army is again on the climb is given in the following from the recent reply of Gompers to Gary. "Only the other day 20,000 men applied for work on the steamer Leviathan, when only 1,100 were needed. A few days ago 2,000 men and women stood in line, some of them all night, at the District Building, Washington, D. C., to make application in answer to a notice that a few laborers and charwomen were needed."

Shameful Record of Steel Trust

But ice will sooner catch fire than the Steel Barons will voluntarily grant the 8-Hour Day. The whole history of the exploits of Gary and his henchmen dismisses even the faintest hope of the most hopeful. In their statement of June 6, 1923, the Federal Council of Churches, and the Central Conference of American Rabbis declared:

"The plea that a shortage of labor make impracticable the change from two to three shifts of workingmen, affords but a meagre defense. The shortage of labor was not the reason for the failure to abolish the long day two years ago when the public wanted expectantly for such a step on the part of the U. S. Steel Corporation. At that time there was appalling unemployment which could have been in large measure relieved by steel manufacturing districts by introducing the three-shift system in the steel industry."

For the sake of argument let us, for a moment, accept the statement of the American Iron and Steel Institute that the introduction of the 8-Hour Day would entail the employment of an additional 60,000 men. Here the Steel Corporation must answer this question: Why did it resist with assault and battery the demands of the thousands of steel workers for an 8-Hour Day during the Great Strike of 1919 when it could easily have had an additional working force of thrice that number? And why was Golden Rule Gary silent about the 8-Hour Day a little over a year ago when 6,000,000 workers were walking the streets out of work and out of hope?

However, when there was a terrific overflow in the labor market Gary did not stop at silence. In the period of 1920-1921 when the Steel Trust could, without any difficulty whatsoever, have introduced the 8-Hour Day, it discharged 67,000 men, and continued the ten, twelve, and fourteen hour shifts. In 1920 the average number employed by the U. S. Steel Corporation was 200,991. In 1921 the average was 133,663.

Indeed, all this bombast about a labor-shortage making the introduction of the 8-Hour Day impossible would really be just so much comics and buffoonery were this condition not so tragic for the workers. The situation is well summed up in the following statement of the Interchurch World Movement Report;

"For example, W. B. Dickson, Chairman and Vice-President of the Cambria Midvale and former director of the U. S. Steel Corporation, in an address in 1919 to a steel trade body, spoke of the spectacle Mr. Gary as Chairman of a Committee to relieve the unemployment (in 1916 in New York), when the large proportion of his men were working twelve hours a day, and are still doing so."

Degrading Conditions Drive Workers Away from the Steel Mills

Yet, why is the steel industry the first and the worst to feel the pinch of a so-called labor-shortage? The answer to this question is just this: The terribly long working hours and low pay drive the workers away. An examination of the prevailing conditions in the manufacture of steel gives overwhelming proof of this.

Testifying before the Senate Committee, in 1919, the Steel magnates, unwittingly gave the reasons why their industry faced a labor-shortage was, "because you can't get Americans to work the 12-Hour Day."

Then the wages. The starvation wages paid by the Steel Trust drives the workers away even further from the mills. In comparing steel wages with those prevailing for common labor in other industries, the New York Journal of Commerce said: "Even ditch diggers of the railways are receiving 41 cents per hour." The average wage paid today to common labor is 55 cents an hour—or 15 cents per hour more than that paid to the steel worker. And yet Gary and his crew who are used to millions of dollars in dividends are condemning the workers for refusing to run after a forty cents an hour job in the infernal steel mills.

According to the April, 1923, Employment Bulletin of the Illinois Department of Labor the average weekly wage in the iron and steel industry during April was $27.61. A magnificent sum for a family to live on! Not unduly anyone for the present terrific amazement at the menacing height to which the steel wage has climbed! This average wage includes the salaries paid Skilled and responsible men as well as leaders and common labor.

The Eight-Hour Day Plants Have Plenty of Workers

Again, not even Gary and his Committee, so highly gifted with inventive genius, can find a shred of evidence to disprove the fact that not a single steel plant working on a three-shift plan is experiencing the least bit of labor-shortage. We need but cite the experiences of the Republic Iron and Steel Co., the international Harvester Co., the Youngstown Sheet and Tube Co., and the Colorado Fuel and Iron Co.

From a letter sent by J. F. Welborn, President of the Colorado Fuel and Iron Co., to the Federal Council of Churches we learn that: "A factor of added interest is the fact that with almost capacity operations at our steel plants during the last few months and employing over 6000 men, we have experienced no shortage of labor. Our operating officials have frequently expressed the belief that this condition is due, in large part at least, to adoption of the eight-hour shift."

Also, in a statement issued by the American Association, for Labor Legislation on June 15, 1923, we find that:

"According to the report from Youngstown, the steel companies have been able to secure the additional men needed for the 3-shift plan."

It is a fact and an incontrovertible fact that it is only on the basis of 48 cents an hour and Twelve Hours a day that the Steel Trust is at all confronted with a labor shortage.

Finally, let us turn to the Report of the Federated American Engineering Societies on this question. Said the engineers in their Report entitled "The Twelve Hour Smit in Industry."

"The plants which have adopted the three-shift system and are paying wages a little lower than are paid at corresponding plants working twelve-hour shifts have sufficient labor, both skilled and unskilled."

Rip Veil off Gary's Committee

What is more, the findings of every expert survey give the lie to Gary's cry of a labor-shortage Thus said the Interchurch World Movement Report:

"But the decisive factor, setting aside all consideration of the moral questions involved in the Twelve Hour Day, and in suggestions of flooding the steel industry with Balkan immigration or Coolie labor, lies in this consideration which, according to engineers, disposes of the labor shortage arguments against the Eight-Hour Day; the steel requirements of the industry could be met by ushering all the first class machinery, scrapping the rest and distributing the work thruout the available labor supply and throut the year on a three shift Eight Hour basis.

"Engineers' findings are that the steel industry being run for the making of profit and not primarily for the making of steel as the country needs it, favors (a) spells of idleness during which the country and the steel workers pay for idle machinery, and later (b) spurts of long hours, high speed labor."

And in his letter to the Federal Council of Churches, Pres. J. F. Welborn showed that:

"The trend of production per man hour, with unimportant exceptions, has been upward since the adoption of the Eight-Hour Day; and in every department of our steel manufacturing operations, from the blast furnace to the wire mill, our production per man hour is now greater than it was when all of these activities were operating on the twelve hour shift."

It is plain that Gary's assertion that the Eight-Hour Shift would entail the employment of 60,000 additional workers won't hold water. The increased efficiency and production brought on by the Eight-Hour Work Day system cuts down considerably the estimated labor shortage of Gary's Committee. This is still more clearly established by the following expert opinion on the effects on production of the Eight and Twelve-Hour Shifts.

Speaking of the Twelve-Hour Shift, Lieutenant Charles Rumford Walker said in his diary:

"Another kind of inefficiency that flowed quite naturally from excessive hours was 'absenteism', and a high 'pit', who said he was going to get drunk in Pittsburgh, go to the movies and move to Johnstown the following Monday. He had been on the job three weeks. New faces appeared on the gangs constantly, and dropped out as quickly. I achieved my promotion from common labor in the pit to the floor of the furnace by substituting on a 24-hour shift, when absentees were apt to be numerous, and it as hard fully to man the furnaces. The company kept a large number of extra men on its pay roll because of the number of absentees, and the turn-over percentage ran high."

Now turning to an abstract of an address delivered on December 3, 1920, by Prof. Horace B. Drury, formerly of the Economic Department of the Ohio State University, before a joint meeting of the Taylor Society, the Metropolitan, and Management Sections of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers and the New York Section of the American Institute of Electrical Engineers we find that:

"By taking care, some manufacturers going on Eight Hours have been able to reduce the force of men 10 per cent; some more. Others have found that their rolling-mill output has gone up well toward 20 per cent or even more."

And in answer to Gary's latest lounge into excuses for continuing the Twelve-Hour Day, Dr. Mortimer E. Cooley, President of the American Federated Engineering Societies, said:

"In practically every major continuous industry, there are plants which have increased the quantity of production per man as much as 25 per cent. In a few exceptional cases the increase has been much larger. Evidence shows also an improvement in quality of production following the reduction in the length of shifts."

This Week's Summary

The cry of a "labor shortage" being responsible for the continuance of the Twelve-Hour Day is just another lie on the part of the steel trust in its campaign to thwart the growing demand for the 8-Hour Day.

In times of depression the steel barons oppose the Eight-Hour Day because there is a shortage of money. In times of prosperity, times of big profits, the Eight-Hour Day is opposed on the ground of a shortage of labor.

Thus the Steel Trust hits at the workers from all directions and oppresses them all the time.

Investigation shows that it is the Twelve-Hour Day which is responsible for the slightest shortage of labor ever experienced by the steel industry and disproves completely the contention of Gary that the labor shortage is the cause of the continuation of the Twelve-Hour Day.

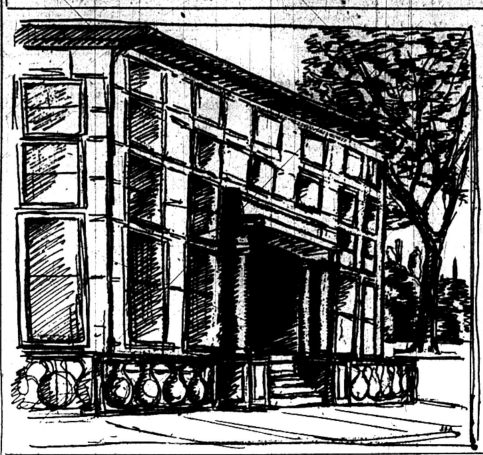
The whole history of the Steel Trust coupled with the findings of the engineers as to increased efficiency in production on the Eigth-Hour basis shows that the main reason for the Steel Trust's insistence on the perpetuation of the Two-Shift System is this: The steel barons want to keep the workers in abject slavery. They want to deny the workers every possible moment affording an opportunity for resting or thinking. They want to make impossible any condition which might, even in the most indirect and least way, make possible a revolt of the steel workers. To insure their keeping the workers completely enslaved, the steel masters have chosen the Twelve-Hour Working Day as the best means.

Another article next week!

Congratulations from Troy, N. Y.

I am enclosing $2 to help spread "THE WORKER" in its campaign against the 12-Hour Day. We are conducting an organization campaign of our own here. We have 15,000 shirt and collar workers and the Troy Local of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers is firmly established and is conducting this campaign. I feel confident that I am expressing the opinion of the organized shirt and collar workers of Troy, if I congratulate you on your noble fight against Judge Gary. I hope that these $2 will help you to send a few more copies of "THE WORKER" into the Gary stronghold. I wish you every success in your revolutionary work.—S. G., Troy, N. Y.

Gary's Fifth Ave., N. Y., Mansion and the Steel Workers' Shack



To the left is a sketch of one of Elbert H. Gary's many mansions. It is located at 856 Fifth Ave., New York City. He has others elsewhere. Note the trees. There are no trees, no grass around the steel workers' shack below. Only the smoke stacks of the steel mills can be seen in the background. The 12-Hour Day helps build beautiful homes for Mr. Gary. Evidently, the steel profiteer feels that the steel workers have so little time to spend at home, that they do not need a place of any consequence in which to live. What do the steel workers think about it? They are showing what they think thru the response to the anti-12-Hour Day Campaign being waged by "The Worker," that is a step toward ending the social system that builds mansions for the rich and hovels for the poor.

To Judge Elbert Gary

By ELLA G. WOLFE

You are sleek and elegant and strong,
And we have made you so;
Your strength you've used against us
For many years, too long.
Now you are righteous and detest the wrong.
Detest the rising disillusioned mass,
Detest our aims, our thoughts, our lives.
For our toil and weary years of hope
You give contempt and scorn and prison walls.
Our work for you is done!
New visions rise—new battle we shall make,
And all this weary wretched life shall fall,
A better, brighter day shall rise for all;
Turn—and see the writing on the wall!

Defense Council in England

LONDON, Eng.—A Labour Defense Council, "To assist trade unionists throughout the world when persecuted by capitalist governments for their working class activities," has been formed in England, modeled upon the Labor Defense Council of Chicago which operates nationally in the United States, according to a statement issued by W. T. Colyer, one of its secretaries and member of the Workers' Union of Great Britain. Mr. Colyer was deported from America in 1920 to England and has become known throughout Europe as the author of a book entitled, "The Menace of Americanism."

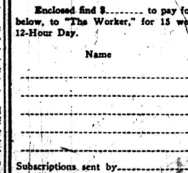
Equity Players Keep Theatre

The Equity Players will continue their occupancy of the 48th Street Theatre next season. Half a dozen offerings have been presented this season, with "Sweet Nell of Old Drury" now being given. Plans are being made on a more elaborate scale for the second season.

An attempt is being made to establish closer connections between the German and Russian theatres, a German representative having arrived in Petrograd to arrange for an exchange of actors between the two countries.

The Big Punch!

Our readers, we are sure, will all join us in the desire to put more punch into the campaign against the 12-Hour Day. "POWER!" is the thing that Judge Elbert H. Gary fears most, and we must, therefore, develop organization power among the exploited steel workers. But that isn't enough. Non steel workers are involved. This week we show that all workers are threatened by the 12-Hour Day in the steel mills. The steel trust is a great owner of railroads, it is an owner of iron and coal mines, it is behind the "open shop" campaign in the building trades. Every worker, therefore, must be enlisted in the fight on the steel octopus. This can be accomplished in part by getting tens of thousands of additional readers for "The Worker." We want to do all we can at this end. With this object in view we are making a Special Anti-Twelve Hour Day Campaign Subscription offer of "The Worker," of 15 WEEKS FOR 50 CENTS. We want you to do your share by getting the accompanying subscription blank full of the names of new readers. This is your job! This is your opportunity to get a big punch at Gary's 12-Hour Day. What is the strength of your fist? Let us see! NOW!



An Order for 1,000 Copies!

The Franco-Belgian Propaganda Club, of Lawrence, Mass., has come to the front with a check for $30.00 to pay for 1,000 copies of "THE WORKER" to be sent into some steel strike zone to help strengthen the forces of the steel workers against the 12-Hour Day.. We have written the comrades at Lawrence, Mass., as follows:

New York City, N. Y., June 18, 1923.

Henry Victor, Secretary,
L'Union Franco-Belge,
Lawrence, Mass.

Dear Comrade:—On behalf of the oppressed workers in the steel industry, I wish to congratulate the members of the L'Union Franco-Belge on their very substantial contribution to the fund to spread "THE WORKER," containing the exposures of Gary's 12-Hour Day among the exploited toilers of the steel mills. This is the kind of solidarity that will make it possible to unionize the steel industry. Other workers will be inspired by your illustrious example to similar deeds. Best wishes,

Yours for the Cause,
J. LOUIS ENGDAHL, Editor, "The Worker."

Nation-Wide Appeal to Workers For Aid in Fight Against Trust

The Brockton District (Mass.), Shoe Workers' Union, the organization that is waging a terrific fight here against a combination of the manufacturers at the head of the shoe trust and the Boot and Shoe Workers' Union, has issued a nation-wide appeal to all other shoe workers and also other working class organizations for aid in its fight.

After betraying the workers in the shoe industry here and adopting a non-strike policy the Boot and Shoe Workers' Union now openly takes the side of the Manufacturers' Association and furnishes so-called "union men" to scab upon the strikers in the new organization.

Communications should be sent to D. E. McCarthy, secretary, Brockton District Shoe Workers' Union at Eagle Hall, Brockton, Mass.

Purifying the Ranks
By WILLIAM SIMONS
(Special to "The Worker")

BROCKTON, Mass.—The fraternal organizations of the Brockton working class are showing their class alignment in the present strike of the shoe workers. Some of them include not only workers, but foremen and bosses. When the strike broke out, the issue came to a head.

Branch 715, Workmen's Circle, expelled two members, one a foreman aiding the employer, offering what he considered a "just reason," that he was a boss; and the other a worker who was scabbing.

Branch 725, of the Workmen's Circle, vomited out six, most of them bosses. One other, a manufacturer, resigned before the meeting, with the frank admission, "This is no place for me. You must picket the shops. I must look for scabs."

Similar action is expected from several other branches of the fraternal organizations. The class line-up is inevitable.

Educational Work in New York

To all New York Branches of the Workers Party:

There will be a meeting of all branch educational directors, Monday night, June 25, at 8 o'clock, at 208 E. 12th St. No directors should fail to attend this meeting.

Branches must see to it that their directors are present. If you haven't selected one as yet, choose one immediately and have him come to the meeting on the 25th.

There is great work ahead!

We must pull together for a Centralized Party School for Revolutionary Marxian Education.

Problems of Our Party

Why Shall We Enter into the Labor Party?

By JOHN PEPPER

Our Party has been occupied with the question of the Labor Party for quite some time.

The former Central Executive Committee of the Workers Party had a false attitude towards the idea of a Labor Party. It failed to send delegates to the Chicago Labor Party Conference in 1922. The present Central Executive Committee of the Workers Party has understood correctly the great significance of the problem, and sent delegates to the Cleveland Labor Party Conference of December 30, 1922. It will send delegates to the Labor Party Conference in New York, and will send delegates to the July 4th Labor Party Convention in Chicago. The December 24, 1922, Convention of the Workers Party has demonstrated the political ripeness of the Party, in declaring itself to be for principle and practice, for participation in a Labor Party.

The Central Executive Committee has done everything in order, on the one hand to propagate the idea of a Labor Party within the great masses, and on the other hand, to win over the membership of the Workers Party itself to the Labor Party.

And yet we still have comrades in the Party who are against participation in a Labor Party. Remarkably enough, we find greatly varying elements in our Party, opposed to such participation. Certain comrades at the extreme right and extreme left of our Party are against entering the Labor Party.

Of the left, we have a classical example in the miners' branches of the Italian Federation, which sent delegates to the Convention of the Italian Federation with rigid mandates to vote against participation in the Labor Party. These Italian miners are new-comers in our Party. They are honest revolutionary workers. They hate capitalism like Satan, and the yellow trade union leaders like Beelzebub. As they became members of the Workers Party, they broke ideologically, not only with the capitalists, but also with the treacherous trade union leaders. For them, the Communist Party means the uncompromising class struggle, the hatred for the deadly enemy—the bourgeoisie; it means the proletarian revolution. They have only a while ago freed themselves from the influence of the yellow trade union leaders, and they do not wish to be in their company again, inside of a Labor Party. Of course, these Italian-speaking coal miners are the most valuable asset for our Party, and we must have a great deal of patience in training them politically. But it is obvious that their naive views cannot decide the policy of our Party. At present, they are just as little aware of the role of a Communist Party, as of the conditions existing within American politics. We must make the great difference clear to them as well as to all those who think as these naive but valuable revolutionary elements. The entrance of the Workers Party into the Labor Party does not mean the establishing of control by the yellow trade union leaders. On the contrary, it opens the possibility for the Workers Party to take away from the reformist leaders those masses embraced in the Labor Party which are not as yet Communist.

Skepticism from the Right

With much less patience must we polemize against those comrades and half-comrades of the most extreme right, who are against participation in the Labor Party. The typical representative of this brand is Salutsky, and the "independent" organ, the American Labor Monthly. These people are convinced that the revolutionary movement is not progressing forward, but is in a violent retreat. They say, we must wait with the formation of a Labor Party, until Gompers, and the whole officialdom of the American Federation of Labor will place themselves at the head of the Labor Party movement. They see nothing of the mighty mass movement which the rank and file has for a Labor Party. They, as eunuchs of the class struggle, have no conception of the role of the militant elements of the labor movement. Salutsky, Boudin and the others have no faith in the Second-and-a-Half International only because they have altogether lost the capacity of having faith in anything, and because the Second-and-a-Half International was unfortunately a suicide. Salutsky has commented with skepticism on the whole United Front tactic of the Communist International, and at the same time he ridicules all those who believe at all in the possibility of an American revolution. Salutsky and the American Labor Monthly say they do not want to bind themselves to any Party, that they stand above all Parties, and they claim the right of "scientific free criticism," against all parties. Of course, they are nothing but typical petty bourgeois intellectuals, who believe that they stand above the class struggle because they play no role in the class struggle. (Besides, it is interesting to note in the same issue of the American Labor Monthly how pessimistic and skeptical over the Labor Party and the American revolution, Salutsky and Gompers are with one foot outside of the Workers Party, and with what a fresh optimism over the Labor Party and the American revolution, Scott Nearing writes—who already stands with one foot outside of the Socialist Party.)

Distinction Between a Political Party and a Labor Party

What is a Labor Party? Will the July 3 Convention in Chicago be able to organize a Labor Party at all? We must give clear answers to those questions.

The classical example of a Labor Party is the Labor Party of Great Britain. The British Labor Party is not a solid entity, but a bloc of various parties, trade unions, and other labor organizations. Today it has also individual members, but originally it was formed as a coalition of organizations. The individual membership is today still insignificant. Every Party or organization in it has a separate program, retains its independence, has its right of unrestricted propaganda, and only at elections, and in certain actions it is bound by a discipline of action. The British Labor Party comprises practically the entire British labor movement. It has indeed not admitted the Communists officially, but it has Communist members indirectly. The Labor Party is not a political party in the sense of the most powerful party of the Second International—the German Social Democratic Party, and still less in the sense of the Communist Parties of the Third International. A real political party means the uniting of individuals who have the same convictions and who wholly accept the program of the Party. The main characteristic of the Labor Party type is on the contrary a bloc of organizations and with its various component parts having their separate programs and freedom of propaganda.

The Workers Party can safely take part in the organization of the Labor Party, precisely because the individual members of the Workers Party do not thereby become members of the Labor Party. Only the Workers Party enters it as a solid organization. The individual members of the Workers Party will not stand under the discipline of the Labor Party, but the Workers Party as a whole will accept to a certain degree the discipline of the Labor Party for certain actions. The Workers Party will retain its independence, its program, its right to criticize the Labor Party for certain important immediate demands of the working class. The Workers Party will retain its freedom to work within the Labor Party, for Communist agitation and propaganda.

The July 3d Convention of the Farmer-Labor Party in Chicago will in great measure represent a similar tendency as the British Labor Party. The Executive Committee of the Farmer-Labor Party which will be formed there, be at least for whose formation the Workers Party will fight, will not have any individual members, but only organizations will belong to it, such as various political parties, international and national unions, state and city federations of labor, local trade unions, fraternal organizations.

The new Federated Farmer-Labor Party will in no way have discipline over members of the Workers Party, but the Workers Party as a whole will accept a certain discipline of action.

The Communist program of the Workers Party will remain untouched, and our Party retains its absolute freedom for Communist propaganda and agitation inside and outside of the Labor Party.

The Labor Party which is crystallizing in the July 3 Convention, will, in one respect, be altogether different from the British Labor Party. The British Labor Party is a unification of the entire English Labor movement. The July 3 Convention will unite only a militant minority of the American labor movement. The British Labor Party was founded by the official leaders of the trade union movement. The July 3 Convention will first and foremost be a Convention of the rank and file. It will not be composed officially of the great international unions, but mainly of state and city bodies and local unions.

Some people say that the July 3 Convention has not the historical right to form a Labor Party, and that our Party should not fight for the formation of a Labor Party at that Convention, because the historical development of the British Labor Party has followed along a wholly different path. Politics would be a very simple art indeed, if the history of one country would ape the history of another country. For a long time it did appear as if the history of the American Labor Party would be the same as that of the British Labor Party. But even the tremendous fights of the summer of 1922, and the Daugherty injunctions have not moved Gompers and the American Federation of Labor to follow the English example and to accept the idea of uniting Communism and a Labor Party. They have remained with their craft unionism and Non-Partisan policy. Even when the Cleveland Conference for Independent Political Action sabotaged the Labor Party, and decided for participation in the old-party primaries. The militant non-Communist elements broke, after Cleveland, with the group of "Progressive Political Action." The Workers Party at that time criticized the split, but it had to accept the fact. As the July 3 Convention was called, the Workers Party felt itself called upon to offer not only its participation, but its most energetic support. On July 3, there will be represented, not the four million organized workers of America, but only representatives of six to seven hundred thousand workers and poor farmers. If the Federated Farmer-Labor Party will be organized in Chicago, it will not be representative of the entire American labor movement, but of the militant left wing. But it can become a powerful weapon in the class struggle and can become the mightiest weapon of propaganda for winning over the millions of workers and farmers to the idea of an independent class party.

At the Second World Congress of the Communist International, Lenin polemized against certain left English Communists and against Serrati and Paul Levi who were against participation of the British Communists in the Labor Party. He stated in classical manner what it means for a Communist Party to participate in a more or less reformist Labor Party. He said: "It is the co-operation of the vanguard of the working class with the backward workers—the rear-guard." This argument is not only the classical argument for participation in a Labor Party but it is also the best argument for participation in the July 3 Conference. The Workers Party still has less than 20,000 members. It is still a small minority of the working class. It is too small a vanguard, and it is therefore its duty to participate in a Labor Party, whether it will be formed by four to five million American workers, or by only six to seven hundred thousand. For 20,000 Communists it still remains a difficult and worthwhile task to penetrate six to seven hundred thousand workers with Communist agitation and propaganda. These six to seven hundred thousand workers are not organized at all politically, and they vote for capitalist candidates. The Labor Party must fight at the July 3 Convention for the organization of a Labor Party of six to seven hundred thousand workers. It must and will not forget for a moment the greater historical task—the fight for a Labor Party of the whole of organized labor.

Put It in Your Dinner Pail

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL

"The Workers Monthly Library" is growing. A brilliant pamphlet called "Anatomy of Capitalism" by A. A. Heaps, is another feather to the cap of the Communist Party. It gives in a splendid way a working knowledge of the fundamentals necessary to an intelligent understanding of the tremendous problems of today.

The first chapter, "Labor," makes it clear to the industrial struggle what John Pepper's "The Labor Party Question" is in the political field. This is the literature the workers have been waiting for. Here is the material for the study circles, the material for the workers' schools, the material for the workers who will go to educate themselves for the carrying on and the winning of their daily battles with greed and exploitation.

The writings of Jay Fox are already very agreeably familiar to readers of the Labor Herald. They have shown him fully able to write on the question of "Amalgamation," giving it a fundamental yet popular treatment. There are at least ten million workers, men and women, in this country, who ought to carry a copy of this pamphlet next to the sandwiches in their dinner pails, and discuss its contents with their fellow workers during the noon hour. Every union meeting should see a good supply on sale.

No worker need be ignorant of the growing power of capitalism. He needs but to read Fox's opening chapter, which, as the soap boxers say, is "simple enough so that it can be understood even by a college professor." The incapacity of craft unions is revealed again, while it is shown that amalgamation points the way to progress. The movements toward amalgamation in the various industries are reviewed here, and the names, addresses and officials of the various "committees" published for the first time. The progress of the amalgamation movement is well shown by the formidable array of eleven "international committees." The privilege of taking a look at this list is well worth the price of the pamphlet, 15 cents. Here is revealed the secret as to why Gompers is losing so much sleep nowadays.

There is also a chapter on departmentalized industrial unionism, while the closing pages take up the place of the Trade Union Educational League in the labor movement. On second thought we would suggest that every worker cut out reading $1.00 worth of capitalist newspapers and invest this amount in 10 copies of this booklet. Send your order to the T. U. E. L., 106 N. La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.

DO YOU UNDERSTAND The Labor Party Movement

The development of the "FOR A LABOR PARTY" movement in the U. S. A. is growing by leaps and bounds. The entire progressive element in the labor unions is behind this movement of the workers seeking to establish a party of labor to help labor in its fight with the employing class.

Every worker should understand this epoch creating movement of organized militant labor. Every worker MUST understand this movement if he is to play an intelligent part in his union, the labor movement as a citizen and a worker.

"FOR A LABOR PARTY"

is a pamphlet of 68 pages which sums up the whole argument on the question. It deals with every phase of the problem. The entire history of political parties of labor in this country is dealt with. The Gompers policy of "non-partizan" politics is handled without mercy. In fact, the entire political life of the workers of America is analyzed, their present day condition revealed and the necessity of a political party of labor organized and controlled by the labor unions, is shown.

Order this pamphlet and read up on the Labor Party movement. Every progressive unionist should order a number and dispose of them to his fellow unionists.

Big 5th Year Opening for Unity House

By JOHN DALE

(Special to "The Worker.")

UNITY HOUSE, Forest Park, Pa.—We, from New York, left the Chicago Express of the Lackawanna Railroad at Stroudsberg. And when we boarded the Delaware Valley resort local and started up the river we left the last of the Pennsylvania Cossacks behind us. The fatal leg of the journey was made in giant, barking buses, up the precipitous, rocky roads that wind to the top of Bushkill Mountain, and to the wonderful Workers' Unity House, the beautiful Summer-Home of the Dress and Waist Makers' Unions of New York.

"Paradise," is what one girl worker in the waist shops of the great city calls it, and that went unanimously for the hundreds of union members and their guests who celebrated the opening of the Fifth Season of Unity House over the week end.

Here one is touched only in memory by the brutal 12-hour day tyranny in the steel mills of this state, the barbaric rule of the coal barons gets hardly a thought, altho Scranton and Wilkes-Barre, the center of the Anthracite coal fields is near by, while every one wants to forget about the dress and waist shops back in the nations' metropolis.

All the workers here on a vacation want to know is that here is a chance to play, to recuperate for the struggle that must again be taken up, all too soon, in the big city.

It was a happy throng that gathered in the commodious dance pavillion for the opening ceremonies of the fifth season. When Sergei Radamsky, the famous Russian tenor, sang "The Song of the Volga Boatmen," the cheers must have echoed for miles across lake and hill and valley, for these workers knew the boatmen of the Volga had been released by Soviet Rule from their enslaving toil.

Morris Sigman, president of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, who came to Unity House with the union's entire international executive board, echoed this sentiment when he declared, "The time will come when the workers will manage everything else in the world as well as we manage Unity House."

When Anna Kronhardt, chairman of the Unity House Committee, presided at the opening ceremonies, one felt the great part the girls and women members of "The International" had played in making this home possible, that it is they who have really dedicated this place as "A real source of joy and inspiration for future work."

"We must use all this for the furtherance of the cause of labor," said Julius Hochman, general manager of the Joint Board of the 30,000 members of the Dress and Waist Makers' Unions, the owners of Unity House. Hochman had told what this home really meant to the members of the union.

The Fifth Season promises to outdo all efforts that have gone before. Peter Rottenberg, who took charge last year after several seasons had shown deficits, is again on the job. There was no deficit last year. This year, with union members in all positions of importance, is expected to show gratifying results.

Charles Jacobson, Secretary of the Unity House Committee, handles all work from New York City. He aided greatly in the success of the opening that was the most auspicious ever held. In addition to the General Executive Board members, the Joint Board of the Cloak and Skirt Makers' Unions, was there, with large delegations from the various locals, Nos. 1, 9, 11, 17, 23, 35 and 38. All the executive boards of the Dress and Waist Makers' Unions Nos. 10, 12, 25, 60, 66 and 89 were in attendance. There were also representatives of the United Hebrew Trades, the Woman's Trade Union League and the various labor publications. Until last year only members of "The International" were admitted to Unity House. Now all workers are welcome. Until last year no children were admitted. Plans are now on foot for taking care of an increasing number of children.

Mildred Fox is the Social Entertainment and Recreational Director. She will see to it that the adults as well as the children have an enjoyable time every minute they spend at Unity House. There will be a regular series of concerts and lectures for all the vacationists. Unity House is more of an inspiration than ever for all workers to follow in the foot steps of the dress and waist makers.

Free Speech Drive Getting Big Support

Free speech is a right so sacred, and so fundamental that legions leap instantly to its defense when it is threatened by unscrupulous forces or curtailed by a governing power.

It is only natural, therefore, that the Free Speech Drive, from July 1 to 4, conducted jointly by the National Defense Committee and the Labor Defense Council, for the defense of Ruthenberg, Ohlow and others prosecuted under the Criminal Syndicalist Laws of Michigan and New York, should have fired the enthusiasm of thousands of workers. That right is one of the few constitutional assets still left them, and certainly they should protect it with their last measure of strength.

What is equally gratifying and perhaps surprising, is the warm-hearted support of liberal thinkers, unaffiliated with the cause of labor, but eager to go on record as vigorously opposed to further inroads on the right of free speech.

Dr. Henry Neumann, the guiding spirit of the Brooklyn Society for Ethical Culture, referring to the Free Speech Drive, stated:

"The movement in defense of free speech has my hearty sympathy. There are few greater evils menacing American life today than our nation-wide intolerance of minority opinion. America seems to have lost for the time being the old faith that the only guarantee of justice is the spirit of fair play toward opponents."

Paxton Hibben, of the Near East Relief and prominent in public affairs, said:

"I am glad indeed to indorse the Free Speech Week movement of the Labor Defense Council. It is high time that such individuals as Col. William J. Burns and such organizations as the National Civic Federation and the self-styled American Defense Society are learning that the American Revolution was not fought solely to supplant one set of political and economic exploiters of the masses by another, but to establish certain principles of human liberty.

"It is only through complete freedom of speech that this sound view of our association together in an organized government can be regained."

Oswald Garrison Villard, editor of The Nation, and one of the ablest publicists and defenders of liberal ideas in the country expressed himself as follows:

"We cannot too heartily endorse any effort to free the political prisoners of opinion and defend others whose liberty is in danger. So long as a single person is in jail or on trial for his opinions in this country and rest of us are not really free."

This unanimous realization by leaders in liberal thought, not directly involved in the defense of the workers is deeply gratifying and certainly should be equalled by support from workers in ranks and for whose rights this struggle is being waged.

Hundreds have volunteered to help. There is still a great need for more workers. All who can and are willing to put their shoulder to the wheel are asked to forthwith leave their names and addresses with the Labor Defense Council, 80 E. 11th St., Room 434, from which central office they will be assigned to local posts.

Proletarian Party Creates Straw Man with Which to Fight Workers' Party

By H. M. WICKS

Becoming ambitious the Proletarian Party recently launched a weekly publication and christened it with a half-page attack on the Workers Party, wherein we are accused of all sorts of horrible and weird things.

The gist of the Proletarian Party article is that we are not sincere in our advocacy of amalgamation of the craft unions into industrial unions because we have language federations in the Party.

"While preaching lustily against the craft form of organization on the industrial field they are practicing that very same policy on the political." Thus are we "pilloried."

Let us see precisely how seriously the above charge really affects us. Craft unions are small autonomous organizations of workers, each having its own rules, each drawing up its own separate agreement with the employers, and mutually destructive of one another in actual conflict. Surely the Proletarian editor has reached zero in argument when he tries to make his readers believe that the Workers Party federations bear any semblance to craft unions. Instead of autonomous units, the federations are all under the centralized power of the Central Executive Committee of the Party and in no sense do they enjoy any autonomy. Especially unhappy was the selection of the recent controversy in the Jewish Federation as an illustration of the federations defying the Party. The editor of the Proletarian Party organ admits that "suddenly the controversy stopped."

Precisely! It "suddenly stopped" for the simple reason that the Central Executive Committee asserted its authority. No question of disobedience to the authority of the Party can be tolerated. In case a definite campaign is decided upon by the national organization it becomes mandatory upon all the units to carry out the work connected with such campaign. As a matter of fact when a decision is reached, it is not even a debatable question. Every member, under the proletarian discipline of the Party is bound to carry out the Party decisions. If there is any criticism forthcoming there is always a proper time and place for the most severe criticism, but not during the heat of a campaign.

Does the Proletarian Party say as much? If the writer of the attack will answer this question truthfully he will have to reply in the negative. In fact matter, in order to keep them apart from American life as a whole. Generation after generation live in given places in large industrial centers and never learn any language other than that of the native country of their forefathers. To reach these workers, special federations exist today and, altho autonomous under the old Socialist Party, are now integral and disciplined parts of the Workers Party.

But, in spite of the fact that conditions described by Engels no longer exist in the industrial life of this country, we heed his admonition to strive to be American. Every effort is now exerted toward being "out and out American." We strive to teach English to our foreign-born comrades. Thousands of them are studying to-day in night schools thruout the width and breadth of the land, and as fast as they become proficient in the English language they become members of English branches, with the exception of those who are leaders in the federations and who work as intermediaries between the Executive and the Federation Bureaus.

Speaking the English language is not all, however. It is necessary to also be able to take a realistic view of the actualities of the class struggle in America and politically educate the workers upon the basis of that struggle. There are also many English-speaking workers who do not even understand the rudiments of intelligent class action, while some of those comrades who cannot speak English are capable of masterly analysis of the political situation in America.

While criticizing language federations, why did not Comrade Kerachter also denounce the rudiments of the Young Workers' League to the Workers Party? This group is far more autonomous than the federations, yet it is disciplined to the extent that it must actively engage in our campaigns. Incidentally it is also composed of English-speaking elements, doing work of a character that far transcends the work thus far accomplished by the Proletarian Party. We suspect the relation of the Young Workers to the Party was deliberately evaded, because to criticise this as analogous to "craft unionism" would force the conclusion that the Communist International itself is also guilty of an organizational error by encouraging the Young Communist International.

Some sort of language grouping will remain a necessity in this country just as long as immigrants are imported to these shores to work in American industries.

Being Marxists, we worship no fixed formulas, and at any time we are able to discover a more efficient method than the Federation system of dealing with the problem of immigration, we shall gladly embrace it.

While discussing the problems of foreign language groups, we are forced to the observation that the record of the average Federation in the Workers Party will show a greater degree of participation in the actual every day struggles of the American proletariat than the pure English-speaking membership of the Proletarian Party. For instance, where is the Proletarian Party in the campaign for a Labor Party, one of the most pressing problems of the working class to-day? Where does the Proletarian Party stand in the agitation for amalgamation that is inspiring hope in the hearts of the American trade unionists to-day? What has it done toward protection of foreign-born workers? What did this Party do in the coal mine strike? In the rail strike? In the textile strike? Its achievement in these struggles is an absolute zero.

In fact it is not the Workers Party that prevents unity of labors' forces on either the political or industrial field, but the leaders of the Proletarian Party who, because of their dislike for certain individuals, refuse to enter the recognized party of Communism in this country and assist in the pressing work that is before us. It is by no means gratifying to us, as Communists, to see the leaders of the Proletarian Party stubbornly refuse to liquidate the last remnant of opposition to a unified party in this country, embracing all Communist elements.

Room for Criticism Inside

It is quite true that there is ample room for criticism of the Workers Party to-day and we, least of all, deny it. Where is there a Party that is above criticism? But the place to criticise the Workers Party effectively is from the inside. While we are a disciplined Party and while we cannot tolerate sabotage of any of our campaigns, still there is ample room for criticism regarding the structure and tactics of the Party.

As Communists we are perfectly frank with ourselves. We have criticised certain incongruities arising out of the preponderance of the federation membership in our Party, and only recently Comrade John Pepper (in the May 26 issue of The Worker) criticized the Party much better than Comrade Kerachter did in his attack upon the federation system. Comrade Pepper correctly pointed out that a Communist Party without these elements would be no real Communist Party. With these elements it is a "true image of the composition of the proletariat in American big industry."

The Growing Class Spirit

By BEN ABBOTT

Militants often talk about reaching the masses. And as they talk I am afraid they too often think merely of the worker on the job. They do not include the women and children at home, making up as they do, by far the greater part of the working class. Yet it is not until we can get the workers to think of the working class as a whole that we can say we are reaching the masses.

One way of developing this whole-family support of labor's struggle is thru the sort of educational work that is carried on by the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America. I saw a living example of this fact when I went to speak at one of the Friday Night Educational Meetings of the Rochester, N. Y., Amalgamated Clothing Workers.

"The Amalgamated" at Rochester has a home of its own, something that the members of the same union haven't got in Chicago, altho they do have a bank; something they haven't got in New York (Manhattan), altho they have a second bank. The Educational Meetings of the Rochester "Amalgamated" are not mass meetings. They are Community Centers.

Paul Blanshard, Educational Director, led me into the big auditorium, seating 1,500. Every chair was occupied and standing room was at a premium. There were not many people only. There were the older workers, the fathers and the mothers, too.

There was a feeling of something unusual here. The atmosphere felt differently. And I didn't feel just right until Director Blanshard, who is an enthusiastic booster for the Trade Union Educational League, led me into another auditorium, where the noise almost knocked one over upon entering. It was the kids, the children, the boys and the girls of all ages, of the fathers and mothers in the main auditorium. They were having a program all their own, and it was a bubbling-over-with-fun program, just what the kids want, what makes them ask for more. This goes on while the program opens up in the main hall with music by an excellent band made up exclusively of "Amalgamated" members. Then more music—the concert—then the educational address, and then the kids all come in for the finale, a movie, in this case a Harold Lloyd comedy. I felt this was really reaching the masses, this was interesting them, especially "the union," drawing even the children into the organization.

"The Amalgamated" can easily do this, and with it great numbers. But smaller unions can do the same thing thru co-operation. And there the militant comes in. He must bring about co-operation as part of his work to develop a mass army. The "Open Forum" isn't enough, altho it carries a good educational work. It should be a step, if a step is needed to the Workers' Community Center. I am reminded especially of the "Open Forum" of Detroit labor. Excellent in many respects, and supported by the labor unions, it, nevertheless, doesn't rise much above the average mass meeting.

Thru developing the proper co-operative spirit between unions, militants can, and should, build up a number of these community centers in different sections of the larger cities, with at least one in the smaller cities. When thousands of such "centers" of the working-class mass dot the nation, then we can say that we are on the road to reaching the masses, because they will be a result of the development of mass organizations.

Don't think that because the warmer weather is here, that this effort can be put off until the fall. I am reminded of the time I spoke for the workers of that center of militancy, Rockford, Ill. It was during the heat of summer, on a Sunday afternoon, out under the trees along the banks of the Rock River. The organized workers had bought a little strip of land, improved it, put up a dancing pavilion, and there was considerable opportunity for pleasure in addition to listening to the day's address. The whole family came with lunch baskets every Sunday for a day's outing, for labor's own outing. I do not doubt that similar efforts have realized good results elsewhere. The militants of the Trade Union Educational League who are not pushing a similar venture, as part of their regular activities, are not fulfilling their entire duty. This is so because the community center and the labor outing, as a regular institution, are strong weapons in breaking down craft lines and bringing the unorganized into the unions. I came back to the office to write this after speaking at an organization meeting of the Journeymen Tailors' Union. These tailors, there are thousands of them in New York City, get their work from the swell firms on Fifth Avenue, take it home and toil long hours in their "bedroom shops." They are completely isolated, one from the other. "Amalgamation" is a strange-sounding word to them. They are not even in the union. The Community Center will help draw them out of their holes.

Other workers, in every trade and industry, are similarly isolated. If you can't get them with a leaflet inviting them to an organization meeting, lure them to a Community Center with the prospects of seeing a movie. If a worker can see no farther than his own little craft union, get him out to a big labor picnic, where workers in all trades are to be found.

Thus for many the desire for mass action will take root and grow as in a fertile field. Thus added impetus will be given the welding of all workers into the one irresistible giant—LABOR.

It Is Gompers' Next Move

The Seattle Central Labor Council stood straight in its reply to the edict of Sam Gompers demanding that it kneel in subservicney to his czardom within the American Federation of Labor. No organization of labor on this continent, that boasts a thinking membership, can but applaud its stand.

In fact, we hope that every local union, every central labor body, every state federation in the land, will adopt resolutions commending the stand of Seattle's organized workers, and forward them immediately to the Puget Sound metropolis. This at least is due the workers of the Pacific Coast city in their struggle against the Gompers' reaction, that is a threat to the welfare of all American labor, organized and unorganized.

"I do not sleep in the same bed with Sam Gompers, but I am with him," said Harding's anti-labor bloodhound, "Bill" Burns, head of the U. S. secret service, with especial reference to Gompers' attack on the Seattle workers. Burns speaks the language that the workers can understand, and we have not seen a single labor paper, of any color, or any labor organization, of any complexion, that has applauded Burns' endorsement of Gompers, or upheld Gompers' attack on the Seattle council.

Organized labor in Seattle declares there is room for differences of opinion within the A. F. of L., it takes a stand against dual unions, it declares it has nothing to repudiate in demanding recognition for the Russian Soviet Republic, in that this is not an endorsement of Communist principles, it claims that Hulet Wells was sent to the congress of the Red Trade Union International merely as an observer, while it ridicules Gompers' efforts to dictate political policies, exposing the hypocrisy and failure of his "reward and punish" tactics in the past.

It is Gompers' next move. Any further effort to proceed against the progressives in the labor movement will, we believe, only solidify and strengthen the opposition to standpatism in organized labor's ranks. Yet, if Gompers retreats it will only discredit his tyranny still more, not only with the workers already disgusted with his reign, but with the bosses and "open shoppers" of the National Civic Federation and the American Legion. It was a bad day for Gompers when he opened his war on the Seattle Central Labor Council.

Fewer Words and More Deeds

It was an interesting coincidence that the International Marine Workers' Amalgamation Committee should issue its program for the amalgamation of the many labor unions in the American transport industry, at the same time that a "United Front" of the transport workers in Europe was being achieved in Berlin.

We are told that the main tendency at the Berlin gathering was "FEWER WORDS AND MORE DEEDS," a slogan that might well be adopted not only by the newly organized "left bloc" in the marine industry, but by the militant element in all the labor unions.

European workers are fully awake to the aggressive of the imperialists in London, Paris and Rome, as well as Berlin and the smaller capitals of western Europe. The Berlin conference met during the hours that Curzon was threatening new war on Soviet Russia, when Fascism, triumphant in Italy, was raising its viper's head in other lands, when French militarism was tightening its grip on the workers in the Ruhr. Definite action was needed and it was realized.

America's workers do not feel these dangers as keenly as oppressed labor in Europe. But the glasses even in this country must be made to know that the present period of greater employment merely precedes a new depression, that every possible power must be built now in the face of the coming crisis.

It is announced that President Chlopek, of the International Longshoremen's Union, is going to Europe soon to attend the gathering of the British Trade Union Congress, and that he will also participate in the "meeting of the International Transport Workers' Union. All labor in the American marine industry should bombard Chlopek with the demand that in all his actions on the other side of the Atlantic his guiding words should be, "Fewer Words and More Deeds." The seamen, longshoremen and railroad workers of the United States must become a definite and effective part of the "United Front" of transport workers established at Berlin under the inspiration and pressing demands of the Red International of Labor Unions, the vanguard of the world's oppressed.

Do you agree with us? Then join the Workers Party!

The Rich Railroads

Stockholders on the New York Central Railroad are going to enjoy seven per cent instead of five per cent dividends this year in spite of the fact that Charles Uselis has been acquitted of complicity in the Gary, Ind., wreck on the Michigan Central Railroad, Aug. 20, 1922, during the shopmen's strike.

The acquittal of Uselis is a defeat for the Michigan Central, owned 95 per cent by the New York Central. But the frame-up of Uselis and other rail workers helped break the shopmen's strike last year, with the result that wages are being kept down as dividends go up.

Uselis, John Petrovsky and Joe Popovich, all strikers, were framed-up by the Michigan Central's secret service and put thru a third degree, with its attendant bloody brutalities. It was then heralded in the kept press that they had "confessed." Uselis was put on trial twice, getting a disagreement first, then an acquittal, showing that the juries did not believe the stories of the railroad's spies and provocateurs. But the propaganda helped break the strike and the holders of railroad stock will have more money for their European tours this summer, or more funds to make reinvestments.

Leland Olds, industrial writer for the Federated Press, announces that other strike-breaking railroads have been even more fortunate in coining new riches for their owners. He charges that railroad profits during April, on a fair valuation of properties, were at an annual rate exceeding 10 per cent. For the first four months of the year, he shows, the railroads profiteered over a quarter million dollars, $266,246,000, as compared with $210,842,000 last year.

Just now the railroad barons are trying to hide their huge profits and prevent a reduction in freight rates by spending a maximum on maintenance. And the workers on the railroads do a little maintenance work of their own by developing the amalgamation campaign that will give them the power to say that wages come first, and dividends last, if at all. The 1922 strike will be fought again. The next time, however, it must be won thru the members of 16 railroad unions amalgamated fighting as a unit, and not crushed in detail as the workers organized in 16 separate unions fighting each other. The railroad barons are rich because the workers allow themselves to be kept poor.

Harding Goes to Alaska

Since he has made these United States safe for golf seven days in the week and for Palm Beach vacations for overworked politicians during the winter, President Warren Gamaliel Harding is starting for Alaska to explore its possibilities as a summer resort for tired statesmen. He will make his explorations with the aid of a dozen secret service sleuths, of the William J. Burns variety, 20 newspaper men and a half dozen press photographers.

Harding will set the U. S. A. in order by making several speeches before departing in a Government Transport from Tacoma, Wash. He is going to talk on the world court, the troubles of the farmers and other problems, but it is announced that his greatest effort will be on behalf of the Railroad Labor Board and the Esch-Cummins Law.

Organized labor is out to repeal the union smashing transportation statute and to crush "The Board," the pet of the railroad barons, that has been used to beat down the workers' wage scale, at a time when the railroads are coining immense profits.

The prospectus of Harding's transcontinental tour should fulfill all the high ambitions of Attorney General Daugherty to run the president for re-election in 1924, on the open shop issue. It is not expected that Harding will try to tickle the popular palate with a single well chosen liberal, not to mention radical phrase. His attitude toward everything labor and working farmer will be one of splendid, frigid isolation, like Alaska's snow and ice in January.

We predict therefore that Harding's speeches will provide excellent arguments to the delegates to the Labor Party Conference at Chicago, in July. This gathering will have an excellent basis for appealing to all workers in the cities and on the land to unite in a powerful political expression of their own that will be able to wage successful campaign against the forces of reaction speaking thru the democratic and republican parties. If the 1924 presidential campaign is going to be a game of freeze out on the open shop issue, let Harding and his Wall Street friends be the ones to get frozen. Unity of farm and industrial labor will do the job.

It Performs Prodigious Tasks

When workers in this country launched "The Friends of Soviet Russia," they no doubt had great aspirations for this relief organization. But the proportions of these hopes have certainly been far outstripped by the fears aroused among the enemies of "The F. S. R."

It was Abraham Cahan of the Jewish Daily (Socialist) Forward who charged that "The F. S. R." had subsidized the American Communist movement, especially its press and propaganda. Sam Gompers claimed the same financial support for the militants in the trade union movement, ably seconded by the Chambers of Commerce, the National Civic Federation and The New York Times.

Now "The F. S. R." is charged with another and more prodigious task, if we are to believe a headline in The Times, June 14, to this effect: "Says American Funds Fed Bolshevist Army."

This new feat is credited to "The F. S. R." by Charles Smith, British spy, in an after-lunch talk to the Chicago Association of Commerce. We would conclude that American businessmen hire these British spies on purpose to get a little kick with their luncheons, during these Volstead days.

But we are afraid that "The F. S. R." will be compelled to profess innocence of these charges, however great a compliment it would be to be able to plead guilty. In the single word of Charles Recht, legal representative of Soviet Russia in this country, the spy's charges are, "Bunk." In the meantime "The F. S. R." will go ahead with its plans to send 20 tractors to help till the fields of the Worker Republic. The Soviet Government will no doubt furnish any guarantee required that the Red Soldiers won't eat them.

Newbold, Communist Member of British Parliament, Tells Why He Was Suspended

EDITOR'S NOTE—In this statement, J. T. Walton-Newbold, Communist member of the British Parliament, tells why he was suspended from the House of Commons. This is the first detailed statement on this matter that has been published in this country. It is as follows:

By J. T. WALTON-NEWBOLD

A considerable amount of quite natural misunderstanding exists as to what exactly it was that happened when a highly excited House voted that I "be suspended from the Service of this House." Not only so, but the reason for the scene and the suspension are by no means clearly comprehended.

First, let me make it plain that I was not ejected and I was not expelled. Expulsion is within the power of the House of Commons to apply to one of its members who nothing it can do can render him incapable of being re-elected. Ejection means forcible removal by the police at the behest of the Sergeant-at-Arms acting on the instruction of the speaker. I was suspended, i. e., declared incapable of sitting in the House or, for that matter, entering the precincts for the period of the Session or until the ban was removed by the House at the instance, not of the Prime Minister, acting as such, but as that of the Leader of the House. The difference does not seem to matter a damn," but underlying it is a very important matter of principle as affecting the House in defending itself against the Service of this House." Not only so, but so hoary with age and precedent that, had the "Die Hards" sought to be vindictive, I could and should have raised an issue that has been dormant since last time the King and the Commons had a first-class row. Then things would have developed into a very big scandal.

Now to the origin of the whole incident. Both Saklatvala and myself had noticed our desire to speak and both our names were down on the list. Neither of us was called. Very few members not leading for their Party were called and none of the Scots members of the Labor Party. The Speaker has, however, all along recognized me as a Party and all my Parliamentary relations are official character are with him and him only except when the House is in Committee when, of course, they are with the chairman.

All night, accusations and insinuations were directed at the Communist Party, the Communist International and myself personally. Everyone noted that I would be given a chance to speak, and from 8.45 to 10 p.m. I rose continuously but never "caught the Chairman's eye."

The Deputy Chairman was not happy all night. He had made several tactless moves and Pringle was waiting to pounce. Thus, when he gave extra time to the President of the Board of Trade, a very impertinent young person, and that individual began slinging about baseless charges of propaganda by the Soviet Government, well knowing that no one could reply to him and refused to let either Shinwell or myself query him, the atmosphere got warmer and warmer.

The Leader of the Labor Party had decided not to press his amendment to a vote, allowing himself to be appeased by a very plausible and conciliatory speech by Curzon's understudy, McNeill.

The back benchers of the Labor Party were discontented. The back benchers of the Tory Party, eager also for a vote that would enable them to brand the Labor Party as "in the pay of Moscow," were also discontented. They were there in full strength, filled with dinner, wine and whiskey.

The stage was set, the atmosphere electric, and when I accused the President of the Board of Trade of "telling falsehoods" and met the Deputy Speaker, when he rose to call on me to withdraw the offensive and utterly unparliamentary truth, with the sneer of "like the bourgeois you are," the storm burst.

He made one false move, ordering me to leave the House without giving me a chance to withdraw the sneer.

The Scottish Labor men sprang to my aid—Neil, McLean, Maxton, Shinwell, Buchanan and others. They bombarded the Deputy Chairman with "points of order." When he called the Sergeant-at-Arms, an old fellow in court dress and wearing a silver-hilted sword, "to remove the Hon. member for Motherwell," the Scots members rallied to the right and left to stop an eviction, ready to meet force with force. Lansbury settled into his place on my right and Maxton on my left. The leader of the Scottish group signalled with one eye to me continuously, Saklatvala got immediately behind me.

The Scottish Labor expert on procedure vied with the bourgeois Labor expert, Lees Smith, and both with the Wee Frees Agnews, Pringle and Wedgewood Benn, in defending "the fourth party."

Buchanan, Jack Jones and other trade union stalwarts invited the tories derisively: "Come you and put him out."

The Speaker tried to give me a chance to speak. I rose—well knowing the Tories would not let me say a word—to be greeted with a roar like that of the lions at the zoo waiting for dinner. Finally after even Macdonald had twice risen with "points of order," the vote was taken, Lansbury and Buchanan acting as "tellers for the noes," and Lee Smith, O'Grady and Robertson "whipping" them in.

The figures were announced just on eleven o'clock.

I was to leave the House. I se ed to have lost. In reality I had

I had stopped the President of Board of Trade in a vicious and dictive speech, and he never ha chance to get going again.

I had, thanks to the Scottish a held up the House for three-quar of an hour until the hour of adjo ment.

I had aroused a temper that the Government in power can carry their vote and caused the Dep Chairman to be hissed and hoote

I had exposed "the gentlemen England" as anything but "spo men" and revealed their Fascist m tality.

I had rallied the Scottish and of Labor militants and malcontents fight with a disregard of parliam ary etiquette that was revealing the possibilities of further, repea and ultimately established unity tween them and ourselves . . . in battle against Fascism and Reac

The Richest Church

We indulge frequently in the solitaire pastime of comparing newspaper headlines. In the New York Times, June 18, we find the following: First page, "Communists Must Strive to Spread Atheism, Chief of Third International Declares"; page 15, "Trinity's Income in 1922 $1,249,870."

We take it that the Communist task of exposing the hypocrisy of organized religion will not be a difficult one with a picture like that of Trinity Church, New York, to present to the workers.

"Trinity" gets $1,138,720.70 of its vast income from real estate holdings, much of it from the worst types of tenements in the city's slums. This church pays out $78,758.34 of this on its regular staff of opium distributors, chief among whom has been Bishop William T. Manning, who is fighting the Rev. Dr. Percy Stickney Grant and other progressives in the church, who will not subscribe to the orthodox lies.

"Trinity" pays out of its million dollar income the mere pittance of $2,077 for "special charities within the parish," which is little more than its telephone bill of $1,342.29 and less than the amount of $2,459 spent on "special church services."

The Communists are not compelled to "strive to spread atheism." The churches themselves are the best agents for doing that.

In the Pittsburgh District

Two events have taken place in the Pittsburgh district during the past few days. The murderers of Fannie Sellins, organizer of the steel workers, have been freed. Thomas Myers, strike-breaking treasurer of the International Progressive Miners' Committee, has been thrown into jail under the Pennsylvania anti-sedition law. The hired assassins of the steel trust are exalted. The defenders of the rights of the workers, when not slain, the fate meted out to Fannie Sellins, are thrown into prison as in the case of Myerscough. And the slayers of Fannie Sellins were deputy sheriffs, paid employes of the state of Pennsylvania. These things happen under the "liberal regime" of the weakling, Governor Pinchot, who sits in power at Harrisburgh, and raises funds for the pursuit of bootleggers. Workers! Beware of the liberals and all their tribe.

Daugherty's Son Escapes

Major Draper M. Daugherty, son of Attorney General Daugherty, has escaped from the Stamford Hall Sanitarium in Connecticut, where he had been sent to take the booze cure. We are not told how many Burns' sleuths are in pursuit. No doubt young Daugherty has re-established connections with his bootleggers and is no doubt enjoying himself according to the standards set for all parasites under capitalism.

The "S. P.-Man" of To-Day

BY MOISSAYE J. OLGIN

Out of the chaos of the last few years, the "Socialist Party-M emerges as a definite type. It is well worth while casting a glance at main characteristics.

He is middle-aged. If not always in years, invariably in his out on life. Life is not a magnificent festival of clashing forces for a sordid affair to drag along in complacent acquiescence. Nothing can ever happen to set human blood a-boiling, unless it be the danger of losing what has been acquired.

The "S. P.-Man" has something to lose. Ordinarily it is a fair station in life, an office in a public institution, a job in a workers' organization, a house, a bank-roll, a car. The "S. P.-Man" is comfortable and secure. Quite often he is in a position to make others comfortable and secure. Loyalty is the price. Loyalty to the dispensers of favors, loyalty to one's own respectable place under the sun.

The "S. P.-Man" projects the shadow of his own placidity on the working class. Why, the American worker is hopelessly backward. He is a hundred years behind his European brothers. No moderate program is too moderate for him. The mildest Socialist idea is beyond his comprehension." This to prove to himself that he, the "S. P.-Man," is still the salt of the earth. The "S. P.-Man" has a desperate craving for the consciousness of being the advance guard in social thought. The Communists' aggressive extremism asserting itself with reckless ease at the forefront of the labor movement, gives him pangs of jealousy, stings his pride. The farther he recedes to the rear, the more devoutly does he profess the doctrine of general proletarian reactionism that cannot be cured within reasonable time.

The "S. P.-Man" is full of sincere deference for power and wealth. It is impossible for him to think a bricklayer as good as a banker. The owner of a plant is after all a better gentleman, in his estimation, than a mason. He may not say it with so many words (words are created to shield his real self), but around the conference table, at drawing up agreements, at making strike settlements, he is irresistibly attracted to the well dressed and well mannered man. "It is capitalism that is wrong" he says. The individual capitalist is surely more of a personality than the industrial order.

The "S. P.-Man," accordingly, draws a sharp line between desiderata and reality of every day. "We all desire Socialism," no doubt about that. But we do not live in a Socialist world. We cannot make a Socialist world. Hence we must make the best of the world we live in. And being powerless ourselves, we must be bound in grateful admiration to those who try to push the world an inch ahead. We must acknowledge that Senator Borah is a great man. We must be happy to receive Senator Borah's smiles. We must hitch our wagon to the stars of the capitalist world because they are the makers and improvers of life.

The "S. P.-Man" is a friend of comfort and therefore an enemy of revolution. Revolution destroys the comforts and amiabilities of life. It is a horror to think of what the Russians did to their land. They drove tender-hearted and slender-limbed noblemen out of their cherry orchards and made them wound their lily-fingers digging ditches or carrying stones. They defiled marble mansions with the filth and stench of robust, uncouth and unletted peasants. How horrid! And hunger! They were starving for years, those stubborn revolutionary fanatics, and they made others starve all for the chimera of a future brotherhood of men. How absurd!

The "S. P.-Man" is convinced his beautiful land will forever be spared revolutionary dismay. At least he is firmly determined to stave off the horrors of catastrophe by means of favors, loyalty to one's own respectable place under the sun.

The "S. P.-Man" projects the shadow of his own placidity on the working class. "Why, the American worker is hopelessly backward. He is a hundred years behind his European brothers. No moderate program is too moderate for him. The mildest Socialist idea is beyond his comprehension." This to prove to himself that he, the "S. P.-Man," is still the salt of the earth. The "S. They Call These Places "Public Parks"

Hundreds of workers, spending Sundays in Central Park, New York, are arrested and fined in police court for sitting on the grass, "loitering the walks," which means dropping a peanut shell where it might obstruct the view of a passing automobilist, or for committing some other capital crime. In the above sketch Art Young shows how our "best people," in the limousine class, would have the parks appear, barren wastes so far as

And when we boarded the Delaware Valley resort local and started up the river we left the last of the Pennsylvania Cossacks behind us. Big Hopes for Labor Party

Progressives at Anthracite Meet Strong

By ALFRED WAGENKNECHT

(Special to "The Worker")

SCRANTON, Pa.—A speech by Bishop Michael J. Hoban, head of the Roman Catholic Diocese of Scranton, and the reply of Rinaldo Cappellini, Progressive, recently elected President of District No. 1, filled the first day of the Anthracite Tri-District Convention here with tense interest, showing that there is a powerful progressive sentiment in the gathering.

"I am a radical Catholic," said Bishop Hoban. "The church is socialistic. But the world cannot be changed in 24 hours. Look out for those advocating un-American, unchristian doctrines. There is but Socialism and good Socialism. I went on record against the bad sort coming from New York and Chicago. The radicalism, nearly [illegible] days, as when men to make the mines safe and to get the shorter workday. There is a lot of talk these days about 'class struggle,' he continued, and declaring [illegible]

[illegible] those [illegible] radicals who are against the mine bosses, those who want to give more food to the miners' children. Those who are 100 per cent Americans, and who accept low wages, never protest. It has been reported in the Scranton papers that I favor affiliation with the Chamber of Commerce. This is a lie. I fought these gentlemen from the beginning, and will fight them to the end."

This convention is distinguished from past gatherings by the large number of youthful delegates. This is taken to indicate that the progressive element has gained during the past year.

The daily capitalist press, especially of New York City, is devoting much space to this important convention of the Anthracite coal miners. This is due to the double reason that the progressives are strong, and because the new aggeement will be up for discussion. The New York Times, June 27, carried the headline, "Radicals in Power as Miners Convene—Cappellini Gains the First Move at Meeting of the United Mine Workers." There will be a complete story of the convention in next week's issue of "The Worker." Look for it.

The Communist International Greets the Workers Party

[illegible] of the Executive Committee of the Communist International:

To the Workers Party of America and All Its Language Federations.

Dear Comrades:—It is with great pleasure that the Communist International has learned of the progress that the Workers Party has made in the past few months. We are especially gratified at the militant spirit that has manifested itself in the Party since the Second Convention in December, 1922. The unity of spirit, the determination to work and the understanding of the path to be trodden and the general tactics to be applied, augur that, in the near future, the Workers Party will mature to one of the truly Communist mass parties of the world.

With Communist Greetings,

Bosses' Use of Government Against Labor Is Best Argument for the Labor Party

By JAY LOVESTONE

George Washington once said: "Government is not reason, it is not eloquence, it is force . . . Never for a moment should it be left to irresponsible action."

The American workers and farmers have not heeded Washington's advice. They have let the government fall into the hands of the irresponsible, unscrupulous capitalists exploiting the city and rural masses. The close unity between the Stock Exchange and the White House is known to hundreds of thousands of workers and farmers. Thru their outright

KANSAS CITY, Mo.—C. R. Kable, Frederick Simmons, Elmer Peterson and George McLaughlin who were arrested early in April while attending a meeting of the Kansas City branch of the Labor Defense Council addressed by Ella Reeve Bloor, were discharged by the Circuit Court judge.

The men were taken into custody by the Kansas City police and the Kansas City Post of the American Legion when they protested against the breaking up of the Bloor meeting. They were charged with vagrancy, disturbing the peace and condemnation of government. The police court judge found the four guilty and fined them $200 each, at the same time making the now notorious statement: "That free speech as guaranteed by the Constitution of the United States did not include free speech for Communists and I. W. W." The men were released on bail and an appeal from the decision of the police court judge was taken.

Delegates Going to Chicago for July 3rd Conference Urge Class Action for Exploited

(By Staff Correspondent of "The Worker.")

CHICAGO.—Delegates are now on their way to Chicago, from all sections of the nation, with hopes pinned to the belief that the July 3d Conference called by the Farmer-Labor Party will lay the foundation for a class Labor Party of America's exploited industrial workers and farmers.

This Conference is recognized as the first sincere attempt to launch a coalition, thru an independent Labor Party, of all the workers' political forces in the United States.

It was expected that the Conference for Progressive Political Action would make this effort toward a Labor Party. But the expectation was doomed to disappointment long before the meeting in Cleveland, last December. The Cleveland program, in fact, became apparent during the La-Follette Conference in Washington, late in November, where the railroad unions, the Non-partisan Leaguers and other conservative labor elements, including the Gompers officialdom of the American Federation of Labor, showed their determination to stick to the old parties.

It was inevitable that a new attempt toward a Labor Party should be made following the [illegible] Conference [illegible]

The organizers of the Chicago Conference are very much amused here over the frantic efforts of the Conference for Progressive Political Action to draw attention to itself. The long statement sent forth from Washington, reiterating the post election claims of last autumn, carries nothing new, except perhaps the statement that this organization is at work "in the interests of Magnus Johnson, the Farmer-Labor candidate for senator from Minnesota to succeed the late Senator Knute Nelson."

No mention, of course, is made of

Strike—or Putsch?—in the Ruhr

By LUDWIG LORE

When the French took possession of the Ruhr district at the beginning of the year a rapid denouement, both socially and politically seemed inevitable. Yet it did not occur, because the French authorities as well as the Cuno government and the German bourgeoisie gave the working class of the occupied district its bitter medicine with a sugared costing. The French tried desperately to pacify the Ruhr population, in order to win it away from the sabotage problem of the German bourgeoisie. Their occupation therefore at first assumed an exceptionally mild aspect. Only railroad workers and officials directly implicated in active sabotage and Prussian and Federal authorities were accorded a treatment similar to that meted out to the Ruhr workers by Noske in 1919.

The German officials and manufacturers, to offset the allurement of the French, immediately granted a one hundred per cent wage increase,

The Important Tasks of the Workers Party at the Historical July 3rd Convention in Chicago

By JOHN PEPPER

The July 3d Farmer-Labor Party Convention is an historical event, and the Workers Party has historical tasks to accomplish there.

Two main viewpoints must motivate our Party. First, the Workers Party is going to Chicago as a PART OF THE LABOR MOVEMENT. Second, the Workers Party participates in the July 3d Convention as a party INDEPENDENT in every respect.

Two tasks result therefrom. First, deepening up and deepening the relations of the Party with the general labor movement. Second, keeping intact the integrity and independence of the Workers Party.

There still are dogmatists who believe that the Workers Party should not enter at all into a Labor Party because it will lose thereby its political virginity. Then there are other dogmatists who are so fearful lest the Party remain isolated within the labor movement, that out of pure fraction, they endanger the independence of the Party's tactics. The Central Executive Committee of our Party must solve the problem in such a way as not to sacrifice the INDEPENDENCE of the Party, and yet, NOT TO ISOLATE the Party completely in the July 3d Convention. And the Central Executive Committee will solve this problem with the support of the entire Party.

How can we CONCRETELY solve our tasks in the July 3d Convention?

First of all, we must not permit the formation of a Federated Farmer-Labor Party to be postponed at the July 3d Convention. It would be the greatest deception for the laboring masses if the Chicago Conference should ape the example of the Cleveland Conference.

In speaking of the Cleveland Conference at a meeting of the Chicago Federation of Labor, on December 17, 1922, John Fitzpatrick said with bitter sarcasm: ". . . They become scab and dual to Sam Gompers, and the Chicago Federation of Labor will have nothing to do with such a policy. If we have to go along that reactionary path, we will be regular and go with the American Federation of Labor, but we are not weakening in our position that there must be a definitely workers' party. We are going right ahead." We must not permit the Chicago Conference to become scab and dual to the Cleveland Conference. IT IS THE DUTY OF THE WORKERS PARTY TO CONDUCT THE MOST ZEALOUS FIGHT FOR THE IMMEDIATE FORMATION OF A FEDERATED FARMER - LABOR PARTY. Of course, we must not be blind to the facts. Without masses it is imporsible to form the new Federated Farmer-Labor Party. But it is an actual fact today, and no longer an optimistic hypothesis, that the Chicago Convention will have a sufficiently large mass basis.

HOW should the new Federated Farmer-Labor Party be built up?

The new Federated Farmer-Labor Party cannot be a closed political party, but a BLOC of the various organizations, trade unions, farmer groups and political parties. It should have as members only ORGANIZATIONS, and not INDIVIDUALS.

The new party should exercise no direct DISCIPLINE over individual members of the various labor organizations and political parties which belong to it, but only discipline of action over these organizations and political parties AS A WHOLE.

The new Party must have a PROGRAM in some form. This program cannot and should not be a COMMUNIST program. The program should go only as far as the LEFT WING of the American labor movement which will be represented in Chicago can accept as its common political expression. Even less than that would suffice. The program should not be a hindrance which will keep NEW masses, not as yet class-conscious, from joining the Federated Farmer-Labor Party. One step forward of the real mass-movement is worth more than a hundred programs.

It is a vital necessity for the new Party as well as for the Workers Party that every adhering group or political party retain its complete FREEDOM FOR PROPAGANDA AND AGITATION. Communists can accept no form of united front where they can have no guarantee for absolute possibility to propagate their ideas.

Notwithstanding the freedom of propaganda and agitation for all participating groups, the new Federated Farmer-Labor Party should be CENTRALIZED to such an extent that it will be capable of action. The National Executive Committee of the new party must therefore be elected at the Convention. Only thus can it possess sufficient authority on a national scale.

The new Party should not be only an ELECTION COMBINATION. Its activity must not be confined to nomination conventions and election campaigns. It must also take a stand, during the time between elections, on every important question concerning workers and farmers, and must conduct POLITICAL CAMPAIGNS AND ACTIONS in the interest of the masses.

The new Party must be a CLASS PARTY of the laboring masses. It would be harmful to the whole future of the Party if LOWER MIDDLE-CLASS POLITICIANS of the LaFollette group would be allowed entrance. Of course, this does not mean that the Party does not wish to attract the farmers. On the contrary, the ALLIANCE BETWEEN INDUSTRIAL WORKERS AND EXPLOITED FARMERS is a vital question; it is the greatest guarantee that the new Party will be a success and that the struggle of the laboring masses in the factory and on the farm will end in victory in the United States.

To solve all these questions is the historical task of the July 3d Convention. To be the forward-driving element in the solution of these questions is the historical task of the Workers Party at the July 3d Convention.

Our Party is going to the July 3d Convention in order to fight.

We will fight there against the capitalists and the capitalist government who exploit and oppress the workers.

We will fight there against Gompers and his clique who sell out the labor movement to the old capitalist parties.

We will fight there against the Johnston clique and the Socialist Party which sabotaged the formation of a Labor Party at the Cleveland Conference.

And we will fight against all those who, at the July 3d Convention, will postpone or prevent, thru indecision and hesitation, the formation of a Federated Farmer-Labor Party.

CHICAGO WILL BE A FIELD OF BATTLE FOR US.

Call West Va. Labor Party Meet July 19

(By Federated Press)

CHARLESTON, W. Va.—A farmer and labor conference "to begin independent political action" in this state has been called by the executive committee West Virginia State Federation of Labor to meet in Clarksburg, July 19. The twofold purpose of the conference is to adopt a political program and decide whether in the approaching campaign a separate and independent state and national ticket shall be nominated.

The official call, which has been sent out to "farmers, school teachers, and organized workers," follows in part:

"Pursuant to an insistent demand of more than 30,000 workers engaged in the industries and upon the farms of West Virginia, among them being teachers and others engaged in educational pursuits, who have sent in petitions and written demands during recent weeks, we do hereby issue a call . . . to meet . . . for the purpose of formulating and organizing a political movement for the advancement and protection of the interests of the producing and educational masses. . .

"From one end of the nation to the other the producing and educational masses are in revolt against the political tyranny of the old parties. Year after year, and campaign after campaign, they have listened to their specious pleas and promises of relief in vain. To their cry for relief resounds only the political hammer, always in the hands of the financial brigands, riveting the chains of economic slavery ever more firmly upon the limbs of the farmers and industrial workers of the state.

"The farmer, with the prices he is to receive for his product fixed in the secret conclaves of the bandits of big business, and with the prices which he has to pay for his machinery and other implements and necessities fixed by the same interests, is absolutely at the mercy of his enemies. Work as he may and strive with all the power at his command, the farmer is a victim of ceaseless toil and hardship, while the product of his labor ever flows in increasing volume into the coffers of Wall street.

"The industrial worker, whether in the mine or the factory, is even more at the mercy of the same powers. His reward for a life of toil and labor is an old age of poverty and dependency. His children are doomed by the same sinister forces to follow in his footsteps. They in turn become the wage slaves of the industrial masters, and out of their blood is built the colossal fortunes of the money kings of America.

"The forces arrayed against the workers of the farms and factories are organized. It is thru organization that they are able to tyrannize over the wealth producers. It is only thru organization that the producers are the victims. Organization of the money kings must be met with organization of the wealth producers. Only in this way can we protect ourselves.

"The basis of representation is for labor unions with 100 members or less, one delegate and one delegate for each 100 members or majority fraction thereof. Farmers, school teachers and unorganized workers may send delegates bearing credentials endorsed by five or more voters of any of these groups or by a combination of five or more voters of these groups."

Hits Cleveland Conference

(By Federated Press)

MILWAUKEE, Wisc.—General Organizer Henry Ohl, Jr., of the Wisconsin State Federation of Labor, in a supplementary report, to the convention which meets in Superior, Wisc., July 17, discussing the Cleveland Conference for Progressive Political Action deplores the action of the conference in refusing to seat representatives of the Workers Party and in erecting a dual organization to the A. F. of L. nonpartisan political committee, instead of coming out for independent political action by united labor.

Chicago July 3d Conference to See the First Real Effort Toward U. S. Labor Party

the fact that the Stone-Johnston-Keating Cleveland Conference sought to have the workers and farmers of Minnesota, last fall, run their candidate on an old party ticket. This advice was rejected and Hendrik Shipstead who elected U. S. Senator from Minnesota on the Farmer-Labor Party ticket, the first United States Senator chosen independent of the old parties.

The Stone-Johnston "Conference" also holds out the usual glowing promises for the 1924 presidential campaign, if the workers will only follow its Gompers' policy of "rewarding friends and punishing enemies" in the Wall Street democratic and republican parties.

William H. Johnston, president of the International Association of Machinists, and chairman of the Cleveland Conference, who has resigned as a member of the Farmer-Labor Party executive, has also seized upon the present occasion to attack the organization of a Labor Party. He did this in a speech at the closing session of the League for Industrial Democracy.

It is felt here that these utterances, at this time, are a confession of the fear aroused among these reactionaries by the growing sentiment in support of the July 3rd Conference.

Credentials from 20 States

Credentials have already been sent in from 20 different states, according to Jay C. Brown, National Secretary of the Farmer-Labor Party. And it is confidently expected that there will be several hundred delegates in attendance upon this convention.

Intention to send delegates has already been recorded by the following international labor organizations, with approximate membership as noted:

Amalgamated Clothing Workers, 200,000; Railroad Maintenance of Way, 250,000; Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, 75,000; Brick and Clay Workers, 10,000; Broom Makers, 1,000.

Three district organizations of the United Mine Workers, with combined membership of 75,000, Districts Nos. 2, 10 and 25, are also on record for the sending of delegates; as well as more than a hundred local labor organizations. Among these latter is the miners' organization of Ziegler, Ills., a strong union of several thousand members.

The City Central labor bodies of Buffalo, Detroit, Butte, Los Angeles, San Diego and Long Beach, Cal, will also send delegates.

Spokesmen of Farmers Coming

And farmers' organizations from the following states will be represented: Idaho, Minnesota, Nebraska, South Dakota, Washington and Wisconsin. From the State of Wisconsin alone there will be representatives from the following organizations: the Equity Society, the United Farmers, the United Society of Agriculture, the Farm Bureaus, and the Women's Progressive Association. Three other national organizations of women have notified that they will send delegates to this convention. And from Wisconsin also is sent word that the Non-Partisan League of that state will send a delegation of twenty-three, headed by Lieutenant-Governor George Comings and Congressman James O. Beck.

This is probably only the beginning of response to the call for Farmer-Labor Party Convention.

Representatives of the 200,000 members of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America will attend the Labor Party Conference at Chicago, starting July 3rd. This was made certain when the General Executive Board here voted to have the organization participate. The Chicago organization, which has 40,000 members, will select the delegates. It is not certain whether President Sidney Hillman or Secretary Joseph Schlossberg will be able to attend.

President Hillman and other delegates represented the Amalgamated Clothing Workers at the Cleveland Conference for Progressive Political Action, but were not satisfied with the results of that gathering. This viewpoint was echoed thru the editorial expressions of the various needle trades publications. That the Amalgamated Clothing Workers will give its full support to the drive for the organization of a real Labor Party is shown in the action to go to the Chicago Conference.

Detroit Endorses Labor Party

By an unanimous vote of the delegates to the Detroit Federation of Labor at its regular meeting, June 13, a decision was made to send two delegates to the convention called by the Farmer-Labor Party to be held in Chicago, July 3, for the purpose of uniting Labor's forces in a political party of the workers.

John Taylor and Frank Martel, president and secretary, respectively, of the Federation, were chosen by the Detroit central body to represent them at the convention.

Many delegates took the floor and voiced their opinion that the time had passed to look to the financial and employing interests for political guidance.

"Workers' votes elected Mr. Wilson president in 1916," said Delegate Mullenhan in making the motion to send delegates, "and he gave us war and Mitchell Palmer. They reversed themselves in 1920 and elected Mr. Harding by the biggest majority in the history of political elections, and they got Injunction Bill Taft for Chief Justice of the Supreme Court, and an administration openly espousing the employers' program to smash the unions, and a Daugherty injunction. Bitter experience should have taught us to expect nothing else from political parties organized and financed by Big Business. For both defensive and offensive purposes Labor must form its own political party."

"The Detroit Federation of Labor has a reputation for being progressive," said President Taylor in supporting the motion, "and we cannot afford to stand by while a Labor Party is being formed. At the Chicago convention the workers will build a political party of their own, a Party thru which they can give expression to their own political needs. The organized workers of Detroit must participate in the formation of such a Party."

A number of delegates reported that their local unions had elected delegates to the Chicago convention. Others reported that the matter was yet to come up and predicted favorable action. Organized labor of Detroit will be well represented July 3.

July 4th Picnic in Chicago

Dazzling exercises in pyramid-building and hair-raising stunts by a troupe of lithe and athletic young Finnish gymnasts will make of the July Fourth Picnic of the Chicago Workers Party, at Chernauskas Grove, something truly unique in the history of local labor outings.

The speaker of the day will be Robert Minor, editor of the Liberator, who is just as good a speaker as he is a cartoonist. Minor is one of the men involved in the Michigan case, but as he is out on bail, he is free to spend the fourth of July with us in Chicago. Moissaye Olgin has been invited to come and probably will be one of the speakers. William F. Dunne, fresh from Butte, Mont., will also speak.

To get to the picnic grounds, take any car to 22nd St. and Cicero Ave., and from there take the Lyons Berwyn car to Desplains River.

British Miners Plan to Force Parliament to Act

By EVELYN SHARP.
(Special to "The Worker")

LONDON.—The present tendency of British labor to rely on political rather than industrial action, has been demonstrated by the miners' action in waiting for the action on the Labor party's bill to amend the Coal Mines Minimum Wage act, which comes up before parliament. Conscious of their strength, for they are the biggest and best organized union in Britain, they will not attempt industrial action until parliamentary power has been tried to the utmost.

Party C. E. C. Renews Labor Party Policy

By C. E. RUTHENBERG,
Secretary, Workers Party.

The full Central Executive Committee of the Workers Party held its monthly session on Thursday, June 21st. The questions on the agenda of the committee were the policy of the Party in relation to the July 3rd Labor Party Convention, the question of the location of the national headquarters, the establishment of a daily newspaper, and the reorganization of the work of the C. E. C.

Labor Party Policy

The committee discussed at length the policy which the Party has pursued thus far in regard to the organization of a Federated Farmer-Labor Party and after thoro consideration of all the phases of this campaign reiterated its previously established policy of carrying on an aggressive struggle to bring about the culmination of the sentiment now existing among the workers of this country for a political party to represent the interests of industrial workers and farmers in an organized Farmer-Labor Party.

The policy which the Party pursued in the Cleveland Conference and which has been its consistent policy in all labor organizations since, of an uncompromising stand for an independent political party to represent the interests of industrial workers and farmers will be pursued in the July 3rd conference.

The National Headquarters

The question of the location of the national headquarters had been considered in a previous meeting of the Executive Council of the Party and was presented to the full Central Executive Committee for final settlement. The relative advantages of the location of the headquarters in New York or Chicago was discussed at length.

In this connection the resolutions passed by various district committees urging the removal to Chicago were considered. The committee, after going into the matter in detail and considering every aspect of the situation decided that the headquarters shall remain in New York City.

The Daily Paper

On the question of establishing a daily newspaper to represent the Communist movement of this country, it was decided to instruct the Organization and Political committees of the Party to prepare a survey of the situation and the possibilities of raising a sufficient fund to establish a daily paper, with the view of beginning the campaign some time during the month of July and beginning publication of the daily by November 7th, the 10th anniversary of the establishment of the Soviet government in Russia. The two committees charged with the investigation will report to the July meeting of the C. E. C. when the matter will be finally decided.

Reorganization of the C. E. C.

The question of reorganizing the committees of the C. E. C. so as to facilitate the work was taken up and numerous suggestions considered, among them a report from the Organization Committee. After some discussion the matter was referred back to the Organization Committee for further study and report.

At the present time there exist the following committees of the full C. E. C.: a Secretariat of three, a Political Committee, Organization Committee, Editorial Committee, Industrial Committee, and an Executive Council composed of the members all these committees.

The proposal before the Committee which seemed to have greatest support was to create two committees, an Organization Committee and a Political Committee, which shall report to full meetings of the C. E. C. monthly, this eliminating a number of intermediate bodies.

Relief Activities

The question of relief and reconstruction work for Soviet Russia was discussed, it being brought to the attention of the committee that many Party members were taking the position that there was no further need for such relief.

A resolution was adopted pointing out that there was still need for this work. This resolution stated that trained Party workers should not be drawn out of Party work for relief work, but that the Party organizations as such should give support to the work of relief and reconstruction, particularly those phases of this work which were bringing knowledge of conditions in Russia to great masses of workers and building up a more sympathetic attitude on the part of the workers to the workers and peasants of Russia.

Workers of Akron, Ohio, Send Delegate to Chicago; Fight Reaction at Home

(Special to "The Worker")

AKRON, Ohio.—A Labor Party conference composed of delegates representing five Akron organizations, the Bakery Workers' Union, the Machinists' Union, the Rubber Workers' Union, the Central Labor Council and the Workers Party, elected Ben Murphy, President of the Rubber Workers' Union as joint delegate to represent the above organizations at the national conference to organize a powerful Labor Party, called by the Farmer-Labor Party to convene in Chicago, July 3rd.

These five organizations are among the most militant in Akron and have been carrying on progressive work in the Rubber City under severe handicaps imposed by the machine in control of the Akron Central Labor Union.

Quite recently, the Machinists' Union pulled away from the Central Labor Union because of the reactionary and high-handed way in which the affairs of organized labor in Akron are being mis-handled by these misleaders of labor. The two chief henchmen of the Gompers' machine in Akron are one Sheppard, an oily-tongued labor faker who lets no opportunity slip by to vilify everything which promises effective organization of the Akron workers, and his right-hand bower, one Brady, an electrical contractor and member of the Electrical Workers' union, who parrot-like, echoes everything that Sheppard tells him. The rawness of the tactics pursued by these two gentry have even caused A. F. of L. Organizer Conboy, specially placed at Akron by the Gompers' machine to "watch the radicals," to express a desire to leave Akron, but it is reported that he was instructed by Gompers to stay on the job.

Akron workers are asking among themselves how it is possible that Brady is allowed to act in the capacity of President of the central body, when he is an employer in business as an electrical contractor, with the prerogative of hiring and discharging workers.

If this is the policy of the Gompers' machine, they aver, the sooner there is a house-cleaning in Akron of all such rotten timber in the central labor union structure, the better. Progressive unionists all over the country will watch the developments in the Rubber City with keen interest. It is common gossip in Akron that the failure to efficiently organize the rubber workers, who compose about 40,000 of the city's 49,000 workers, is directly due to the betrayals engineered by the Gompers' machine.

Socialists i N. Y. Runnin True to Form

Tammany politics is dominati the affairs of the trade union mo ment of New York, while machi politicians of the Socialist-reformi stripe dominate the affairs of s portion of the labor moveme which declares to build up an i pendent labor party.

This domination of the Social Party machine has now resulted i the virtual dissolution of the Am ican Labor Party. This being a off-year in politics, the Socia Party does not consider the cooper tion of the now numerically small Farme Labor element and the trade union essential. No Smith nor La Guard will be in the field, and the Socialist Party considers it unnecessary t keep the American Labor Part Ticket on the ballot.

The dissolution took place at t meeting of the Executive Council o the A. L. P. Monday night, whe the Farmer-Labor delegates jone hands in killing the party which the professed to represent. There w be no A. L. P. on the ballot next fa nor will there be a state conferenc as ordered by the convention. I our era of pure democracy such litt things as convention decisions coun just as much as similar "scraps o paper" counted in former years. Bu what do any resolutions or constitu tions mean among friends?

The "S. P." machine had little di ficulty in having its sabotage on th Chicago Farmer-Labor Conventio endorsed. The Farmer-Labor del gates unanimously voted against pa ticipation. Jerome T. DeHunt a Ben Howe explained their actio saying they considered it inconsiste to participate at the national conv tion, called by their own party, long as the A. L. P. maintains i connection with the Cleveland "Co ference for Progressive Political A tion," whose leaders have definite repudiated every attempt to organi an independent political party.

For a Labor Party!

The Workers Party, as the vanguard of the working class in this country, must continue in the lead in organizing the forces for a Labor Party. The implication that we have in the past taken the lead in this movement is deliberate, for altho we have not issued the official call for the organization of a Labor Party, it is our agitation that has consolidated the sentiment for such a Party.

It is distinctly the province of the revolutionist to be able to analyze the social forces in all their movements and to clearly point the road the class for which it speaks—the working class—must follow.

When it was apparent that the basis for a Labor Party movement existed in this country the Workers Party made the unity of labor's forces on the political field one of its major campaigns. The call of the Farmer-Labor Party for a conference in Chicago is partly the result of our agitation. It is our agitation that has aroused the interest in large sections of the rank and file of labor. Many local unions have been reached thru our agitation that would never have been reached otherwise. It is our demand for a united front that they are responding to and the call of the F. L. P. is simply the opportunity for them to respond in action to what we have long ago convinced them was a historical necessity for labor's struggles in the United States.

Now that the progressive forces of labor are meeting in Chicago for the July 3rd Conference, it does not mean that our work in this direction is ended. It means we have only begun to fight for a Labor Party with more definite and precise weapons than heretofore. It is a point from which we must begin the real, systematic work of building such a Party.

In order to fulfill our function as a Communist Party within the ranks of a federated Labor Party it is imperative that we assert all our energy toward uniting all labor's forces under the banner of the new Party, and at the same time keep clear and distinct the fundamental principles of our own Party. We must convince the masses that are attracted to the Labor Party that their ultimate emancipation can be achieved only thru our program of action. It is not by trickery, or pulling political wires that the cause of Communism within a federated Labor Party advances, but by careful, thoro-going educational work. To do this costs money and energy. Therefore it is necessary that the members and sympathizers of the Workers Party contribute both.

To lay out our future work on a broad basis, compatible with the part we must play in such a movement we must have $10,000 immediately for a Labor Party Fund. Every branch forward its allotted amount. If the amount is not in the treasury take up voluntary donations or arrange some sort of entertainment or other affair to realize the amount assigned to you by the Central Executive Committee.

And—prepare to take the part in the active work that will be assigned you in order to carry on this work for Communism in America, in the realization of which the Labor Party is an important step.

Special Announcement!

THE NATIONAL CONFERENCE, called by the Farmer-Labor Party, takes place in Chicago, Ill., beginning July 3rd. It is quite safe to say that it is going to be the birth day of a FEDERATED LABOR PARTY in the United States. It is going to be a history making gathering. The militant and wide awake workers of the country will follow it with the greatest concern.

THE VOICE OF LABOR, of Chicago, Ill., a militant working class paper, will publish DAILY EDITIONS during the convention, not less than five, covering the conference as completely as possible. It will be not less than four pages, illustrated with cartoons, sketches, pictures, etc. It will convey the true message and information about this conference, by our best writers and reporters. It will contain timely and appropriate articles.

Huge Profits of Steel Trust Prove It Can Easily Afford to Abolish the 12-Hour Day

When Elbert H. Gary, ... cannot afford to ... installment of our investigation.

By JAY LOVESTONE
Author of "The Government-Strike-Breaker."

Andrew Carnegie once said: "There are many ways of figuring cost than there are of killing a cat. It is simply a matter of bookkeeping." Apparently this was the principle by which the American Iron and Steel Institute was guided when it reported that the abolition of the 12-Hour Shift "would increase the cost of production on the average about 15 per cent."

The history of the notorious Steel Trust is replete with exploitation and theft of the vilest order. An examination of the Steel Bhylahs' financial juggling and manipulations reveals that in Gary's statistics lies figure and figures lie.

Unbiased authoritative investigators have proven, and proven beyond a doubt that the Steel Masters' contention as to the 8-Hour-Day entailing an increase of 15 per cent in the cost of production is simply another case of the Steel Trust stretching the truth to death.

Experts Show that Two-Shift System Is More Economical

In the investigation of the Federated American Engineering Society on the "12-Hour-Shift in Industry" we find overwhelming proof to shatter the case of King Steel against the 8-Hour-Day. Says this report:

"Robert A. Bull, in a paper before the American Foundrymen's Association, published the results of a change from two shifts on the open-hearth furnaces of the Commonwealth Steel Co., 'which,' he says, 'indicates fully a more economical and efficient manipulation of labor in open-hearth and boiler furnaces. Major Bull is an acknowledged expert and authority on open-hearth steel manufacture; twice President of the American Foundrymen's Association. He has been instrumental in changing other open-hearth plants from two to three shifts, even in the centre of America's competitive steel industry, the Pittsburgh District. He is still of the opinion that the savings in cost of operation, quality of product and uniformity of operation and output, fully compensate for the expense of working the 'continuous operation' laborers on three shifts instead of two shifts."

Enumerating the advantages of the 8-Hour-Day which more than compensate for, whatever apparent increase there might be in the cost of production the Engineers go on to say:

"Increased efficiency, due in part to better physical and mental conditions of the men, and in part (after the industry has been working the shorter day for several months or years) to a better class of men attracted by better working conditions. This increased efficiency was manifested itself in increased production per man per hour and per machine per day, thus decreasing overhead expense. It has also appeared in better conduct of the operations, greater uniformity and regularity of operation and of quality of product, less fuel used, less waste, less need of repairs to equipment, and better life of apparatus.

"As a matter of actual experience, it is known that some plants, or departments of plants, have changed from the 12-Hour to the 8-Hour shift and reduced their labor costs. Others are operating on the 8-Hour shift with satisfaction to their management and stockholders. Others have changed and reduced their total manufacturing cost. Finally, there are other plants which have had experience with the 8-Hour shift, the exact economic result of which is not known, but as to which there seems to be reason to believe that the total manufacturing cost, is at most, not much greater with the 8-Hour than with the 12-Hour shift . . .

"In this connection it is permissible to quote the management of the Ford Co. and say that altho the blast furnace operates on the basis of eight hours per day and 48 hours per week per man, and labor is paid 75 cents and upwards per hour, as compared with 27 and 30 cents per hour and upwards at other plants visited, nevertheless they make pig iron cheaper than they can buy it. They attribute this to greater efficiency of labor and of operation."

And in his recent letter to the Federal Council of Churches, Mr. J. F. Welborn, President of the Colorado Fuel and Iron Co., thus clinches this point against Gary's Committee:

"The change, as you know, was made Nov. 1, 1918, the hourly tonnage and piece rate being increased ten per cent when the working shift was reduced from twelve to eight hours. Our rates prior to Nov. 1, 1918, had always been on the same basis as the steel industry generally paid in the East.

"The immediate results from the standpoint of production per man-hour and of labor-cost per unit of output were satisfactory, and where conditions have been comparable it has been evident that we have lost nothing either in producing cost or output by reason of the change."

Right after the Great Steel Strike of 1919, twenty plants introduced the Three-Shift System. Speaking on the results of this change, Prof. Drury said in an address before a joint meeting of the Taylor Society and other scientific bodies on Dec. 3, 1920:

"Taking it all in all, the manufacturers now operating on the shorter day are practically a unit in saying that it means more satisfactory operations and is better business. The experience of these 20 plants has revealed no real obstacles to putting the steel industry on a three-shift day . . . If all the departments were to be changed from two to three shifts the increase in total cost for the finished rail, bar or sheet, could not on the average be more than three per cent. But the increase need not be nearly as great."

The technical why and wherefore of the falsity of the position taken by Gary's Committee is brought home in the investigation made for the U. S. Government by such noted experts as Josephine Goldmark and Mary D. Hopkins. In Public Health Bulletin No. 106, a study of the relative efficiency of plants operating on an eight and ten hour basis we find the following terrific blast at the "science" of the American Iron and Steel Institute:

"The contrast between the two plants is shown most strikingly in the figures for the final hour. At the Eight-Hour plant 90 per cent of average power was maintained until six minutes on the average before the close of work; at the 10-Hour Plant more than 21.5 before the close of work, the percentage of average power had dropped below 90. In other words, work continued at the 8-Hour Plant practically under full power until 6 minutes before the end of the shift; at the other factory power began to decline three and a half times as long before closing time —at exactly 5.30 p. m. when the investigators began afternoon readings, only 87 per cent average power was in use in the entire building."

Steel Trust Can Well Afford the Three-Shift Working-Day

But even if the 8-Hour Day were not more efficient and more productive and thus more economical, the Steel Trust could then very well afford any increased cost that a shorter working-day might entail.

The Steel-Trust is perhaps the biggest employer in the world. It operates 144 works, 24 blast furnaces, and 327 open hearth furnaces. The U. S. Steel Corporation is the richest concern in America. It heads the list of the country's 29 largest companies with $318,633,205 in cash and investment securities. Its actual working capital is $536,271,248.

The Steel Trust owns outright 30 railroads operating a mileage of 3,759 miles or enough to span the continent. These railroads own 61,319 freight cars and 172 passenger cars. But the Steel Empire sways a far greater dominion over the arteries of American industry. Amongst the 25 men who control 82 per cent, or 211,280 miles of the country's steam railways, the owners of steel stock are pre-eminent. For instance, Mr. George F. Baker, a member of the Finance Committee and of the Board of Directors of the U. S. Steel Corporation is one of the leaders of these 25 "chosen people" of the God Mammon.

Gary and Co.—also own a fleet of 35 steamers engaged in overseas trade, 76 in Great Lakes' trade, and 269 steel barges. Besides, thru J. P. Morgan and Co., American Steel magnates dominate a large number of American and even British shipping concerns.

But the Barons of Steel are not content with holding sway over the land and the sea. They also own 75 per cent of America's bituminous coal fields. Some of these properties are: 415,587 acres of coking coal; 337,733 acres of steam and gas coal; 302,481 acres of surface. The U. S. Steel Corporation further owns outright 15,636 by-product coke ovens, 2,992 by-product ovens, and 193,818 acres of gas and oil territory.

This is the mighty Empire of Steel the most gigantic trade industry in the world, that has been reared on the brutalizing 12-Hour Day, starvation wages, infamous working conditions and wretched living conditions.

The history of the U. S. Steel Corporation is a history of fabulous profits becoming ever more fabulous. In 1901 it was organized with $400,000,000 of tangible property covered by bonds and other paper, and about $1,000,000,000 of watered stock, common and preferred.

In the ten year period, 1912-1921, the Steel Trust net profits available for dividends were $1,097,171,135. In the last 10 years the Steel Trust has stored up a surplus of $500,000,000, has cut down its bonded debt by $103,000,000 and has spent $685,000,000 on construction and acquisitions. All of this expansion came from the profits created by the workers.

For the period 1913-1919 alone the Steel Corporation piled up a total undivided surplus of $2,239,986,369.84. In the years 1917-1922, its average margin of safety, that is, the proportion of available surplus or net revenue left over after fixed charges have been provided for was almost 73 per cent. During this period it earned on preferred stock an average of 28.89 per cent and on common an average of 15.51 per cent. From 1901 to 31, 1922, the Steel Corporation was christened the giant of supertrusts with a property account of $1,631,579,260. Tho there was some depression during this year, the gross sales and earnings of the company reached the huge sum of $1,092,697,772.

This rate of growth is being excelled in 1923. In the first six months of the year the Steel Corporation has piled up a net profit close to $85,000,000. And production is breaking all previous records.

How easily the Steel Trust can pay the added cost incurred by the 8-Shift System, even if there were an added cost, is borne out by the following from the findings of the Interchurch World Movement Investigation:

"Concerning the financial ability of the Corporation to pay higher wages the following must be noted, (with the understanding that the Commission's investigation did not include analysis of the Corporation's financial organization): the Corporation nearly increased its undistributed financial reserves during the Great War. In 1914 the Corporation's total undivided surplus was $135,204,417.-90. In 1919 this total undivided surplus had been increased to $493,048,-201.93. Compared with the wage budgets, in 1918, the Corporation's final surplus after paying dividends of $96,382,027 and setting aside $274,-277,835 for federal taxes paid a sum large enough to have a second time the

Replies to Capitalist Lies

EDITOR "THE WORKER"—The capitalists say that the people ... receive hours.

... This is a lie.

... The workers want to work eight hours, but the pay should be higher, because if we work only eight hours and get the present pay we will not be able to support not only our families, but ourselves.

When all work twelve hours, no one can work less. The need compels you to work the full twelve hours. First, you have to provide food for your children and you have to think of a rainy day. All of a sudden, Mr. Gary may stop the work and the worker, not having anything saved up, will have to go out and beg—as it did happen many times.

We earned more before we paid more for our food and clothes and when they closed the factories many were starving and are doing so until now.

And so the workers became exhausted and bloodless from this holdup by the capitalists. The more millions the capitalists will make, the more people will be sent to their graves. Having filled themselves with human blood, they don't know what to do from idleness. If they were compelled to work not twelve, but only two hours in the sun and heat, then Mr. Gary would convince himself that in such a fume and hell not only eight, but also hours of work is sufficient and for such work the worker should get paid not forty or fifty cents, but a dollar or a dollar and a half an hour.

"The Government-Strikebreaker"

By JAY LOVESTONE.

A Revelation — A Condemnation — An Elucidation of the role of the Government of the United States in its relations with organized labor as seen in the great national strikes of recent date.

A book which deserves a place in the library of every union man and woman, every student of social affairs, of every progressive minded worker.

To every thoughtful worker, the question: What is the real attitude of the Government toward the workers of America? is beginning to assert itself more and more as strike after strike is met with Government repression and threats.

The answer to this all-important question is answered fully, satisfactorily in "The Government—Strikebreaker."

Labor Leaders Plan Peace of Europe at Meeting of the Drawing Room Cousins of Monarchs

By ARNOLD LOZOWSKY
Federated Press Correspondent

BERLIN, June 30.—Representatives of the Second International, the International Federation of Trade Unions, the International Federation of Trade Unions, the International Transport Workers' Federation, the International Federation of Labor Unions and the International Co-operative Alliance met in Berlin this week for the purpose of organizing a campaign for the drawing room coalition ministers of Europe to bring about a peaceful society was the consolidation of their capitalistic and imperialistic interests.

Berlin was the meeting place of the leaders of the transport workers of 21 countries, and the most favorable location for finding a common basis of understanding among the workers of different parties.

In Hamburg, all participants were permeated with the idea of supporting to their utmost that which has been happily termed by that unhappy child of Versailles, Abramowitsch, "democratic capitalism." Russia was not talked about. The question dealt with was how best to gather together the shattered masses, for self-defense against the growing capitalist and democratic reaction.

On one side a congress where Left and Right combine on the basis of co-operation of the classes, and on the other side, a conference resulting in an understanding for the purpose of united revolutionary class war.

And altho many hundreds of people took part in the Hamburg congress, including many ministers, while in Berlin it was but a modest gathering, attended by 9 persons in all, not one of whom was a bourgeois minister, still the Berlin conference was of much greater significance for the working class than the empty cackling of the Hamburg congress.

What is the real import of the Hamburg congress? The strengthening of the coalition policy, the sanctioning of working unity among the classes, and thus the widening of the chasm within the labor movement.

And what is the import of the Berlin consultation? The extension of the anti-capitalist front, the consolidation of proletarian positions, and a stride forward on the road to the reunion of unity in the labor movement, on the basis of revolutionary class war.

And thus the Hamburg congress will be recorded in the history of the working class as a stage of that organizatory process which confirms the influence of the bourgeoisie over one part of the proletariat, while the Berlin conference, on the other hand, will be recorded as a stage on the road to the emancipation of ever enlarging sections of the working class from reformist ideology and reformist practice.

The antagonists of the Communist International and of the Red International of Labor Unions have often, in speech and writing, declared that the United Front slogan issued by us is nothing more than an empty pretext, as the Communists do not sincerely want a united front.

Various French hole-and-corner journalists have been particularly active in spreading themselves over this theme. Communists everywhere have replied to this demagogy by deeds. Now we can reply with a new international proof. If anyone asks what is the United Front policy we reply: Read with attention the resolutions passed by the Transport Workers' Conference and you will find the answer to this question.

But now we put a few questions to our opponents: Can you find in these resolutions, passed by us, anything which any workman can disagree? Perhaps the war against war? The struggle against Fascism? The defense of Soviet Russia? The creation of organs intended to carry on the struggle against militarist reaction on international lines? Or perhaps the desire of the conference, to overcome the trade union split as rapidly as possible, is unacceptable? We are fully convinced that no worker can contest any one of the points of our resolutions. But now the reformist leaders are doubtless expressing themselves as opposed to these resolutions, for they prefer coalition with the bourgeoisie to coalition with the Communists. This idea appears thru all the speeches and actions of the conveners of the Hamburg congress. The reply received by the International Committee of Action against War Danger and Fascism, to its appeal for the formation of a united front, signified: Rather with the bourgeoisie against the Communists than with the Communists against the bourgeoisie! The International Transport Workers' Federation rejected this formula, and declared: Rather with the Communists against the bourgeoisie, than with the bourgeoisie against the Communists. And here lies the historical import of the unity conference of the transport workers.

Neither of the two parties to the agreement is a victim to any delusion: both parties are fully aware of the difficulty of maintaining unity of action in the present disunited state of the labor movement. Both parties grasped that the fundamental cause of the divergence of opinion existing within the trade union movement are not to be overcome by the joint signing of some few resolutions, but that various opinions and ideas will continue to combat one another. The united front does not wipe out differences of opinion, but it paves the way for bringing the scattered trade unions together, and creates on the basis of the common action that mutual confidence which is indispensable in a struggle against a common enemy.

We, the followers of the Red International of Labor Unions, take our obligations very seriously. We shall fulfill them loyally and energetically, and naturally we expect the same from the International Transport Workers' Federation, which signed the agreement with us. All trade unions belonging to the Red International of Labor Unions, especially the Russian trade unions, have frequently mooted the question of their admittance into the international craft unions. They have invariably been refused. When international capital blockaded Soviet Russia, international reformism carried on a blockade against the revolutionary trade unions of Russia. The goal aimed at by international reformism has not been attained, the working masses of Europe have proved themselves to possess so much class feeling and comprehension of their own interests that they have taken up the defense of Soviet Russia, and of the trade unions created by the Russian proletariat.

Where will this understanding among the transport workers lead us? We should like to see it spread as rapidly as possible to every branch of production. We shall work untiringly and shrewdly for the amalgamation of the parallel trade unions in all countries. We shall continue repeatedly to propose joint action of the Amsterdam International and to all international secretariats. The interests of the international proletariat demand this. And woe to those leaders of the labor movement who do not grasp this!

Slowly and painfully the united front of the working class is born. As the roots of the schism in the working class lie in the policy of working unity with the bourgeoisie, the schism is overcome in proportion as the broad masses of the workers, and the organizations created by them, reject this policy. One thing is beyond all doubt: the unity of the working class can only originate in the struggle against the bourgeoisie. As the conference held by the transport workers set itself the task of combatting the bourgeoisie, it thus at the same time made this theme. Unity of the unity of the transport workers of all countries. This conference proved the vitality of the united front and hence it close my remarks by repeating the declaration which I made at the Hague International Conference: "Whether you want it or not—the united front will come about. It will come about with you if you like, without you if you stand aside, and against you if you offer resistance."

N. Y. Labor Shuns Mooney, Aids "Guard"

By SELMAR SCHOCKEN

The Central Trades and Labor Council of Greater New York usually very liberal in issuing credentials to representatives of a worthy cause. Take for instance the granting of credentials to Major Ross of the Citizens Training Camp of the U. S. Coast Guard, with the privilege to visit all affiliated unions to lecture them about the wonderful benefits of military training for the youth of the working class.

The Central Trades and Labor Council is also extremely solicitous in the cause of people who have been wronged by the courts unjustly. Thus for instance the case of a Pole held in Russia, convicted of counter-revolutionary activity and of dealing with and turning over secrets to the enemy—Poland—while Russia was at war with that country. Remember the solicitous appeals sent by Lucy Robbins and others of the so-called Amnesty Committee, endorsed by a majority of the Trades Council.

With this attitude of the Central Trades and Labor Council in mind, let us analyze their attitude toward the continued incarceration of Thomas Mooney, Warren K. Billings and other victims of the class-hatred of the bourgeoisie in this country. At the same time, when Major Ross was introduced to the delegates as a benefactor to society, Leonard Craig of San Francisco appeared before a committee to ask for the floor.

Major Ross was given a great reception. Leonard Craig, a representative of the Mooney Defense Committee, who showed credentials not only from this committee but also from numerous unions and central bodies, was refused the floor. Craig then went before the Executive Committee of the Council to ask for credentials which would introduce him to the various unions. These credentials were refused him, according to Craig, with the explanation that too many credentials were in the hands of representatives of different organizations—among them, of course, Major Ross of the Citizens Training Camp—and the unions cannot be bothered with requests for Tom Mooney.

The Executive Committee explained its action to the delegates with the allegation that money collected for the aid of Tom Mooney was used for other purposes. It must, however, be remembered that all money funds are sent directly to Mrs. Rena Mooney, wife of Tom, who manages the financial side of the efforts to free the man who is in prison for many years because of his loyalty to labor and the unlimited power of the capitalists of the Pacific Coast.

Fight Initiation Fees in Campaign to Organize Unorganized in Mexico

By BERTRAM D. WOLFE
(Special to "The Worker")

MEXICO CITY.—A novel idea in making easy the organization of the unorganized was put into practice here when the newly formed Union of Teachers of the Federal District voted unanimously to insert as a permanent clause in their constitution the provision that "No initiation fee whatsoever shall ever be charged any applicant for admission to this organization."

"The curse of labor unions," declared the proponent of the constitutional provision, "has been the disheartenment of the entry of new members thru high initiation fees. We should at all times encourage our fellow workers to organize. If we are in need of funds, I for one should always prefer a raise in dues rather than taking it out on new members."

"Imperial Washington"

By Ex-Senator R. F. PETTIGREW

The book of which Lenin said: "It is the greatest book on American political life."

Senator Pettigrew has spent 50 years in public life. He knows Washington and American political life from A to Z.

CRYPTIC PHRASES FROM "IMPERIAL WASHINGTON"
The United States has already passed from the Republic to the Empire.
We have a Government of the thieves, for the thieves, by the thieves.
Capital is stolen labor, and its only function is to steal more labor.

Lenin, himself the author of a treatise on "Imperialism," appreciates "Imperial Washington" and knows its value as an authoritative work on American political life. Certainly American workers ought to know what are the tendencies of the government of the U. S. A. This book will prove an eyeopener to every reader.

Militant Coal Miners Plan Illinois Drive

By J. W. JOHNSTONE
(Special to "The Worker.")

EAST ST. LOUIS, Ill.—Forty-two delegates, representing 38 of the largest local unions of the United Mine Workers of Illinois, District 12, have met in East St. Louis and laid plans to smash the Farrington-Lewis corrupt machine and put in its place capable, militant officials, who will lead the miners to victory instead of to compromise and defeat.

The spirit of the conference was fully apparent when one of the delegates announced, "I did not come here to waste time in fooling," and asked the Chairman for this point of information: "Is the purpose of this conference to clean house, from the local unions to the national office?" When assured that this was the main reason for the calling of the conference, this militant then said, "All right—shoot! Let's get down to business."

And the work of the conference showed that cleaning house, from top to bottom, meant not only removal of the reactionary officialdom, but also the adoption of a real, classconscious program, calling for a united front of labor on the industrial and political fields.

Twenty-four resolutions were endorsed, dealing with all phases of the class struggle, as well as with the internal affairs of the U. M. W. of A. No one in the conference was deceived by the pretended antagonism that appeared to exist between Farrington and Lewis. The concensus of opinion was that both of them would be in the same camp, fighting the Progressive Committee, long before the next convention takes place.

The delegates roundly condemned Lewis for his treachery toward Howat and the Kansas miners, for his base betrayal of the Fayette and Somerset County miners in Pennsylvania, for his lack of interest in the prosecution of the murderers of Fanny Sellins, and for the signing of agreements with coal companies in other fields, running non-union mines. In fact, almost the entire administration policy was condemned, as being inimical to the interests of the union miners. Lewis was accused of deliberately keeping certain coal fields unorganized, so as to be able to flood the international convention with hand-picked delegates; and the delegates demanded that these fields be thoroly organized.

The conference went on record for all these things: Nationalization of the mines; the six-hour day and the five-day week; affiliation with the coal miners of other countries; closer relations and a working-agreement with the railroad workers; and national agreements.

Resolutions were passed urging the formation of a Federated Labor Party, trade relations with Soviet Russia, a boycott on the Ward Bakery Company (Bread Trust), support of the Russian famine relief, and a demand for the release of Mooney and Billings, Sacco and Vanzetti, Ford and Suhr, J. B. McNamara, the I. W. W. and all other political prisoners. Also for the support of the Communists on trial in Michigan, and of Organizer Fred Merrick and his colleagues in Pittsburgh.

The Amalgamation Resolution, as sent out by the Chicago Federation of Labor, was endorsed; and locals were urged to send delegates to the Illinois State Federation of Labor conference, pledged to fight for the adoption of this resolution.

The program issued by the Progressive International Committee of the United Mine Workers of America, and the minutes of their First National Conference, were endorsed unanimously.

A committee was elected and is now engaged in putting the work of the conference into operation. This committee is also to draw up proposals for long-needed changes in the constitution of the union, and to draft a program of action around which the militant rank and file of District 12 will rally.

The second Sunday in August is the date set for the next conference, when everything will be placed before the delegates in a definite form. This will be the real conference, as all local unions in the district will be asked to send delegates. For the first time in the history of the mine workers in this district the progressives will enter the field thoroly organized, with a fighting program that should sweep the reactionaries into oblivion.

In the meantime, progressive committees are springing up, over night, in all the mining camps in the district. Disgusted with the Farrington-Lewis machine tactics, they have heard the call of the Pittsburgh conference, and enthusiastically they are rallying to it. This time they are determined to make the U. M. W. of A., not only in name but in fact the most militant and progressive workers' organization on the American continent. The rank and file of the miners are in that position now, while their officials rank with the most reactionary leadership within the A. F. of L. official family.

Reaction Forget Personal Wars and Unites to Fight Militants' Growing Power

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL

Perhaps the greatest political event in the American labor movement since the Chicago Convention of the Farmer-Labor Party is the realization that the reactionaries have been compelled to put aside their personal differences and unite their forces in order to put up a united front against the militant progressives.

Dropped assurances following his recent visit to Chicago, that John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers of America, and Frank Farrington, president of the Illinois Miners, have agreed to bury their war clubs, smoke the pipe of peace, forget their differences and end the long personal feud between them, is the construction we are said to have come from Farrington, who has been in constant opposition to Lewis, especially thru his support of Alexander Howat, and the expelled Kansas miners.

Lewis is from Illinois, where he fought Farrington before going to Indianapolis, to become the miners' international president. So powerful forces must have been at work to bring these ancient enemies together.

It will be remembered that it was Lewis who ran for president of the A. F. of L. against Gompers at the 1921 Denver Convention, Lewis then being hailed as a "progressive" in opposition to Gompers' reactionary ideas. Now, altho Gompers, Lewis and Farrington may not be "sleeping in the same bed," in the words of William J. Burns, nevertheless, they are working together, and to no good for progress in the American labor movement.

One of the results of this new alliance is that Lewis has adopted Gompers' tactics towards the militants, threatening to expel from the organization all those who take a stand with the International Progressive Miners' Conference recently organized at Pittsburgh.

Lewis has managed to get this threat to the militants issued by the Miners' International Executive Board, meeting at Indianapolis. His indictment repeats the old and worn-out charge that the Progressive Miners' Conference is building a dual organization, comparing it to the "Working Class Union" in the Southwestern Coal Fields, the "One Big Union" that flourished for a time in Canada, and the Industrial Workers of the World.

Thus Lewis is merely seeking to becloud the issue. He knows that the Progressive Conference is not a dual organization, that it has taken a definite stand against dualism, and that it has already stopped several dual movements. Lewd also attacks William Z. Foster and the Trade Union Educational League, Howat and Fred H. Merrick, who have suffered under the tyranny of the black reaction of the coal and steel barons of Western Pennsylvania. Now Lewis joins forces with this terror, making the customary charge that the Progressive Conference is getting its funds from the "Communist Party," which does not exist, the Workers Party being the only recognized Communist organization in this country.

Gompers has found his terror in the American Federation of Labor challenged by the determined stand of the Seattle Central Labor Council. Lewis will, no doubt, find that it is easier to establish a Mussolini dictatorship in the miners' union than it is to maintain it. The Progressive Miners' Conference certainly expected that reaction would quickly become fearful of its power. But it did not expect that this fear would get into action so soon. The developments will be interesting to follow.

Daugherty Busy Again

It must have been more than a coincidence that Attorney General Daugherty, at Washington, should issue a "warning" to the coal miners at the same time that Lewis was broadcasting his threats from Indianapolis.

"Strike Breaker" Daugherty promulgated his edict in a letter to John Hays Hammond, the mine-owner chairman of the Federal Coal Commission. Harding's "open shop" attorney general declared it illegal for American coal miners to enter into agreements with miners of foreign countries for mutual aid during strikes. Daugherty knows that Lewis would not develop this international cooperation. He knows that it was Lewis who stood aside while American coal was being sent to England and Wales in 1921, to break the strike of the British coal-miners. This resulted, in British coal being sent to these shores crippling the American coal strike last year. The administration of John L. Lewis in the mine workers union has been obstinately opposed to developing international action, and Daugherty and Hammond know this. They know that it is the militants in the miners' union on both sides of the Atlantic Ocean, that are trying to create a united front against the mine barons of all countries. They use this subtle method of attack, thinking someone may be fooled by it. Yet Daugherty with Hammond are proposing to use the Federal Coal Commission to go "fishing" for militants who urge "illegal" international action. Lewis has not shown himself opposed to this "fishing expedition," but rather very much in favor of it. No doubt this double attack, from Indianapolis, and Washington, D. C., was intended to intimidate radical sentiment at the Scranton, Pa., Tri-District Anthracite Convention, now being held. We venture to predict, however, that coal miners, capable of electing a Rinaldo Cappellini in District No. 1, Pennsylvania, by a majority defined by hysterical newspaper propaganda.

While the coal miners have been digging black diamonds down in the bowels of the earth, this past week their bosses, organized into the National Coal Association, have been having the time of their lives in convention on the seashore at Atlantic City, N. J. Even here no opportunity to attack the militants was lost. Colonel Guy D. Goff, former general counsel for the Shipping Board, and until recently one of Daugherty's assistant attorney generals, spent considerable time attacking Communism and the amalgamation idea.

It was Goff's Shipping Board that lined up with all other government departments last year to help break the miners' strike. It chartered 13 ships in foreign waters to help bring 500,000 tons of scab coal to these shores. Later it marshalled a fleet of 170 ships and announced it could arrange for the delivery of two million tons of English scab coal per month.

When Lewis and Farrington and Bitner attack the militants in the miners' union, they are taking a stand with the mine bosses. The International Progressive Miners' Conference is for nationalization, the organization of the unorganized, international agreements, and cooperative action not only with the railroad, steel and other workers of this country, but also for the united action with the workers, especially the coal miners of other lands. The miners' union officialdom that takes a stand on the opposite side of these issues is doomed to be swept into oblivion.

Even the unholy alliance of Gompers with Lewis and Farrington will not save reaction, neither in the American Federation of Labor, nor in the United Mine Workers of America.

Progressives Win Big Victory over Reaction at Charleroi, Pa., Poll

By WILLIAM A. GUILER
Chairman, International Progressive Miners' Conference
(Special to "The Worker.")

CHARLEROI, Pa.—The Progressives in District 5, United Mine Workers of America (Western Pennsylvania), are beginning to reap the fruits of organized action and sound working class principles.

At a meeting of Local Union, No. 593, one of the first battles between the gang and the Progressives was staged. It will be remembered that Charleroi, Pa., was the place where Alexander Howat was prevented from speaking by the "gang." About four weeks later Howat made a come-back, addressing 5,000 miners, proving to the "machine" that they cannot get away with it all the time.

The regular election for checkweighman and other officers was unanimously carried by the Progressives, fighting for election on the principles of the Progressive Movement. The lines were clearly drawn between the candidates favorable to the District officials and those standing firmly behind the Progressive Miners. We are very proud of the fact that every one of the reaction-ary candidates from checkweighman down was defeated and snowed under so deeply that it would require a U. S. Corporation searchlight to find them. Charleroi has been the battle ground for many years of District 5, but the Progressives have been on the job and are still there.

New Members in Unions

Over 50 percent of the new members that came into the Workers Party during May in Chicago, are in the unions. Of the 60 new members in that month about 15 are in English branches. Another English branch has been organized in Burnside. Our Lithuanian comrades helped to the Y. W. L. from two new English branches, one in Bridgeport and one in Brighton Park.

Thirty-five thousand leaflets on a Labor Party have been distributed in Chicago. Much interest has been taken in the Labor Party Mass Meeting and the United Front Conference to be commended for arranging for Earl Browder and Jay Brown to state the issues involved. Since last week many more unions are reported by our comrades, to have acted favorably on the invitation to the July 3rd Labor Party Conference.

Mine Reaction Stops Howat's Ohio Meetings

(Special to "The Worker")

BELLAIRE, O.—A great crowd of Ohio miners, many of whom had come for many months, are preventing from hearing Alexander Howat speak at Taylor's Grove, near Langling, in the heart of the Eastern coal fields. Ordered by Sheriff Danfee, of Belmont County, noted for having broken up the May-Day celebration in Bellaire, the owner of the grounds withdrew permission for the meeting.

An evening meeting, arranged at the urgent solicitation of the miners in Yorkville, where Howat spoke during his short visit here early last year, was likewise stopped, the burgess of the town refusing the miners permission to hold the meeting in their own union hall.

Preceding these outrageous actions on the part of the authorities, the Lewis machine of this section had carried on a campaign aimed at the complete discrediting of Howat in this region. They openly lined up with the coal operators, the kept press, and the authorities in this devilish piece of business. The very day that Howat arrived in this section from Western Pennsylvania, one of the Wheeling papers featured a story from which the following extracts are taken.

"Sub-district No. 5, District 6, is to be the scene of a carnival of extreme radicalism . . . John Alfred, alleged I. W. W. organizer, . . . is expected to perform with some new threats and denunciations of existent conditions . . . A much bigger gun is primed for firing however.

Alexander Howat, deposed leader of the Kansas miners, will be on hand with the typical brand of violent talk that has made his name notorious . . . Speaking to a reporter, a prominent official of the United Mine Workers, deplored the situation. He said, "The present situation is a very bad one, it demands the public's most careful thought. All their interests are in jeopardy. If they do not insist that the officers of the law live up to their oath of office and control this extreme radicalism which finds vent in violence and destruction they will help create a monster, the unconcealed purpose of which is for their destruction."

This disgraceful and libelous attack was followed by others, morning and evening, in all the papers of this section. Even then the Sub-District 5 officials issued a long circular to their membership, which concluded, "Stay away from the meetings called by the 'disruptionists,' whether they are 'I. W. W.s' or some 'progressives' known to no one but themselves."

Encouraged by this action of the union officials, the coal operators and the authorities were not backward in going the limit. At Adena the only place which could be secured for the meeting was on top of a hill hundreds of feet high, in the presence of the Sheriff of Jefferson County and nine deputies. But nearly a thousand miners were in the audience.

So panic-stricken were the Lewis gang by the advent of Howat that they lost their wits entirely. They have yet to learn that an open alliance with the coal operators, the kept press and the authorities, to prevent Howat even from presenting his case to the rank and file, will do far more good for his cause than many speeches. The miners are outraged at the actions of their officers and the prominent Howat supporters say that Howat's short visit here, will, because of the three speeches he was successful in delivering, and more especially because of the tremendous and unscrupulous efforts made to discredit him, result in practially a 100 percent line-up of the Eastern Ohio miners for Howat.

Howat as usual in his talks emphasized his strict opposition to a dual union or disruptionist movement, contrary to the efforts of the Lewis gang to brand his activities as in favor of such.

MINERS STAND BY HOWAT

(Special to "The Worker.")

CALIFORNIA, Pa.—The miners here have adopted resolutions expressing confidence in Alexander Howat as follows:

Whereas, for about 25 years Alex Howat of Kansas has engaged himself with the task of removing all obstacles from the path of progress for the working class in general and for the miners in particular, and

Whereas, During the course of that time numerous attempts have been made to remove him from the fight, but he is now at the very threshold of Victory in his struggle to regain membership in our Union, and

Whereas, Other attempts having failed, methods are tried to discredit him in the latest frame-up in Pittsburgh, Pa., wherein he was arrested and held under $2,000 bail; Therefore be it

Resolved, That we, the miners of California, Pa., in District No. 5, this 12th day of June, 1923, hereby extend to Alexander Howat our fullest measure of confidence and support in this, his hour of need—and be it further

Resolved, That copies of this resolution be sent to the Press of this Country.

Wicks Hurls Challenge At John W. Hays

H. M. Wicks, labor editor of "The Worker," has challenged John W. Hays, secretary-treasurer of the International Typographical Union, to defend his attacks upon the radicals in the labor movement and those workers who support Soviet Russia in its struggle against International capitalism.

Hays has been using the columns of the Typographical Journal, of which he is the editor, to publish all the rehashed, boiler plate dope of the propaganda factories of the white guard servants of Imperialism.

In a published statement in the United Mine Workers Journal, Hays is quoted as declaring in favor of an educational program to familiarize the rank and file of the labor movement with the principles of Communism. Wicks, a prominent member of the International Typographical Union, gives Hays a chance to assist in some real educational work in the following letter:

New York City, June 27, 1923

Mr. John M. Hays,
Rooms 611-650 Bankers Trust Bldg.,
Indianapolis, Ind

Dear Mr. Hays:—

Implicitly believing in the value of educational work in the trade union movement with the object of building up ever more effective forms of unionism and believing that the most effective way to settle a disputed question is thru open and free discussion, I must take issue with you in your recent attacks upon the militants in the labor movement in this country who sympathize with the aims and aspirations of Soviet Russia as the first genuine working class government on the face of the earth.

That you may thoroly understand me I hereby take this opportunity of challenging you to a series of debates to be held in New York City, Chicago and before the delegates to the Atlanta Convention of the International Typographical Union, on the question, "Resolved, that the American supporters of Soviet Russia in their Trade Union Activity are Rendering Valuable Assistance to the Labor Movement of America." I to take the affirmative, you the negative.

I will bear half the expenses of such a series of debates, if any expenses are incurred that are not covered by the proceeds. If there is a balance left over after expenses are paid, it shall go into the defense fund of the International Typographical Union.

Now, I do not want you to feel that I bear any personal animosity toward you for the articles you have thus far published. I take the stand that you have been deceived by the cunning propaganda of the renegade Socialist and adventurer, Mr. William English Walling, who is doing some publicity work for Mr. Samuel Gompers. I am prepared to prove that Walling is an unscrupulous scoundrel and liar, and that his so-called "information" regarding Soviet Russia is as unreliable as the famous "Sisson Documents" published by the United States Government in the early days of the Bolshevik revolution, containing that weird tale of "nationalization of women in Russia."

I would challenge Walling to debate were it not for the fact that he is conscious of his scoundrelism and is a miserable poltroon who would not dare expose himself before the public with an informed opponent. By this I do not imply, sir, that you should take up the cudgels in defense of Mr. Walling. I do not consider you in that category at all, but I do feel that you, like myself, are earnestly desirous of establishing the facts in relation to this so-called "nefarious propaganda," the term you used in the June number of the Typographical Journal.

In case you are not able to meet me either in Chicago or New York, we could arrange for but one debate at Atlanta during the convention.

As you know, I never have sought political advantage for myself in the union, nor do I seek such advantage. My activity has been along the lines of educational work and I intend that it shall continue in that channel. It is with the object in view of educating our membership as to the real character of this much-discussed question, "Soviet Russia," that I desire this debate or series of debates.

Awaiting an early reply, I am, sir,

Yours very truly,

H. M. Wicks.

The Young Workers League Meets with Samuel Gompers

(Special to "The Worker")

CHICAGO.—Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, met here with a committee of the Young Workers League of America. The committee of the Young Workers League consisted of Martin Abern, Alfred Albright and Natalio Gomez, with Charles Krumbein of the Workers Party. Besides Gompers and the committee there was present a large part of the Executive Board of the Cigarmakers' International Union, whose Executive session Gompers was in the city to attend, John Fitzpatrick and Edward Nockels, president and secretary respectively of the Chicago Federation of Labor.

The introductions were hardly slipped over, than Mr. Gompers asked for the names and addresses of the delegation, the industries they were employed in and if they were in the unions. The questions were answered to apparent satisfaction, and the letter of concrete proposals, which had been drawn up by the League, was then handed Gompers.

But not so easily is Mr. Gompers made to act upon something. He put it aside for the time, and asked his secretary to read the "Open Letter." Then began a long series of questions, the barrage behind which Mr. Gompers secluded himself from the necessity to consider or answer the league proposals.

"Where was the data obtained? Where was the Convention held? Which organizations were represented there?"—And when his requests for a copy of our new constitution had been complied with, and Section 2 of Article I (dealing with the purpose of the League) had been read—"Aha!—Dictatorship of the proletariat! Establishment of Soviets! Communism!" He interrupted his secretary by saying that there was no need to read further.

Then there began another volley of questions, interrupting of Abern's answers, splitting of the thinnest hairs, quibbling and beating about the bush. Gompers told of the great work that the A. F. of L. had done in the direction of the abolition of Child Labor. It had been the Federation which had placed the Anti-Child Labor Law on the statute books; and now that the Supreme Court had ruled adversely on the law, he, Samuel Gompers himself, was calling a conference, in the most approved style of, our President, of all International Unions, voters' organizations, women's leagues, and numerous other organizations, for the purpose of initiating a movement for the adoption of a constitutional amendment for the abolition of Child Labor.

At this point came the argument, which was obvious supposed to wither us with a fine scorn, to show the absurdity of our proposals. "If," said he, in effect, "you are against the principle of Child Labor, why do you want the International Unions to lower the barriers against the admission of these youthful workers into their ranks. Is it not enough that the A. F. of L. has already all it can has been doing, in fact, all you propose, for the last decades? It is because the labor unions do not believe in having children employed in industry, that they have clauses against their admission to membership. We recognize the fact that the conditions of the young wage earners are bad, and therefore we are working for a constitutional amendment to abolish that work. With 28 millions of wage earners on this country and only about 5½ millions of them organized, all the efforts of the 90 paid and 2,290 voluntary organizers of the Federation are being expended to unionize them, and while the organization of the young workers is important, it is secondary in relation to the necessity of organizing that 22½ million. As an example of our work, in spite of these handicaps (?) we point to the fact that the United Mine Workers of America caused the elimination of six to eight year old breaker boys working 12 and more hours a day. And the United Textile Workers helped the children in their industry, and the campaign for the organization of the steel workers in 1919 accomplished similar wonders."

This sort of logic is rather astounding. Of course, the fact that the subject which was being dealt with was not that of Child Labor, but of Youth Labor, was apparently a thing of unimportance in Mr. Gompers' eyes. And even though the question were that of the child slaves —does it settle the problem by calling a conference which may initiate a movement whose end may be achieved in the hazy, dubious future? And incidentally, does the tremendous pre-occupation of Mr. Gompers' 2,290 organizers excuse their ignoring the unionization of the young, when it is considered that in this period of comparative "prosperity" the membership of the Federation is by no means increasing as it should; and when it is considered that we must add to Mr. Gompers' 2,290, the organizers of each individual international union, whose members are in some instances 40 to 50 per cent union, is this excuse convincing?

One of the things which it does indicate is that Mr. Gompers' mind still substitutes century old situations for present day ones. When, in 1830, the earliest trades unions, such as the New York Typographical Association protested against their displacement by young apprentices, who bargained to work their places and caused a depression in the trade, they may be said to have had some justification for their later action in putting up barriers against these young workers. But at this period in the development of industry, with its breaking down not only of the differences between craft, but at the same time, also the difference of ages, to talk of barriers is absurd.

Finally the League's letter of proposals was read to the assemblage.

Here was a program which was a trades union document, something upon which the organization of the young workers, the Young Workers League, and the organized labor movement, the American Federation of Labor, could find a common ground for a tremendous piece of work. Here were suggestions which involved no complicated machinery, no great expenditures, but which, if carried out thoroughly and in the right spirit of co-operation, would be of incalculable value to both the young and adult workers of this country, a permanent contribution to the strength of the labor movement. But it seemed that Mr. Gompers was not concerned primarily with any such thing. When the letter had been read, he began to ask more of the usual questions.

You speak of the goal of the trade union movement. You mean, do you not, that the goal is to be that mentioned in the constitution of the Federation?" And Comrade Abern answered, "Yes." But Gompers immediately took it up and began expatiating on the question: a goal, Gompers said not be but that of the daily work, how to make the morrow better than today, and so on and so forth.

"Why is it necessary to create a special section for the young work

To which Comrade Abern replied that the particular psychology of the youth necessitated a different method of approach. Gompers indicated the Women's Trade Union League as an example, calling it a sort of a Woman's Bureau of the Federation, and Gompers then made the most remarkable thing about that statement is its untruth!" The quibbling went to such a stage, that when Gompers had begun a long discussion as to whether the Central Bodies affiliated to the A. F. of L. paid this much or that much to the parent organization and had rebuked Abern severely for his "misstatements," the latter was obliged to say, "Let's not split hairs. We have come here with a definite program for work."

And so, after a long disquisition by Gompers on the already existing Press Service of the Federation, and by implication, the needlessness of a special Young Workers Bureau with all of its functions, the conference was brought to an end. Gompers was asked whether our proposals would receive further attention. Of course, he responded indignantly, that was why the conference had been called. It would be given the closest consideration by the Executive Committee of the Federation, but he would give no promise as to the results; he could give no promise because he was not the one to decide.

Comrade Abern then made a statement for the League, in which he hoped for the whole-hearted co-operation of the Federation in this matter, and promising the same co-operation from the League.

The delegation left the room, and the affair was over.

The Young Workers League does not intend to rest there. We have taken this matter seriously, and carried it on as far as we have gone, with sincerity and energy. The conference with Mr. Gompers is not our final goal. We want to bring this most important question before the rank and file of Organized Labor in this country. We want to impress them with the necessity of organizing these viciously exploited youths. We want them to accomplish this task with the help of their "leaders" if the latter will work with us; without these "leaders," if necessary, if they are as evasive and as desirous of beclouding or belittling an issue as has been Mr. Gompers.

July 1-8 Free Speech Drive Gains Power

Few campaigns have elicited greater enthusiasm or support from trade unions than the Free Speech Week, July 1 and 8, launched by the National Defense Committee and the Labor Defense Council.

A significant indication of their sentiments is contained in the statement of J. M. Budish, editor of the official organ of the United Cloth Hat and Cap Makers, who responded on behalf of that union to an appeal for help. He said:

"I am heartily in favor of such a campaign in behalf of the rights of free speech and assembly. At our last convention we passed unanimously, resolutions protesting against the persecutions of Foster, Ruthenberg, Minor, Gitlow, Whitaky, and the other comrades, and also urging every local of our International to support the institutions defending the workers under indictment.

"I can hardly add anything to the sentiments expressed in our resolutions. The Criminal Syndicalist Laws are reminiscent of the war hysteria and reflect the organized attempts made by the combined reactionary elements to intimidate and suppress the workers. The time is certainly ripe for a campaign in behalf of the constitutional rights of the worker, and I heartily endorse the movement for this great cause."

Another typical announcement of support is that of the Amalgamated Knitgoods Workers' Union, which went thru its secretary:

"At our Joint Executive Board meeting, held recently, it was decided to heartily endorse your Free Speech Week, from July 1 to 8, and to grant all the assistance possible."

Among other trade unions which have responded generously with financial and moral support are the Bakers' Union, Local 164, the Italian Dress and Waist Makers' Union, and the Dressmakers' Union.

The most recent expression of support has come from the General Executive Board of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America, which voted a generous contribution. Numerous others are coming in.

In the rankt of the workers, enthusiasm has been at a high pitch. Open air meetings which featured the program for this week were attended by large crowds, in all sections of the city.

"Merton of the Movies" Is Story of "Go-Getter" Who Goes to Hollywood

By JOHN DALE

Harry Leon Wilson is a master of pathetic humor. He shows this more than ever in "Merton of the Movies" that has been dramatized by George S. Kaufman and Marc Connelly, and is drawing new throngs nightly to the Cort Theatre.

In his "Ruggles," Wilson takes an English valet and lifts him into the high places. So Merton Gill as "Merton of the Movies" climbs into the glare of the spotlight, even as every white collar slave, in his idle and working moments, hopes and dreams to ascend.

This "Merton of the Movies" has the psychology that the Saturday Evening Post is trying to instill into Young America, the spirit of "Go-Getter." But then, the Saturday Evening Post has millions of circulation, and for the same reason Merton gets his applause. Which shows that America dotes on the philosophy of persistency, at least as it finds expression in others.

Glenn Hunter, as Merton Gill, shows us a movie fan whose heart is set on becoming a movie actor in serious plays. As a clerk in a small town general store in Simsbury, Ill., he takes a correspondence course in moving picture acting. He saves $275 and sets out for Hollywood to get into the movies.

He sets up as his ideal a movie male vamp type of person, Harold Parmalee. Merton has been practicing to imitate his ideal even back in Simsbury. Now that he comes face to face with him he is constantly trying to affect the same pose and manner which is a wonderful parody on Parmalee.

Merton finds a friend in a Miss Montague who discovers this humor only, and in his imitation of Parmalee, and enters into a conspiracy with her manager to get Merton to play in a comedy, his part to be a humorous imitation of the over-bearing Parmalee. But Merton must not be told that his part is humorous. Merton takes his work very seriously. The picture is a great success. The first showing brings down the house and Merton is proclaimed by movie fans the most wonderful low-comedy movie star, to Merton's absolute indignation and despair. He has been made a fool of. His ambition in life was to play serious plays. But Miss Montague fixes up everything and there is the usual movie ending.

Glenn Hunter in the title role has the support of an excellent cast.

Bosses Use Government Against Labor

ownership of the dominant Parties the employing class owns and controls the Government body and soul.

Thus, in the 1922 Campaign, the Republican National, Senatorial, and Congressional Committees received openly over $100,000 from the following ten millionaire employers: A. B. Mellon, John D. Rockefeller, J. A. Patten, Wm. Wrigley Jr., Fred W. Allen, Fred Upham, S. R. Guggenheim, Herbert Hoover, Payne Whitney, and Otto Kahn.

The powerful exploiters know that they can't fight victoriously in the class struggle by shaking their aprons at the workers and farmers. They therefore make the fullest possible use of the splendidly organized and highly centralized machinery of oppression—the Government—against the working masses.

Tomes could not adequately describe the recent numerous outrages perpetrated against the workers and farmers by the Government. We will note only a few of the recent experiences and casualties.

1. Soaking the Farmers

When the farming masses of North Dakota rose in revolt against the Minneapolis grain gamblers and passed a Grain Grading Act with teeth in it, the Supreme Court, at the behest of the Chicago Board of Trade, declared the law unconstitutional and put the farmer at the mercy of the greedy capitalists.

Out of a total of $400,000,000 advanced by the War Finance Corporation for aiding the export of agricultural products, over three-fourths went to banking and financial institutions and live-stock loan companies and other exporters. Only $97,000,000 went to co-operative marketing organizations representing the farmers.

The Federal Reserve lent money to banks at 3½ per cent. These financiers proceeded to lend the money to farmers and stockmen at 8 to 10 per cent plus an unlimited commission bringing the interest up to more than 30 per cent in many cases.

While the Government was fixing the price of wheat to be received by the farmer producing it, the financiers were given a free hand to garner fabulous profits running into thousands of per cent in many cases. And this while hundreds of thousands of workers and farmers were bleeding and dying in Flanders and France.

Besides, as a result of the policy of deflating the price of farm products brought about by the Federal Reserve Board and the advance in freight rates 50 per cent, have already left the State of Montana."

A typical example of the havoc raised with the conditions of farmers by this high railway freight rates ordained by the Government is seen in the fact that a farmer shipping a carload of potatoes from Lead, N. D., to Chicago has a gross income of only $1.50.

Smashing the Strikes

In the textile strike the Government issued 18 injunctions against the workers resisting a 20 per cent cut. Strikebreaking coat the State Government of Rhode Island $3,000 daily. Strikers were not permitted to talk to strikebreakers but the latter were permitted to heap the vilest abuse on the strikers. In Rhode Island alone the Government rushed in two troops of cavalry, five companies of coast artillery, one machine gun company—all in all a total of six hundred National Guardsmen to crush the strikers.

In the Mine Strike the operators broke an agreement to which the Government itself was a party. While the operators were profiteering most flagrantly, Harding spoke of their "fine revelation of business conscience," and called upon the Governors of the coal mining states to employ soldiers to break the strike.

Scores of injunctions, hundreds of evictions and arrests, were the order of the day as far as the Government's part in the Mine Strike was concerned.

In the Railway Shopmen's strike 92 railroads violated the Transportation Act and decisions of the Railroad Labor Board in 104 cases, but not a single capitalist was arrested. Instead, hundreds of workers who were striking against wages allowing them a food budget of less than that allowed the prisoners in the Cook County Jail were thrown into prison. Ninety-one injunctions were issued against the strikers. Within ten days after the strike was declared, troops were in the march against the workers in no less than six states. And when Chairman McChord of the Interstate Commerce Commission protested against the dangerous conditions into which the railroads had fallen because of strikebreakers' repair work, Strikebreaker General Daugherty issued his infamous injunction against the workers.

Conclusion

Too long have the workers clung to the illusion that government has nothing to do with industry.

The history of the United States is a history of the development of a highly centralized powerful Government. And the history of the struggles of the workers and farmers in this country is a history of untiring activity by the Government in behalf of the exploiting class and against the working masses.

which meant that the case was brought into the circuit court.

H. S. Julian of Kansas City, counsel for the defendants, filed a motion to quash in each case, holding that all of the charges against the defendants were groundless false. It was proven that none of the men were vagrants inasmuch as they were all employed at the time of their arrest. It was also shown that the only disturbance made against the peace was made by the members of the American Legion and by the police department and condemnation of government does not yet constitute a punishable crime in Missouri. Hence the judge was forced to dismiss the charges.

Because of the activities of the newly organized secret service department of the American Legion in Kansas City which takes upon itself the task of red-hunting, labor-baiting and labor smashing, this victory in Kansas City is regarded as of considerable importance.

Taylor Choice of Detroit in Tractor Drive

(By CYRIL LAMBKIN)

DETROIT, Mich.—This is a special appeal to comrades and sympathisers to get into the F. S. R. Tractor Drive and to cast their votes for Detroit's candidate, John P. Taylor, President of the Detroit Federation of Labor.

The Detroit Relief Conference for Soviet Russia is determined that the Drive must be a success, and that its candidate shall win. It is so earnest about this matter that it elected the writer of these lines special campaign manager for the Drive. He is willing to stake his reputation on the outcome. He knows that John Taylor will be one of the winners, but he is not satisfied with merely having him win. What he and the conference want is a vote so big that it will be the talk of the Labor movement for years to come.

President John P. Taylor was sympathetic to the Russian Revolution from the moment Kerensky was hot-footing it from Petrograd just a few paces ahead of the advancing victorious workers and soldiers of Russia. He realizes that the Russian Revolution is the most important phase of Labor's struggle for emancipation, at the present time.

We of Detroit who know Taylor are happy that he has accepted the candidacy and will go to Russia. For we feel that it is a privilege to be instrumental in having the President of one of the most important central labor bodies in America visit Russia and judge for himself the accomplishments of the Revolution. John Taylor, who is an intelligent progressive trade unionist, possessing historical vision, is also honest and fearless, and will not hesitate on his return to give a true account of the things he has seen.

Every comrade who wants to prove that he realizes the significance of the President of the Detroit Federation of Labor going to Russia can do so by joining in our campaign. The campaign manager wishes to hear from such comrades. Write to Cyril Lambkin, House of the Masses, 2401 Gratiot Ave., Detroit, Mich.

DO YOU UNDERSTAND The Labor Party Movement?

The development of the "FOR A LABOR PARTY" movement in the U. S. A. is growing by leaps and bounds. The entire progressive element in the labor unions is behind this movement of the workers seeking to establish a party of labor to help labor in its fight with the employing class.

Every worker should understand this epoch creating movement of organized militant labor. Every worker MUST understand this movement if he is to play an intelligent part in his union, the labor movement, as a citizen and a worker.

"FOR A LABOR PARTY"

is a pamphlet of 68 pages which sums up the whole argument on this question. It deals with every phase of the problem. The entire history of political parties of labor in this country is dealt with. The Gompers policy of "non-partisan" politics is handled without mercy. In fact, the entire political life of the workers of America is analyzed, their present-day condition revealed and the necessity of a political party of labor, organized and controlled by the labor unions, is shown.

Order this pamphlet and read up on the Labor Party movement. Every progressive unionist should order a number and dispose of them to his fellow workers.

The Federated Farmer-Labor Party

The July 3d Conference called for Chicago by the Farmer-Labor Party is hailed, in an article by John Pepper in this issue, as "an historical event." But it has yet to make real history thru the creation of a Federated Farmer-Labor Party to voice the aspirations politically of all America's workers, in the cities and on the land.

The Chicago Conference will gather in the midst of fitting surroundings to perform this historic task. The Ashland Auditorium, the home of the Chicago Street Carmen's Union, has been the scene of many strivings upward on the part of labor. Here the Farmer-Labor Party itself was born and here it has held its national conventions. Great masses of workers, in this hall, have listened to all the returned travelers of note from Soviet Russia, to John Reed, Sidney Hillman, Albert Rhys Williams, Robert Minor and Isaac McBride. Here the Amalgamated Clothing Workers in convention launched their Russian-American Industrial Corporation. Here Ludwig Martens, Soviet Representative to this country, spoke before his deportation. Many other unions, including the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, have been inspired here to intelligent working-class action. In this hall the great membership of the Chicago Street Carmen's Union has planned its tremendous struggles against powerful traction interests. Here the campaign for medical relief for Soviet Russia was launched in the days before the famine. Here the newly organized forces of the Communist movement in 1919 held their first great mass meetings, and here the first voice of protest was raised against the Palmer Red Raids, in 1920. Conventions of the cooperative movement have also been held here, as well as noted debates on the big problems confronting labor.

There is no doubt that the July 3d Conference will add to the traditions of this noted working-class center. It can blazon big on the pages of American working-class history by writing "Federated Farmer-Labor Party" across the skies illumined by the dawn of new struggles, and calling all who toil to rally to the standards of this effort toward real labor unity.

Help the Free Speech Drive, New York City, July 1-8.

Some Thoughts on July Fourth

In the Revolutionary War of 1776 against the tyranny of the British ruling class, it was the working masses that suffered most.

How valiantly the American working masses fought against oppression is thus pictured by the noted historian John Fiske describing the plight of the army at Valley Forge: "As the soldiers marched, Dec. 17, to their winter quarters, their route could be traced on the snow by the blood that oozed from bare, frost-bitten feet."

This dreadful suffering of the working masses was largely due to the sabotage and counter-revolutionary activities of the loyalists consisting of commercial, capitalistic and professional elements. Despite all their heroism and unlimited sacrifices, the working masses were cheated out of most of what they fought for in the Revolutionary War.

Then, in the Civil War, in the struggle against chattel slavery, the workers again bore the brunt of the suffering.

Yet today, July 4th, 1923, the working masses are in the grip of a far more tyrannical ruling class than they were in the Colonial days. The Declaration of Independence is dead. Civil liberties for the workers are buried. American democracy, as the working class knows it and lives it, is an employing class dictatorship. Strikes are broken, strikers are jailed, armies of gunmen, detectives, soldiers, and deputy marshals are hurled against the workers struggling for the most elementary rights and barest necessities of life.

The mass of farmers are worse off than ever. They are in the throes of bankruptcy.

The American masses are today in the grip of a brutal tyranny, the most powerful capitalist class in the world.

The American workers and farmers thru their heroic exploits in the Revolutionary and Civil Wars, and their great strikes, have shown how valiantly they can fight against oppression. For far less dastardly crimes American workers fought to overthrow the tyranny of the British ruling class.

It is high time that our working masses got together, industrially and politically, to rid themselves of their capitalist exploiters and oppressors.

Harding Is Poor Salesman

President Harding, despite all his protestations, is on the road trying to sell the Republican Party to the masses. As a salesman Harding is a regular drummer.

When Harding got to the Kansas wheat fields he stepped on the gas, ran a binder, shocked the wheat, and was "just folks" with the farmers.

Speaking on the international situation in St. Louis, the President said: "The issue of the League of Nations is as dead as slavery." In making this statement and advocating a self-perpetuating court, Harding merely let it be known that he and the Republican National Chairman, Adams, have come to an understanding on the International Court of Justice. The U. S. Chamber of Commerce and the National Association of Manufacturers, the financiers and industrial magnates, are already agreed to commit the country to some form of the International Court. In so far as the people are concerned, then, it is all over but the whistling on this question.

When turning to the more pressing question of the railroad problem, the President advocated the consolidation of American railways. While the President was talking the big capitalists were acting. Harding was voicing their sentiments and plans. The President's proposal was forthwith indorsed by the Association of Realway Security Owners. President Rea of the Pennsylvania also applauded Harding's railway solution. And the Interstate Commerce Commission sanctioned the Van Sweringen interests absorbing four more railroads.

Harding tried to throw a sop to the workers by pretending opposition to anti-strike legislation.

To-date the President's trip has been a political failure. His speeches have evoked little enthusiasm. His smiles have not helped the farmers an iota. Their conditions are growing worse from day to day. What is more, they know it and are grumbling about it. How well Harding is not doing on his Alaskan expedition is shown by the Minnesota situation. It is reported from reliable sources that the reactionary Governor Preus, running for the United States Senate, has wired the President that help from his quarters would today turn Republican failure into disaster in Minnesota.

Slipping Toward Communism

There are indications that Sam Gompers has adopted a slogan of, "Let no day pass without attacking Communism." So the head of the American Federation of Labor has found new cause for keeping the labor movement of this country isolated from European labor in the United Front established by the Transport Workers at Berlin. He charges that European labor is "slipping towards Communism."

Yet this does not prevent American "Socialists" from getting some degree of comfort out of the fact that the British Labor Party has again, for the third time, denied affiliation to the British Communist Party. In the best style of the kept press, the New York Call proclaims, "British Laborites Reject Communism."

The whole truth is that the first time 50,000 votes were cast for Communist affiliation, in 1921; 200,000 votes in 1922, and 360,000 votes this year. Communist affiliation is accepted by local Labor Party organizations, and the Communist, Saklvala, was elected to Parliament on the Labor Party ticket from one of the London districts. This is making good progress in view of the fact that silk-stocking knee breeches "Socialists" in control of the Labor Party are trying to ride into power with a J. Ramsay McDonald government, and therefore fear for their respectability thru direct association with Communists.

We would suggest a consolation party at which Gompers and the "Socialists" could get together to jointly lament the drift toward Communism on the other side of the Atlantic, contrary to the reports of Hillquit and Cahan.

Do you agree with us? Then join the Workers Party!

Just when Gompers, Lewis and Farrington signed their treaty of peace among themselves, agreeing to joint war on the radicals, the Tri-District Anthracite Convention got under way at Scranton, Pa., showing radical sentiment to be stronger than ever among the rank and file of the mine workers. The officials will not be able to get very far unless they can keep the membership with them. And the rank and file of labor, to paraphrase Gompers, is "slipping towards Radicalism."

In addition to the hot weather, the special senatorial campaign in Minnesota is warming up in great shape. The battle is between the republican standpat governor, Preus, and the Farmer-Labor Party candidate, Magnus Johnson. Slaves—Yesterday, Today, Tomorrow

By CLARISSA S. WARE

Toting their few belongings, often five chickens and pigs, in sack thrown over their shoulders, a race is moving out of bondage to the so in the South into the industrial bondage of the North.

During the last six months a stream of over 100,000 Negroes has flow from the old plantation lands into the industrial centres, into the mine mills, and factories.

South Carolina reports that over 50,000 have migrated from 41 counti alone, that each county has lost an average of over 1,000 farm worker that over 600 farms on an average have been abandoned. From Alabama and the South comes the wail of the cotton, sugar, rice, corn, and tobacco growers, who have counted on the Negro to stick to his hoe.

Two or three months ago labor recruiting agents coming from the steel mills of Pittsburgh and Ohio appeared and signed up the Negro farm hands for free rides to the 12-hour day and the industrial slavery of the non-union mines and mills.

Today Alabama has lost 3½ per cent of its total Negro farm population. In Georgia the conditions are even more extreme. More than 32,000 more extreme. More than 32,000 farm hands or over 13 per cent of the total Negro farm labor of the State have moved north. They have left their crops planted in the ground, their shack doors idly banging to and fro, to seek freedom, high wages and a steady job in the promised land of the North.

They are passing thru Chattanooga, Tennessee, in gangs of 500 each in charge of the Northern Industrial Labor Agents. In Jackson, Mississippi groups of three and four hundred are starting on the same journey.

The Exodus from Egypt

The Exodus from Egypt is on. The whole vicious system of peonage, share cropping and tenantry which have enslaved the Negro to the field boss, landlord and plantation owner —the white man's law courts and mob rule the lynchings—the utter mockery of all legal and political rights, these coupled with the short cotton crop of the last two years have prepared a fertile field for the labor recruiting agents. Except for the war-time exodus of 500,000 nothing like the present migration has occurred. Today the Negro migrant is answering the call of the Steel mills for cheap labor. Some time ago Babson advised northern employers to go South and bring Negro laborers. Emmett J. Scott of Howard University is reported to have sent a telegram to Gary advising him that there were 8,000,000 Negroes in the South furnishing a reservoir of potential mill labor.

The Negro farmer of the South has never been beyond the limits of the nearby village. The woods, mine, mill or factory mean little or nothing to him. He does not know what a union is and he has never heard the word scab. Because of his illiteracy, because of his utter ignorance of the conditions of modern industry he offers a source of unorganized labor, which is being exploited to an extent comparable only to the extent to which the foreign born workers are exploited and oppressed. Labor Agents are travelling thru the South-ern States offering free rides to a easy job, with high wages and shor hours and a people so long in bon age to cotton are throwing off the yoke of serfdom and taking the free rides to enter bondage to Ste

And from Atlanta comes the def inite statement by Connors of th Negro Welfare Association:

"They are leaving Atlanta for th North by the car load and are goin to the steel mills of Pennsylvan and Ohio."

Cotton Is No Longer King

Cotton is King no longer. It ha abdicated to Steel. The develop ment of American Imperialism ha reached the stage where the invest ment of capital in other lands is calling for the production of steel steel and ever more steel. And the Negro laborer is laying aside his ho and answering the call of the Stee King for new recruits to his army o twelve-hour day slaves.

Many times the Negro Worker ha been misinformed by his white brother. Many times Negroes hav been blamed for scabbing when the very union on strike had refused membership to Negro Workers. The race riots, engineered by the em ployers in their efforts to keep the ranks of labor divided, have often left bitterness and antagonism be tween the Negro and white workers But as in the United Mine Workers of America, the Negroes have been organized and have proven themselves staunch union men, so in other unions, the realization of the nee for solidarity of labor and the unity of interest of all workers is develop ing apace.

Inciting To Violence and unemployment compensation equivalent to two-thirds of the regular wage, and encouraged the men in the mines to reduce production to the lowest possible minimum.

These studied advances to the Ruhr workers did not augment, but rather released the tension. Certainly there was nothing remotely resembling a fighting mood in the Ruhr at that time. Partly this was due, as well, to the fact that the German iron and coal barons had no desire for a military rencontre with imperialistic France, and was striving to secure better terms for itself by striking a bargain with the French bourgeoisie at the expense of the German people.

Undoubtedly the German bourgeoisie is preparing to capitulate. It cannot fight and will not pay. There is only one other possibility—to unload the burden of a new capitulation to Entente capitalism on top of the fulfillment expenditures and sabotage costs upon the producing masses of Germany. Furthermore German capital has earned enough to satisfy even its rapacity. It has plundered the treasury of the nation to exhaustion. In the last five months the national debt of Germany was increased from 1½ thousand to 10 thousand billions, the gold reserve of the Reichsbank, however, fell from 900 to 600 million goldmark. Further more the French have managed to solve the difficulties of coal and coke transportation, despite the statements of the German press to the contrary, and are already preparing to carry off the reparation coal that has been the bone of contention during all these sorry months.

In view of these facts the German bourgeoisie has lost interest in passive resistance. The means by which the change of front is being accomplished is characteristically capitalistic. The Mark is falling from hour to hour, until it has become practically valueless. Prices have risen almost 250 per cent, but wage increases are hardly refined. The workers of the Ruhr district the heroes and the savior of Germany only a few weeks ago, have turned into traitors over night in the eyes of the rulers. High prices and low wages drive them to desperation. And then, when disturbances break out, when hunger revolts arise, when had tempered individuals follow the lead of capitalist and fascist provocateurs, German capital disowns them and with a theatrical appeal to the world it disavows all responsibility for the "communistic putsch."

The capitalist press took up the news with varying emphasis. A number of new-papers were honest enough to admit that the uprising in the Ruhr was inevitable in view of occurrences there. Others suspected, and even openly accused the communist movement of Germany of inciting the revolt. Here in America the latter version—being the most sensational—was generally given credence. But we must confess, that we have nowhere seen a more brazen and more rotten piece of editorialism than that which appeared in the N. Y. Call on June 12th.

This is the article:

"Failure of the Ruhr Commune"

"We have several times discussed Ruhr as an imperialistic and economic battleground between the French and German capitalists, with the British standing close to the sidelines, if not supporting the Stinnes group. Few would ever think that owing to the huge military forces scattered thru the Rhineland there would be a Communist uprising in the Ruhr. Yet it happened, altho all the cards were stacked against them. Here we cannot help asserting that audacity ceases to be a virtue and becomes positively criminal.

"All lines of communication were in the hands of the [illegible] union movement was divided between the regular organizations and the Catholic unions, while the most powerful group in the Rhineland, the Socialist party, withheld its approval, knowing well that all the so-called revolutionists could do would be to prepare a bulwark for a Franco-German capitalist holiday. Thus made the Communists a mob without leadership, purpose, direction or goal, under the general demoralization of the labor movement can be called goal. When they got partial control in one place they were compelled to organize a police force to put down the very mobs their own incapacity and wildness created.

"Certain leaders are now disclaiming all responsibility for the madmen's work. The Putsch again with fortunately less slaughter. Yet by a freak the crazy enterprise only for a day succeeded there would be loud boasting about the brilliant tactics of the proletarian batallions' and the 'proletarian dictators.'"

What has actually happened in Germany?

On the 25th day of May the general strike movement of the Ruhr miners began. The "Rote Fahne" (Berlin), of May 25th, commented on the strike on its first page in a two column heavy typed article entitled "Agents Provocateurs at Work:"

"The occurrences at Dortmund should commend the serious attention of the communist movement. The German working class and the Communist Party are in great danger. If we do not succeed in making the workers realize the significance of what is going on, we will run headlong into a decisive defeat.

"The capitalist papers admit that large masses are engaged in the Dortmund movement. That, in itself, shows that the uprising is not being fomented from without, that it is the outgrowth of a situation that has been created in the Ruhr thru its occupation by the French and the attitude of the German bourgeoisie.

"The bourgeoisie is crying for national defense and national resistance. It pays for this resistance with billions out of the national treasury, billions that the working class must be bled white to replace. At the same time it is exploiting the workers shamelessly. In the Ruhr prices are even higher than in the rest of Germany. Wage increases are in no relation to the increase in prices. In this situation what is more natural than that the workers should rise in self-defense? It is a crime on the part of the Social-Democracy and the labor union movement that they do not stand, to a man, behind these utterly justifiable demands of the workers. It is a crime not only against the life of these workers, against the future of the Social-Democracy and the whole, that national existence at whose altar the Social-Democracy and the bourgeoisie do lip service!...

"By its so-called protective organizations the German bourgeoisie has been provoking proletarian resistance in order to club it down relentlessly. The bourgeois press shamelessly accuses the desperate workingmen of taking weapons from the French. It is not entirely impossible that French agents are working hand in hand with German Fascists, and that serious attempts are being made to draw headless elements among the workers into open opposition with promises of French support.

"The Communist Party stands firmly behind every struggle of the working class and will help in this struggle too, with every weapon at its command. But at the same time it is its duty to warn the working class that it does not come into this conflict without arms. It is the duty of every Communist to join in this mass movement to persuade the workers to evade every show of force, and to make use, only, of the powerful weapons of strike and political demonstrations. It is to be feared that these spontaneous demonstrations of the working class will sooner or later take on an aspect that will make it easy for the bourgeoisie to choke them in blood unless the workers keep their heads. It is up to the workers to refute by their actions, the accusation that they have capitulated before French imperialism. The provocative intention of the French and German bourgeoisie must be frustrated. The Party must proceed with iron energy and force."

Who dares to speak of communist Putsches in the face of this determined declaration?

Is this the language of men who would draw a whole people into almost certain annihilation in order to win political power for themselves?

The following brief excerpts from various sources underscore the above statement from the Rote Fahne:

On May 27th the representative of the Prussian government declared at the press conference:

"It must be said in the interest of truth, that the Communists are not implicated in the occurrences in the Ruhr. It is simply a strike movement born of bitter need and low wages."

Concerning the alleged terror by Communist Hundertschaften (defensive squads), the bourgeois democratic "Frankfurter Zeitung" on May 27 writes:

"It must be reiterated, that, in the opinion of experienced labor leaders, the sentiment among German workers has become extraordinarily acute during the last few weeks. The opposition of manufacturers to a wage increase commensurate to the depreciation of German currency has aroused extreme dissatisfaction."

On the 26th of May the "Vorwaerts" (Berlin), the spiritual brother of the N. Y. Call, wrote concerning the "communist" uprising:

"That will, we hope, put an end to sensational headlines in the Berlin press about "communist rebellions" and "red rule," that have been chasing bleak shivers up and down the backs of our honest bourgeois.

In reality this is not a communist strike, but an explosion of the Ruhr workmen.

"This constant harping on the Communists cannot do away with the fact that other elements, much more closely related to the German Nationalists, have played a significant role in the uprising, and that, when all is said and done, the root of the evil lies in the shameless exploitation of the masses and in the incompetent and unsocial policies of both our government and our municipal chiefs."

No one can foretell the outcome at the present time. The brackets tumble on the Mark has created conditions that force even the most conservative labor leaders to favor a general strike of all workers as the only possible protection against the ravages of capitalist price boosters.

It is not the "terror" of the Communists that drives these men out of their minds, but the terror of their bosses, who are tightening the screws until their workmen, out of sheer desperation, are turning upon their oppressors, giving them the opportunity for which they have been longing, to close the deal with their "enemy," the French bourgeoisie.

No one sees thru these machinations more clearly than the Communists of Germany. Their position from beginning to end, has been one of helpfulness in this strike for mere existence, but one of earnest warning against political uprising that would deliver the working class of Germany into the hands of this merciless enemies at the present time.

Labor Party Is Organized

Independence Day Witnesses New Declaration of Political Freedom by Industrialists and Farmers

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL

ASHLAND AUDITORIUM, CHICAGO, ILL., July 4.—Thru the holiday hours of Independence Day, the irresistible demand for a class "Federated Farmer-Labor Party" took definite shape here, so that by nightfall representative committees on organization and program and finance were at work planning the structure and the immediate future activities of the new giant enterprise of American labor.

It was inevitable that there should be climbed in this tremendous effort moved forward to complete achievement, giving new meaning to the nation's Birthday, the Fourth of July, the day that will, no doubt, also mark the national day of united political action of the industrial workers and working farmers in these United States.

But the flood of debate finally poured into the same channel so that the instructions to the Organization Committee to go ahead "for the Federated Farmer-Labor Party," received the unanimous support practically of all the delegates, numbered approximately at one thousand.

It was with a "we want action" spirit that the delegates gathered in the Labor Party Conference on its second day. With William Bough, spokesman of the Washington farmers of the Far West who have ranged themselves in a class fight against the exploiters on the Pacific Coast as chairman he urged the delegates to be short on parliamentary tricks and long on action, and the days big battle, the crucial struggle of the conference was on.

The Wisconsin delegation urged that the gathering declare itself as the Conference for Independent Political Action, that the conference accept the report of the credentials committee to the Farmer-Labor Party Conference of the previous day, and that the chairman be authorized to appoint committee on committees constituted of representatives of the recognized groups, this committee to select the committees on organization, resolutions, program and finance.

Delegate Joseph Manley, Bridge and Structural Iron Workers of New York City, moved an amendment consisting of five propositions. First:

This conference declares itself in favor of the immediate formation of an all-inclusive Federated Farmer-Labor Party. Second:

The convention shall elect an organization committee, the personnel of which was provided for in detail. Third:

The organization committee shall formulate and report to the convention a plan of organization for the Federated Farmer-Labor Party—using the existing Farmer-Labor Party structure as the basis for this organization. Fourth:

The organization committee shall prepare registration blanks for all delegates present which shall show their names, addresses, the organizations they represent, and the membership of these organizations, and have these filled out by the delegates. Fifth:

The organization committee shall include in its report a plan for the election of a National Executive Committee in which the groups named above shall be represented.

It was this proposition that took the conference by storm. Waves of applause greeted practically every word spoken in its favor, while opposition was practically greeted with complete silence.

When one delegate protested the conference was not ready to move that fast, Delegate Kruse, New Jersey, asked, "If not now when will the conference get down to business. That is what he would like to know. Will we fail again, or will we make an effort to succeed?"

Delegate Gorman, California, told how the Los Angeles Labor Party had been formed with the hope that a national organization would be built at the earliest possible moment.

"If this convention adjourns without forming the Labor Party, then there will be an end to our Labor Party movement oHut in Los Angeles. I notice that there are quite a number of people here who are speaking in favor of the Labor Party but who are sabotaging its realization."

Julius Hochman, representing the Joint Board of the New York Dress and Waist Makers' Union and also the conference correspondent of the Socialist daily, the New York Call, was one of those most outspoken against the Manley proposition. He thought the Manley proposition had been worked out too much in detail and was the expression of a group that had received too much preparation. He referred of course to the Workers Party.

Delegate Wicks replied that the amendment did not prevent the conference from expressing its views on the organization of the Labor Party. Amid cheers, he claimed that the delegates were in a hurry to get down to business. He reviewed the Chicago and Cleveland conferences of the committee for progressive political action and asked, "will you finish in the same way."

The conference was roused to its highest pitch of enthusiasm, however, by a dirt farmer from North Dakota, R. H. Walker, also a member of the state legislature.

Walker declared he had no part in framing the amendment, but that he was for it. He told how the farmers of the West were going into bankruptcy, that these were demanding a united front, and not the big business bandits, even if the bourgeois, politicians and political opportunities felt that the time was not ripe for it.

"We want action," said Walker. "We farmers are with you industrialists." He said he was a small farmer and was in debt five thousand dollars. That he had the eight hour day on the farms, eight hours before dinner and eight hours after dinner, and still we don't get enough to eat.

Rose Wolkowitz, also delegate of the New York Joint Board, Dress and Waist Makers' Union, replied to delegate Hochman, declaring the rank and file of the clothing workers are impatient for real independent political action.

Several delegates of the Proletarian Party spoke, but they trailed the Socialist attitude voiced by Hochman, fearing that the Workers party delegation was trying to railroad something thru the conference.

Then came "Mother" Mary Jones, more than 82 years of age, veteran of all labor's battles for the past half century and more, who urged industrial as well as political amalgamation for the workers.

There was also Lieutenant Governor George F. Comings of Wisconsin, and Chairman White, of the Minnesota Farmer-Labor Party, ending hours of oratory that wheeled the delegates' desires to get down to real business. The delegates, saw their opportunity when the report of the credentials committee was read and a motion made to seat all the hundreds of delegates whose names had been turned in, as delegates of national political organizations, international labor unions, state, city central and local labor unions, labor fraternal organizations and labor publications.

Great Gathering Starts Early to Show Desire for "Federated Labor Party"

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL
(Special to "The Worker")

ASHLAND AUDITORIUM, CHICAGO.—The great gathering called together at the Ashland Auditorium, in Chicago, by the Farmer-Labor Party, wants a "Federated Farmer-Labor Party," embracing all workers in industry and on the land who are ready to take their stand against the two old Wall Street parties.

This dynamic demand was felt as the hundreds of delegates cheered speaker after speaker at the opening sessions of the gathering on Tuesday. It came to the front especially when, for a time, it seemed as if the preliminary convention of the Farmer-Labor Party would delay getting down to the real work of discussing the unity of all labor's political forces. Then it was voted unanimously late Tuesday afternoon, to adjourn and reconvene ten o'clock Wednesday morning, July 4th, as the "Labor Party Conference," that had drawn most of the delegates to Chicago from every section of the country.

John Fitzpatrick, president of the Chicago Federation of Labor, struck the note of aspiration that pervaded the entire conference, when he called for the unity of all the political forces of labor.

"We are divided now into nine or ten different groups," said Fitzpatrick, "all striving in a dozen different directions. How foolish and ridiculous it is for the workers to be divided, when the bosses of big business are united everywhere. We are here to discuss and get a solution of the problem confronting us. We are going to come out of this conference with some sort of an arrangement, some kind of solution, some sort of a working agreement that will centralize our efforts, and cause all our difficulties to vanish."

R. F. Pettigrew, of Sioux Falls, So. Dakota, drew repeated applause from the delegates as he urged a workers' government, a government giving all power to the workers.

Then came "Mother" Mary Jones, more than 82 years of age, veteran of all labor's battles for the past half century and more, who urged industrial as well as political amalgamation for the workers.

There was also Lieutenant Governor George F. Comings of Wisconsin, and Chairman White, of the Minnesota Farmer-Labor Party, ending hours of oratory that wheeled the delegates' desires to get down to real business. The delegates, saw their opportunity when the report of the credentials committee was read and a motion made to seat all the hundreds of delegates whose names had been turned in, as delegates of national political organizations, international labor unions, state, city central and local labor unions, labor fraternal organizations and labor publications.

All Delegates Demand Seats

Evidently some delegates of the Farmer-Labor Party thought their convention was being completely lost sight of in the stampede for "the Labor Party Conference." It was urged that the duly authorized Farmer-Labor Party delegates be segregated from the general delegation so that the Farmer-Labor Party could proceed with its preliminary business. It was urged that only regular Farmer-Labor Party delegates, or delegates of organizations regularly affiliated with the Farmer-Labor Party sit in at this preliminary gathering. This stirred considerable discussion among large numbers of the delegates, even some Farmer-Laborites who were delegates of local unions that did not pay dues to the Farmer-Labor Party. An attempt to seat all delegates in the Farmer-Labor Party convention, except the delegates of national industrial and political organizations, was only a weak dam that held back the final unanimous demand for the immediate seating of all delegates, a recommendation that had been originally made by the credentials committee.

Even after the chairman of the credentials committee had announced that credentials had been reported for all delegates contemplating participation in the "Labor Party Conference," and these had actually been seated, Chairman Toscan Bennett still held, on a point of order, that the gathering was still the convention of the Farmer-Labor Party.

It was finally on the motion of C. E. Ruthenberg, secretary of the Workers Party, that the tangle was finally straightened out by the adjournment until Wednesday morning, when the "Labor Party Conference" will get under way.

John Farmer at the Convention

By JOHN FARMER
(Special to "The Worker")

A hurried census of farmers taken just at the opening session indicates that the city workers will hear from the soil. There are representatives from the Wisconsin, Nonpartisan League 25 strong.

Other State League organizations are there and the delegates from several other organizations. Among these there are The Western Progressive Farmers, The United Farmers Educational League and The Progressive Farmers of Idaho.

The following conversation overheard between Brother Bouck of Washington State Grange fame and now of the Western Progressive Farmers with "Dad" Walker of the United Farmers Educational League and a member of the State Legislature of North Dakota. These "dirt" farmers were wondering what could be done at this convention. "Well," Dad remarked, "there is one thing we've got to shoot straight on, and that's the land." Brother Bouck came back with the statement that "Use and occupancy of Land" was going to be the title to the land.

This little snatch of conversation may be taken merely as one of the straws that indicate which way the cyclone will blow unless this convention comes thru with a fundamental remedy for the bankruptcy of the American farmers. The farmers want the Land and they realize that they will get it only by joint political action with the City workers.

Federated Farmer-Labor Party Is Launched Amid Tremendous Enthusiasm at Chicago Conference

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL

ASHLAND AUDITORIUM, CHICAGO.—The Federated Farmer-Labor Party has been organized. It came into existence here late Thursday night, July 5th, by practically the unanimous vote of the spirited gathering brought together in the "Labor Party Conference." The conquering spirit of the forward-looking delegates who stuck together thru the three-days' gathering in spite of every difference, augurs well for the future of united political action of the workers and farmers of the United States.

The threatened walkout of small elements of the Farmer-Labor Party did not materialize. Chairman Bouck adjourned the conference to die amid three rousing cheers for the Federated Farmer-Labor Party, cheers that shook the great building of the Chicago Street Carmen's Union.

Adjournment came with the selection of the National Executive committee and the adoption of the report of the Resolutions Committee. A meeting of the Farmer-Labor Party delegates for Friday was set almost simultaneously with the first meeting of the executive of the Federated Party. Even if the Farmer-Labor Party does not come into the Federated Party as a national organization, it is assured that all of its important State organizations and worthwhile membership will come in.

There was a small group within the Farmer-Labor Party that kept up to the last its opposition to the proposal of the organization committee of the conference providing for the organization of the Federated Party and proposing a program for it.

It was this group that was allowed to caucus before the evening session. The caucus selected a committee that drew up a substitute to the committee's report that was nearly laughed out of the convention hall.

The substitute was offered by Robert M. Buck, editor of The New Majority, and urged that the conference accept the platform and constitution of the Farmer-Labor Party, give control of the Federated Party into its hands thru the new National Executive Committee, and then pledged all affiliated organizations against drawing any inspiration from the Communist International. In presenting his substitute Buck misinterpreted a proposal of delegate Ruthenberg, during the afternoon session, that the Farmer-Labor Party structure alone be accepted as the skeleton around which to build the Federated Party. The discussion on the Buck substitute was another revelation of the determination of the conference to go ahead with the organization of the Federated Party.

Doesn't Want "Bolsheviks" Outlawed

Delegate James Walker, North Dakota, pointed out that the Farmer-Laborites were evidently trying to write a new Declaration of Independence, to write a Declaration of Independence from the Bolsheviks.

"We farmers out West are not afraid of the Bolsheviks," he said. "We have been called everything imaginable and that does not bother us. We are stickers."

Delegate Jensen, Machinists, Chicago, urged the cause of the striking shopmen and declared it was a shame for a few Farmer-Laborite politicians of Cook County, Chicago, to try to kill an inspiration of workers and farmers.

Delegate Kruse made an appeal to given the floor and charged that the effort to discriminate against the Workers Party today, because of its international relations, could easily be used against any other organization tonight, even be used against the Socialist Party that is now affiliated with the new Hamburg Socialist International.

Delegate Kruz made an appeal to the Farmer-Labor Delegates not to be carried away by the action of some of their officials.

This was followed by a motion to table the substitute which was carried.

Delegate Engdahl at this point again showed that only a small minority of the Farmer-Labor delegates were for the substitute, and urged Fitzpatrick, Buck, Brown and other Farmer-Laborites to join with the ninety-nine per cent of the delegates to put over the Federated Farmer-Labor Party by unanimous decision.

After several more speeches, delegate Long, Wisconsin, again urged his amendment that the whole matter before the convention be referred to a committee for consideration by a conference next year. This amendment was again defeated by a good majority, the original proposals of the organization committee were adopted following a speech by Secretary Manley, for the committee.

Workers Party Struggles for Unity

The real convention floor struggle for the creation of political unity among America's workers started when Manley made the report for the organization committee. It was this committee that had battled long to iron out all differences and reach a unanimous agreement in harmony with the overwhelming sentiment of the delegates.

Then Jay Brown, Secretary of the Farmer-Labor Party, whose name was given to the call for the Convention, declared, "I very much regret the necessity that compels me to disagree with the report of the committee. I am in agreement with the platform. I have no regrets for the calling of this gathering," and then in a rather pessimistic mood, "I am glad that we at least tried to make it succeed. The adoption of the constitution proposed would defeat the object for which this gathering was called together. The constitution would compel the Farmer-Labor Party to commit suicide, and our party will not do that." He concluded by declaring that the calling red the Conference was the supreme effort of the career of the Farmer-Labor Party.

Then John Fitzpatrick, President of the Chicago Federation of Labor, and one of the Founders of the Farmer-Labor Party, came to the platform amid considerable applause. But he was more pessimistic than Brown, stating at the beginning that he subscribed to everything that Brown had said.

Fitzpatrick made the first open criticism of the Workers Party, when he declared, that "other political groups have injected themselves into this situation," adding that the Farmer Labor Party is not a party to proceedings here.

"If we can't get the Farmer-Labor Party convention into session after this conference, then the Farmer-Labor Party is dead," continued Fitzpatrick, adding, "then let her go."

He said that another political party, the Workers Party, had injected itself into the picture, he charged that the Workers Party could not reach the rank and file of American labor, and if it could not do that then it had killed that thing, meaning the movement for unity.

"If they want to do a real job of killing independent political action, then let them jam their program down our throats. The minute the Workers Party is identified with this thing, then this movement is not only running up a blind alley, but against a stone wall. You will put the cudgel, the gun and the ammunition in the

"Organize the Federated Farmer-Labor Party," Urged by Workers Party at July 3d Convention in Chicago

(Special to The Worker)

ASHLAND AUDITORIUM, CHICAGO.—The convention of the Workers Party called upon the delegates to the Conference now to organize the "Federated Farmer-Labor Party," was as follows:

Organize the Federated Farmer-Labor Party!

A great Convention of the representatives of many workers' and farmers' organizations has been called to unite the working and farming masses into a Federated Farmer-Labor Party.

There are, today, gathered for this purpose delegates speaking for hundreds of thousands of workers and farmers. We already have a sufficiently strong and adequate representation of the masses to launch forthwith the new Federated Farmer-Labor Party.

Under no circumstances must we permit a repetition of the Cleveland Conference which turned its back on the workers and farmers by refusing to organize a party uniting the working and farming classes politically. Thus the Workers Party is in thoro agreement with John Fitzpatrick when, speaking on the Cleveland Conference before the Chicago Federation of Labor, he said: "They became scab and dual to Sam Gompers, and the Chicago Federation of Labor will have nothing to do with such a policy. If we have to go along that reactionary path, we will be regular and go with the A. F. of L. but WE ARE NOT WEAKENING IN OUR POSITION THAT THERE MUST BE A DEFINITELY WORKERS' PARTY. WE ARE GOING RIGHT AHEAD."

In view of the present situation and the danger of disruption of the Labor and Farmers' movements there is a pressing need for "a definitely workers' Party." The Chicago Convention must never be allowed to lead to the Cleveland Conference.

Farmer-Labor Party Call for Organization Conference

Farmer-Labor Party

The Workers Party looks with great favor upon the plan to have the present Farmer-Labor Party serve as the basis for the organization of a united political party of the workers and farmers. But we are unreservedly committed to the original call of the Farmer-Labor Party declaring for the creation of a new, big united organization of the laboring and farming masses.

The Workers Party unqualifiedly indorses this call when it says: "Monster Political Convention of the Workers of America," Chicago, July 3, 1923. Every local union, Central Body, Farm Organization, State, National and International Body and Political Group Invited. A Chance At Last for Bringing About United Action of the Workers of Hand and Brain on the Political Field."

Indeed, the July 3rd Convention is much more than an ordinary, regular convention of the existing Farmer-Labor Party. It is really a monster convention of the workers of America.

The Workers Party is prepared gladly to devote all its energies and render its greatest services to the upbuilding of a virile Federated Farmer-Labor Party. To this end Labor Party, who declared he had come to this convention to get real united political action.

"We want a clearing house," he said, "that will bring order. They say we will be called Communists, Bolsheviks and Reds. I want to say, that irrespective of who or what we are, when we go out on strike, or carry on any other struggle for the most moderate demands, the public pass always gives us that kind of a label. There is no sense whatever in getting frightened. Why didn't Buck bring in a minority report here telling us what he wanted," with the delegates adding "that's right, that's right.

Constitution for New Party Offered

Secretary Manley first read a proposed Constitution for the "Federated Farmer-Labor Party." When he finished reading the delegates waited in breathless earnest for the storm to break, as it was instinctively felt that there was opposition. Then there came the motion from the Farmer-Labor group that consideration of the proposed Constitution be postponed until the question of policy had been decided. With the feeling of "anything to satisfy the Farmer-Laborites" the delegates voted for the motion. When the committee announced that the proposed statement of principles and policy was not yet ready a recess was taken. Upon reconvening Secretary Manley, for the committee, read a rather lengthy document setting forth the evils confronting the workers and farmers, and proposing a program for immediate action. The debate then started on the motion to adopt the statement, but ranged all up and down the whole question of political unity.

Buck was the first to be recognized by the chairman. Buck said he spoke as a minority member of the organization committee, and as a representative of his party. He said that the plan of organization proposed provided for a duplication of with certain extensions, of the Farmer-Labor Party.

"The Farmer-Labor Party cannot agree to the report of the organization committee," said Buck. "The committee was notified of that fact and I am now notifying the convention.

He then argued that the Farmer-Labor Party is a self-governing organization, that it had invited guests to its convention to confer on the question of united political action, that it had wanted a free and open conference, that it did not want to program the conference. He charged that the program offered was the program of a group and as such it was not acceptable.

"The main thing to remember is that the Farmer-Labor Party is an entity of its own, and that will have a convention of its own to consider these matters."

Buck ceased talking having offered no alternate proposition to that of the committee, suggesting no plan thru which to secure political unity.

Delegate I. G. Scott, a Minneapolis, Minn., Socialist Alderman, the only Socialist Party delegate here, said he thought that Buck had developed a case of cold feet. He urged the proposals of the committee, stating that that was what was needed to get united political action.

Opposes Chicago Officialdom

It was delegate Joseph C. Hearing, however, representing a Cincinnati Machinist's Lodge, who started the revolt in the ranks of the Farmer-Labor Party itself. He said he was a member of the Party in Cincinnati and claimed that the Ohio Farmer-Labor Party was not in accord with the statement Buck had made.

"We are not satisfied with the tactics of certain Farmer-Laborites here," he said. "We feel that the efforts made here are honest efforts to bring together the workers and farmers on the political field."

J. Edmunds Bird, of Oklahoma, read from the call for the gathering, showing that it had been convened by the Farmer-Laborites to "knit the workers and afrmers together politically."

Arne Swabeck, of the Chicago Painters Union, then got the floor and said that was what his organization was for, the knitting together of labor forces, and declared that was what the committee report provided for. Charles Wills, business manager of The New Majority, and Farmer-Labor Party delegate, urged his party have an oportunity to express itself thru its own convention.

Delegate William F. Dunne, of the Butte, Montana, Bulletin, said the officials of the Farmer-Labor Party in sending out their call for this conference, had met with a response that they little dreamed of, and that they were now scared.

Convention Is Victory of Rank and File

"The success of this gathering is not the victory of the Farmer-Labor Party," said Dunne. "It is the victory of the American Workers and Farmers. I hope that the leaders of the Farmer-Labor Party are big enough to submerge themselves in this mass movement." He urged that the Farmer-Labor Party become a component part of this movement, asking Fitzpatrick, "Do you want to leave the Workers and Farmers now, that they are about to make an important decision?", in referring to an amendment that had been offered by Delegate J. Weller Long, of Wisconsin, to refer the Constitution and Program back to the various organizations represented and to call another conference next year. Dunne said "Conversations and conferences are well enough for diplomats, but the Workers and Farmers want action on this problem. It was the yearning of the Working Class for unity that brought this gathering together. I hope that we will achieve the results necessary to bring a little light and a little hope into the American labor movement that needs it very badly indeed."

Stormy Applause swept the conference when C. E. Ruthenberg, Secretary of the Workers Party, was recognized and came to the platform to speak. He started by saying that the statements made by Fitzpatrick were not justified. He showed that it was the Farmer-Labor Party's own credential committee that was responsible for the organization of the conference. He went on to show that twenty-six out of the twenty-nine members of the Organization Committee had favored the committee report then before the conference, so that the report could be referred to as a Workers Party proposition. All groups in the convention favored it with the exception of Farmer-Laborites. He showed that the members of the Farmer-Labor Party could not swallow up or destroy the Farmer-Labor Party."

Ruthenberg then pointed out that the resolution offered and adopted towards the close of the first day's session provided for making the Farmer-Labor Party the basis of the structure of the proposed Federated Party. We are giving the Farmer-Labor Party five members on the National Legislative Committee instead of three on the Organization Committee. We are willing to do all we can to bring the masses into this Federated Farmer-Labor Party that will then respond to the demands of the life of the people.

"But this one group, the Farmer-Labor Party group, is afraid of the great opportunity that confronts it. It hesitates and refuses to go forward."

Ruthenberg then told how the Workers Party had exerted itself to the utmost to make the conference a success. He said the Workers Party, nevertheless, was agreeable to letting the Farmer-Labor Party go ahead and be the foreboat of the new party, but that the Workers Party drew the line at failure to secure united action in this gathering.

"We cannot concede that the unifying organization shall not be formed here," he concluded.

Kennedy Supports Committee's Report

Delegate John C. Kennedy, State Secretary of the Farmer-Labor Party for Washington, also took the officials of his own organization to task and came out boldly for the Organization Committee's report.

"We cannot go back home and say that we talked a lot and did nothing,

Must Create Party Uniting All Labor, Says Jay G. Brown in Secretary's Report

ASHLAND AUDITORIUM, CHICAGO.—"Since it could see no promise thru the Conference for Progressive Political Action," said Jay G. Brown, in his report to the National Convention of the Farmer-Labor Party, "the Farmer-Labor Party did feel duty bound to itself to point out a means which might result in knitting together the many warring and divided groups into some measure of political unity."

Brown, who is national secretary of the Farmer-Labor Party, reviewed the history of the Conference for Progressive Political Action from its inception in Chicago in February, 1922, to its act of treachery to the working class in its Cleveland conference last December.

He showed that this conference was called for the first time on the eve of the great industrial upheavals that shook the nation in the coal and rail strikes, and that out of that struggle it was to be expected a definite political movement of labor would evolve. But when the Farmer-Labor Party endeavored to commit the Cleveland conference to independent political action of the workers thru a party of their own that would bring the workers of hand and brain together for the purpose of waging the conquest of government, the motion was crushed under the steam roller of the machine that controlled the organization.

In face of this rebuke to the working class the Farmer-Labor Party was in duty bound to withdraw from the Conference for Progressive Political Action, and decided to issue the call for the creation of a real unity of labor on the political field.

Civil Liberty At Lowest Ebb

One of the reasons for the failure of various minority parties to achieve success in the United States has been because many groups and parties are striving to benefit the workers but all of them mutually struggle against each other. In the 1920 election in Illinois there were ten candidates for governor."

This condition must stop, said Brown. "Civil liberty is at a lower ebb today than ever before. Rights, long cherished, are slipping away. Great combinations of wealth are becoming more and more ruthless. Farmers are losing their farms."

"The rich may freely advocate any form of open violence and lawlessness while the prison doors close upon the poor for the mere expression of opinion. The time, the place and the opportunity for correcting these conditions are here today," said Secretary Brown, in closing his plea for the unity of labor's forces—the unions, the farmers' organizations and the several minority political parties must unite into one group for action against the old parties of capitalism.

hands of our enemies to blow us off the face of the earth."

Fitzpatrick had made several references to Foster and Manley, and the Chairman recognized Foster as the next speaker, the delegates arose en masse cheering the secretary of the Trade Union Educational League.

"Every delegate here can adopt the Organization Committee's proposition with a full, free will, and report back to their various organizations," said Foster. "Our duty here is to go right ahead and adopt the report of the Organization Committee."

He then compared the developments in Great Britain for the Labor Party and the situation in this country. He said that the Labor Union officials in England had favored independent political action, whereas here in the United States the leading officials of labor, headed by Sam Gompers, were opposed to the Labor Party idea. Amid groans Foster declared that, "the main obstacle to an American Labor Party is Sam Gompers."

Must Not Repeat Failures

Then Foster analysed the Conference for Progressive Political Action that first met at Chicago and later in Cleveland. He said he did not have much faith in it because he knew "Bill" Johnston, its chairman, president of the International Association of Machinists.

"Nothing came of the Chicago Conference, he said, and nothing happened at Cleveland. The Farmer-Labor Party broke with this conference at Cleveland, and Fitzpatrick dubbed it a scab organization.

"Then what did the Farmer-Labor Party do?" asked Foster. "It went out and appealed to the rank and file. This conference here is the result. There is no one here who was not invited. The sentiment here is that the Federated Farmer-Labor Party be formed. The Farmer-Labor Party should go along with this movement. Our only chance now is to appeal to the rank and file. If the Farmer-Labor Party did not want to do this, why did it call this conference? We must unite and carry on a militant struggle in all the unions for the Federated Farmer-Labor Party idea, to win the rank and file for this idea. Dan Boula, a sage brush farmer from Washington, delegate of Washington Farmer Labor Party, said he had come two thousand miles for the accomplishment of some practical work.

"It would be an impractical thing for both sides to leave this convention conference divided. I want to see all groups united. I want to tell the people back home that we had a great convention and that we adjourned united." Other speakers spoke along the same line until a spokesman of the Wisconsin non-Partisan League asked, "are we Communists? That is the question that must be answered here, and we must make the answer a loud "No."

"We urge unity in the right direction." He complimented the Workers Party delegates on the excellent and intellectual literature with which they had flooded the convention, admitting that the Communists employed "tactics supreme."

"If you can't suit radical Wisconsin," he concluded, "then you cant suit any other state," winding up with what was intended to be a eulogy of Senator LaFollette. Mention of LaFollette brought the barest ripple of applause.

One of the most effective talks was made by Delegate A. J. Feldhaus, Machinists' Lodge No. 162, Cincinnati, Ohio, a member of the Farmer-

Lie Hurled at Gary; Steel Workers Anxious to Abolish the Twelve-Hour Working Day

This week's article in our war on the 12-Hour Day annihilates the contention of Judge Elbert H. Gary, head of the steel trust, that the steel workers do not want the shorter workday.

This is one of the pet arguments of the bosses in every fight against the shortening of the working day. They urge it before the courts, bribe ignorant workers to testify for them, and are usually upheld by the capitalist judges.

We urge all workers, not only those in the steel mills, to send in their letters telling us what they think, not only of the 12-Hour Day, but even of the 10-Hour Day. We will publish as many of these letters as we can. There will be two more special articles in the campaign against the 12-Hour Day, as follows:

JULY 21:—Why does the United States Government, federal, state and local, support the steel trust in its war upon the steel workers?

JULY 28:—Why does Gompers oppose the organization of the workers in the steel industry?

This week's article follows:

By JAY LOVESTONE

Author of "The Government—Strikebreaker"

Of all the unfounded arguments raised by the Steel Trust against the abolition of the 12-Hour Day, the point that the workers themselves do not ask for or want shorter hours is the most absurd.

Opening its Report on the Total Elimination of the 12-Hour Day, the American Iron and Steel Committee said:

"Apparently the underlying reason for the agitation which resulted in the appointment of this committee was based on a sentiment (not created or endorsed by the workmen themselves) that the 12-hour day was an unreasonable hardship upon the employes who were connected with it. The workmen, as a rule, prefer longer hours because it permits larger compensation per day."

An Old Game

This is an old game that the Steel Trust is playing. The same fraud was resorted to by the English manufacturers when the workers were struggling for the 10-Hour Day. The forefathers of the Steel Barons brought forward loads of affidavits secured thru fraud and duress, purporting to show that the workers were opposed to fewer hours.

The pith of this method is the following. First, the Steel Masters force such low pay on the workers as to compel them to labor unbearable hours in order to eke out a starvation wage. Then, they blame the workers for the continuation of the system of long hours because they dread being pushed still further below the line of least substistence.

In the extra-prosperous month of April 1923, the steel workers, inclusive of skilled and higher-salaried, averaged less than $28 per week. According to the Philadelphia Bureau of Municipal Research, "it would cost a workingman's family of five persons $1854.28 annually to maintain a minimum health and decency standard of living," at March 1923 prices. And it is no great wonder that some workers may shudder at the aftermath of a reduction of working hours, since, for years, over 72% of all the workers have received wages below the minimum of comfort level set down by Government experts.

Typical Gary Propaganda

Little effort is needed to destroy Gary's reputation as a friend of the workingmen. Appearing before the Senate Committee in 1919 the corporation's subsidiary presidents handed out the same line of misrepresentation of the steel workers' desires. Some of these presidents even assured the Interchurch Commission that in a few plants where the 8-Hour Day was introduced the plants lost their men "because the foreigner wants to work the twelve-hour day, he wants to make as much money as he possibly can."

From the above it is as clear as broad daylight that the policy of the Steel Corporation is first to force the long hours on the underpaid foreign-born laborers and then to blame them for it so as to divide the ranks of the workers by pitting the native against the immigrant forces. Also, the attempt is made here to spread the notion that the workers are making a comfortable living in even less than 12 hours of labor, but merely want to have more. The Steel Trust is trying to hoodwink the gullible into the belief that the workers want to labor longer hours in order to make more than they need.

While such ridiculous propaganda was being spread far and wide, 365,000 workers in 50 cities in 10 States deserted the mills in their Great Strike for the 8-Hour Day, better working conditions, and the right to organize. This is how anxious the workers were to continue on the 12-Hour basis. What is more, Gary himself, testifying before the Senate Committee, confessed that "if we should immediately limit hours to eight and pay for the eight hours the same the men are now getting for 10 or 12 hours, every employe would favor it."

In plain English this means that the workers are pining for the abolition of the Two-Shift System, but fear to be driven into further degradation and misery.

Lieutenant Walker's Findings

Interesting evidence on the reactions of the workers to the 12-Hour Day is presented by Lieutenant Walker in his diary:

"On the first night-shifts I wondered if my feelings on the arrangement of hours were not solely those of a sensitive novice. I'd get used to it perhaps. But I found that first-helpers, melters, foremen, 'old timers,' and 'Company men' were for the most part against the long day. They were all looking forward, with varying degrees of hope, to the time when the daily toll of hours would be reduced."

And in a recent statement to the united church bodies protesting against the intolerable working hours, Walker went on to say:

"But the majority were anxious for a reduction in hours, even at the sacrifice of some part of their hour pay in wages. This attitude has proved to be general when the change from two shifts to three has actually been tried."

Workers for Shorter Day

According to a report of the American Association for Labor Legislation made public June 13, 1923, the Republic Iron and Steel Company and the Youngstown Sheet and Tube Company abolished the Two Shift system at the request of the workers. The statement further reads: "Significantly, the men are so opposed to the shift that they are willing to accept less pay to secure an 8-Hour Day."

After its investigation the Senate Committee concluded that the majority of the steel workers were opposed to the 12-Hour Day. The investigations of the Interchurch Movement supported this conclusion. We cite the following from the diary of a Gary worker made in August 1919 as presented by this Commission.

"A heater who works eleven hours day by day and thirteen by night, making $400 a month, says: 'Why shouldn't we get the 8-Hour Day without striking for it? I'd be glad to give up three or four dollars a day to get 8-Hours.'

"An engineer many years on the job says: 'Count me in for a six day week, too, like a civilized man. This heavy work from shovelling weighty substances into the mouth of white hot furnaces or sledging to pieces still-hot masses of metal or slag, to picking up, putting down or heaving or carrying pipes, bricks, planks, great iron hooks, sheets of metal, largely with an accompaniment of grease, noise, sweat, or danger—these make up the steel jobs and the dirt, grease, heat, and long hours generally increase the lower the job is in the pyramid."

Besides, the workers are on to the infamous game of the Steel Trust's savage exploitation. They know that the capitalists are simply out to strip them to the skeleton. Turning to Lieutenant Walker's diary, we find the following on this point: "The melter broke in again. 'It's the dollar they are after—the sucking dollar. They say they are going to cut out the long turn. I heard they were going to cut out the long turn when I went to work in the mill, as a kid. I'm workin' it, ain't I? Christ!"

Finally, the workers also know full well that Gary and his sycophantic propagandists have for a long time marshalled the truth in so far as the 12-Hour Working Day is concerned. The Steel Trust's game of hide and seek with the truth was exposed by the antics of Judge Gary himself in denying and admitting, within the same twenty-four hours, his having sent a letter to Rev. H. L. Bowlby on the question of working hours in the mills. This travesty on truth by the Steel Barons was thus emphatically stated by P. E. Johnson, head of the Research Department of the Federal Council of Churches in his attack on the book of the Trust's notorious propagandist Marshal Olds: "This volume consists of mutilated quotations, garbled statistics, and falsely reported facts. Notwithstanding this, the book has apparently been adopted by the U. S. Steel Corporation as its own defense and freely circulated by Chairman Gary."

Gary and Mussolini Plot to Establish Fascism Here, "Railway Clerk" Charges

"Is it a coincidence that Mussolini begins to establish state branches of the Fascisti in this country so soon after Judge Gary's visit to him? Let the citizens of the United States beware of the menacing danger of Mussolini agencies; we need no Fascisti in America."

That is the burden of a vigorous "The Railway Clerk," the official organ of the Brotherhood of Railway and Steamship Clerks, etc. The editorial tells of the meeting between Gary and Mussolini and the enthusiastic invitation extended to the Italian dictator by Gary to visit America.

Amazing Collection Stunts Very Early

"The same John Barry Wise the devil is this same Judge Gary's representative to go to hell and carry a message to get him back to work? Has he not already thrown his self-made millions and toiled his hours so long that he is crazy?"

How strongly the workers feel on this question is seen from the following testimony of a grey-haired worker before the Senate-Federal Interchurch Commission on October 25, 1919, during the strike in Youngstown, Ohio. The declaration is especially interesting in view of the fact that it is made by a skilled man.

"The other day the boss called me and told me I was too valuable a man not to be working for the Company, that all the places were filled except mine, and that he wanted me to come back. I told him I would think it over. The next day he came back again and asked me how much was owing on my house. I told him it was none of his God damn business. I told him that there was not a cent owing on my house, but if there was, my wife and family would follow me to the street before I would touch any of his dirty money. There is money owing on my house, but I would not give him the satisfaction of knowing it. I would rather lose it than go back to work before the strike is won. I had relatives in the Revolutionary War. I fought for the freedom of the Philippines myself, and I had three boys fighting for democracy in France. One of them is lying in the Argonne forest now. If my boy could give his life fighting for free democracy in Europe, I guess I can stand it to fight this battle thro to the end. I am going to help my fellow workmen show Judge Gary that he won't act as if he was a king or kaiser and tell them how long they have got to work."

The hatred of the long working hours by the mass of unskilled is still more bitter, because they are the most overworked and underpaid. But on account of the vicious detective and spy system and the close cooperation between these agencies on the one hand and the Department of Justice on the other in campaigns of suppression, much of this protest is stifled.

Conclusions of this Article

That Gary's assertion that the workers want longer hours borders on the grotesque can be seen from the following picture of the working conditions given by the Interchurch Commission:

"Every sort of long, hard, hot, heavy, dirty, disagreeable, monotonous, and dangerous work is required in the steel industry. Much of the work is piece work, and the tendency is to set the pace by the most powerful men. Seven days a week and twelve hours a day are the rule. Even the unskilled men work hard. Common laborers are subject to the orders of three bosses, the pace-maker, the straw boss, and the push. Many jobs are unspeakably filthy. Many are highly dangerous. Many are deadening in their monotony. Many are exhausting in the heat. Many are killing in the strain. Seldom is a man sent home because of the nature of his work. Rather he is worked till he is worn out, and then sent home to die."

Ohio Miners Demand the Reinstatement of Alexander Howat

(Special to "The Worker")

The progressive miners of another U. M. W. A. local have added their voices to the growing list of miners' unions which are demanding the reinstatement of Alexander Howat to membership in that union.

At a meeting of more than a thousand miners at Adena, Ohio, June 21, at which Howat spoke, a ringing resolution calling upon the International Executive Board to reinstate Howat was adopted.

Needless to state, the Lewis reactionaries in connivance with the lackeys of the mine operators were on hand at this meeting attempting with the aid of the Sheriffs of Jefferson and Harrison counties to stop Howat from speaking. However, after a parley at which Howat showed his superiority over the sleuths, sluggers and their abettors, Howat was allowed to proceed with a speech which lasted two hours and won overwhelming applause from the coal diggers and put to shame forever his opponents in the audience.

The following resolution was adopted before the miners left the hall:

Resolution

Adena, Ohio, June 21, 1923.

WHEREAS, we the miners of Adena, Ohio, and vicinity of District No. 6, U. M. W. of A., deem it unjust to further delay the reinstatement of the Kansas miners into the U. M. W. of A. again, and

WHEREAS, we know for more than 24 years Alexander Howat has been continually fighting the coal operators of this country in behalf of the miners, and

WHEREAS, Alexander Howat has suffered incarceration in the Kansas jails without a murmur in order that the miners of this country could not become chained to their jobs, therefore be it

RESOLVED, that we the miners of Adena, Ohio, and vicinity, Dist. No, 6, U. M. W. of A., earnestly request the International Executive Board to re-instate Alexander Howat, August Dorchy, and all of their associates to membership in the U. M. W. of A. again to all rights and privileges that they enjoyed prior to their expulsion, and be it further RESOLVED, that a copy of this resolution be sent to William Green, International Secretary-Treasurer, Andy Watkins, International Board member of District No. 6, the Illinois Miner and Workers Chronicle, and the Worker, N. Y.

Frank Draminski,
Chairman of Mass Meeting.

Federated Party Is Launched

he said. "We must have some organization then which we can federate our forces, some program to show what we stand for, so that Workers and Farmers' organizations know that they are joining when they join us. Why don't the minority present some better form of federation if they have one. Any talk about bolting this conference doesn't apply to the Washington Farmer-Labor Party. Let us get busy and put this big thing over and then get to work to form on some real organization activities over the country.

"I am not here to find out how I can differ with my brothers and sisters, I am here to find out if I can agree with them."

Kennedy's clinching arguments sank deep. There were several efforts made to move the previous question and end the debate and come to a vote. But at this juncture conferences were being held with the chairman and he recognized Delegate Zuch, of Wisconsin, who moved that a recess be taken to permit the Farmer-Labor Party delegates to caucus on the matter under discussion. This motion swept the conference unanimously as the clouds began to disappear and the hopes for unity began to get brighter.

Lewis and Agents Framed Assaults Staged at Scranton, Pa., Convention

Detail Story of Lewis' Minions' Attack Upon Progressive Miners' Committee's Organizers Told by Eye Witness

By ALFRED WAGENKNECHT

(Special Correspondent to The Worker)

What is recognized as the last defense of a reactionary and autocratic labor leader when, confronted by an awakening rank and file and by progressive demands, he keeps his power waning and his leadership ridiculed, was resorted to by John L. Lewis, President of the United Mine Workers of America, this morning (June 20th). In a violent speech, such as any gangster would indulge in, except that Lewis garnished it with excellent English, he worked up to murder heat about a hundred of the 400 delegates present at the tri-district convention of anthracite coal miners, who then, led by Lewis' payroll gang and his corps of sluggers, assaulted Mrs. Ida McCarthy, J. P. McCarthy and Joseph Manley, evicted them from the convention hall, subsequently mobbing Alfred Wagenknecht, forcing him to the stage, there to be questioned by Lewis.

Everything was arranged for the attack, down to the smallest detail. For three days the convention had marked time. The autocratic attitude of Lewis, his method of conducting the Chair, had irritated the delegates the previous session. His entire demeanor was a clear indication of his desire to take the floor and discuss the resolutions being reported upon. He and his cohorts came in late Friday morning, he probably having taken his time from the convention to complete the staging of the riot. The scale committee read its report and cheer after cheer of the report was being debated when a miner, Geo. Evans from Olyphant, arose to ask Lewis several questions. These questions were undoubtedly put into Evans' mouth to give Lewis an opportunity to deny that he had discussed the anthracite wage scale at Washington with the National Coal Commission.

Evans failed to carry out his part of the riot program in his first ten minutes. But he delivered in the next few minutes, when after a preface which contained much reference to poison acid, he pulled a program of the Progressive Miners' Committee out of his pocket and pointed his finger at it. This was Lewis' cue. He jumped for the leaflet, pretended that he had never seen one before, perused it, showed it to his henchmen on the stage, marked a few passages in it, and holding it in his hand he asked the indulgence of the delegates for a few minutes, he had something of importance to tell them.

A Growl, 40 Minutes Long

His speech, which lasted forty minutes, was a series of snarls and growls. Five times he whipped his supporters and sluggers into action by pounding his hand vicinity. Dist. No, 6, U. M. W. of A., earnestly re- on the table, but it failed to register. Each time he stopped to let the delegates take their seats to feed them upon more of his vituperation. "This scurrilous document has been distributed at this convention," he began. "It is headed Program of the Progressive International Committee of the United Mine Workers of America. It contains, from beginning to end villifications of your officials and bold, bald, barefaced untruths. It is printed on good paper, at a high cost and has been circulated in every section of the United States and Canada. This is but one of the many similar documents which have reached us lately asking for your support and money. This organization had a convention in Pittsburgh on June 3rd and there passed resolutions which lie and constitute the vaporings of men who pose as individuals of supermentality. Who are these agents of theirs who are among you and distribute this literature, destroying confidence in your officers and disrupting your organization?

"These industrial zealots have banded themselves together into the Trade Union Educational League, led by Foster. This organization is an adjunct of the Communist Party. Its object is to create confusion in the United Mine Workers and other basic industries. Foster is a member of the Communist Party and the Communist Party is an adjunct of the Communist Party of Russia. The purpose of this party in America is to seize control of the great unions, to overthrow the democratic government of the United States and to replace it with a workerocracy government as is found in Russia today. Money has come from Berlin and Moscow to enable Foster to organize the Trade Union Educational League, to propagate these principles of destruction within the league, to publish papers and literature and employ field workers and organizers to carry on this work. At Pittsburgh the Progressive Miners' Committee was organized as a dual organization to function within the United Mine Workers to assure its control. Records of the Government show that in the last thirteen months seven million dollars have reached the United States thru international banking circles and have been disbursed by the executive committee of the Communist Party.

"These agents of Foster's, singing their song of hate are being paid by this money to stir up the workers. In this anthracite valley today there are four paid organizers of Foster's League. One of them addressed a meeting last night, and led the men to assess themselves 25c, each to further this unholy cause. (Cries of "throw them out" began at this point.) These industrial buzzards seem always to be present and particularly active at wage scale negotiations. During the strike last year they published a paper and distributed literature in this region. They then claimed that our organization was being pushed backwards then, I do not know it now. It is such families they disseminate. I warn you against these carrion birds who carry on this propaganda. There is no room in the coal industry of the United Mine Workers and the organization these agents promulgate. Nor can those who help or contribute to the Progressive Miners' Committee remain members of our union. If these men are in love with Russia, there is nothing to hinder them from embarking to that country. We will have none of their evil schemes here. Sixteen of them were in Herrin, causing the massacre there.

"So I say to McCarthy, and I say to Manley, who is the son-in-law of Foster, that there is no room in the councils of the United Mine Workers for men of your ilk, and I ask the delegates when they return home to warn the membership against these sinister individuals who may appear before them with their false tongues. And I further ask that whereas the United Mine workers desire to carry on their deliberations without interference, that Manley and McCarthy remove their carcasses without the door."

Lewis Incites to Violence

This was the signal for the Lewis' gangsters to get into action. They rushed to the balcony stairway at the rear of the hall, followed by about a hundred Lewis supporters, who surrounded Manley, McCarthy and Mrs. McCarthy. Blows rained fast, but there were so many in the attacking party, they got in their own way. For two blocks down the street the fighting continued, Mrs. McCarthy, Manley and McCarthy receiving support from many who realized the unfairness of the attack and the lengths to which the mob spirit will carry individuals, attempted to allay the bitter feeling which Lewis' denunciation had caused.

Some of the gangsters having returned, they began looking for the fourth Foster agent, referred to by Lewis. Wagenknecht had kept his seat among the delegates in the balcony, busy making notes of the speech. Soon they spied him. "there he sits," "throw him out too," were heard. Lewis, adjourned the convention, delegates scrambled over chairs, a few blows were struck. Wagenknecht was forced down the stairs and to the stage, the attacking delegates saying repeatedly that Kennedy, president of district 7, wanted to see him. Arrived at the stage, Wagenknecht faced Kennedy and asked him whether he desired to speak to him, and received a negative reply. Then as an afterthought Kennedy asked: "Are you employed by Foster?" "I am not employed by Foster," answered Wagenknecht, "however"—at this point Lewis stepped to the front of the stage and said: "What is your business at this convention?" Wagenknecht answered that he had attended all sessions taking notes for the Volkszeitung, Freiheit and other workers' papers. Shouts of "the same kind of dirty sheets," "he organized the progressive miners in Wilkes-Barre," "he was sitting and talking with Manley," were heard from the Lewis gang. Wagenknecht answered that he certainly had talked with Manley and the McCarthies, that he knew them and had been with them for some days. Lewis again interrupted the continual shouting and cries for blood by stating, "If you are here to report this convention you will sit with the other reporters down here. Let him go, boys." And thus ended the Lewis' assault upon the Trade Union Educational League.

Lewis is losing local after local, district after district in the miners' union. He came to Scranton reelected, because his henchman had lost in district 1. This cowardly attack of his flashed to every miners' local by the Progressive Miners' Committee will be his suicide.

Sinclair Is After Burns Scalp

Obtaining U.S. Army Uniform for Spies

By ROBERT MINOR

Detectives of the William J. Burns International Detective Agency, ferreting out information for the use of the Steel trust, were placed in munition plants in this country, wearing the United States uniform.

This information was brought out in the testimony of Detective Henry J. Connor, former member of the Burns Agency, in the proceedings to revoke Burns' license in New York state.

Detective Connor was asked if he had heard William Garvan, Burns' New York manager, give Thomas O'Brien any instruction with reference to his clothing, whether he was to wear a uniform or not?

A. No. I understand that the officials of the Crucible Steel—

(After interruption by attorneys, the witness continues.)

A. O'Brien informed me that the men at Harrison were going to be uniformed. O'Brien informed me one of the boys, meaning one of the guards over there, told them that they could buy army uniforms for six dollars. O'Brien in turn took it up with Mr. Garvan (Burns manager) and Mr. Cosgrove.

Q. Who is he?

A. I don't know what his title is. He is one of the Burns men in the office.

Q. You had seen Cosgrove there often?

A. Know him personally. He was sent down to Fort Hamilton where he saw a quartermaster sergeant whose name began with the letter "N." O'Brien himself went down and bought these uniforms.

Q. Who sent him?

A. William Garvan.

Q. The manager of the New York office?

A. Yes sir.

Q. (By Comptroller.) O'Brien told you that he sent him down?

A. O'Brien told me.

(During interchanges between attorneys the witness is asked, "Where is O'Brien now?" and replies "I guess he is employed by William J. Burns."

Q. At the time that O'Brien is supposed or alleged to have made a purchase of uniforms was he in Burns' employ?

A. He was.

Q. Now, from whom did you learn the alleged facts concerning the purchase of those uniforms?

(Burns' attorney, Hedges: "I object.")

Q. From whom did you learn the alleged facts concerning the purchase of uniforms?

(Mr. Hedges: "I object to that as incompetent, immaterial and irrelevant and having no bearing on these charges in any way, shape or manner.)

(The Comptroller: "Can't we have O'Brien here?")

(Mr. Steinbrink: "I would be delighted if Mr. Burns will produce him.")

(Mr. Hedges: "We will produce every man whose name is mentioned here that we can find on earth.")

The Comptroller: "I think O'Brien will be the best, if we can have O'Brien."

Mr. Hedges: "On this matter they are trying to prove an employment on two sides because somebody bought a uniform, because he heard somebody else say he did."

Mr. Steinbrink: "At that time the statement appeared generally. The proof is that at the very time the Burns Agency was in the limelight on the theory that they were aiding Governmental work on that thing, and these disclosures would hurt the Government, they were on the other side purchasing our subterranean channels from Army officers Government uniforms."

(The question, from whom he had learned the alleged facts concerning the purchase of uniforms, is read to the witness, who replies:)

A. Thomas O'Brien.

The witness further testified that he had later seen several of the Burns men whom he knew, and who had been placed by the Burns detective agency in a munition plant at Providence, wearing United States uniforms. According to this witness, a Mr. and Mrs. Sloan subsequently communicated some of this information to Superintendent Baker of the U. S. Secret Service, and that an effort was made to find O'Brien, who could be traced no further than some of the Burns operatives.

"AMALGAMATION"

By JAY FOX

15 cents per copy

"Amalgamation," by Jay Fox, is a most timely pamphlet in the list of labor political and economic subjects. It is such a pamphlet as every union man and woman should read and take to work and discuss with their fellows on the job.

The chapter headings give an idea of the contents, yet cannot show the force of the argument for AMALGAMATION that is made throughout the labor unions. Chapter headings are: The Growing Power of Capitalism; The Incapacity of Craft Unionism; Amalgamation, the Way to Progress; The Amalgamation Movement; Departmentalized Industrial Unionism; The Trade Union Educational League.

With the Young Workers

International Youth Day

Sept. 3rd has been set aside by the Young Communist International as International Day of Youth. This year the day falls on Labor Day in the United States.

The Young Workers League, which is carrying on work in harmony with the principles of the Young Communist International, in the United States, has decided to observe the International Day of Youth on Sunday, Sept. 2nd, in the United States.

On that day, meetings will be arranged by the Young Workers League in all parts of the country to arouse interest in the youth movement, and to carry on educational work as to the part the youth of the nation must play in the Communist movement.

The Young Workers League requests that all Party branches cooperate that day in the celebration of International Day of Youth. It particularly requests that no Party organizations arrange celebrations for the day in question, which shall conflict with the celebration of the International Day of Youth.

The National Office endorses this request of the Young Workers League and urges all Party units to cooperate with the Young Workers League and to refrain from holding other celebrations.

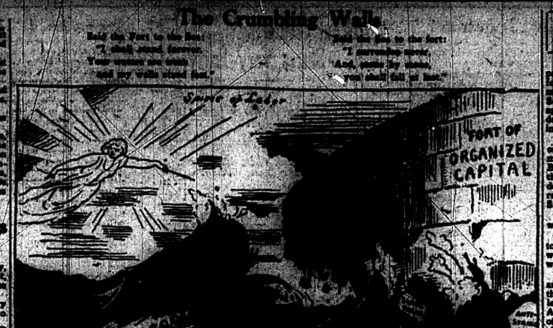
When It's All Over

Now that the war is over, Harding announces he is in favor of conscripting wealth as well as man power for war. Now that no great strike is being waged in the land, Harding declares he is opposed to war on the labor unions. Yet in the next war, Harding will be found against conscripting wealth. And in the next strike he will be found joining in the war on organized labor. That is the stuff that capitalist political swindlers are made of.



The Crumbling Walls

Hard Coal Diggers Refuse to Back-water in New Wage Demands

By ALFRED WAGENKNECHT

The tri-district convention of anthracite miners, which has just adjourned at Scranton, made Harding and the National Coal Commission, the operators and Lewis sweat blood for several weeks. And now that the wage scale and demands adopted at Shamokin last year, the refusal to grant which by the operators caused the big anthracite strike, has again been adopted by his tri-district convention, there comes an interim during which the negotiations with the operators and their outnome will tell whether Lewis and his official supporters in the anthracite region are more intent upon throwing millions of dollars into the mine owners' banks than into the pay envelopes of mine workers.

Lewis must feel rather queer at this point. With tears in his eyes he pleaded with the delegates last year to forsake the Shamokin demands and return to work at the old scale. Yet, at the convention, he was forced to become a party to these same demands. Secretary Green, before the arrival of Lewis lauded his leadership, and told the delegates that the Lewis heart was with them. When Lewis arrived the next day he talked about his "heart of hearts." What the rank and file delegates desire to know is: whether Lewis' heart enough and backbone enough to battle until the demands of a 20 percent increase in wage, on contracts, the two dollar a day increase for day men, full recognition of the union, the general application to all mine workers of the eight hour day, a ninety cent minimum for contractors and other skilled labor, etc., have been won. We say, however, let him alone and he will do exactly what he promised the delegates he would —contribute all within his power to assist the miners, with due consideration to the rights of others. These last eight words are dictating Lewis as a leader, for the rank and file are learning to know what he means by "due consideration to the rights of others."

Is Lewis for Harding or Miners?

Harding wrote the National Coal Commission requesting it to please do all possible to avoid a strike. The Coal Commission wrote the operators and United Mine Workers' officials to please do all possible to avoid a strike. Lewis praised Harding's concern in the matter at the convention. That is a vicious circle, indeed, and the miners will have to learn to face the fight. And as we saw Lewis sitting there upon the stage as convention chairman, three quarters of his back turned to the delegates speaking, the cigar in his mouth pointing to the ceiling, overbearing, unconcerned in what the delegates said, out of touch with the mine and miner, above them, bourgeois in appearance, constantly addressing the delegates as gentlemen as if he were in a meeting with operators or Washington folks, well —we said that this is the beginning of the end of another fake leader, who finds more joy in shaking Harding's hand than a miner's. Against him the fight has begun.

Lewis knows this, too. The operators know it. Harding knows it. The radical wave gains in height and force as it washes everything before it. The "Coal Age," the paper of the operators gave a pnaise to the Cappellini election. The miners in Alberta and Nova Scotia are at the forefront of the progressive movement. Pittsburgh has its militants, as has Ohio, Illinois and Kansas. Everywhere they are organizing progressive committees. The "Coal Age" reports that the feud between Farrington of Illinois and Lewis is being patched up. Both desire an agreement so that a united front may be had against the inroads of the "reds." There will be other united fronts against the radicals in the United Mine Workers, but there will be none that will defeat the united rank and file once it understands the program of the Progressive Miner's Committee.

Nor can the New York Call play Cappellini against the real progressives. The progressives know their duty. Cappellini may for the time be overawed by the strong arm tactics of Lewis' strong arm squad. He may have been intimidated by the threat, made by the Lewis machine and the daily papers, that his election as president of District One was to be contested on the grounds that he was illegally a candidate, neither working in the mines nor for the union when he was nominated. He could and should have assumed the leadership of the vast majority of the delegates at the convention who believed in him. He could have made it impossible for Lewis to instigate the riot.

Cappellini sat strangely quiet during the convention. Radical miners will hear of this. Radicals desire in action; radical leaders must perform. Is Cappellini, today, at the crossroads? Is he laying the cornerstone of his defeat at the next election, or will he remain with the rank and file, carry out their mandates, battle for their demands?

Cappellini has been added to the negotiations committee. The result of the negotiations will be placed before the miners by referendum or another tri-district convention will be called. Leaders are softened or hardened in temper by the struggle. Lewis has softened to the operators and Harding. He's about worn out. Will Cappellini harden for the workers and thereby last as a leader?

Whether or not, the movement of the progressive miners is above individuals. Leaders will rise and fall but the 500,000 miners will win in the end, against all Lewises and Hardings.

WALT WHITMAN'S WISDOM

"The American Revolution of 1776 was simply a great strike, successful for its immediate object—but whether a real success judged by the scale of the centuries, and the long-striking balance of Time, yet remains to be settled. The French Revolution was absolutely a strike, and a very terrible and relentless one, against ages of bad pay, unjust division of wealth products, and the hoggish monopoly of a few rolling in superfluity, against the vast bulk of the work-people, living in squalor."

With what clarity the old bard saw! Is it any wonder that reactionary Hungary has banned every line that old Walt EVER WROTE?

TEN WORKERS SHOULD READ THIS COPY OF THE WORKER; KEEP IT IN CIRCULATION

"You and I" Should Have Been Shown All Graduates This Year

By JOHN DALE

"You and I," at the Belmont Theatre, is this year's Harvard Prize Play and is another proof that this staid, conservative American university cannot keep all its students "goose-stepping" as its drill masters choose. This comedy of American family life delivers some effective and well worthwhile blows against commercialism as it crushes the best desires in human beings.

"You and I" are father and son. H. B. Warner's interpretation of the role of the father, Mr. Maitland White, successful business man for 20 years, will not inspire the young graduates just leaving Harvard, or any other American university. Because here we have a man, an artist, a painter, who has been forced into the soap business because he needs the money. He married young and he was compelled to provide, and art isn't profitable. The situation is aggravated, as the play opens, by the fact that the son, Roderick, a part exceptionally well done by Kenneth MacKenna, has just graduated, but on the eve of leaving for Paris for three years to study architecture, is about to take the same step the father took 20 years before. To save the son from the same fate the father unburdens himself to his family.

The wife proves the metal she is made of by renouncing all material wealth to help her husband follow the calling of his talent. For eight months she struggles with ever reducing finances and he with paint and brush. At last an achievement—he finishes painting the portrait of a lady. The wife confides in her husband's friend the precarious condition of their finances and they hit upon a scheme for exhibiting the picture before some wealthy patrons of art. A telephone call announces the exciting news that the picture has been sold for $4000. A tense interval awaiting the arrival of the patron who has not given his name. And finally heartrending disappointment when the patron turns out to be none other than the overbearing owner of the soap factory.

The play closes with the artist-father selling the picture to the soap manufacturer, thus enabling the son to marry and to take the trip to France to continue his studies.

Thruout is the appeal for understanding of the creative instinct. This production should have been given instead of the usual hypocritical commencement oration at every high school and college graduation this past month.

Parliamentary Democracy - By H. M. WICK

The oldest parliamentary body in the world, the prototype of parliaments sitting on the banks of the Thames in London, has silenced one of its members by suspending them. These labor leaders were at least guilty of "daring to say" they attacked non-Capitalist Hillary's report on the Board of Health. The report demanded the reduction of t appropriation for child welfare and the labor member, James Maxton denounced the Board, declaring it was guilty of the murder of infa in Scotland.

Sir Frederick Banbury, a court jackey, indignantly asked, "Is it order for the Honorable member to call other Honorable members murderers?" and demanded Maxton apologize for his audacious utter ing class conscious workers, other laborites from Scotland shou that "it was time to speak the truth." Then Maxton arose and bar defiance at the whole aggregation of bourgeois political shysters refusing to withdraw his remarks and adding that they also applie Sir Frederick, himself.

"Bring back the lives of the Scottish infants," he cried, "and I withdraw the expression."

Three other Scottish labor members supported Maxton in his ref to withdraw the objectionable remarks. By a vote of 258 to 70 th were suspended, just as the Communist member, J. T. Walton Newbo was suspended a few weeks before.

Here are real representatives of the working class applying revolutio ary tactics to bourgeois parliament. How different are the actions these men from the tactics of the yellow socialists in capitalist cl legislative bodies? How different from the pathetic spectacle of t American socialist congressman, Meyer London, who, in the congre of the United States, crawled before his capitalist accusers with the m abject apology after he had declared that oppressed colonials would res to force in case they were deprived of the use of the ballot! Instead standing erect and denouncing the hypocricy of the bloodsuckers represe ing American Imperialism, this socialist congressman stammered out miserable apology and forever afterward held his tongue.

In spite of the exclusion of the labor members in the British Ho of Commons these members will still carry on political action agai the government. Temporarily the parliamentary struggle will give w to the agitation to arouse mass demonstrations and possibly mass stri on the part of the working class, thereby bringing another form political pressure to bear upon the British ruling class and its governme

It was Frederick Engels who said, "Our reactionaries are our m effective revolutionists," meaning that the reactionaries make conditi so intolerable that they expose themselves and lay bare the vulnera points in their own system of slavery. In Britain the reactionaries forced to take action against the elected representatives of the work class, which exposes the insufficiency of bourgeois parliamentarism. T objective factor, supplemented by the Communist agitation that will p pare the subjective factor in the minds of the working class, is the from which will spring the revolution in England that will write "fin to capitalist parliamentarism and establish upon its ruins the Dictators of the Proletariat and the Soviet Government of Great Britain.

GARY-BOWLBY CORRESPONDENCE

Judge Elbert H. Gary, chairman of the Board of Directors of United States Steel Corporation, accepts the abolition of the 12-Ho Day and 7-Day Week in his steel mills in theory, but evidently not practice. This laudable stand of Gary was revealed in the publication a letter written by him to the Rev. H. L. Bowlby of the Lord's Di Alliance.

It appears that Rev. Bowlby is a publicity-seeking pulpit pound who desires to shine in the reflected glory of Mr. Gary, for he spea in laudatory terms of the steel baron. A most deplorable incident occurr recently that threatened to upset the amicable relations that existed b tween Mr. Gary and the clergyman. It seems a newspaper reporte occupied with the task of confirming the letter to Bowlby, telephon to Gary, that Gary misunderstood the reporter and denied writing su a letter. The denial was published and the clergyman bore the stig of liar for a day, until he could convince Mr. Gary and the reporter th the letter had actually been written. In a communication to the Ne York Times, the preacher chides the reporter for not exercising mo care in quoting "so eminent a gentleman as Mr. Gary."

The Rev. Mr. Bowlby is not concerned about the sweated and furnac baked boil ex of the steel slaves, nor the fate of their wives and childre who survive and die in the stifling industrial hells of Gary, Ga and his associates may live in idleness. He is only concerned about the souls. He does not want them to work seven days a week, so that the may observe "the Lord's Day" by attending the spook palaces where they are taught to be contented with their lot upon this earth, which only a desert drear while heaven is their happy home. Mr. Gary, in manner befitting an eminent gentleman, complimented Re Bowlby for his mistake and also made the reporter the goat.

Religion and capitalism works hand in hand. The industrial desp driven by his slaves to premature graves, while the sky-pilots solemnly assu them that the more miserable they are here the happier they are goi to be after they are dead.

Gary and Bowlby are inseparable—the modern slave driver and h religious reflex.

Enjoy Yourself to Death!

And here is how Will Rogers, one of America's leading humorists laughed Gary out of court. Commenting on the Judge's defense of the blessings of the 12-Hour Day, Will Rogers said in a recent issue of the New York Times:

"We can always depend on Judge Gary for a weekly laugh in his speeches. But last week he had the prize wheeze of his career.

"He had his accomplices make an investigation of the steel industry and they turned in a report that it was much more beneficial to ma to work 12 hours a day than 8. They made this report as alluring that it is apt to make people who read it decide to stay the extra four hour on their jobs, just thru the health and enjoyment they get out of it.

"I never knew steel work was so easy till I read that report. Why the advantages they enumerate in this report would almost make bootlegger trade jobs with a steel worker.

"But here is the kick. Judge Gary got up to read his report before the stockholders who had made it out. He read for one hour in favor of a 12-Hour Day. Then he was so exhausted they had to carry him out, and Charley Schwab had to go on reading the sheet.

"Now, if the Judge couldn't work an hour, how did he expect his workers to do 12 every day?

"After Schwab read for two hours the audience was carried out.

"It was the greatest boost for the 12-Hour Day I ever heard of. I am thinking of going out there myself, for working as hard as such a pleasure to work 12 hours I am going to try and get them to let me work 18, at least, for I don't believe I would get enough pleasure out of just 12.

"So if you don't hear of me next week you will know I just en joyed myself to death in Judge Gary's steel mills in Pittsburgh."

"THE GOOSE-STEP"

Upton Sinclair's Latest and Greatest Work. What One Critic Says:

H. L. MENCKEN on "The Goose-Step":

"The Goose-Step" came in yesterday afternoon, and I fell on it last night. My sincere congratulations. I have read on and on with constant joy in the adept marshalling of facts, the shrewd presentation of persons and issues, the lively and incessant humor. It is not only a fine piece of writing; it is also a sound piece of research. It presents a devastating but, I believe, thoroly fair and accurate picture of the American university today. The faults of "The Brass Check" and "The Profits of Religion" are not in it. It is enormously more judicial and convincing than either of those books. You are here complaining of nothing. You simply offer the bald and horrible facts—but with liveliness, shrewdness, good humor. An appalling picture of moral and mental debasement. Let every American read it and ponder it!

Address, Literary Department, Workers Party, 799 Broadway, NEW YORK CITY

Reorganization Plans Will Be Discussed at City and District Meet

The following call was sent out to the Branches in Greater New York, Eastern New Jersey and Yonkers, Hastings-on-Hudson, New Rochelle, N. Y.:

Comrades: By a recent decision of the Executive Council of the Workers Party of America, District Two has been divided into three parts of which your branch is in the new District Two.

The District Executive Committee has accordingly decided to call a Special District Convention to include all the above branches for reorganising the new District Two.

All branches to whom this CALL is addressed will immediately proceed to carry out the following instructions:

1. Elections in the branches shall begin upon receipt of the Convention call.

2. Elections shall be from the branches to the City Convention and from City Conventions to the District Convention.

3. Unattached branches shall elect delegates directly to the District Convention.

4. The basis of representation in the City Convention of Greater New York shall be one delegate for each branch and one additional delegate for every 50 members and major fraction.

5. The representation to the City Conventions in C. C. Cs of Eastern New Jersey shall be one delegate for each branch and one additional for every 25 members or major fraction.

6. The representation from the City Convention to the District Convention shall be upon the basis of one delegate for each 50 members represented or major fraction thereof.

7. City Central Committees in Eastern New Jersey shall set the time for holding their City Conventions before the 22nd day of July, 1923.

8. The City Convention of Greater New York will be held Saturday, July 21, 1923, at 2.30 P. M., at Labor Temple, 243 E. 84th St.

9. The District Convention will be held in New York City Sunday, July 22, 1923, at 11 A. M., at 243 E. 84th St. (Labor Temple.)

10. A Convention Assessment of 15 cents is levied upon all members in the new District Two. Only those members paying this assessment will be permitted to participate in the elections. Delegates from branches will bring the proceeds of this assessment to the City Conventions and from there to the District Convention. Expenses of City Convention may be deducted from the assessment.

Similar CALLS went to the new Districts Four and Fifteen.

The new District No. 4 will comprise all of the cities in New York State north of New Rochelle, including Erie, Pa., with headquarters in Buffalo, N. Y. The District Convention for District No. 4 will be held in Buffalo, July 29, 1923.

The new District No. 15 will comprise all cities in the State of Connecticut, including Springfield, Chicopee Falls and Holyoke, Mass., with headquarters in New Haven, Conn. The district convention will be held in New Haven, Conn., Sunday, July 22, 1923.

Agenda for City Conventions and District Conventions

The following agenda for the Conventions was adopted by the District Executive Committee, and is hereby submitted to all branches for discussion:

1. The Special District Convention is to elect a District Executive Committee of 11 members which shall meet at least once every two weeks.

2. A District Council shall be created to be composed of all Section Secretaries of Greater New York, the secretaries of the City Central Committees, the members of the District Executive Committee, the District Organizer and Department Heads. The District Council to meet once every two months.

3. The City Conventions of Greater New York and of Eastern New Jersey to bring in plans for the re-organization of their respective territories in conformity with the creation of the New District Two.

Party Mass Meeting

A MASS MEETING of Workers Party members will be held at Stuyvesant Casino, 142—2nd Ave., N. Y. C., on July 11th, 8 P. M.

This meeting is for the purpose of hearing the report of Workers Party delegates to the Labor Party Convention at Chicago. The speakers will be: C. E. Ruthenberg, Jay Lovestone and A. Bittleman. All Party members are requested to be present.

Will We Get Together?

ASHLAND AUDITORIUM, CHICAGO.—The Marxian Labor Party [illegible] the call of the Farmer-Labor Party [illegible] in this country and [illegible] Party. [illegible] Party [illegible] Socialist-Labor [illegible] conference. When it was suggested that [illegible] had a right to be represented [illegible] political organizations, fraternal benefit societies of labor and many farm groups began to pour into Chicago. Many [illegible] were sent out with a belated reply to the effect that altho the Socialist Party did not participate in the conference it "is personally with them object."

In objection to participating is because the Communists (the Workers Party) were invited.

The Socialists did all they can to destroy the political unity of the working class of this country by using every underhand trick known to shyster politicians, and when this unity is about to be achieved they come forth with the charge that it is the Communists who oppose the united front of labor on the political and industrial field.

Not only is the Workers Party not a disruptive force in this conference, but it will unhesitatingly throw all its power against any attempt on the part of any element to disrupt the deliberations of the delegates assembled.

The Socialist Party continues its affiliation with the so-called Conference for Progressive Political Action, an organization that is now the flunkey to Sam Gompers' reactionary policy of "reward your friends and punish your enemies," because even in its ranks there exists a faction of this abortive aggregation, that unites with this reactionary group and thereby puts the political interests of capitalism [illegible] from participation [illegible] called the Farmer-Labor group [illegible] withdrew from the Conference for Progressive Political Action after the base betrayal of the rank and file of labor at the Cleveland conference last fall. [illegible]

[illegible] delegates went to their lunches ravenously hungry but happy.

New Declaration of Political Freedom

tee. It was to this motion that Ruthenberg then continued the discussion, declaring, "We came here to do what the call asked us to come here to do. We did not come here because someone conserved the scheme of organising the Labor Party. Things happen that way."

He then reviewed the great sentiment over the country for the organization of the Labor Party, concluding that, "There is no other way to get the workers and farmers than to organize them to go out to fight for their ideals. They are waiting for some organization around which they can rally and fight the exploiters of this country. The first step is the adoption of the amendment now before this conference."

Toscan Bendett, chairman of the first days' proceedings, then took up the cudgels for a "safety first" policy, declaring he was for the Manley proposition, excepting that part calling for the organization of the Federated Farmer-Labor Party before we know what it is going to be. He said, that calling in the Federated Farmer-Labor Party does not make it such, that the conference did not at that moment know how it was going to be made.

Delegate James Campbell, Buffalo, N. Y., Central Labor Union, said, he spoke for forty thousand organized workers. He complimented this conference on having placed its feet in bedrock of a Labor Party.

Then the delegates began getting restless. They had evidently heard enough speeches. Yet, chairman Bouck was liberal and allowed the discussion to proceed in spite of the fact that the call for the previous question was growing louder and louder. It was all that the chairman could do to quiet the conference to listen to some of the speakers.

Roberts, of Boston, and Lovestone, of New York, spoke against the McVey substitute. Forster Senator Pettigrew made a characteristic speech, while Lillian Herstein, of the Chicago Teachers' Union, urged a class conscious Labor Party, and denounced the Cleveland conference and the Socialist Party amid equal applause.

The vote was taken as the hour of adjournment approached. The McVey substitute was defeated, both on a viva voca and a standing vote. Then one of the die-hards raised the point of order that the hour of adjournment had arrived, and demanded that there be no vote on the Ruthenberg-Manley amendment and the original motion. Chairman Bouck making a snap decision, upheld the point of order, and declared the conference adjourned for the noon recess.

He paid no attention to the motion for the noon recess. He paid no attention to the motion of delegate McDonald to suspend the rules had been disposed of. The situation and remain in session until the vote left the great convention hall in an uproar. Delegate Manley mounted one of the tables and called on the delegates to remain in their seats. On the platform groups of representatives of different elements tried to straighten the tangle. Chairman Bouck remained obdurate. Then delegate Kennedy, Secretary, Washington Farmer-Labor Party, took up the situation with Bouck, who again assumed the chair and recognized McDonald to make his motion to suspend the rules. The gathering cheered as Bouck put back the gavels' head on its handle and order was restored. Two last efforts to stop the vote were made, but he got no response. When the vote was taken the Manley-Ruthenberg declaration was carried overwhelmingly and the amended motion then went thru practically unanimously and the delegates adjourned.

There are the usually excellent editorials, while "The International" department keeps abreast of the latest developments in other lands. Send your bundle order to The Labor Herald, 106 N. La Salle St., Chicago, Illinois.

The Liberator

Perhaps the most difficult problem facing an editor of a monthly revolutionary magazine which purports to deal with today's industrial and economic problems while at the same time renders homage to Art and Letters, is that of finding a proper balance between the two.

A perusal of the July number of the American proletariat's only literary magazine, "The Liberator," shows a commendatory balance of politics and literature in "The Declaration of Independence of the American Workingclass," by Comrade John Pepper and "The Outline of Marriage," by Floyd Dell; while the "Role of the Workers Party, by C. E. Ruthenberg is nicely countered by "Ten Light, Fourteen Night," story by Mary Heaton Vorse. Balances like these are maintained thruout in this issue which must meet with hearty approval on the part of the magazine's readers.

The present political activity of the American workers in the organization of the Labor Party, its insurgency against the established order, the decay of the old parties and the social significance of the movement for a third party, petit-bourgeoisie in nature, receives keen analysis in the above named article by Comrade Pepper. The role which the Workers Party is destined to play, because it is THE Communist Party in America, is ably portrayed by the Party's National Secretary.

Upton Sinclair has been getting arrested again out in sunny California and writes all about it in a most humorous and interesting fashion. After reading his narrative one wonders where the stupidity of the governing capitalist class will or can stop in the repression of "free speech."

Hal Ware, the chap who took twenty tractors, a group of North Dakota farmers and the concomitant ploughs and harrows to Russia and established a tremendous farm commune last year, writes about the American farmer, East, West and Southern, and the forces which are driving him to make common cause with the industrial workers in trying to break the chains which bind them both to the exploiters' chariot.

Max Eastman greets his many friends in "Moscow's Answer," a thrilling story of the Russian worker's reception of Curzon's ultimatum. Besides these features there are drawings which make one glad. A wonderful Sunrise, by Frank Walts graces the cover, while incomparable Bob Minor [illegible] page cartoon of Gompers being dragged willy nilly toward progress much against his and his master's will. There are also splendid poems and book reviews, not to mention a frontispiece by Art Young, one of Art's best.

July Young Worker—Another Corking Issue

Among the magazines which are produced by the working class, the Young Worker, publication of the Young Workers League, remains in the forefront.

The July issue is another corking good issue. This issue has many features. The conference with Sam Gompers takes precedence, and gives to the reader a better insight into the actual struggles of the youth than any program yet written.

Sigi Bammater, a member of the Executive Committee of the Young Communist International, gives his impression of the Second National Convention of the Working Youth of this country. The article is written in a vivid and frank manner.

Letters from shops and mines deal with the every-day problems of the young workers, indicating that the magazine is living up to its function of expressing the struggle of the young worker in industry.

Martin Abern, Secretary of the Young Workers League, again gives a review of the league activities which shows that despite the fact that summer is here with its many diversions, the League is humming with activity.

A cartoon and an article, respectively by Gropper and Stanley Boone, both contributors to the Liberator, lend themselves to making the magazine a real, live-wire expression of the rebellious young workers of this country.

Ukrainian Federation Doubles Membership

By ABRAM JAKIRA

The Convention of the Ukrainian Federation of the Workers Party held recently in New York showed that the Federation is making rapid progress. 24 delegates represented 49 branches with a membership of over one thousand. The report of the secretary showed that only three months ago the average membership of the Federation was not more than 500. The rapid increase in membership was partly due to the fact that over 100 Ukrainian members have recently joined the Party in the anthracite coal district.

The Convention paid special attention to the Industrial Programme of the Party. To the Ukrainian comrades the industrial activities of the Party are of paramount significance. A large portion of the membership is engaged in the coal and steel industries, the two industries inswhich the Party will in the future play an important part. The fact that the Ukrainian comrades have realized the importance of their active participation in the industrial work, the fact that they have made this problem the keynote of the Convention is undoubtedly the most healthy sign of progress the language comrades have made since the second convention of the Party.

The convention proved to be in full harmony with the Party policies and manifested a readiness to cooperate with the Party in every way possible. This they have expressed in the following resolution sent to the Central Executive Committee:

"The Conference of the Ukrainian Federation of the Workers Party of America sends you fraternal greetings. We are fully aware of the tasks before us and of the difficulties facing our Party. We are convinced that the Party will overcome all the difficulties and will lead the masses on the road of the class struggle. We declare that we are in full agreement with the policies of the Central Executive Committee and pledge our fullhearted support to and co-operation with the C. E. C. in carrying out the plans before it. Long live the Workers Party. Long live the Communist International."

During the sessions of the Convention many problems of vital importance to the American Labor movement were discussed and action taken upon them.

The Harding-Daugherty Letters

When President Harding and Attorney General Daugherty write letters for publication in the kept press, there is some good reason prompting them to this action. They are not letter writers for the love of it.

"Coal Age," one of the official publications of the mine barons, in its June 28th issue, endorses the accepted version that it was the election of Rinaldo Cappellini, as president in District 1 Pennsylvania, that caused Harding and Daugherty to issue their recent threats, by correspondence to the Coal Commission, against the Miners' Union.

The coal barons' mouthpiece, however, stresses the declaration that there is no fear of President John L. Lewis and his policies. No significance is attached to Lewis' recent trip to Europe, in so far as it might have developed solidarity between the coal miners on both sides of the Atlantic. It states that:

> "The report on Mr. Lewis' return that he had reached some understanding with the British was not taken seriously by those really acquainted with the coal industry. . . . The real facts probably are that Mr. Lewis went to Europe on a much-deserved vacation. Naturally he saw the leaders of the British coal miners' organization. It would have been a discourtesy to them had he not done so. They may have talked a little shop, but the chances are that the curtailing of coal shipments during strikes was not mentioned!"

"Coal Age" therefore dismisses the attorney general's "fantastic suggestion" that Lewis might have developed some sort of international action, and says the thing the mine owners fear is the rising wave of radicalism, as shown in Cappellini's election. It says:

> "This victory for the radicals among the workers in the anthracite region reaffirms the presence of a dangerous unrest among them, which had its first outbreak in the demand for nationalization.
> "The general impression that there would be no strike this year in the anthracite region was based on the knowledge of the conservative policies of such men as Brennan and Kennedy. With the control wrested from their hands, there is no doubt as to what the rabble in the union may demand."

How considerate the mine barons are of Lewis! He is overworked and needs a vacation to Europe. But the coal miners who seek a little more leisure, more pay and better conditions, immediately become "the rabble in the union," the "dangerous radicals."

Thus is the significance of the Harding-Daugherty letters exposed. The strikebreakers in the White House and in the Attorney General's office fawn on Lewis while they attack the progressives of the rank and file in the miners' union. Small wonder that the membership of the miners' union is rapidly uniting and mobilizing its forces in a more militant position.

Crush the Thieves!

Ex-United States Senator Pettigrew of North Dakota, speaking before the convention of the Farmer-Labor Party, declared that the more thievery involved in private property, the more sacred it is in the minds of the politicians, jay-bird lawyers and other servants of the ruling class in the United States Senate and Congress.

Both the Republican and Democratic Parties uphold the sacredness of private property in the means of production and distribution. Property is placed above everything else. As between property and the life of the workers, the old parties choose property. This they must do in order to exist. To the extent that there is any conflict beween these two parties it is a quarrel over the supremacy of different groups of exploiters of labor.

Between the robber barons of capitalism and the exploited masses there stands the capitalist government—the administrative group, the army, the police, the courts. It is this government, in the hands of the lackeys of the ruling class that guarantees the preservation and perpetuation of this system. In order to abolish private property in the means of production and distribution we must conquer the political power for the working class.

The creation of a strong "Federated Farmer-Labor Party" embracing all the minority political groups as well as the militant trade unions will be the first step toward a policy on the part of the American working class that will eventually result in smashing the power of the thieves, big and little, who live off the misery, poverty and degradation of the working class.

Harding Talks About Russia

It was inevitable that President Harding should get off a wheeze about Russia somewhere on his speaking tour. But he chose a bad time and a poor place to display his ignorance when he referred to "the colossal failure" of the workers and peasants' government in his address at Helena, Mont.

It was on this same day that the kept press was eating its lies about the alleged poisoning of the former patriarch, Tikhon, in a Soviet prison. The Associated Press "discovered" that Tikhon is at liberty, that he lives in a monastery at Moscow, and that he has recanted in his position against workers' rule. All of which causes the New York World to editorialize as follows:

> "The news direct from Moscow by the Associated Press that 'Dr.

"The Call" Goes to Scranton, Pa.

We were startled to learn that the New York Call (Socialist) had suddenly sent its labor editor to the Tri-District Convention of the Pennsylvania Anthracite Coal Miners at Scranton. Saidhis Socialist daily, that had completely ignored the recent important convention of the Pennsylvania Federation of Labor, that took a stand on reconstruction and the Labor Party, was getting a little more enterprising.

But we learn that "The Call" didn't go to Scranton to be of any real aid to the coal miners. The chief object, in news article and editorial, seems to have been to learn whether Rinaldo Cappellini, president-elect in District No. 1, was a member of the Workers Party. It was trying to discover something that might help cheer up the downcast reaction.

We do not remember that we have anywhere claimed Cappellini as a party member. But Cappellini, as a progressive, was being fought not only by the mine owners and their press, but also by the Lewis reactionary machine. "THE WORKER" threw all its strength into the fight to elect Cappellini over the Mine Owners-Lewis candidate. Where was "The Call"? It was silent. It had no position in this important struggle.

"The Call" now confesses, "What has happened in District One is that a more progressive administration has been elected." That is all that "THE WORKER" has claimed. But the point is that "THE WORKER" helped elect it. "The Call", thru its silence, helped the mine owners and the Lewis' reaction muster what little support could be rallied in support of their lost cause.

The left movement is growing in all the labor unions, not among the reactionaries. "The Call" is opposed to this progressive movement, subjecting it to every conceivable underhanded attack. "THE WORKER" stands pledged to support progress in the organized ranks of the American labor movement. If we can send "The Call," a daily, to Scranton, Pa., with "THE WORKER," a weekly, how far can we send it with "THE WORKER," a daily? We wonder.

A Saintly Vanderbilt Speaks

Seldom does there pass a day without the kept press discovering or uncovering a saintly employer. The latest addition to the Angels from Hell is William K. Vanderbilt, living progeny of a grandfather by the same name and of "damn the public" fame.

At a hearing on the Schenectady street car strike before the New York State Industrial Commissioner, Mr. Vanderbilt, grandson of the late Commodore, confessed that he was in favor of dealing with labor unions and that he did not believe in disregarding the public. This confession inspired the metropolitan dailies to prominent stories painting the marked contrast between grandfather and grandson.

But scratch an employing class "Saint," and you have a capitalist devil. All in all, Vanderbilt's pro-union ditty was sweet persiflage. The young Vanderbilt is one of the Directors of the New York Central which, jointly with the Delaware and Hudson, controls the Schenectady Railway Company. Since May 16, the men have been on strike for the right to organize. The directors of the company persistently refused to deal with the men.

When the Industrial Commissioner tried to get Vanderbilt down to brass tacks and asked him for suggestions as to settling the strike, it became evident that the brother of the Dutchess of Marlborough was merely beating about the bush and talking for effect. His Capitalist Highness then said that he was not in a position to give advice about the situation since he was absent at the last meeting of the Board of Directors. Besides, he said that the strike is nearly over, and that the settlement is a matter for the officers of the road to handle and not for the directors.

"It is an operating detail," said the "pro-union" employer. As Mr. Schenkan went on to protest that he was not getting action, Vanderbilt replied, "You can get me at any time to discuss it."

That is just it. The employers of today, as a rule, use more advanced methods of class warfare. They are not as crude and blunt as their forefathers. They employ camouflage and gas screens. They try to hide their dastardly crimes against the workers behind clouds of misleading phrases. While they engage in shooting their mouths off with sweet words for their employes, they are committing the most hideous outrages against the workers.

The glaring contrast between the talking and doing of Mr. Vanderbilt is a classic example of such capitalist strategy. Vanderbilt is a close ally of the Delaware and Hudson and one of the leading spirits of the New York Central. Both of these railways were in the hard-boiled group that fought the striking shopmen tooth and nail. The notorious L. F. Loree, a sworn enemy of the working class, is the big chief of the former Road. The Michigan Central, a subsidiary of the New York Central, is the Road that attempted the infamous "Gary Frame-up" of innocent workers and engineered the raid on the Trade Union Educational League in Chicago. It was this company, whose guardian angel Mr. Vanderbilt now swears by the public, that was guilty of numerous violations of the Safety Acts and was using faulty equipment endangering the lives of their passengers.

The acts of these hypocritical employing class champions of the rights of Labor, give the lie to their words of "friendship." Not even the powerful capitalist press can effectively glove the nailed fist of the exploiters in the eyes of the workingmen.

Daugherty Aid Says Sleuths S
Many They Can't Be Counte

(By Federated Press)

WASHINGTON.—There are now many thousands of federal dete "that the task of managing them is one that would have made the founde of the various bodies," according to John W. H. Crim, assistant attorn general of the United States. Crim is about to retire, perhaps, thru accep for his amazing frankness in a speech that has visibly agitated the depa ment of justice.

He was addressing the alumni association of the Williams and Ma College of Virginia when he declared:

"Take the department of justice out of politics."

He left the inference that the only way to get justice into the depa ment was to remove it from the hands of politicians.

"There are so many federal detectives, he said in the course of his speech, that it is doubtful if any one knows "within any fair degree of approximation" just how many. He added:

"Their classification on the payrolls of the several departments and bureaus precludes their identification without detailed study of their duties. It will suffice to say there are thousands of them."

Speaking of his seventeen years' connection with the department of justice, he said:

"I can count on my fingers the professional politicians in my experience who at any time rendered substantial aid in law enforcement.

The crooked politician with the machine is always arrayed with the other side. It is impossible to bring an important criminal case without a fight with them at every point wh a process of government is expose

The federal arm of the law does bother the rich and influential cri inal, according to Daugherty's assi ant.

"In the fall of 1921 we found in o national banking situation that t average bank defaulter was in no w being molested by the prosecuti arm of the government until mo than two years had transpired subs quent to notice to it of the defal tions," he said.

"This crime of bank defalcation h increased more than 200 per ce above the normal line. The prosec tion of such offenses so long af commission is unduly expensive. the defender is rich, he builds up political offense beginning with t local district leader and ending w a more prominent statesman of n tional reputation."

"Underground with the Reds"

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL

Another wave of hysterical propaganda against the militants in th labor movement has been started over the land. The antics of the Boston Transcript and its followers, immediately following the Michigan raid, and later the New York Herald, and its supporters, are now being duplicated by a string of kept publications headed by the New York Commercial in the East and tailed by the Berkeley (Calif.) Daily Gazette in the Far West.

Considerable stress is laid on the source of this latest vomit, one Fry R. Marvin, editor of the Mountain States' Banker. One of our readers o in the California city writes in as follows:

"I started to check up on this bird by underlining important breaks as I went along, but after the second underline, I discovered at once he was just a plum fool and I gave up the check."

Yet the publication of this malicious network of fabrications, carrying the official endorsement of Attorney General O. L. Smith, of Michigan, one of the prosecutors of William Z. Foster and C. E. Ruthenberg, may have some good results. It will turn large numbers of intellectually hungry newspaper readers to the literature of the Communist movement. Here they will find some really worth while information on "Underground Radicalism," in the pamphlet by that name, written by John Pepper as "An Open Letter to Eugene V. Debs and to All Honest Workers Within the Socialist Party."

In this 48-page pamphlet there is enough antidote to eliminate all the mental poison to be found in the daily anti-Communist campaign of the "Brass-Check" press. Here we have facts instead of fiction. There is a rich field for live thinking in the chapter on "Political Developments from 1920 to 1923." The chapter on "Underground Radicalism" will help open the minds and stimulate the thoughts of those who have looked on Communism as something alien. Other interesting chapters deal with such subjects as "The Labor Spy," "The Socialist Party—Two Wings Without a Body," "United Front, But Separate Organization."

A million copies of Pepper's "Underground Radicalism" carefully distributed where the deluge of new print containing Marvin's "Unde ground with the Reds" series is hi ting the hardest, will have excelle results. The attack on the Commu ist movement will then return as boomerang to plague the villifye of the thinking elements among t working class. Warren Wanders into the Farm Problem; or, Hutchinson Farmers Hear Harding on Hard Times

Editor's Note—When President Harding began soft-soaping the Western farmers on his trip to the Pacific Coast, we sent off a wire to Hal Ware, one of the best informed writers on agricultural conditions in the country, and asked him to tell our readers what the farmers thought of Harding. Ware was at the time at Minneapolis, Minn., the world's greatest primary wheat market and home of the grain gamblers. Ware responded as follows:

* * *

By HAL WARE

(Special to "The Worker")

MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.—What does John Farmer think of Harding's farm speech? I asked a dirt farmer. He replied. "Hell, he must be a Christian Scientist."

Gamaliel got the farmers' goat when he said: "The losses to American agriculture are universally admitted and deplored but it is not an experience peculiar to American agriculture alone. It came to railroads, bankers, to manufacturers and to the mercantile world." (Seems to me I noticed a 7 per cent dividend on N. Y. C. R. R. stock and reports of other profits lately NOT on the farms.)

After this the bulk of his speech was devoted to the Administration's "Crowning achievement," the 1923 Credit legislation. (You have heard the expression, "I'll crown you one." Well, this should be interpreted in that sense.) Harding says, "I have reserved till the last what we may well appraise the crowning achievement on the entire list." Then he outlines the new banking plan.

1. The Federal Farm Loan Banks that loan only on real estate. The new Federal Intermediate Credit Banks that may rediscount farmer's notes held by local banks as well as loaning on personal and chattle credit. Then comes the National Agricultural Credit Corporations. These are to be in private hands, but "supervised" (You know me Al). They may also loan on personal and chattle credit up to nine months. To facilitate the marketing of debentures issued by these banks a class of Rediscount Banks is provided. Harding sums up, "It is simply another application of the revolving fund or endless credit chain idea, which we found illustrated in the case of the Intermediate Credit Banks."

"It's an endless chain all right, and it goes right about John's neck. The facts are that this credit system is devised to bolster up the banks staggering with farm paper. The experience of the old Federal Farm Loan Banks was largely transferring of mortgages from private or local banks to the government. The new Intermediate Bank will also transfer debts by rediscounting farm paper for local banks. The privately run Credit corporations will get the new business; issue debentures against the paper given by the farmer and sell these thru the Rediscount banks, get more money and so on. Simple, is it not? Yes, it is not! "You borrow from Peter to pay Paul" and each little transaction adds a little more of that unholy interest.—This is Harding's "Crowning achievement."

He absolutely ignored high interest; dodged any mention of high freight rates. He missed the actual bankruptcy of the American farm by a thousand miles and only grazed the tremendous mortgage debt of eight billions by referring to mortgages in the same breath with Railroad bonds. Same type of "paper", you know, pays dividends or interest to the same people. Not the farmer or the worker. He did not touch upon the figures which were called to his attention, showing that the very wheat that he played with there for publicity purposes in Hutchinson returned only a net of ten cents to the farmer. And he never even suggested the fundamental question that faces all farmers;—their rapidly shrinking equity in the LAND. Mr. Harding's method of solving the Agricultural problem is to apply a combination of Coue's "Better and Better" with Einstein's Theory of Relativity. For instance: We are getting Better and Better because no matter how bad things are, in relation to some dark past, they are better now.

We used to be slaves! The slave became a villein, the villein became a peasant," finally, "the man of the land had won his first battle, the battle for a place in the political system." He then orates thru the "covered wagon" stage and remarks "there were no motor cars, no electric lights." No, Mr. Harding, and neither are there motor cars and electric lights in the vast majority of farm homes to-day.

He continues: "The farm emancipation in this country has been space with other advancements, tho there are inevitably periods of unbalanced price relationships—the reflexes of supply and demand, which have vexed and discouraged. There is no escaping the relativity (Einstein again) of outlay and income. The same practice is to make sure that the outlay is less than the income." How simple and profound. Just follow that advice and you will never be broke!

This is our President! A mouthpiece for big business! At a time when thousands and tens of thousands are being driven from the land by the banks. When the farmers have their backs to the wall and are rallying to the slogan "WORK THE LAND AND WE WANT IT" he prates of "Credit as a solution and covertly insinuates that the farmers must oppose the demands of the workers. Harding should know that it is no "ephemeral whim" that brought workers and farmers together politically in the last elections. The tillers of the soil and the toilers in the cities have a common bond—their enemies are the same. Everywhere one senses a determined consciousness of that bond. Mr. Harding will soon face its concrete manifestation—A UNITED LABOR PARTY.

Farm-Labor Attack Splits Republicans

By BUDD L. McKILLIPS
(Federated Press Correspondent)

MINNEAPOLIS.—A serious break has developed in the ranks of the Republican party in the state that almost assures the election, July 16, of Magnus Johnson, Farmer-Labor candidate, to fill the unexpired term of the late U. S. Senator Knute Nelson.

Charging that Governor Jake Preus, Republican candidate, has been for years using the G. O. P. machinery to promote his own selfish ends, prominent members of the party have bolted and formed a Progressive Republican club for Magnus Johnson. Among those who have gone over to the Johnson camp are Julius Schmal, former Republican secretary of state; Theodore Frankson, former Republican lieutenant governor, and C. A. Lydiard, former Republican member of the state legislature and city clerk of Minneapolis.

Altho he has not taken a direct stand for Johnson, ex-Governor J. A. A. Burnquist has issued a statement that will assist the progressives in ridding the party of "Preusism."

Money is being poured into the state by the national Republican organization in the attempt to elect Preus. Governor Nestos, North Dakota, anti-farmer governor of that state, is here repaying Preus for speaking against the Nonpartisan league during the last election in Dakota.

Gonpers Bars Militants in Steel Drive

This week, in an adjoining column, we show why the United States government, federal, state and local, supports the steel trust in its war upon the steel workers.

Next week's article will conclude the series in our fight against the 12-Hour Day. It will show that Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, actually opposes the organization of the workers in the steel industry.

It is announced from the Washington headquarters of the American Federation of Labor that a new attempt will be made to organize the steel workers, but that this "new movement" will steer clear of any "radical" associations. It is declared that William Z. Foster and the Trade Union Educational League will not be allowed to take part. This hypocrisy will be exposed next week.

Twelve-Hour Day Rests on Brutal Dictatorship of Employing Class

By JAY LOVESTONE
Steel is All-Powerful Today

The Two-Shift system of coining blood into profits rests on a system of unrelenting recourse to savage terrorism. Matched with the wanton outrages of the American Monarch, Steel, the tyranny of the feudal overlords of yesterday would blush with shame.

The Twelve-Hour Working Day is maintained by a highly organized system of force and violence—the employing class Government, municipal, State, and Federal. Every steel town and almost every official, church, and newspaper in these towns are the outright property of the Steel Buccaneers. Only thru Black Cossackism and merciless oppression are the workers held in the abject slavery of the inhuman 12-Hour Day. From their own bitter experiences thousands of steel workers have come to believe that Government is their bosses' rule of blood and iron. A mailed fist policy goes hand in hand with the long working day. Bayonets buttress the powerful dictatorship of steel and profits. A vicious spy system has its deadly tentacles creeping thru every walk of the Steel worker's life.

The union of Steel and Government is today an open, ugly fact. The Democratic President Wilson had Gary act as the representative of the public at his first Industrial Peace Conference. The Republican Harding only echoes the sentiments and opinions of his Field Marshal of the American employing class.

Mellon, our Secretary of the Treasury, a heavy donor to the Republican campaign funds, is a big steel owner and is the Steel Trust's agent plenipotentiary in the Cabinet. Steel is all-powerful and makes and unmakes laws. Speaking of the Fordney-McCumber Tariff Act which gave CHICAGO.—"Build!" is the word written big on the standards of the Federated Farmer-Labor Party launched at the workers' and farmers' conference here.

"We must build big and strong," say the officials of the Federated Party.

The aspiring spirit of the Federated Party is typified in its chairman, William Bouck, class-conscious dirt farmer from the Pacific Coast, and in its secretary, Joseph Manley, the city toiler, member of the Bridge and Structural Iron Workers' Union, and one of the organizers of the 1919 steel strike.

I could find no one to deny that the Federated Farmer-Labor Party would grow rapidly. Even the die-hards among the Farmer-Laborites admitted the Federated Party had come into existence thru popular and widespread demand.

"Work, real organization work! That's what is ahead of us!" exclaimed John C. Kennedy, Washington state secretary of the Farmer-Labor Party, one of the most enthusiastic supporters of the Federated Party.

Kennedy has gone back to the Pacific Coast, just as other militant Farmer-Laborites have gone back to Ohio, Kentucky, Minnesota, Idaho, California and downstate Illinois. I saw him shortly before he left Chicago.

Plan Strike of Labor in All Canada

By WILLIAM LONG
(Special Wire to "The Worker.")

Calgary, Alberta.—Sentiment in favor of immediate action in support of District 26, U. M. W. A., is sweeping thru western Canada. All locals of District 18, U. M. W. A., are unanimous in their demand for immediate and drastic action.

William Sherman, president of District 18, stated that the executive board is endeavoring to arrange with all labor bodies in Western Canada to hold a conference for the purpose of common action in case troops are used in District 26. Monster protest meetings were held Sunday, July 15, with prominent speakers, including William Irvine, Joseph Shaw, William Sherman, president of District 18, and Fred White.

A telegram from James Murdock, Federal Minister of Labor, to President Sherman, stating that troops from Winnipeg and other western points have been stopped on their way to Nova Scotia shows that the aroused protests of labor are having quick effect. He also states in this telegram that he is making strenuous efforts to have the troops on the coast removed.

A special meeting has been called by the Edmonton, Alberta, Trades and Labor Council to deal with the serious situation in Nova Scotia. There is no doubt that the use of troops will be the signal for the breaking out of a general sympathetic strike from one end of the Dominion of Canada to the other.

Rhode Island to Hear Report

(Special to "The Worker.")

PROVIDENCE, R. I.—William J. Smith, business agent, Painters' Local, No. 195, and president of the Providence Building Trades Council, will report on his attendance at the organization conference of the Federated Farmer-Labor Party at Chicago, at the outing of the Rhode Island Federation for the United Front, Sunday, July 15, at Vasa Park (Warwick Ave. and the Pawtucket River).

Joseph M. Coldwell is chairman, and James P. Reid, secretary, of the United Front Conference, that will also listen to a report of the Labor Party of Rhode Island, as well as Smith's report on the Chicago conference.

All Labor to Hear Story of Chicago Unity

Mass meeting to report to the workers and farmers of the nation on the organization work, the principles and program of the Federated Farmer-Labor Party are being arranged for all sections of the country.

Perhaps the most ambitious demonstration is that planned for New York City, Tuesday, July 24, at 8 P. M., at Webster Hall, 119 E. 11th Street, between 3d and 4th Aves.

C. E. Ruthenberg, secretary, Workers Party; William Z. Foster, secretary, Trade Union Educational League, and J. Louis Engdahl, editor of "The Worker," conspicuous figures at the Chicago Conference, and who helped in the formation of the Federated Farmer-Labor Party, will give a detailed report of all the proceedings of the historic gathering.

The capitalist and yellow "Socialist" press is bewildered over the strength and power developed by this gathering. They were spreading a network of falsehoods about it. They are trying to belittle its importance.

On Tuesday night, July 24, the workers of New York City will have an opportunity to hear the truth from men who helped build this coalition of workers' and farmers' organizations, and against whom all the enemies of the working class are centering their attacks. John J. Ballam, also a delegate to the convention, will preside.

Chicago Events Arouse Enthusiasm

The enthusiasm with which the successful results of the Chicago conference are being received over the country, was well shown at the Douglas Park Auditorium meeting held in Chicago, Friday, and the Workers Party Picnic, at Milwaukee, Wisc., on Sunday.

Among the speakers at the Chicago mass meeting, held on the day following the adjournment of the "Labor Party Conference" were Robert Minor, I. Louis Engdahl, Noah London, Alexander Bittleman and N. Loonin. The gathering was made up in large part of needle workers, who declared they would push the task of securing affiliation of their "internationals" with the Federated Party.

Engdahl and Loonin spoke at the Milwaukee demonstration held at Tippecanoe Park. This gathering marked the opening of the campaign of the Federated Party in this city.

On his way to the Chicago Conference, Engdahl spoke at enthusiastic Labor Party gatherings held at Wilmington, Del., and Baltimore, Md.

The Coal Commission Report; A Warning and a Challenge

In accordance with the provisions of the Borah-Winslow Act, Harding appointed a "Fact-Finding Commission" to investigate the coal industry.

Since the end of the last coal strike the investigators have been at work and the country has been seeing cost thru the eyes of the Commission; except, of course, what it has had to see in the propaganda, seeing the National Coal Association $1,500,000.

With the completion of the report on the anthracite industry, half of the Commission's work is over.

Salient Feature of Report

Rumor has it that the report was edited by Daugherty. Whether Daugherty formally and actually edited the report does not matter a straw. Anyone who carefully scrutinizes and dissects the document will find that it has Daugherty's strike-breaking labor policy smeared all over it.

The Commission proposes that the Government knead the fermenting dough of discontent amongst the coal workers with giant, brutal fists!

Says the Report: "The President of the United States should be authorized by act of Congress to declare that a national emergency exists" in the event of cessation of operations, and to take charge of mines, fix the wages, and set the price to be received by the owners, subject to review by the court.

In practice this means that the President is to be clothed with still greater strike-breaking powers.

Should the anthracite miners revolt against unspeakable working conditions and hold the operators in check or drive them to cover, the President, without going out of his way in the least or expending the indignificant energy of looking for a dead statute to support his anti-Labor

Manley Shows Lewis Invoked Mob Law in Fear of Progress Made by Mine Union Militants

(Special to "The Worker")

CHICAGO.—Deepest resentment prevailed among the Federated Farmer-Labor Party delegates here against the lynching tactics of President John L. Lewis, of the United Mine Workers, in expelling Joseph Manley, his secretary, and J. P. McCarthy and Mrs. Ida McCarthy from the Tri-District Convention of the Anthracite Coal Miners at Scranton, Pa.

Manley charges that Lewis' attempt at lynch law was an immediate result of the rapid growth of the progressive movement within the miners' organization, a development that has swept far beyond the control of the reactionary Lewis' administration.

William Z. Foster, secretary of the Trade Union Educational League, also indicts Lewis' resort to mob tactics as the most disgraceful event in all the history of the American labor movement.

Manley charges that Lewis was driven to desperation by his con-

The First Mass Party of American Workers and Farmers

By JOHN PEPPER

A Party of 600,000 Farmers and Industrial Workers

Summing up in a single phrase the historical significance of the July 3d Convention is this: the first real mass party of American workers and farmers has been founded in Chicago. The 740 delegates who assembled in Chicago represented not less than 616,000 workers and farmers.

The new Federated Farmer-Labor Party is a mass party. It is the first mass party of workers and farmers in the United States. Mass is something relative. Historical circumstances decide whether 10,000 or a million stand for a mass. But no one can deny that a party of 600,000 workers and farmers is a real mass party, if one knows that the Socialist Party has only 12,000, the Workers Party only 20,000 members, and that the old Socialist Party at the zenith of its development had no more than 100,000 members.

The Socialist Party which has already long ago allied itself with the $25,000 a year labor leaders against the class struggle declares that the Federated Farmer-Labor Party is no real party, because the big official leaders of the national and international unions are not in it, and because it is, in reality, simply the Communist Party under another name. The Socialist Party was not represented in the Convention. It declared that the laboring masses are not as yet ripe for organizing a Labor Party, and that without the big leaders, the Labor Party could never be organized. The Socialist Party press belittled the July 3d Convention because it organized the Federated Farmer-Labor Party without the big leaders, and against them, tho with the participation of 616,000 workers and farmers. The Socialist Party today is only a jackal of the battlefields of the class-struggle. It fears the battle, but always appears after the battle, in order to steal something from the spoils.

A Party of Officials or of Rank and File?

The new Federated Farmer-Labor Party is no artificial product of a mere doctrine, but is the result of a special American development. It does not ape the British Labor Party. It was not formed from the top by the officials of the American Federation of Labor or the national and international unions. It is a creation of the rank and file, a creation of local unions, city bodies, and state organizations. The Labor Party developed, like the British Labor Party, comprise nearly the entire working class, not only the left wing of the labor and farmer movements. And it does not copy the British Labor Party in this regard—also—that from the very first, it accepted the cooperation of the Communists, the Workers Party, into its ranks.

In spite of all Socialist theorists, the American labor movement does not wish to follow the "brilliant" example of the British labor leaders. The American Socialists long for the time when they could imitate the example of the British Labor Party, the official Opposition of His British Majesty. But Gompers is not Smillie or MacDonald. He sells the workers openly to the capitalists of the old Republican and Democratic parties. And even Johnston and the leaders of the mighty Railroad Brotherhoods do not wish to form a Labor Party. It is their wish to deliver the votes of the workers and exploited farmers to the La Follette group, to the political representation of the lower middle class and well-to-do farmers. The Cleveland Conference of December 11, 1922, showed clearly that neither the Johnston clique nor the Socialist Party sincerely wish to form a Labor Party. And the progressive officials have showed themselves just as much fakers as the conservative officials.

As the Farmer-Labor Party issued the call for the July 3 Convention, that meant nothing else than the liquidation of the last illusion that the big leaders of the American labor movement would ever lead the workers in an independent political struggle. We Communists at that time criticised the split, not because we had any trust in the officials, but because we hoped that if the militant elements would stay in the Conference for Progressive Political Action, they would sweep along ever greater masses against the officials. At the moment that the split was made, when the militant elements decided to carry on an independent action, the Workers Party accepted the fact, and declared that it would participate in the July 3d Convention.

The Farmer-Labor Party which was leader of the shilly-shally conference for Progressive Political Action, seen clearly thru the consequences of its own tactic. It did not see clearly that its split from the Cleveland Conference denoted a break with the entire officialdom of the American Federation of Labor and the Railroad Brotherhoods, and it waited for the officials of the national and international unions and the Socialist Party to come to the July 3d Convention. They did not understand the situation—that the longing of the masses for the Labor Party was strong enough to bring the delegates of the rank and file to the Convention, but not strong enough as yet, to drive the labor officials to the formation of a Labor Party.

Luck and End of the Farmer-Labor Party

The leaders of the Farmer-Labor Party—Fitzpatrick, Nockles, Buck and Brown set the rank and file into motion. But as the mighty rank and file, dominated by a proletarian spirit, gathered at the Convention, these leaders were frightened back before their own bravery, and began to fight against the Convention. They called together the Convention, in order to found a Labor Party. But when the Convention took its task seriously, and set itself to forming a Labor Party, they wished to disrupt the Convention. Like Kronos the Greek god, they wished to devour their own child, immediately after its birth. But the Convention, like Zeus, the son of Kronos, showed itself stronger than the officials of the Farmer-Labor Party, and dethroned the whole officialdom of the Farmer-Labor Party, proclaiming itself sovereign. Fitzpatrick, Buck and Brown played a merry game in the Convention. In Cleveland they still spoke for the idea of a Labor Party. In Chicago they fought against the idea of a Labor Party. After the Cleveland Conference, Fitzpatrick declared that they were splitting because that Conference merely revived the vague phrase of a Labor Party. In Chicago, Fitzpatrick declared himself for the "independent Labor Party" idea, but sabotaged the formation of an Independent Labor Party. In Chicago, Fitzpatrick declared himself for the "independent" and "immediate" political action, and sabotaged the formation of an independent Labor Party. In Cleveland he made the split for the Labor Party. In Chicago he made the split against the Labor Party.

The Farmer-Labor officials were still for accepting the Workers Party delegates in Cleveland. In Chicago they conducted a desperate fight against admitting the Communists. Fitzpatrick is an old fighter and an old opponent of Gompers. He has merited much in the labor movement, but at the July 3d Convention he held a speech against the Labor Party, against the Third International, against the Communists, against Foster, a speech which might just as well have been made by Samuel Gompers. The tactics of the officials of the Federated Farmer-Labor Party has brought ruin to them and to the old Farmer-Labor Party.

At the beginning of the Convention, Fitzpatrick was greeted with the greatest ovation and with unanimous enthusiasm of all the delegates, but his last speech at the Convention was applauded by not more than thirty of forty persons. Fitzpatrick had entered the Ashland Auditorium as the future leader of the American working class, and left it as a politically isolated man. Today he must choose. Either he realizes his mistake and returns to the militants, or he must ally himself with Samuel Gompers against the militants.

It is a Mass Party!

The Farmer-Labor Party officials are trying desperately now to continue the existence of the old Farmer-Labor Party. But none of them is a Jesus Christ who can, by miracle, imbue life into a corpse. All state organizations of the Farmer-Labor Party have gone over to the new Federated Farmer-Labor Party. Only the Cook County organization has remained within the old Farmer-Labor Party. The delegates of Washington, Ohio, Kentucky, Wisconsin, Montana, Idaho, and California declared Sunday on for the new party, and are today affiliated with the Committee of the new party. All farmer-organizations of Wisconsin, Nebraska and Oregon have joined the Federated Farmer-Labor Party. More than fifty delegates remained with Fitzpatrick outside of the ranks of the new Party. The old Farmer-Labor Party officials may now weep and wail that their Labor Party idea has been stolen, that their name has been taken away, and that they wish to continue their old Party, and will do so. The truth is that not one farmer organization has gone along with them, that all the farmer organizations without exception have joined the new Party. The chairman of the new party is a dirt-farmer, a leader of the Wisconsin Progressive Farmers. The first vice chairman is the representative of the Progressive Party of Nebraska, which is a farmer, organization. The second vice chairman is a representative of the farmers of Wisconsin. The Farmer-Labor Party has been reduced to a Labor organization—Cook County. They went forward to conquer the United States, and they have one county—Cook County.

It is just as ridiculous when the Socialist Party denies that the new Federated Farmer-Labor Party is a real mass organization—the Socialist Party which was forced to give up the idea of the New York State Farmer-Labor Party because it feared that the Workers Party would get the majority there, and even in New York City has thrown away the mask of an American Labor Party, and once more dug up its ticket in the name of the Socialist Party.

The Role of the Workers Party

The new Party is a mass-party. It is a party of the rank and file. It is a party, not only of workers, but also of farmers. It is a ridiculous lie to assert that the Federated Farmer-Labor Party is nothing but a new name for the Workers Party. The Workers Party is a minority in the new Party, just as it was a minority in the Convention. Of the 740 delegates, the Workers Party had only 150 political delegates, and only 170 delegates who represented various trade unions and other labor organizations. And yet, the Convention was almost unanimous on all important questions. The old Farmer-Labor Party officials never received more than fifty or sixty votes. It was not the Workers Party which dominated the Convention, but rather the idea of the formation of a genuine Federated Farmer-Labor Party, and the Workers Party was nothing else than a driving force and ideological representative of the idea of independent political action of the worker and farmer. It is just as ridiculous to say that the new Party organization is controlled by the Workers Party. The Workers Party is in the minority on the National Executive Committee and the Executive Council of the new Party. The Workers Party has not the ambition to control the new Party. Its only wish is to strengthen the militant spirit of the new Party, to develop its class-consciousness and to develop the new Party to a real party of the laboring masses. We do not wish to dominate or control the Federated Farmer-Labor Party, but we assert proudly that without the unifying work of the Workers Party, this new Party would have not been organized, and that after the betrayal by the Socialist Party and the bankruptcy of the Farmer-Labor Party, the Workers Party is the only political group in this country which fights consciously and militantly for the idea of a Labor Party.

The 600,000 workers and farmers who have formed the Federated Farmer-Labor Party, are not as yet Communists. It would have been a blunder if the Workers Party had proposed a Communist program, because a big part of the workers and farmers would have simply run away. In the program of the new Party there are many theoretical mistakes, but that is no harm. The prospects of today are such, that even the left wing of the labor movement can be united only with these no Communist, theoretical half-measures. Only thus could the 600,000 farmers and workers be united in organized action.

But there are two points in the resolutions which are an absolute guarantee that the new Party is not a reformist party, but will be a real revolutionary, militant party. The first point is the one which declares that the masses must first capture political power before they can have nationalization and public ownership. The second point is the one which declares that the land shall belong to its users. These two points bind the Party to the life and death struggle against capitalism.

The New Immediate Tasks

The new Federated Farmer-Labor Party is organized, but the July 3d Convention means only the first step. We must go further, if we would prevent the movement from ending in a fiasco. Four great tasks fall us in the near future.

First, we must give a broader basis to the new Federated Farmer-Labor Party. We must call upon the Labor and Farmer Conference for Progressive Political Action, as well as upon all existing local labor parties, to unite with the new Party.

Second, we must exercise a greater and greater pressure from below upon the big national and international unions, to force them to join the new Party.

Third, we must organize everywhere, from coast to coast, local city and state units of the Federated Farmer-Labor Party.

Fourth, we must immediately begin an energetic, nation-wide campaign for the next convention of the Federated Farmer-Labor Party, to meet early in 1924. At this convention, there must be present, not hundreds, but thousands of delegates. The next convention must unite, not only the left wing, but the majority of the working class, for conscious political action, and the struggle against the capitalist class-parties as well as against the lower middle class La Follette and Ford movements.

Big Task Now Is to Build United Party

Bennett, providing for entrance into the Federated Party's national executive committee. But this can be interpreted as a case where the membership of the Farmer-Labor Party ran away from the leaders. Let the Chicago Federation of Labor decide to affiliate with the Party of today and ask Fitzpatrick, Nockels, Buck and Brown to "Come in!" Then there may be heard a different story.

But real enemies of this federated farmer-labor movement may be found among the "Socialists" who tried to undermine and sabotage it from the beginning. C. G. Scott, a Minneapolis, Minn., Socialist alderman, came representing the Socialists of his state, in spite of the National Socialist Convention decision not to participate. He was always in the front rank fighting for united action. But there were other "Socialists" in the convention hall under different guises. The whole staff of the Chicago Edition of the New York Jewish Daily (Socialist) Forward were there trying to confuse and disrupt. They were charged with lobbying against measures that had the popular support of the delegates.

Perhaps the most corrupting work attempted by "The Forward" was its attempt to spread the falsehood that the delegates of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers had withdrawn from the convention on the first day. After this report had appeared I found the delegates of "The Amalgamated" still in the convention hall. They were Sam Rissman, Steve Skala and A. D. Mariempetri. I asked Rissman what he had to say about the report in "The Forward."

"The Forward," he aptly replied, "doesn't know what in hell it is talking about."

The New York (Socialist) Call tried to follow valiantly in the footsteps of its tutor. Its correspondent at Chicago was Julius Hochman, who was seated as a delegate of the New York Joint Board, Dress and Waist Makers' Union, kept up a consistent struggle for united political action. Thus did all "Socialist" efforts destroy themselves with their own petards. Probably the most scathing denunciation of the Socialist Party failure to participate in the conference came from Lillian Herstein, a Chicago school teacher, member of the Farmer-Labor Party, who had been denied a seat in the Cleveland Conference of the Committee for Progressive Political Action as a representative of the Chicago Teachers' Federation. The Cleveland Conference refused to seat delegates of local organizations.

At no time was there any doubt as to where the conference stood. When the resolutions were being considered, the delegates jumped to their feet and cheered in support of the resolution demanding recognition of Soviet Russia, also of Mexico. This scene was re-enacted when resolutions were adopted demanding the release of all the class-war prisoners.

Open Letter to Clevelanders

This is the spirit with which an open letter will be addressed to the Committee for Progressive Political Action, that failed to make progress at Cleveland, Ohio, last December.

It is the spirit that will be behind the nation-wide campaign that is already under way. The Federated Party will be represented at the Convention, July 19, called by the West Virginia State Federation of Labor to organize independent political action of the workers in that state.

Chicago will be the party headquarters. An official weekly publication will be issued. Funds are to be deposited in the Amalgamated Trust and Savings Bank, Chicago.

Thus the Federated Farmer-Labor Party is being built as the political weapon of America's working class—the toilers on the land and in the cities.

Why All This Hurry?

Frightened into action by the mass movement for political action let loose by the Federated Farmer-Labor Party Conference, in Chicago, the Committee for Progressive Political Action is getting busy in New York State.

We had been informed by the Socialists controlling the "American Labor Party" that the time was not opportune for the holding of a state conference. Now the Keating-Johnston forces have called the conference for July 29th, and the "Socialists" are put to it, to explain that they have been invited. The New York Call goes far out of its way to emphasize that the Workers Party and the Federated Farmer-Labor Party will be barred. It is not stated what will happen to militant representatives of labor organizations.

The Chicago Conference showed that the forces united in the Federated Farmer-Labor Party alone stand for united and independent political action. Any attempt to bar it from labor's political gatherings in New York State, is an attempt to betray the workers and farmers into serfdom to the old political parties.

The tremendous and growing sentiment of the city and farm workers for class political action is the direct cause of this hurry-up action in New York State. No one will object to this speed, however. The sooner the straight-out issue is presented, the better the victims of exploitation the better. The forces within the Federated Farmer-Labor Party may rest assured that the full drift of working-class hopes for anti-Wall Street political action will enlist under its standards.

Workers Party Holds Open Air Meetings at Cleveland, Ohio

Local Cleveland, Ohio, Workers Party, has recently held successful open air meetings addressed by Emil E. Holmes, National Secretary of the World War Veterans, on the Menace of the Ku Klux Klan.

A meeting on June 9th was attended by a crowd of one hundred Negro workers who received the speakers with attentive interest. Copies of the Worker, the Labor Party pamphlet, and other literature were sold and a collection taken.

At a meeting held at East 35th Street and Cedar Ave., two hundred Negro and white workers listened with keen appreciation for over two hours, while Comrades Ralph Chaplin and Shaeffer spoke on the Labor Party, the Menace of the K. K. K. and the aims and purposes of the Workers Party respectively. The bundles of the Worker brought to the meeting were quickly sold out and also many Labor Party pamphlets. The collections taken at this meeting showed the deep interest taken by the audience in the work of organizing the workers into more powerful unions thru amalgamation and a fighting Labor Party, a work in which the Workers Party is taking the lead.

58 Arrests Make Holiday for Portland

Fifty-eight men and women were arrested at Portland, Oregon, July 4, for distributing tags asking for the release of political prisoners, according to information received by the American Civil Liberties Union from the Portland branch of the General Committee. This more than doubles the total of 23 arrests first reported.

"All were held under $500 bail each in order to make it impossible for them to be released until Harding left town," the communication to the Civil Liberties Union states. "In the police court yesterday the prisoners were charged with violating a new ordinance against the passing handbills which, of course, did not apply to them. All were released, except one, who was fined $25.00. He is out under $100 bail. We are going to test the validity of this fine in the courts."

"There is nothing further to say about the Portland arrests," Robert W. Dunn, associate director of the Civil Liberties Union, stated today. "They were obviously a miserable trick to prevent any discomfiture the President might have felt in being reminded of the forty-five federal political prisoners and the several hundred workers still in jail under state criminal syndicalism acts."

Lecture on Negro Migration

Friday evening, July 13, a free lecture will be given on the Causes and Extent of the Negro Migration from The South, at 149 W. 136th St., main hall, under the auspices of Peter Menelek, No. 105, of the African Blood Brotherhood.

The lecturer will be Clarissa S. Ware, head of the Bureau of African Labor Research, and the author of several fine articles on the Negro in general and the exodus in particular. The lecture will begin at nine o'clock, following a short business meeting of the Post which will start at 8 o'clock sharp. All persons interested in this important phase of race relations are invited to attend.

Foster and Tallentire Meetings

DULUTH, MINN.—A big amalgamation picnic will take place in Two Harbors, July 16th, and in the Workess Hall, Superior, Wis., 8 P. M., July 17th.

"Imperial Washington"

By Ex-Senator R. F. PETTIGREW

The book of which Lenin said: "It is the greatest book on American political life."

Senator Pettigrew has spent 50 years in public life. He knows Washington and American political life from A to Z.

The United States has already passed from the Republic to the Empire.

We have a Government of the thieves, for the thieves, by the thieves.

Capital is stolen labor, and its only function is to steal more labor.

"Imperial Washington" and knows its value as an authoritative work on American political life. Certainly American workers ought to know what are the tendencies of the government of the U. S. A. This book will prove an eyeopener to every reader.

Copy, cloth, $1.25; paper, 25 cents.

Order of WORKERS PARTY, 799 Broadway, New York City.

Lenin, himself the author of a treatise on "Imperialism," appreciates

Don't Be a Slacker! Help Boost The Party!

Do you want to help the Party grow? Do you want to build up a strong district organization, and enable us to carry on extensive work in the Fall?

All the members of the Workers Party and all militants in New York and vicinity have a splendid chance to co-operate right her and now.

You do not have to be a speaker, writer, an agitator. Each and every one of you can do his bit simply by buying a ticket for the Excursion to Bear Mountain which the Workers Party, District 2, and Local New York is arranging for Saturday afternoon, July 14, 2.30 P. M.

Not only will you support the district organization in this way but you will also give yourself a real treat.

On the Grand Republic, the largest and comfortable steamer which will take you up the Hudson to the loveliest spot on the river, Bear Mountain, you will meet all your old friends and comrades. You will have a chance to talk of old times and of the momentous events of the present. You will dance to the music of a fine orchestra, and now and then have an inexpensive bite—refreshments will be sold at city prices. And an especially fine treat is in store for you, a return home by moonlight.

If you are at all romantic, if you are young in years or in spirit and are ready for a rocking good time, you will come to the Excursion.

Get your tickets immediately. Don't be among those who put things off for to-morrow. Time waits for no man, and July 14 is not far off. All Workers Party members and militants are rushing to buy their tickets in advance so as not to be disappointed.

The Excursion Committee will see to it that only so many are allowed on board as the capacity of the boat will hold. Don't be among those who will regretfully watch the Grand Republic sail away without them.

Tickets cost $1.10, in the boat $1.50. Buy them at the Local Office, 208 E. 12th Street, or the National Headquarters, 799 Broadway, and at all Party daily newspaper offices and party headquarters.

The Grand Republic leaves PIER A, BATTERY PARK, on Saturday, July 14, 2.30 P. M. sharp.

Give the District your support and yourself a fine time!

Comé to the Excursion!

Congratulations on "The Worker"

"Your paper is about the best gotten up paper I have seen. You and the Workers Party are to be congratulated on the existence of a paper of the type of 'The Worker.' The next concentration of the members of the Workers Party must be on the task of converting 'The Worker' into a daily. Let's go!"—P. C., Baltimore, Md.

Denounce the Lewis Lynch Law Tactics

By Max Shachtman.

(Special to THE WORKER.)

CHICAGO.—The wave of condemnation of John L. Lewis in expelling Joseph Manley and Mr. and Mrs. J. P. McCarthy from the 7th District Anthracite Conference of the miners at Scranton, Pa., is rising every day in the ranks of the coal miners. A survey of the opinions of various delegates to the Farmer-Labor conference, here, who happen to be members of the United Mine Workers of America, did not reveal one with a word of excuse for the vicious action of the Lewis machine.

The statements of a few of these miners' delegates are given here without any comment. They speak for themselves.

ALEXANDER HOWAT (former president of the most popular leaders in the U. M. W. of A.): "One can criticize the President of the United States, and the Senate from the Congressional galleries without being thrown out. There was absolutely no justification for Lewis' act, for, so far as I could learn, there was no disturbance created by Manley. Lewis' statement that Manley was an enemy of labor is false. I know Joe Manley as one who is fighting every day to make the labor movement bigger and stronger than it is today. The main reason for his expulsion was undoubtedly the fact that he had taken the liberty to criticize Lewis' policy. It was only another grandstand play by Lewis, and the only question is how long the miners are going to fall for that sort of bunk."

THOMAS MYERSCOUGH (Secretary of the International Progressive Committee in the U. M. W. of A.): "We expect these incidents to happen from time to time. They are just incidents in the fight. The only tendency they have is to improve our stand for the Progressive platform. To inflict bodily injury on a person does not mean anything. This is not a personal fight but a struggle for principles. They may do their damnedest—we are here to meet them. The miners are with us from Washington, on the Pacific coast, to Pittsburgh and Nova Scotia."

DUNCAN MACDONALD (Secretary of the Illinois district of the miners for seven years, ex-President of the Illinois State Federation of Labor, and now rank and file member of Local 448, Springfield, Ill.): "When anyone who attempts to be a leader has to resort to force, especially when he says he has the majority with him, his argument is too weak to be substantiated by right-thinking people. In this respect they resemble the coal operators when the latter attempt to get rid of the organizers for the U. M. W. of A."

FRED MERRICK (a member of the Executive Committee of the Pittsburgh Miners' Relief Conference): "These tactics are nothing new to us. I personally was slugged and ejected from a hall in Smithton, Pa., while holding a receipt for the rent for this hall, the meeting having been called for the relief of the Fayette miners. Later the same day, the same gang of U. M. W. of A. thugs threatened my life on board a B. & O. railroad train if I do not stop activities for these stranded miners. Because we dare to help these miners, the Lewis machine is embittered, and the Manley episode is but one incident in the desperate struggle of the bureaucracy to hold power against the overwhelming sentiment of the rank and file against them."

EDWARD JOHNSON (Recording Secretary, Local 2376, Christopher, Ill.): "It was an outrage—something that has never happened in the history of the United Mine Workers before, to my knowledge. From indications in our locality, Southern Illinois, great numbers of our members are opposed to any such tactics being used in the Miners union. I believe that such action will serve no good purpose for the miners, and will bring only condemnation and defeat to the Lewis machine. The United Mine Workers, so far as I have come in contact with them, are 100 per cent for Howat and the progressives."

ALBERT J. ZIOMEK (Financial Secretary, Local 592, Rossiter, Pa.): "It is a disgrace to the U. M. W. of A., not only in the 2nd District but also all the districts in the country. To have a leader such as Lewis acting in such a manner is a blot, a stain, on our union, and the progressives are out to remove that stain in double-quick order."

NICK SEMON (President, Local 2468, Christopher, Ill.): "It was an injustice to Manley and the McCarthys, and a question that the rank and file should settle. Our local union believes in the progressives both on the industrial and the political fields. If we want to get anywhere in the fight against Capital in this country we must put up a united front; and the action of Lewis at the Scranton Conference was certainly not calculated to attain any such thing."

15,000 Miners, Members Dist. 26, U. M. W., Strike to Force Withdrawal of Troops and Police in Nova Scotia Steel Strike

By TOM BELL

(Specially Written for "The Worker")

SYDNEY, NOVA SCOTIA.—The Steel Workers' Union of Sydney is on strike. Of the 5,000 workers in the plant only a corporal's guard failed to respond to the call. The steel workers are out in force and the sheriffs of the district are powerless. The demands of the union are: A 20 per cent increase in wages, and the check-off system for the collection of union dues. The refusal of the corporation to grant the demands of the strikers precipitated the strike. The refusal to consider the corporation's strike breaking methods of importing strike breakers from Montreal completed the situation. The February strike made the union. Hundreds of workers joined every day during the strike. When the militia and police attempted to murder the union leaders, hundreds of workers joined every day. When the strike was settled by the 2500 agreement, the union was not smashed. The refusal of the corporation to grant the demands of the steel workers was met with a strike vote that declared for a strike.

The British Empire Steel Corporation has always had the support of the armed forces of the Canadian Government to crush the workers who struck for better conditions. This has been the experience of the miners and steel workers who are now on strike. During the last strike the steel workers strike the Provincial and Federal Governments have shipped 1200 troops and a detachment of Provincial Police to Sydney. On every occasion these troops acted policemen to murder the union leaders, but only succeeded in riding down a crowd of people coming home from church.

In answer to the attack of the armed forces against the steel workers, District 26 of the U. M. W., comprising about 15,000 miners have gone on strike one hundred per cent including the maintenance men demanding the withdrawal of the police and the troops from the Island of Cape Breton. In great mass meetings the miners have declared their intention of forcing the withdrawal of the troops and police before they will dig another ton of coal. The miners expect Lewis and his reactionary Executive at Indianapolis to line up with the corporation and attempt to smash the ranks of the miners by withdrawing the charter of the International. The capitalist press confidently states that this will take place within twenty four hours of a strike of the miners being called. The miners refuse to give up the struggle against the use of armed force against the labor movement to suit the reactionary ideas of Lewis or any other anti-labor combination.

On a smaller scale the British Empire Steel Corporation has an Empire of Steel and Coal similar to that of Gary in Pennsylvania and Illinois. This great merger has combined The Dominion Coal Company, the Nova Scotia Steel and Coal Company, the Arcadia Coal Company, the Halifax Ship Building Company, etc. into one great capitalist combination. Against this corporation the miners and steel workers of Nova Scotia have to struggle continually to even maintain their present miserable standard of living. Nowhere in the North American continent is the struggle between capital and labor so bitter and fought out stubbornly on both sides as in Nova Scotia. The steelworkers and the miners here have broken entirely with the old craft union methods of warfare. They are against trying to win a strike by pitting their empty stomachs against the troops and the millions of the Boss class (the corporation is called here). These workers do not stand in awe of the sacred phrase "private property." When they strike their object is to jeopardize the property of the corporation by taking out the maintenance men and letting the property go to destruction unless they get their demands.

The Provincial government of Nova Scotia and the Federal Government at Ottawa are entirely at the disposal of the Besco whenever the workers strike a blow for better living conditions. Last August to smash the strike of the miners against the 37½ per cent cut in wages the Island of Cape Breton was turned into an armed camp with troops, bombing planes, and a demand was made for the British Navy to come to Sydney to subdue the miners! The combination of armed forces and poverty forced the miners to accept a wage rate that is still 20 per cent below the 1921 rates that they are determined to secure.

The strike of the steelworkers of Sidney is to secure a 20 per cent increase in wages and the check-off collection of union dues. The Steel Workers Union of Sydney, a local of the International Iron, Tin and Steel Workers of which "Grandma" Tighe is the stupid and reactionary leader, has been in existence for a number of years but never amounted to anything because of the blacklisting of union men carried on by the corporation. This policy caused the strike last February that brought the management to its knees in four days to prevent the blast furnaces being ruined. This strike made the union. Hundreds of workers joined every day during the strike and from having only a few dozen members the union embraces 80 per cent of the workers in its ranks to-day. Of the 5800 workers in the steel plant fully 2500 are in the union.

At the close of the February strike the union made demands on the corporation for a twenty per cent increase in wages, an 8-Hour day and the check-off. To prevent a strike for these demands the Provincial Government organized a Provincial Police force and stationed them at Sydney. These thugs were paraded around the city to intimidate the workers. The union did not try the strength with this armed gang but continued to consolidate its forces. In May the Provincial Police had the audacity to raid the miners' District Office and the homes of the union officials to "find" Malcom Bruce, editor of the "Worker," Toronto, and to get "red" literature. This roused the miners and Councils of Action were set up, and instructed to tie up the mines until the Provincial Police were withdrawn. Before it came to a strike the police were taken out, and a Halifax paper dubbed it "The Retreat from Moscow." The withdrawal of the Provincial Police gave the steelworkers an opportunity to press their demands. The management met the representatives of the workers but refused to grant the demands. The union then took a strike ballot which was in favor of a strike. The officials of the steel plant kept on chatting pleasantly with the committee hoping to draw them into the trap of negotiation and arbitration. The sudden strike on Wednesday, June 30th, was the answer to the procrastination of the corporation. The night shift struck work and picketed the gates and turned the day shift back from the plant. A couple of hundred men who went in to work were dragged out that evening by the pickets and the plant tied up solid.

The lowest wage paid in the steel plant is 30 cents an hour. About 65 per cent of the workers are paid 32 cents an hour. The machinists are paid 57 cents an hour. The plant works an 11 hour shift by day and 13 hours by night. Every week of a 24 hour shift is worked. Out of the 3800 workers in the plant only about 300 are forge men. Even the Gary Hell in the United States cannot beat this for brutal exploitation and low wages. These steel workers have to put up with the worst and lowest paid on this continent. The fight that they are putting up for their demands will not bring them a decent wage. It will merely lay the basis for a further struggle in the future. The check-off will give them an organization which will destroy the long hours and the low wages.

Immediately the strike was called the corporation got in touch with the governments and troops were shipped in to Sydney to "protect property" in the usual manner. On Sunday the Provincial Police were brought back. On Sunday evening the police and the troops cooperated in a brutal plot to murder the pickets at number four gate of the plant where the battle has been fiercest and where the militants of the union were on duty. The plot was for the mounted police to drive the pickets down a subway near the gate where the troops with bayonets were to hold them until the horses had trampled them to the ground. This plot failed because the troops by a few minutes late arriving at the spot. The pickets escaped and the mounted police galloped madly into a crowd of people, mostly women and children, coming from church. These people were trampled by the horses and clubbed by the police. One child was killed, an old woman clubbed so badly that she is not expected to live, some respectable citizens were severely beaten up. This action of the police solidified the ranks of the miners and the steelworkers in common defense.

Since the demands of the steelworkers were made the miners of Cape Breton (the sub-districts of the U. M. W. on this Island comprise the majority of the miners in District 26 and they are the most militant and determined of the miners' union here) have pledged their support to the struggle of the steelworkers. In the coming fight the threats of Lewis and his gang at Indianapolis that expulsion would follow any strike to help the steelworkers. At the district convention of the miners last month a resolution was unanimously carried pledging the full support of the miners to the steelworkers in their struggle. Immediately the news of the attack upon the pickets spread around the miners called a mass meeting on Monday evening and despite the fact that it was a holiday about 7500 miners attended. The officers of the Steel Workers Union told the story of the attack on the pickets, and the miners were fighting mad when they realized the lengths to which the governments are willing to defend the profits of the corporation. A resolution giving the governments until midnight Tuesday to withdraw the police and troops was carried unanimously.

On Tuesday afternoon the miners did not wait for the signal to start the strike, they quit work in a body. The mass meeting in the evening heard the District Officers relate their conversation with the Provincial Secretary in Sydney. He had urged that the miners do not strike until an investigation was held on the actions of the police and troops. The miners replied that this call was a fight and they were not prepared.

The capitalist papers have carried the report that if the miners strike on any pretext whatever in this District Lewis will withdraw the charter of the District. The decision of the District Convention to take a ballot on a strike for the 1921 rates showed Lewis to be on the side of the corporation when he ordered the miners to live up to a contract that was extracted from them by force and which the corporation has repeatedly broken. Lewis will do all in his power to smash the solidarity of the miners here but he is going to meet with a most determined resistance. The miners here will maintain the solidarity of their ranks despite the governments and their troops, the corporation, and John L. Lewis.

The International Union to which the steel workers belong is a farce. It has 8000 members and is led by the best friends of the steel magnates, "Grandma" Tighe came here and bestowed his blessing upon the union and advised them to respect the law. The opinions of the steel workers of him are unprintable. The action of the steel workers of Sydney should be an inspiration for the thousands of steel workers of the United States to organize and fight the long hours and low wages under which they suffer. One thing is certain Tighe and his sewing circle will not organize the steel workers—the militants of the labor movement will have to take up that task.

The steel workers are fighting for a slight increase in wages and their union. The attack of the mounted police and the troops on the pickets has resulted in a united front of the miners and the steel workers. The rest of the labor movement of this country under the thumbs of traitors like Tom Moore will deplore the "rash actions" of these workers. But these workers are fighting for the whole of the labor movement. They are battling to prevent the smashing of the entire movement by armed force. The labor fakers can be relied upon to sabotage them as much as they can. But the miners and steel workers of Cape Breton will fight to the last ditch to save their union and their lives from the attacks of the troops and the mounted police sent by the "Democratic" Government of Canada to protect the profits of the British Empire Steel Corporation and force men to work for 32 cents an hour and work brutally long hours.
